MUSICIANUS
AMERICANUS
IPEU

673

40¢
Minimum Wage
IPEU
Gustavus Montgomery for the Economic Outlook CIO

671

UNION NEWS SERVICE

Congress of Industrial Organizations

President, PHILLIP MURRAY; Secretary-Treasurer, JAMES B. CAREY; Vice-Presidents, L. S. BUCKMASTER, JOSEPH CURRAN, ALBERT FITZGERALD, JOHN GREEN, ALLEN S. HAYWOOD, O. A. KNIGHT, WALTER P. REUTHER, EMIL RIEVE, FRANK ROSENBLUM; Publicity Director and Editor, ALLAN L. SWIM

Vol. 11 | Address all communications: Union News Service C.I.O 718 Jackson Place, N. W., Washington, D. C. | August 9, 1948 | Editors are invited to reprint from this service, with or without credit. Please place the Union News Service on your exchange mailing list | 82 | No. 31

The Awful, Awful 80th

A few weeks ago we hung the tag "Awful 80th" on the Congress that had packed up and gone home without tackling two of the nation's most serious problems—inflation and housing.

Today we're changing the phrase so it becomes "Awful, Awful 80th."

That having been done, we now take off our gloves and wade into those august gentlemen who have turned the special session into a nauseating farce.

First, let's dispose of the question of who's been playing politics with whom.

Harry Truman, Tom Dewey, the Democrats, the Republicans, the Progressives and the Dixiecrats are playing politics—clear up to the hilt.

And now let's take up the question of who's getting whacked over the knuckles by the fiasco on Capitol Hill.

Just take a look at your own hands, unless you're rolling in profits, and you'll find the answer.

The people, as differentiated from the special interests, are taking a beating.

They're taking a beating on prices and housing and civil rights.

Maybe they'll strike back in November, when the voters have their chance to express approval or disapproval of those up for re-election.

WE SIMPLY DON'T CARE

We, frankly, don't care whether pure humanitarian motives or impure political motives prompted President Truman to call the 80th Congress back into session on Missouri's Turnip Day, July 26.

He did call a special session and he did place before Congress a program worthy of serious consideration.

He provided the GOP-controlled body with an opportunity to tackle the serious cost of living and housing problems and to act on other important matters.

Congress not only muffed the opportunity but provided the nation with a disgraceful demonstration of its contempt for the public's respect.

The anti-Truman Southern Democratic bloc stalled the session with an anti-polltax filibuster—and the Republican leadership just stalled.

Parliamentary maneuvering was substituted for consideration of the problems at hand.

THE PUBLIC

We won't know until November—if then—who the winner was in the legislative-

We Repeat

THE pace of PAC work throughout the land:

Rep. Hugh (Best Stock) Scott (R., Pa.), chairman of the Republican National Committee, has indignantly — well noisily, anyway—denied that he ever said—as reported a week or so ago right here in these columns—that the Republicans came of "the Best Stock."

Best Stock Scott also denied saying that several years back when the late Philadelphia Record—which was then supporting the Democratic Party—and the Republican Philadelphia Bulletin both had stories quoting him to that effect. Here's the Record's reply:

"Editor's note: The Record news story about Mr. Scott's Lincoln Day speech was written by Thomas P. O'Neil, The Record's political editor for many years. He heard the speech. He states emphatically the Congressman was accurately quoted. Mr. O'Neil's reputation for accuracy and fairness is well known."

(Note: Tom O'Neil is now publicity man for the Pennsylvania Manufacturers' Association, dominated by GOP Boss Joseph Grundy, who reportedly ordered the Republicans to hire his man, Scott, as chairman.)

So, the CIO News repeats:

Rep. Scott once said that Republicans came of the "Best Stock."

* * *

The Wisconsin PAC has ousted seven members accused of "misinforming CIO members on the Wallace Party."

The ousted members:

Edward Bobrowicz, Fur & Leather, a candidate for Congress on the Wallace ticket; Phil H. Smith, Electrical Workers; James de Witt, Farm Equipment; Gus Tomlinson, Fur; Allan Bjorklund, Public Workers; Paul Gardner, Food, Tobacco; Richard Morgan, Maritime.

* * *

PAC Natl. Dir. Jack Kroll sent a telegram to all presidents of inter-national CIO unions, urging that they "delegate at least one observer from your organization to sit in the Congressional gal-

First Voter

CIO Reg. Dir. W. A. Copeland claims he was the first Tennesseean to vote for Estes Kefauver in the primary.

He mailed an absentee ballot to his polling place in Memphis two weeks ago.

cil because it refused to adhere to CIO policy against a third party in 1948. The ALP and the CP are supporters of the third party.

The Local 100 resolution also ordered all local officers and staff members to resign from ALP or or resign their posts with the local. The vote was 24 to 10.

In another TWU local, 101, the executive board had voted to remain in GNYIUC. Last week, the Nassau commercial section and the Canarsie clerical section of 101 adopted resolutions demanding that the local quit the council.

Lobbies

LOBBIES—good, bad and indifferent ones—reported they spent $3.5 million in the first six months of 1948 to influence the activities of the 80th Congress.

Nine organizations spent more than $100,000 each during the first six months, it was revealed in a survey of the lobbying registration forms made by the Congressional Quarterly. The figures are kept on file in the office of the Clerk of the House of Representatives.

The law is unclear, however, as to what constitutes a lobbying expense. Some outfits include all their expenses; some list only those they think apply directly to lobbying.

Biggest lobbying expenditure came from the Citizens Committee on Displaced Persons—a united group supported by labor, business, civic, and minority organizations—which listed expenses of $286,467. (The Displaced Persons Bill passed by Congress was severely criticized as biased and insufficient by the Commit-

CP Meets

By ARTHUR RIORDAN

THEY talked until they were red in the face.

Which was perfectly all right—all left, should we say?—because it was the Communist Party's 14th annual convention last week in New York.

HAMMER

The convention was the most deadpan of all the conventions this year, except perhaps that of the Socialist Workers' Trotzkyites.

CP delegates heard the word, "Wallace," almost as often as they did the words, "Soviet Union." Peace—the Russian brand, natch—was another oft-heard phrase. And, there was bitter denunciation of the present drive by the Government against Communists.

To paraphrase it: the attack on the CP was, if you'll pardon the use of the term, a red herring to hide the misdeeds of the "bipartisan" 80th Congress.

And labor? Well, labor is a bad boy these days. Here's what Eugene Dennis, general secretary of the party in this country, had to say, sadly, of the state of the unions:

Right wingers: "Class collaboration policies pursued by the official national leadership" of the unions is an aid to Fascism. How is this done? Says he: by supporting the Marshall Plan, adhering to the two party system, red-baiting and anti-Soviet activity.

(Random thought: What's he mean, two-party system? Didn't speaker after speaker at the Wallace convention claim that the Democratic party is dead and that therefore the choice lies between GOPism and peaceism—which is Wallaceism?)

Who are Comrade Dennis' culprits? Well, there's Phil Murray, he says, and there's Dan Tobin.

SWP Chides CP

The Socialists Workers' Party, through Farrell Dobbs, its Presidential candidate, has called on the Communist Party to forget "our profound political difference" and form a "broad united front" against the Smith Act, under which 12 top CP leaders have been indicted.

Dobbs recalls that in 1941 the SWP had been the first victim of the Smith Act and 18 SWP leaders were tried and jailed. He recalled that the CP at that time "ignored the danger inherent in the conviction" and "sought to obstruct all efforts to arouse the labor movement." "While you did not come to the defense of the Trotskyists, we have already made public our opposition to your indictment," Dobbs said.

noted particularly a hesitancy to build the new people's party and develop the alliance between labor and other sections of the population.

You have to have slogans, counseled Dennis. His suggestions: "In unity there is strength" and "an injury to one is an injury to all."

Things are mixed up, Dennis continued: "Division, confusion and backwardness still exist in the labor and progressive movements. We cannot gloss over these factors which enable the most aggressive and reactionary monopolies to press forward and advance the drive to fascism and war.

"But neither can we fail to appreciate the new trends in and the great strength and potential fighting capacity of the working class and of the entire anti-fascist and anti-imperialist camp."

WILLIAM Z. Foster, chairman of the CP, in his keynote speech (yes, the CP has a keynoter, too), declared: "They are brazen liars who charge that the Communist party is trying to dominate the new party or claim the credit for its formation."

But, in his address, Dennis

Finds GIs Eager For Union Information

Frank McCallister, director of the Georgia Workers Education Service, which is supported by all branches of the Georgia labor movement, recently was invited, as a union man, to lead a series of army discussion groups at Ft. McPherson.

More than 800 enlisted men and NCOs attended McCallister's classes. Officers, noting the keen interest of most of the men in the discussion of labor history and trade union practices, were amazed. McCallister even got applause from his audiences. As one officer told him later: "The applause you received was unusual. They rarely applaud even guest speakers in the Army."

One of the enlisted men was heard to remark: "Why don't we have more speakers like that?"

Two Say Dewey Hit Teachers' Lobby

It's the word of GOP Presidential candidate Thomas E. Dewey against that of Govs. Maw of Utah and Gruening of Alaska, as to whether or not Dewey has called teacher propaganda for higher pay "the biggest lie since Hitler."

Both Maw and Gruening, in statements released by the Democratic Natl. Committee, insist that, at the Governors Conference at Portsmouth, N. H., Dewey had bitterly attacked teachers' lobbies.

They quoted Dewey as saying, in a closed session, that the teachers' lobby "is the most vicious lobby in the nation today. It it isn't stepped on now, it will destroy the nation. It's worse than the power lobby, the real estate lobby, the oil lobby, the liquor lobby and a lot of others."

James C. Hagerty, Dewey's press aide, answered by calling the Maw and Gruening accounts of the meeting "rubbish."

Wall Street

By GLORIA CAPLAN

these extra

He provided the GOP-controlled body with an opportunity to tackle the serious cost of living and housing problems and to act on other important matters.

Congress not only muffed the opportunity but provided the nation with a disgraceful demonstration of its contempt for the public's respect.

The anti-Truman Southern Democratic bloc stalled the session with an anti-polltax filibuster—and the Republican leadership just stalled.

Parliamentary maneuvering was substituted for consideration of the problems at hand.

THE PUBLIC IS LOSER

We won't know until November—if then—who the winner was in the legislative-political sham battle that has been going on in Washington, but we can name the loser without any difficuty.

He's known in many quarters as John Q. Public.

He's the guy who's been suffering from high prices and inadequate living quarters.

He's the guy who's been yelling that something should be done to curb inflation.

He's you and me and the family that lives next door.

As this is written it appears possible that the GOP leadership may poke a puny finger or two into the holes through which the forces of inflation are gushing.

But the leaders themselves had already made it plain they wouldn't double up their fists and really slam away at the major causes of high prices.

As we said before, it's a nauseating farce!

Edward Bobrowicz, Fur & Leather, a candidate for Congress on the Wallace ticket; Phil H. Smith, Electrical Workers; James de Witt, Farm Equipment; Gus Tomlinson, Fur; Allan Bjorklund, Public Workers; Paul Gardner, Food, Tobacco; Richard Morgan, Maritime.

* * *

PAC Natl. Dir. Jack Kroll sent a telegram to all presidents of inter-national CIO unions, urging that they "delegate at least one observer from your organization to sit in the Congressional galleries in order that they may report to our members from first-hand observation the conduct of these paid representatives of the people—the guardians of the country's well-being."

The wire was sent as the Congress, ignoring any legislation remedying inflation, was preparing to scram out of Washington.

* * *

The executive Board of Local 100 of the CIO Transport Workers' Union has passed a resolution denouncing the American Labor Party, the Communist Party and the Greater New York City CIO Council.

TWU natl. Pres. Michael Quill resigned as president of the coun-

---

By ALLAN L. SWIM

YOU have about as much freedom and independence as a convicted burglar when you live in a "company" town.

The company you work for also is your landlord—and your grocer—and your clothier.

You walk on company-built sidewalks, live in a company-owned house and ride on company-built streets.

The schools and churches are company dominated and the law enforcement officers are company selected.

The only way to get away from the company, even for a moment, is to get out of town—and that's what you'd better do if you get in bad with the boss.

That's because you're a victim of monopoly.

ANY person who ever worked in or tried to organize a union in a "company" town should be able to appreciate the recent warning of the Federal Trade Commission:

"No great stretch of imagination is required to foresee that if nothing is done to check the growth in concentration, either the giant corporations will ultimately take over the country or the government will be impelled to step in and impose some form of direct regulation in the public interest.

"In either event, collectivism will have triumphed over free enterprise and the theory of competition will have been relegated to the limbo of well intentioned but ineffective ideals.

"This is a warning which the Commission has repeated time and again, and one which some of those who have the most to gain by the preservation of competition seem determined to ignore."

IN effect, what the FTC said was that if monopoly is not curbed the U. S. will become a "company" nation or it will place stringent controls on big corporations.

The FTC, which doesn't go around yelling "wolf, wolf" just to scare people, had good reason to issue such a warning.

It had made a survey which showed that since 1940 a total of 2450 formerly independent manufacturing and mining companies had "disappeared."

They were victims of what the FTC termed "the merger movement"—and a merger is a business marriage based on the theory that two can make more money if they become one than if they remain separate.

OH, so "monopoly" and "mergers" are dull subjects which you ordinarily read about only on the financial pages—if you read the financial pages.

Maybe so, but the men responsible for the "merger movement" aren't dull. They make the headlines and are featured in the news.

They make thumping speeches about "preservation of free enterprise" and about "competition being the life of trade."

They're quoted at length after they make heated public pleas for "restoration of the American way" and after they shout "down with collectivism."

They're the guys who set the wage patterns, boost the prices and lead the fight against unions.

NO, this is not a blanket indictment of the nation's business and industrial interests.

Many small firms have been forced to merge to keep from being forced out of business by their giant competitors. Many independents have sold out to the big corporations to avoid bankruptcy.

But this hasn't made the threat of growing monopoly any less serious.

The country faces the choice of preventing and breaking up monopoly today, of controlling it later or of being subjugated by it.

You can kiss democracy and real free enterprise goodbye if we settle for control or submit to subjugation.

Fitzpatrick in The St. Louis Post-Dispatch

NARROWING CORRIDOR AT HOME

---

tatives.

The law is unclear, however, as to what constitutes a lobbying expense. Some outfits include all their expenses; some list only those they think apply directly to lobbying.

Biggest lobbying expenditure came from the Citizens Committee on Displaced Persons—a united group supported by labor, business, civic, and minority organizations—which listed expenses of $286,467. (The Displaced Persons Bill passed by Congress was severely criticized as biased and insufficient by the Committee, which is now seeking improvement in DP legislation.)

Some $244,012 was spent during the half-year by the Committee for Constitutional Govt., Inc., an ultra-conservative group in which Frank Gannett, upstate New York publisher, is the kingpin. The committee asked for lower taxes, lower government expenses and repeal of the Wagner Act. It got most of what it asked for.

A lobby with a fancy name which gets much of its money from drug manufacturers was third on the list. It's the Natl. Physicians Committee for the Extension of Medical Service, and it spent $240,727. This lobby is against the health insurance program advocated by labor and liberal groups.

The fight to repeal oleo taxes brought up big money on both sides. Two organizations—the Natl. Association of Margarine Manufacturers and Leo Burnet Co., a publicity firm working closely with the trade group—together spent just over $300,000 in support of oleo tax repeal. The Natl. Cooperative Milk Producers Federation, battling successfully to keep the oleo taxes, spent $128,590.

Two big trade associations were also among the top nine spenders listed with the House Clerk. They are the Natl. Association of Electric Companies, representing the power trust, which reported all expenses at $148,354; and the Natl. Association of Home Builders, which fought like crazy against the Taft-Ellender-Wagner bill. The NAHB's expenses for the half year were $131,640.

The Committee for the Marshall Plan—which had varied support from all groups in the population—spent $129,495 in its effort to get ERP adopted.

Here are figures for other big industrial and trade groups:

Association of American Railroads	$83,628
Independent Bankers Association, Portland, Ore.	76,694
Natl. Association of Real Estate Boards	66,952
States Rights Association, Houston, Tex.	66,597
Southern States Industrial Council	49,075
National Association of State Chambers of Commerce	44,724
Chamber of Commerce of the U. S.	40,407
Natl. Economic Council, Inc.	38,348
Natl. Association of Manufacturers	Not Yet Filed

P. S.—If someone gives you a spiel about the "all-powerful labor lobby," remind him that CIO's lobbying expenses for the half-year were $12,694—far below the amount spent by many of the business groups.

---

tion policies pursued by the official national leadership" of the unions is an aid to Fascism. How is this done? Says he: by supporting the Marshall Plan, adhering to the two party system, red-baiting and anti-Soviet activity.

(Random thought: What's he mean, two-party system? Didn't speaker after speaker at the Wallace convention claim that the Democratic party is dead and that therefore the choice lies between GOPism and peaceism—which is Wallaceism?)

Who are Comrade Dennis' culprits? Well, there's Phil Murray, he says, and there's Dan Tobin. "It shows itself in the Murray-Tobin counsel to adopt a no-strike policy. It leads to the spectacle of trade union leaders who are against wage increases if the corporations are against them.

(Murray and Walter Reuther, head of the CIO Auto Workers, are usually the targets of Communist attack on the CIO. Murray's Steelworkers and Reuther's UAW recently won pattern-setting "third-round" wage increases.)

Left wing unions: Dennis gave them some hell, too. Leaders of these groups, he declared, including some Communists, have, too, "at times underestimated the fighting spirit of the working people. They have subsequently failed to give adequately bold and militant leadership and develop a broad united front on such issues as peace, against Taft-Hartleyism, for the rights of the Negro people and of the Communists."

He waxed more bitter. Why, he shouted, in some sections of the left wing, while a militant wage struggle was waged, there were "strong tendencies toward economism." And what's economism? The Daily Worker defines it as "the theory that workers have only economic but no political interests."

Dennis went on, saying he had monopolies to press forward and advance the drive to fascism and war.

"But neither can we fail to appreciate the new trends in and the great strength and potential fighting capacity of the working class and of the entire anti-fascist and anti-imperialist camp."

WILLIAM Z. Foster, chairman of the CP, in his keynote speech (yes, the CP has a keynoter, too), declared: "They are brazen liars who charge that the Communist party is trying to dominate the new party or claim the credit for its formation."

But, in his address, Dennis stated: "It is essential that everything be done to build the new party organizationally, as a grass roots movement, and as a mighty shield and permanent bulwark for the people."

In May the CIO's Murray, addressing the Textile Workers' Convention, declared: "I charge that the Communist Party is directly responsible for the organization of the third party."

On May 20, the Worker, Sunday edition of the CP's official organ, stated in a "Draft Resolution for the National Convention of the CPUSA"—the convention which was held last week—that:

SICKLE

"The Communist Party, from the earliest days after the end of the war, understood that its traditional fight for a people's party directed against the two-party system of the monopolies had once more been placed by events in an immediate, practical question before the American people, and, acting upon this understanding, it boldly proclaimed the need for such a new people's party."

Anyway, Foster said the Progressive—Wallace—Party is in no way a Communist Party. Why, he insisted, the Progs—many of their leaders, that is,—"believe that the badly crippled world capitalist system can be saved and transformed into 'progressive capitalism'."

But, Foster declared, Wallce and his running and singing mate, Sen. Glen Taylor, will "rally hosts of workers, Negroes, farmers, veterans, women, youth, intellectuals and other patriotic Americans.

Where was Earl Browder, the bad boy who was expelled from the CP for Browderism? He was (a) having his reinstatement application rejected, (g) was still no doubt selling the Russian books of which he is sole agent in this country.

They quoted Dewey as saying, in a closed session, that the teachers' lobby "is the most vicious lobby in the nation today. It it isn't stepped on now, it will destroy the nation. It's worse than the power lobby, the real estate lobby, the oil lobby, the liquor lobby and a lot of others."

James C. Hagerty, Dewey's press aide, answered by calling the Maw and Gruening accounts of the meeting "rubbish."

Bolt Wallace

Six New Mexicans have bolted the Wallace Party, denouncing its attitude toward Communism and Russia.

The six are Frank A. Minns, state executive committee member; Alfred H. McRae, his wife, Camille, Wallace National committeewoman for New Mexico; Rafael Alfau, state party treasurer, and Norman Pear.

$1.05 Minimum Asked In Govt. Contracts

Following up its recent demands for an 87c-an-hour minimum for cotton workers employed on government contracts, the Textile Workers is now asking a $1.05 minimum wage for woolen and worsted workers employed on government contracts.

Wall Street

By GLORIA CAPLAN

WHERE do those extra dollars we pay out in higher prices go?

Industrialists say they go into workers' pockets. They say prices were pushed skyward to cover higher wages.

Well, last week something that looked remarkably like those same "higher price" dollars turned up—not in overall pockets—but among industry's second quarter profits.

The Wall St. Journal—no labor propaganda outfit they—analyzed reports of 141 publicly-held corporations, excluding transportation and public utilities, and found net profits during the April-through-June months had jumped 25.8% over the same period a year ago.

On top of the heap was the fabulous oil industry. Profits for the first half for 27 leading oil companies jumped 82% over the corresponding 1947 period, breaking all previous records. United Press reported the percentage gains ranged from 206% for Superior Oil Co. (California) to 28% for Deep Rock Oil Corp. Eleven of these firms more than doubled their earnings for the first half of 1947, while 15 went up by 90% or more.

The coal industry came in next, with a net take in the second quarter which was higher by 64.4% than in the corresponding period the previous year. Auto profits jumped 44.7%.

(While this rosy profit picture covered the financial pages, Ford Motor Co. announced it would raise its prices a second time in two months. On June 18 the company pushed prices on its 1949 models up by $85 to $125 a car.)

Gross income for manufacturers was right up there, too—15% higher the first half of this year than in the 1947 period, according to the Dept. of Commerce. And the department's office of Business Economics scotched arguments that the jump resulted largely from greater volume of goods sold. While some of it could be attributed to that, most of it came directly from higher prices, the agency pointed out.

Here are some reasons why corporations are happy these days—and while you read them, remember that your dollar is worth less than at any time since the U. S. became the U. S.; and remember, too, that corporations earlier this year vowed they couldn't pay wage increases:

	Net profit 1st half '48	Net profit 1st half '47
General Motors	$206,763,672	$137,559,202
Packard	6,213,805	—1,872,634
Standard Oil, N. J.	210,000,000	140,000,000
Standard Oil, Calif.	77,611,483	40,808,200
Otis Elevator Co.	5,344,109	3,900,000
Va. Iron & Coke Co.	134,940	41,960
Douglas Aircraft	424,951	752,307
Allis-Chalmers	6,306,658	475,941
Maytag Co.	3,999,661	2,860,107
General Mills	13,068,057	9,236,214

CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

LUCY RANDOLPH MASON
SOUTHERN PUBLIC RELATIONS REPRESENTATIVE

75 IVY STREET. N. E
ATLANTA 3, GEORGIA

August 30, 1948

Dear Editor:

Looking at the development of the labor movement in the South in the past eleven years, it is evident that the Congress of Industrial Organizations has made a great contribution to this region.

Eleven years ago, only craft unions had secured a substantial footing in the area. The mass production and lighter industries were almost completely without unions. The big exception was coal mining which was largely organized, and to a lesser degree metal mining and smelting. Industrial unions had done those jobs.

Crafts
RR brotherhoods
Mining

Today, more than 800,000 members of the CIO have built unions in the South's basic industries. The great majority of workers in steel, aluminum, and automobile assembly and parts are in these unions.

Among other industries where industrial unions have considerable organization are textiles, ship building and repair, stone and marble quarrying, cement, rubber, oil refining, chemicals, meat packing, leather, shoes, men's garments, cotton compresses, cotton seed oil, fertilizer, wood-working, furniture, paper, tobacco, and sugar refining.

That list can be greatly expanded, as well as subdivided into related industries. There is also organization in sea faring, wholesale warehouses, newspapers, insurance agents, telephone workers, retail trades, and other white collar occupations.

These union members have gained marked increases in pay, better working conditions, and improved living standards for themselves and their families. Their greater purchasing power has enriched whole communities. Unorganized portions of industry have voluntarily given pay raises to keep the union out.

The textile union is an excellent example of wage benefits brought to union and non-union workers, as unorganized mills have hastened to meet union-won increases. Today, southern textile workers earn almost three times as much as in 1939. Average straight time pay has advanced from 38½ cents an hour to approximately $1.12.

Between 1939 and 1946, industrial wages advanced proportionately more in the South than in the nation as a whole. Unions played an important part in these increases.

The CIO has brought the South other than economic gains. Union members are stimulated to more participation as citizens aware of civic responsibility. They had their significant part in the election of candidates committed to clean, progressive government in the recent Tennessee elections.

Ministers are increasingly friendly to the CIO as they understand its goals and recognize that union people are also church members.

A once hostile press, with outstanding exceptions, is now far more tolerant. Some papers print fair reporting of union news and carry occasional friendly editorials.

The right to join a union, or to help others do so, is more and more respected by sheriffs amd police - though there are still law officers who question the right of workers to organize.

The appointment of Van A. Bittner as director of the Southern Organizing Committee a little more than two years ago, brought about far better coordination and gave a great stimulus to union building. Mr. Bittner has spent many years in the South. He has brought rich experience, outstanding ability, and a mellow human wisdom to his task.

Sincerely yours,

Lucy R Mason

Lucy Randolph Mason

2 - Labor

ADOLPH HELD, Chairman
JOSEPH BASKIN, Secretary
DAVID DUBINSKY, Treasurer
JACOB PAT, Executive Secretary

Executive Committee

CHAS. S. ZIMMERMAN, Chairman
J. BRESLAW
N. CHANIN
B. GEBINER
I. H. GOLDBERG
P. L. GOLDMAN
A. MILLER
I. M. MINKOFF
E. SCHWARTZMAN
W. WOLPERT

IRVING SALERT, Director

RECEIVED
DEC 7 1948
Southern Regional Council

LABOR REPORTS

ISSUED IN THE INTERESTS OF AMERICAN ORGANIZED LABOR

175 EAST BROADWAY · NEW YORK 2 · [redacted]
ORegon 3-7950

DECEMBER 1948 VOLUME V NO. 30

IN THIS ISSUE

Page

"The Negro's Stake In The Future of American Industry"
By: Mark Starr, Educational Director, International Ladies Garment Workers Union..... 1-5

In Rebuttal
By: Alvin J. Wolff..... 5-6

Your Union And You
By: Elliott Carlton..... 7

Special Notice To Editors..... 8

Cartoon - Combination..... 8

"THE NEGRO'S STAKE IN THE FUTURE OF AMERICAN INDUSTRY"

By: Mark Starr, Educational Director,
International Ladies Garment Workers Union.

Because work relationships in mill, mine, office and factory are basic, it is important that race prejudice and discrimination be eliminated in this field of economic and industrial relations which determine the way in which we obtain food, clothing and shelter. It ought to be completely unnecessary to think that the Negro's stake in American industry should be any different from that of any of his fellow American citizens, most of whom, indeed, cannot count so many generations of their fathers as residents in this republic.

But we fall short of our American ideals and men and women are unfairly punished for the color of their skin and for their race. Often basking in the glow of self-approval, the monologist in the club car will cite the honors given to the fine fistic power of Joe Louis, the baseball eminence of Jackie Robinson, the fame of Marian Anderson, and so on. This self-approval deceives because to give to the brilliant individual a belated recognition is far from the provision of equal opportunity in education and vocational training, and in industry and commerce. And no one looking at the USA in the year 1948 can feel that the work of the National Urban League is completed. Decent men and women of every racial origin must feel that our pretensions of moral and economic leadership among the two billion people of this planet are phony until we have expelled that alien Jim Crow from our American community. Among many such comments available, there is the report in The Listener (official organ of the British Broadcasting Company), July 15, 1948, of a talk by David Potter: "America needs to meet this challenge not only for its own sake, but also because it is essential to assure our friends all over the world that we hold no double standard of democracy, and to disarm Soviet critics who have followed the example set by the Nazis in seizing upon the Negro question as a convenient stick with which to beat the United States. Most of all, the American people need to deal with this question constructively in order to dissolve those disruptive forces which will certainly come into full play if 13,000,000 Americans ever become convinced that the promises of democracy do not apply to them."

The future of American industry depends upon increased productivity translated into an improved standard of life for the majority of the people of the United States, a third of whom are still denied decent living. This means lower prices, not higher profits. Our industrial future and even our chance of survival as a human race depend upon cooperation between all races and people. The outside world will not listen to our words in July 4th orations but will watch our deed of racial discrimination. Unless we eliminate from American industry the blot of racial discrimination, the chances of international cooperation and goodwill will be seriously reduced. If one-tenth of the apples in the barrel are touched by the maggot of bigotry, the remainder cannot remain uncontaminated for long. For the sake of the whole community, such rank injustice must go.

Some encouraging progress has been made. In New York State the State Committee Against Discrimination has operated since 1945 to reverse the dangerous trend to keep Negroes out of skilled crafts and deny them entry into certain industries and occupations. Kings Ransom in the N.Y. Herald Tribune, August 6, 1948, claimed that in New York, New Jersey, Connecticut and Massachusetts legal enforcement of anti-discrimination was getting results. When jointly writing "Labor in America," a high school textbook, in 1944, I found that 16 unions excluded Negroes entirely by provisions in their ritual or constitution; 5 unions tacitly excluded Negroes and 8 unions gave the Negro worker only segregated status in auxiliary locals. Since that time, the largest of the unions, the International Association of Machinists, has completely revised its laws and policies in conformity with the FEPC in New York and similar laws in other states.

It was good news that at last the New York State Federation of Labor (AFL) in its recent convention elected a Negro as vice-president. Yet the movement goes too slowly. The American Federation of Labor claims that only education can bring a satisfactory removal of discrimination, but does not do enough to push such education. The CIO does much more by way of educational conferences, pamphlets and its special Anti-Discrimination Committee and staff members. The UAW-CIO has done some fine work in attacking local prejudice and in giving their Negro members a fair break. In the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union we have as yet no Negro on our General Executive Board but our Negro members have won positions as staff members, as business agents, as Union Fellowship students at Harvard and as representatives in national and international conferences. They have made a notable contribution to the efficiency and idealism of the union.

In the past, labor history shows that employers have used the Negro to break strikes and to menace hard-won conditions. Now there are numerous cases where enlightened employers have cooperated with unions and social agencies to introduce Negroes into industry. This augurs well for the future of American industry.

Yet the darker side still remains. The justified revolt of Negroes against discrimination will naturally activize opposition. The dramatic conflict over partial segregation in the armed services highlights the hypocrisy of our words in contrast with our deeds. While full employment continues, the problem will not be so serious, but mass unemployment on the scale of 1929-33 would aggravate the situation and might well rob us of the gains made in the last ten years.

The root of the evil is fear and this menaces the future of American industry as well as poisoning the springs of our cultural life. What Mini Stein in the New Leader of June 26, 1948, says about the situation in South Africa is, unfortunately, in part true of other countries:

"Behind the trade unions' bias stalks the fear that because the black man is accustomed to a lower standard of living, he will be ready to accept lower wages and force down the white craftsman's standards. And bolstering the bias is massed the deeply-rooted color-consciousness of the average South African's thinking. For him, color discrimination is an accepted state of affairs, the outcome of a pattern firmly set by long usage, which makes living for the white man easier.

"Profoundly influencing color prejudice, too, is the factor of fear, as Field Marshal Smuts (then premier) so clearly emphasized in speaking before the South African Institute of Race Relations in 1942. In a continent which is predominantly dark, the European feels that unless he keeps the 'upper hand', his position will be endangered".

Fear must be removed if we are going to make progress, introduce necessary social changes by consent and enjoy the cornucopia of abundance within our reach, thanks to applications of science to the problems of production. The taxi driver in Chicago, who talks racism in the language of the unlamented Bilbo, is afraid his mortgaged home will lose in value because Negroes seek a place to live in his neighborhood. The miner and the stockyard worker in the past saw the Negroes transported to serve unwittingly as strikebreakers. The Unions of the white workers fear the impact of cheap Negro labor upon their hard-won standards. Fear of his competitor impels the employer to chisel down the wages of all his workers, white or black. Nations arm now to the extent of potential suicide in fear of other nations.

Men and nations must acquire the understanding and love of each other which casteth out fear. They must have imagination to see, that, as in the kid's parable The Goolibah Tree, there is room for everybody on this planet and that we can only live safely and happily and increasingly better if we act together. To do this, however, means a rejection of the old stereotypes about races and nations. Simply, it means that all men--Negroes and whites --smell if they lack soap and water; that, robbed of educational opportunity, all men are short-sighted and ignorant; that all men have basic desires for betterment. Our races are many; our aims are one. Happily, some unions recognize that to their benefit. All union leaders should shoulder the responsibility of educating themselves and their members to remove the evil. We lynch by inches when we torture men and women - not in one awful hour of excruciating pain but in all their waking years when we deny them the freedom to choose their occupation and exclude them and their children from legitimate participation in industrial life by refusing them union membership.

It is well to remember that united action between white and colored workers is not new in American history. The indentured white immigrant and the kidnapped Negro had much in common. "Despite the vigorous efforts in Colonial America of planters and merchants to keep them apart, white servants and Negroes often fled together from common oppression to seek a common freedom. One notice which appeared in the Pennsylvania Gazette of September 10, 1747, read: 'Ran away from the Subscriber -- A White Man and a Negro, it is supposed they are gone together.' Another notice in the issue of October 8, 1747 read: 'There went away with Ann Wainwright, White Servant, a Negro Slave Woman belonging to June Bailard.'" (p. 21, History of the Labor Movement in the U.S., P.S. Foner.) The forty slave plots to rebel in Colonial America included joint efforts to rebel by Negro slaves and white indentured servants.

It would be interesting to find out if white workers participated in Nat Turner's rebellion, August, 1831, only 70 miles from this city of Richmond. The orthodox historians too often ignore such incidents because of their unconscious race and class bias. In case there are any Dixiecrats or any red and black totalitarians around, may I suggest that I am not emphasizing armed rebellion but the joint action shown in these historical incidents.

I am glad that the labor unions are joining in the good work of smashing group discriminations. The AFL and CIO have distributed millions of copies of "They Got the Blame" (a reprint from True Comics explaining the scapegoat theory). Labor conferences have been run by the Workers Education Bureau and the American Labor Education Service to discuss ways and means of combatting racial discrimination. The AFL, at its 64th convention, went on record against anti-Semitism and Negro discrimination, and the CIO, in its journals, has done a first-rate educational job. Labor should know from bitter experience in Europe that the Jew and Negro baiters are the union haters also. The chiefs of the USO in wartime thought it controversial to distribute a Public Affairs Pamphlet which shows how foolish is race prejudice and proves the basic unity of the human race, but the labor unions could hardly be expected to endorse such pussyfooting about the great ideals of the American Republic. Indeed, the UAW-CIO made a color-cartoon movie "The Brotherhood of Man", based on that pamphlet, which is still being widely used by unions in the AFL and CIO. The time has come, in my opinion, to drop the kid gloves and to put on the boxing gloves for the handling of racial discrimination.

Toleration suggests putting up with people who are different from us. We should move over to a positive position and insist that the United States is great precisely because so many nationalities and races have enriched it by their work of mind and muscle. Xenophobia surely has no place in the United States. So many nations have contributed to make us a nation of nations. We are, indeed, on this account most prepared to graduate into full activity as part of the United Nations which have overcome Hitler and, at the present moment, we must plan to build cooperation among the peoples of the world. We should rejoice in the variety of our racial stocks. Let us quote to the little-minded, myopic victims of ignorance Melvin B. Tolson's verse: "A blind man said, 'Look at the niggers.' And I saw Black Samson mowing down Hessians with a scythe at Brandywine, Marian Anderson bewitching continents with the talisman of art, Douglass hurling philippics of freedom from tombstones, Private Brooks dying at the feet of MacArthur in Bataan."

Jim Crow and anti-Semitism are, of course, a fundamental denial of every pretension of democracy which surely emphasizes the individual worth of a human being and his rights to have a say about his life and his destiny. All men are created equal with equal rights to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

My mother and your mother have failed to do their job unless they have taught us to appreciate motherhood as something greater and larger than our own particular family, our own city, our own particular race and nation. Patriotism should never be degraded into hatred of other countries and after all, it is completely irrational and completely unfair to judge a person on the basis of his race or national origin. As the Princetonian alumnus, Andrew J. Hatcher, wrote in the students' journal of his alma mater: "If you discriminate against me because I am uncouth, I can become mannerly. If you ostracise me because I am unclean, I can cleanse myself. If you segregate me because I lack knowledge, I can become educated. But if you discriminate against me because of my color, I can do nothing. God gave me my color, I have no possible protection against race prejudice but to take refuge in cynicism, bitterness and hatred." That goes for Jews as well as Negroes.

For every reason of decency, fair play and democratic ideals with their basic respect for individual worth and integrity, racial discrimination should be banished. For economic reasons, the Negro as a citizen should have equal job opportunities and of union membership. For the future well-being of industry, Negro skill in industry and Negro purchasing power, as well as those of all their fellow citizens, are necessary and powerful factors and should be utilized.

The work of the National Urban League shows what can be done. Organized Labor and other sections of the community should help it go forward at a faster rate.

Specifically to give the Negro and the white worker a stake in the future of American industry we should: (1) Organize more Negroes into unions and encourage their participation as members and representatives, as staff members and officers; (2) Work more energetically for a nation-wide FEPC and similar laws in the states. It is regrettable that legal compulsion is necessary and we must remember that while laws educate their enforcement depends upon the cooperation of the public; (3) Cooperate to get adequate housing and medical care and improved minimum wage and hour standards for all our citizens to make the future of industry really prosperous; (4) Anticipate the effects of current changes in the South and secure for the displaced Negro, through cooperation, between intelligent Labor and Management, equal opportunities of work and work training.

The future of American industry will see great changes and new political alignments. The administration of a mixed economy combining social planning with the Bill of Rights needs the cooperation of all American citizens.

* * * * * * * * * * * * * *

IN REBUTTAL.

By: Alvin J. Wolff

It seems that our children are in grave danger. All sorts of gruesome monsters and blood-curdling ghouls are invading our nurseries and homes, crawling out of gaping radio loud speakers, or lurking within the covers of comic books, just waiting to gobble up some unwary reader. Hundreds of thousands of frightened citizens, including parents, educators, psychologists, are organizing in every state of the Union to protect the children of America from these fictitious horrors.

The danger is very real. Recently, three nine year old youngsters, admittedly under the influence of comic books, concocted a plan to murder one playmate "every third Sunday," and almost succeeded in killing their first seven year old victim. Yes, the danger from comic books is real enough, but there are other dangers too.

What is being done to protect our children against the ravages of malnutrition? According to Senator Ralph Flanders, who headed an investigating committee, almost one-third of our population is suffering from undernourishment caused by high prices. Yet nothing is done to curb inflation.

What is being done to protect our children against the spectre of ignorance and superstition? Thomas Jefferson knew that democracy cannot long endure where the people are uninformed. Yet, today, ten million people in The United States still cannot read or write. This deplorable condition exists largely because of insufficient funds for educational purposes. Yet the Republican- dominated Congress quibbles over the question of Federal aid to Education.

What is being done to protect our children against disease and the mental hazards of broken homes, caused by overcrowded living quarters and the housing shortage?

What is being done to protect the children of Minorities against the unspeakable terrors of discrimination and oppression?

Yes, hundreds of thousands of people in every state of the Union are up in arms over the question of comic books; but what has happened to the Child Labor Amendment which has been ratified by only 28 states since it was passed back in 1924?

Why don't we read about these dangers in our papers? Why is the general public unaware that except for the activities of Labor Unions, American workmen still would be in the depressed status allotted to them by Industry? As late as 1939, unorganized industrial centers such as Passaic and Paterson, N.J., still maintained sweat-shops with an average wage of $5 per week. And today, the national Minimum Wage still stands at $16 a week!

Americans would not permit such conditions to continue if the facts were presented to them. Why don't we read about these dangers in our papers?

The answer can be found in a little book entitled "A Free and Responsible Press" which embodies the results of three years of intensive investigation by a Commission made up of thirteen eminently respected experts, educators and lawyers. The Commission noted with alarm that "through concentration of ownership, the variety of sources of news and opinions is limited." In eleven states, not one city has any newspaper competition. And in other states, newspapers in the majority of cities present only one side of the news (and that side is not favorable to Labor, you may be sure), because, in the words of the report, "the agencies of mass communications are Big Business, and their owners are Big Businessmen."

The Press is further condemned for "stifling thought and discussion --- creating complacent fictions and blind spots, --- misusing the great words and upholding empty slogans --- and spreading lies."

Originally, "Freedom of the Press" meant freedom from government control, but this impartial Commission notes that newspapers now can "spread lies faster and farther than our forefathers dreamed possible."

A Free Press is important, but a TRUTHFUL one is even more essential if the children of America are to be saved from all the dangers which surround them.

YOUR UNION AND YOU

By: Elliott Carlton, LABOR REPORTS Columnist

The election is over -- but you still have to work for a living. Unless some rich relative wills you some cash, the chances are good that your job is about your only means of support. And that holds good even if you play the ponies -- for fillies cost a lot of dough in whatever form they come.

No, there's no use kidding ourselves! None of us is likely to die rich.

* * * * * * *

Not that that's so important. What good is it to be rich when you're dead? It's a lot better to be not quite so poor when you're alive.

And that's what the labor movement is for, Brother. That's why we're union men.

Let's remember that.

* * * * * * *

Let's remember that what's good for you is good for the union. You can turn that around, too! What's good for the union is good for you.

It can be reversed in still another way: What's bad for the union is bad for you.

* * * * * * *

There are some who never forget that. They fight unions tooth and nail. Sometimes they fight them openly - by refusing to arbitrate, or by lockouts.

Lot's of times they use under-the-snake's-belly-tactics. That's when they try to get us mad at each other by spreading prejudice.

* * * * * * *

Suppose a guy's car breaks down. Does it matter to that car whether the mechanic is a Catholic, Jew, or Protestant? Does it matter whether he's black or white -- or whether he was born here or in Europe or Asia?

As long as the mechanic is a good workingman, it doesn't matter at all.

* * * * * * *

But there are Big Boys in front offices - and Big Boys cutting coupons - who try to make us believe that a workingman's race, religion, or ancestors make a difference in your shop or in your office.

They've a reason. They know that if they can get us to split into quarreling, prejudiced groups, our union will be torn apart.

* * * * * * *

And let's not forget it! What's bad for the union is bad for us. Without a union we'll work twice as long for half as much -- and kiss the big toe of the foreman wile we're sweating it out.

And prejudice, Brother, religious and racial prejudice is the concealed weapon that is bad for us.

It can destroy us all.

SPECIAL NOTICE TO EDITORS:

When you move please send us your old address and your new one, so that we can make the change on our mailing list.

IRVING SALERT
Editor, LABOR REPORTS

Competent, Responsible, Patriotic SOUTHERN LABOR, the South's Greatest Asset

21- Labor

UNITED PUBLIC WORKERS OF AMERICA

AFFILIATED WITH THE CONGRESS OF INDUSTRIAL ORGANIZATIONS

ABRAM FLAXER
PRESIDENT

ROY ELDEAN
VICE-PRESIDENT

REGION 12 OFFICE
79 IVY STREET, N. E.
ATLANTA, GEORGIA
CYPRESS 6094
18

EWART GUINIER
SECRETARY-TREASURER

ROBERT WEINSTEIN
DIRECTOR OF ORGANIZATION

RECEIVED
APR 15 1949
Southern Regional Council

April 12, 1949

Dear Fellow Citizen:

We are sending this letter to community leaders in Atlanta --educators, pastors, physicians, editors, church women, and civic and veterans leaders.

Enclosed are two documents:

1. Charges of discrimination against both Negro patients and Negro employees at the Lawson Veterans Hospital in Chamblee, near Atlanta.

2. The reply of the Veterans Administration to that portion of the charges which deals with Negro patients.

(There has been no reply, thus far, to the charges of discrimination against Negro employees, although a conference with V.A. officials was held in Washington on this matter)

We hope that you will study these two documents. You will find them revealing. We urge that you take up the issues involved, among your colleagues and in your organizations.

On the basis of your study and discussion, we hope you will send us your views and comments on the ideas advanced by the Veterans Administration.

Do you believe that the conditions cited actually promote the recovery of patients? (Note that the Army did not segregate patients at Lawson Hospital)

Do you believe that the United States Government should decide for Negro veterans that they "wish" to be segregated?

Do you feel it is right for Negro employees to be fired and terrorized in a Federal agency, for combatting these conditions?

Finally, will you join with other civic leaders and organizations in doing something about these conditions?

Hoping to hear from you,

Sincerely yours,

The Daniel Defense Committee
EDWARD D'ANTIGNAC, Chairman
LONNIE HARPER, Treasurer

Local 273, United Public Workers CIO
IRVIN S. DANIEL, Pres.
ALEXANDER NUCKLES, Vice Pres.
OSCAR DAVIE, Grievance Chairman
WM. STAFFORD, Field Rep.

COPY COPY COPY

VETERANS ADMINISTRATION
Washington 25, D.C.
March 11, 1949

Office of
Chief Medical Director
Department of Medicine and Surgery

10EA

United Public Workers of America
930 F Street N.W.
Washington 4, D. C.

Attention: Mr. Thomas Richardson
Chairman, Anti-Discrimination Commission

Gentlemen:

I am acknowledging receipt of your letter of March 3, 1949, addressed to the Administrator, with its enclosures, relative to alleged discrimination against Negro employees and Negro patients at the [Lawson] Veterans Administration Hospital, Chamblee, Georgia.

I have carefully studied the statement you submitted of charges against this hospital, prepared by Local 273 of the United Public Workers of America - CIO. The statement, as you know, alleges first, discrimination against Negro employees, and second, discrimination against Negro patients. The President's Executive Order 9980 dated July 26, 1948, which prompted you to bring these matters to the attention of the Administrator does not, of course, apply to the alleged discrimination against Negro patients. I shall confine my remarks to this subject.

The Department of Medicine and Surgery of the Veterans Administration has but one major objective in its medical care of a hospitalized veteran, and that is to take all possible measures to lead to his prompt recovery. This is as applicable to the Negro as it is to the white veteran. It is realized that in a few Veterans Administration hospitals Negro and white patients are treated in separate wards and have their own facilities. That, however, is not discrimination. It is common medical knowledge that if a patient is to recover promptly he must be protected from any situation or mental condition which might presumably retard his recovery. This holds true for the Negro and the white patient, and affects both in their relationship with one another. While pursuing local customs in a few isolated instances, we feel that we are following a practice that the great majority of Negro patients, while not desiring such a policy to be perpetuated indefinitely, feel is to their best interest at the present time.

I have submitted your correspondence to the Fair Employment Officer of the Veterans Administration for appropriate attention to that portion pertaining to the alleged discrimination against Veterans Administration Negro employees at the [Lawson] Veterans Administration Hospital in Chamblee, Georgia, and have called his attention to your request for a conference on this matter.

Very truly yours,

/s/ Paul B. Magnuson
PAUL B. MAGNUSON
Chief Medical Director

STATEMENT CHARGING WHOLESALE DISCRIMINATION AGAINST NEGRO EMPLOYEES AND PATIENTS AT THE LAWSON VETERANS ADMINISTRATION HOSPITAL, CHAMBLEE, GEORGIA.

APR 15 1949
RECEIVED
Southern Regional Council

February 9, 1949.

I.

Introduction

This statement, charging the Lawson Veterans Administration Hospital management with wholesale and systematic violation of President Truman's Executive Order 9980 of July 26, 1948, forbidding discrimination in the Federal service, is submitted directly to the Fair Employment Practices Board and to appropriate Congressional Committees and members, for the following reasons:

The conditions of prejudice and terror against Negro employees at Lawson are so serious that resort to the usual procedures for local consideration of such grievances not only would be vain, but also would in all liklihood lead to reprisals against employees who dared to raise these issues with the management. Specific instances of such conditions of terror and reprisal are as follows:

On December 16, 1947, a Union delegation protested to the management over the refusal to assign needed white Attendants to care for Negro patients. On the night of this conference with the management -- which was known only to Union leaders and the management -- the Ku Klux Klan invaded the Negro Attendants' dressing room and covered it with KKK stickers (sample attached), placed on every locker and window pane, and all over the floor. The Union immediately requested that this dastardly act be investigated and the perpetrators discharged from the Hospital. In the time since then, however, no act of discipline or reprimand -- not even a general statement -- has been made by the hospital management regarding Ku Klux Klan activity on the station.

This act of open terrorism was followed by reprisal against the President of the Local Union, a Negro veteran and leader. Mr. Daniel, who led union delegations inquiring as to the management's plans for compliance with President Truman's Order against discrimination in the Federal service, and fought against specific conditions of discrimination, soon found himself charged with "disloyalty". When he asked that at least one Negro serve on the "loyalty" board hearing his case, the request was denied and he was tried before an all-white board. When he asked what was the evidence against him, the management refused to produce any. When he asked the nature of the evidence against him, the management stated it was "confidential", while refusing to state what "security considerations" justified this arbitrary procedure which made a defense impossible.

When the Board, with unseemly haste, found Mr. Daniel guilty of "disloyalty", not only was he suspended from his job, but also his pay for time already worked and for over 400 hours of accrued annual leave, was denied him -- thus stealing what he had earned and subjecting him and his wife and child to extreme hardship.

On January 28, 1949, representatives of the Lawson Hospital management called all hospital employees into a series of meetings in which the firing of Mr. Daniel was pointedly referred to, with thinly veiled suggestions that employees should stay away from the Union.

It seems obvious that in an atmosphere like this, resort to procedures for contesting discrimination at Lawson Hospital itself becomes impossible. Moreover, the prescribed procedures are adapted to individual cases and instances of discrimination. Here we have a wholesale pattern, an over-all scheme of discrimination which cannot be suitably proved or handled by the individual case method.

For these reasons, Local 273, United Public Workers of America, C.I.O., on behalf of the entire membership, submits these charges directly to the Fair Employment Board of the Civil Service Commission and to any appropriate Congressional Committees and Members of Congress.

II.
Discrimination and Segregation Practiced Against Negro Employees at Lawson Hospital.

The basic condition of discrimination against Negro employees at Lawson Hospital is the systematic exclusion of them from the better, higher-paying, clerical, technical, and professional jobs. This is proved on an over-all basis by the jobs from which Negroes are excluded, and by the jobs to which Negroes are confined:

Jobs from which Negroes are Excluded.	Jobs to which Negroes are Confined.
Administrative office	Hospital Attendant
Clerks	Mess Attendant
Secretaries	Janitors
Nurses	Laborers
Doctors	Housekeeping aides
Dieticians	Kitchen workers
Personnel office	Grounds
Supervising Attendants	Laundry
NP Ward Attendants	Maids
Guards
Firemen
Finance office
Post office
X-Ray Therapy
Physiotherapy
Physical rehabilitation
Central supply office
Eye-ear-nose-throat clinic
Dental clinic
Base supply office
Ambulance driver
Chauffeur Mechanic
Electricians
Painters
Carpenters

The only Negro supervisors are the Head Janitor, Head Waiter in the Nurses Dining Room, and a supervisor over the Mess Attendants. One Negro in the GU Clinic does technical work, but he is classified as Hospital Attendant. One Negro is in the laboratory; he washes bottles. Two or three Negroes work in the operating room, but they are classified as Hospital Attendants.

It is clear that basically Negroes are confined to custodial and menial jobs, and that even the exceptional supervisory jobs held by Negroes are those related to custodial and menial work.

It is no answer to say that Negroes have not applied for the better, higher-paying, technical, and professional jobs. Negroes would apply for many of these jobs if they knew there would be no discrimination in hiring. But Negroes are not interested in making a vain gesture. If the Lawson Hospital management would make a specific public announcement that the applications of Negroes for clerical, supervisory, technical, and professional jobs will be considered on their merits without regard to color, and would make civil service examination announcements for all hospital positions available to the Negro press (e.g., the Atlanta Daily World), they would receive many applications.

Underscoring the systematic exclusion of Negroes from higher jobs is a recent development at Lawson Hospital. During September and October, 1948, a delegation of Lawson Hospital employees organized in Local 273, United Public Workers of America, C.I.O., raised with the management the question of Negro supervisory attendants, in view of President Truman's FEPC Order for the Federal service. They pointed out that the majority of Hospital Attendants at Lawson are Negroes, including those with five, ten, fifteen, and twenty years' experience. In fact, due to the more rapid turn-over among white Hospital Attendants, the greatest fund of experience in this field is found among Negro Attendants. In view of these facts, the Union delegation asserted that Negroes should be included among the supervisory Attendants. At that time and for a considerable period, there had been six supervisory Attendants, all white:

Chief Attendant	Evening Supervisor
Assistant Chief Attendant	Night Supervisor
Day Supervisor	Relief Supervisor

The management promised that a Negro Hospital Attendant would be promoted to fill the first vacancy in any of these positions. But within a matter of days, the number of supervisory Attendants was reduced from six to four:

Chief Attendant
Assistant Chief Attendant
Evening Supervisor
Relief Supervisor

At the same time, the functions of the supervisory Attendants are being taken over by Nurses (all white) in the Chief Nurse's office. Thus the prospect and possibility of Negroes being promoted to supervisory Attendant positions is being systematically removed by the management.

The situation was further highlighted during the hearing (Dec. 1948) on charges of disloyalty against Mr. Irvin Daniel, Negro employee at Lawson. Mr. Daniel had requested that at least one member of the "loyalty board" sitting on his case should be a Negro. When pressed for a reason for denying this request, the management representative stated that loyalty board members must be directors or assistant directors at the VA Branch Office, and that there were no Negroes in positions at this level!

In addition to job discrimination at Lawson, Negro employees are subjected to other forms of discrimination and segregation. They are required to use separate dressing rooms, which until recently were labelled with Jim Crow signs. They, as well as Negro patients and visitors are affected by the segregated and discriminatory canteen facilities. They are seated separately in the Mess Hall.

III.
Discrimination and Segregation Practiced Against Negro Patients at the Lawson VA Hospital.

Negro veterans who are patients at the Lawson Veterans Administration Hospital do not receive equal services and facilities with white patients. The basis for practically all the situations of discrimination against Negro patients is the consistent policy and effort of the management to maintain segregation between patients on the basis of color.

When the Lawson Hospital was under the U.S. Army, prior to September 1946, there was no segregation of Negro patients.

Under the Veterans Administration, however, with a few exceptions which will be noted later in this statement, Negro patients are confined to two wards, 14A and 20B. Ward 20B is called a general medical ward. Ward 14A is called a general surgical ward.

White patients are distributed among some twenty wards, compared with two for Negroes, although in population the area served by Lawson Hospital is over one-third Negro.

The situation in Ward 14A shows the discriminatory results of the segregation policy. Although described as a general surgical ward, 14A is a catch-all for a great variety of cases. There are 4 Negro cancer patients in 14A, while the white cancer patients are treated in special cancer wards, 4B and 5B. Thus, Negro cancer patients are excluded from the special cancer wards and from the special facilities provided there.

There are 6 to 8 Negro orthopedic patients in 14A, while the white orthopedic patients are treated in special orthopedic wards, 6A, 7A, and 8A.

There are 3 Negro chest surgery patients in 14A, while the white chest surgery patients are treated in a special ward for these cases, 2A.

There are 3 Negro GU patients in 14A, while white GU patients are treated on a special GU ward, 5A.

There are 2 to 4 Negro eye-ear-nose-throat patients in 14A, while white EENT patients are cared for in an EENT ward, 16A.

The result of excluding Negroes from the specialized wards not only deprives them of the facilities and services most needed for their cases, but also results in atrocious conditions of overcrowding in Ward 14A. This ward has a normal bed capacity of 32 patients. However, the policy of segregation has on occasion resulted in as many as 38 patients being crowded in this ward, with beds in the aisle and on the porch. The porches are intended as pleasant lounging places for ambulatory patients, and this is the use made of them on white wards. Attached are pictures of beds and equipment which crowd the porch in 14A.

Other examples of segregation and discrimination against Negro patients are the following:

In the Admission Office, there are separate dressing rooms for Negro and white patients, labelled by Jim Crow signs on the doors. (See attached pictures)

In the Mess Hall, Negro and white patients are separately seated.

In the Canteen, white patients have two large and attractive adjoining rooms in which to eat. Negroes are relegated to a "two-by-four cubby-hole". (See attached pictures.)

In the tuberculosis ward, 21B, Negro patients are kept in rooms separate from white patients; and on one occasion recently when there was no separate room available in Ward 21B, a Negro TB patient was placed in Ward 14A along with all other types of cases.

On the few occasions when Negro patients are placed in the post-surgical ward, 3A, they are segregated in separate rooms.

During the summer of 1948, two Negro patients were placed in Ward 2A (chest surgery). They were placed in rooms, and curtains were strung across the door. There was no medical reason for this, as the Negro patients were not bed patients, and this was not done in the cases of white patients in individual rooms. Since that time, no Negro chest surgery patients have been cared for in this ward, but have been sent to Ward 14A.

During January 1949, a Negro veteran with a head injury was sent from the Admission Office to Ward 14A. The Nurse said there was no room in 14A, and that the "overflow ward", 15A, was for white patients only. So the Attendants were told to set up another bed on the porch of 14A, although there was ample space in 15A.

During the summer of 1948, a Nurse at the eye-ear-nose-throat clinic told a Negro patient that he should sit in the back row of chairs in the waiting room of the clinic. Also a Nurse told a Negro patient that he could not use the toilet at the EENT clinic.

- - - - - - -

These are merely examples of the conditions which prevail, so far as Negro employees and patients are concerned, at the Lawson Veterans Administration Hospital, an agency of the Government of the United States of America, in Chamblee, Georgia, just outside the city of Atlanta.

21- Labor

An Englishman Looks at AMERICAN LABOUR

R. H. S. CROSSMAN M.P.

DEFINITE DOCUMENT
Southern Regional Council

The New Statesman and Nation

Union Membership, 1949

(13 S. States)

(QSM estimate)

250,000 —	Independent
750,000 —	CIO
2,000,000 —	AFL
3,000,000	Total, 1949

Union membership has about doubled in the last ten years.

Labor

STATEMENTS issued by CIO PRESIDENT WALTER REUTHER and CIO SECY-TREASURER JAMES CAREY on May 17, 1954, immediately following the decision of the U. S. Supreme Court outlawing school segregation.

CIO President Walter P. Reuther:

"The unanimous decision of the Supreme Court outlawing racial segregation in the schools is a heartwarming reaffirmation of the American democratic principles that are inherent in the 14th Amendment to the Constitution.

"As a result of this historic decision, children of every minority in the United States will receive direct and substantial benefits, and, in turn, a greater share in our democracy.

"The unanimous nature of the decision clearly indicates that honest Americans recognize that violations or deprivations of civil rights have no place in our nation.

"The Court is to be congratulated for this great and inspiring decision which will benefit America not only at home but in every corner of the globe. The decision will be a body blow to the efforts of the Soviet Communists to use America's civil rights record as a propaganda weapon against all the nations of the free world.

"The CIO is proud to have played a role as a 'friend of the court' in the school segregation cases and in many of the earlier civil rights cases that built the legal groundwork for today's decision by the Supreme Court."

CIO Secretary-Treasurer James B. Carey:

"The historic decision of the Supreme Court that racial segregation in public schools is unconstitutional is another important step toward securing the constitutional guarantees of equal protection under our laws for all citizens. This decision represents the official recognition of our Government that the separate but equal doctrine is inconsistent with the fundamental equalitarianism of the American way of life. It breathes life into another recommendation of President Truman's Committee on Civil Rights.

"The CIO is dedicated to the protection of our democratic system of government and the civil rights and liberties of all Americans. Therefore, we wholeheartedly support this decision and will vigorously support every democratic means to implement this decision in our communities. It increases the leadership responsibilities of all groups which have a concern with social action and educational functions. Our country will be judged in the manner of how we adjust to this decision.

"The resources of the CIO Civil Rights Committee, and the rest of the CIO, are available toward realizing a quick and peaceful transition to an unsegregated American educational community."

liu 1695 cio

Teachers Split

Courier 9-4-54

AT THE RECENT Chicago convention of the American Federation of Teachers, AFL, a violent storm broke out when a New York delegate, Richard Parrish, submitted a resolution recommending that all federation locals that had not ended segregation completely before the next convention be suspended until integration is carried out.

There was the expected explosion of reaction on the part of some Southern delegates, many of whom expressed strong disapproval of the recent Supreme Court decision desegregating schools; and the resolution was considerably toned down.

Here in microcosm was a question which is going to bedevil labor unions more and more as time goes by.

Many organized workers (and not all in the South by any means) think and act as whites first instead of workers first, and this is very sad from the viewpoint of labor solidarity.

Years ago Eugene V. Debs warned that white labor could never be free as long as black labor remained in chains. It is still true.

AFL, CIO NEAR CRUCIAL TALK

Reuther and Chiefs Going to Miami to Seek Deal for Merging Unions

MIAMI BEACH, Feb. 5 (AP)—AFL and CIO officials are about to enter a crucial stage in negotiations aimed at merging their union groups into a single powerful labor federation.

CIO President Walter Reuther is to lead a group of his union chiefs down to this winter resort where AFL President George Meany and top AFL officials have been holding strategy sessions.

Meany and Reuther, in the two years since becoming the major leaders of organized labor, have made steady progress toward their announced goal of combining their federations into a single 15-million-member union organization.

However, the unity talks have reached the stage at which all prior merger efforts floundered, and the guessing is still 50-50 whether any merger will be accomplished.

Committees Hopeful

Outwardly and apparently genuinely hopeful that they will go through with the amalgamation, three-man subcommittees representing the AFL and CIO will go into a huddle at the Roney Plaza Hotel here Tuesday to try to hammer out a written merger agreement. This will be subject to review by two 10-man committees at another meeting Wednesday. Any pact would have to be ratified later at the AFL and CIO conventions.

The union leaders say that by combining forces under a single banner they can build greater political power for organized labor, tougher economic strength against employers and more efficient drives to sell unionism to unorganized workers.

Standing in the way of achieving the merger are the jealousies and rivalries between various labor

See Page Two, Column Seven

Chat Times 2/6/55 Labor ★ ★ ★

AFL, CIO NEAR CRUCIAL TALK

From Page One

leaders and their unions for prestige and worker-organizing rights.

Divided 20 Years

However, Meany and Reuther say they plan to bring all AFL and CIO unions under the same tent on a status quo basis and let them fight out any differences once the merger takes place. It has been 20 years since the CIO was formed by a group of unions splintering away from the AFL.

Meany is expected to emerge as head of the combined setup with Reuther bowing out and sticking to his other job as president of the million-member auto workers union, possibly with added political responsibility as an aide to Meany.

For employers, a labor merger would likely mean tougher union bargaining and more concentrated union-organizing efforts against nonunion plants. Once the merger is completed, Meany and Reuther plan to invite the big independent railroad unions and John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers to join up, too.

Lauds Formosa Stand

The AFL executive council which has been holding midwinter sessions here all week and will convene again Monday, released a statement today warmly endorsing President Eisenhower's foreign policy and his handling of the Formosan problem.

The council warned "against any attempt, under cover of pursuing the armistice pattern set in Korea and Indochina," to extend American recognition to Communist China or to "smuggle the Russian imposed terror regime into the United Nations."

Meany told reporters that, while the AFL differs with Eisenhower on most domestic issues, it generally firmly supports his foreign policy views.

RACE ISSUE LOOMS IN SCHOOL BATTLE

Chat Times Feb 22 1955

NAACP Sees Segregation as Factor—AFL, CIO Attack Eisenhower Program

CCC

WASHINGTON, Feb. 21 (AP)—The Senate Labor Committee today completed hearings on President Eisenhower's school-aid program with critical testimony from the AFL and CIO. There were also indications the whole question may become embroiled in a civil rights fight.

A last-day witness was Clarence Mitchell of the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People. He testified the administration measure raises a "very serious possibility that the bill in its present form would open the door for numerous attempts to continue racial segregation in the public schools."

Sen. Douglas (D-Ill), a member of the committee, recalled a 1949 effort by opponents of public housing to kill a housing measure by tacking to it a nonsegregation "rider." The attempt failed, but Douglas told Mitchell today "the same problem may be looming."

His point was that opponents of federal aid to education might use the segregation issue to kill all federal aid legislation.

'Two-Fisted Fight'

Mitchell urged on the committee a "two-fisted fight" to put a nonsegregation provision into the Eisenhower measure or any of several others pending before the committee. One of these by Sen. Hill (D-Ala), the committee chairman, appeared to have the support of a committee majority.

Hill himself predicted his own school aid measure, proposing one billion dollars of federal grants to the states the next two years, would be approved by a majority of the committee.

The Eisenhower measure is based primarily on a system of federal loans and credits to needy school districts, with only the most impoverished to be eligible for direct grants. These would amount to 200 million dollars over the next three years.

Both Andrew W. Biemiller of the AFL and George T. Guernsey of the CIO denounced the administration bill as inadequate.

Guernsey, associate director of education for the CIO, said the measure would provide "too little" in the way of aid.

"Half-hearted and pinch-penny" was the label used by Andrew W. Biemiller, legislative representative for the AFL.

Meany Vows Fight on Bias When Labor's Ranks Unite

A.F.L. Head's Pledge Gets Backing of Reuther's Aide at Conference

2-27-55

By STANLEY LEVEY

Special to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ATLANTIC CITY, Feb. 26—George Meany, president of the American Federation of Labor, said today that the merged labor movement would not tolerate racial or religious discrimination.

Mr. Meany, who will head the unified group to be formed by a merger of the A. F. L. and the Congress of Industrial Organizations, addressed the first session of a two-day national trade union conference called by the Jewish Labor Committee. The committee represents 500,000 Jewish union members.

Acknowledging that bigotry and discrimination would not soon disappear, Mr. Meany asserted that a "good trade union movement" could not exist except in "an atmosphere of freedom." He called upon labor and the public to wage an unremitting fight to "clean up the remaining small-minded spots."

Mr. Meany said the Bill of Rights was of great importance to trade unions, and he developed the argument that the worker who remained unorganized because of his race or religion posed a serious economic threat to organized wage earners.

George Meany

As president of the merged

Continued on Page 84, Column 3

MEANY BARS BIAS IN LABOR'S RANKS

Continued From Page 1

labor federation Mr. Meany will be the leader of more than 15,000,000 unionists. The new group, which is expected to come into being before the end of this year, will have machinery—probably a civil rights department—to fight discrimination within the ranks of labor, he said.

This theme also was taken up by Arthur J. Goldberg, general counsel of the C. I. O. Representing Walter Reuther, C. I. O. president, Mr. Goldberg said a "united labor movement can do much, much more than any of us have been able to do separately to win these battles."

Mr. Goldberg also seized the opportunity — without naming names—to assail Michael J. Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union, C. I. O., for his opposition to merger. Mr. Quill has taken the position that the C. I. O. should receive advance assurances against racketeering, raiding and racial discrimination before merging.

"I am aware," Mr. Goldberg aid, "of some demagogic attacks upon this unity agreement—attacks which question the good faith of the C. I. O., attacks which specifically mention the subject of civil rights and pretend that the labor movement will retreat in this field because of the merger.

"Of course the record of unions in America is not perfect. The record of the C. I. O. is not perfect, though I would be proud to measure it alongside the record of any other organization. Let me say to you that I know the leaders of the A. F. L. are just as sincere as are the leaders of the C. I. O. in their desire to eliminate any vestige of discrimination anywhere in the union movement of America."

Mr. Meany hailed the Supreme Court decision on desegregation in public schools as a "milestone in civil rights." And he urged that the states seeking to avoid the law by "legal and technical devices," be deprived of any Federal aid to education. Mr. Meany disclosed that he had received a letter recently from a member of the South Carolina State Senate urging him to "mind your own business" on desegregation.

"I wrote him a courteous reply," Mr. Meany said, "more courteous than the one he sent me. I told him public education was the A. F. L.'s business and had been for seventy-five years."

The labor leader outlined what he called the "positive side" of the merger. Instead of thinking about the evils to be eliminated, he said, we should have in mind the objectives to be sought. These include, he said, better housing, better schools, an ever rising standard of living, an ever better share of the wealth, increased political activity and understanding, improved civil rights and increased activity in the international field.

During the day's panel discussions both Charles Zimmerman, chairman of the conference, and Jacob T. Zukerman, president of the Workmen's Circle, a Jewish fraternal organization, attacked the committee in charge of celebrating the 300th anniversary of the Jewish community in New York.

The conference will close tomorrow with workshop meetings and a report on future activities.

Co In Sa

NORT Feb. 26 (A of the Sad ballet compa to a hospital fering from car poisoning.

A spokesman sai ers were rehearsi drafty room and shu dows. Fumes from stove filled the roo members of the troup lapsed. Four were held night in the hospital, others released after trea ment.

Labor Front

ccc

Pitt Cour. 3/12/55

Merger Good for Negroes

By WILLARD S. TOWNSEND

SINCE the talk started between the AFL and CIO regarding organic unity, there have been many conjectures. Many curbstone labor reporters have come up with some very fantastic ideas as to what the merger will be like. I had the pleasure last week of voting for the merger, because, according to its articles of agreement, the Negro does actually stand to gain greater advantages.

Mr. Townsend

Let's take for instance the position of A. Philip Randolph. Under the structure of the new orgaization Phil will become a member of the general executive board and will, for the first time, be a part of the policy-making body. This will mean there will be two Negroes on the general board. It certainly will be a pleasure to have Philip on the board where he should have been many years ago.

And next article (f) of the merger agreement states: "The merged federation shall constitutionally recognize the right of all workers, without regard to race, creed, color or national origin to share in the full benefits of trade union organization in the merged federation. The merged federation shall establish appropriate internal machinery to bring about the effective implementation of this principle of non-discrimination."

This is no pious declaration as we have known so often in the past, but indeed a firm approach to the matter of race relations.

* * *

THERE WILL be appropriate machinery to enforce the constitutional provisions that deal with this matter and no longer will international unions stand back on what they call "autonomous rights."

Small international unions like the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters and the United Transport Service Employes will not have their integrity disturbed. On the basis of the new constitution, no small union will be gobbled up by the large unions.

All in all, the articles of agreement for merger give to the Negro stronger constitutional rights than even the liberal CIO had in its constitution.

Workers in every section of the land, in every industry, will find direct benefits as a result of the merger agreement. Unity will help to promote the well-being and the effectiveness of every union and their membership, in each and every phase of its activities — social, economic, legislative, political and community.

CIO Delegates Hold Talks on Segregation

Atlanta
2-25-58

Negro and white union delegates, who say they represent more than 15,000 CIO packinghouse workers in the South, are holding a two - day conference here aimed at ending public school segregation.

The sessions close Friday at Atlanta University. They have as their stated purpose "to examine all problems relating to segregation and discrimination and to map out specific programs to bring about their destruction."

The conference is sponsored by Districts Eight and Nine of the United Packinghouse Workers of America—CIO. Officials said it is the first Southwide anti-discrimination conference to be called by either a CIO or AFL union.

Ralph Helstein of Chicago, president of the national UPWA, scored Gov. Marvin Griffin's opposition to school desegregation.

Anti - segregation sentiments were voiced by Edmund Dumas, director of the seven-state District Nine, which has headquarters here, and George Thomas, director of District Eight, which has quarters in Fort Worth, Tex.

Meat Workers Open Drive To End School Segregation

A 13-state drive to end school segregation in the South was opened here Thursday by the United Packinghouse Workers of America (CIO).

The two-day conference, representing UPWA Districts 8 and 9, brought together Negro and white delegates representing more than 15,000 Southern workers.

The first Southwide antidiscrimination conference called by either CIO or AFL unions, the gathering had this stated purpose:

"To examine all problems related to segregation and discrimination and to map out specific programs to bring about their destruction."

Ralph Helstein, UPWA president, ripped Gov. Griffin's opposition to school segregation as a "plantation-type sellout of not only Negro citizens but of all white and Negro citizens in the South."

Helstein declared:

"The organized strength of this union will be thrown into the fight to end all segregation and discrimination in whatever forms they might appear.

The union president said "desegregation is the only method for providing adequate schooling for both white and Negro children."

Edmund Dumas, host director of UPWA's District 9, and George Thomas, District 8 director, said in a joint declaration:

"Discrimination and segregation rob white and Negro Southern workers of more than five million dollars annually because of the lower wages paid in the South than elsewhere in the country."

Russell R. Lasley, union vice president, said "segregation is divisive, dirty and destructive. It has no place in a society of freedom."

Rufus E. Clement, president of Atlanta University, called for "equal rights for Americans."

Men of Ahavath Achim To Hold Stag Dinr

Ahavath Achim Men's C scheduled a stag dinner
Monday at the Edu
Building, 250 Tenth
A film, "The be shown a will pres music

UPWA Maps $10 Million Drive To End Segregation

In Const 3-26-55 1955

Atlanta

A $10,000,000 AFL-CIO drive to end segregation in the South was mapped here Friday by delegates representing about 15,000 packinghouse union members in 13 Southern states.

Leaders of two districts of the United Packinghouse Workers of America (CIO) said work to raise the money will begin immediately. It would be used for court tests of segregation, research on "discriminatory" practices in all areas of Southern life and propaganda to win public opinion over to the anti-segregationist standard.

FLAY DIXIE LEADERS

Speakers at a two-day anti-discrimination conference attended by 150 delegates from Southern locals flayed Dixie leaders who are fighting to maintain segregation. They urged union members to violate segregation laws in order to bring segregation practices to legal tests.

Schools and transportation facilities were among the major "battlefields" on which the union leaders said they would wage war.

John H. Telfer, program coordinator for the Southeastern district of the union, said the UPWA would work actively in the drive but exepects other unions in the AFL and CIO to join the fight, as well as non-union organizations with anti-segregation policies.

OUTLINES PROGRAM

The UPWA's national Anti-Discrimination Department is regarded as one of the most outspoken and active groups fighting segregation in this country. The department's director, Russell R. Lasley, was at the Atlanta conference to propose a 10-point program aimed at implementing recent U.S. Supreme Court decisions against segregation.

Edmund Dumas, host to the conference and director of UPWA in the Southeast, said the program would be pushed immediately in locals throughout his district.

Atlanta, headquarters for the district, has five UPWA locals in 10 packinghouses in the area.

1955

Racial Bias Laid to Union; State Calls Public Hearing

3/27/55 NY Times

By STANLEY LEVEY

The State Commission Against Discrimination has ordered a union to face a public hearing on charges of discriminating against Negroes. In its ten-year history the commission has processed more than 3,100 complaints. Only six or seven, according to a spokesman, have reached the public hearing stage, and none of these has involved a labor organization.

The union in this case is the Bottlers and Drivers Union, Local 1345, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, A. F. L. The complaint, brought by fifteen Negroes, makes these charges against the local and its president, Alfred P. Dunn:

¶Discrimination against Negroes in job referrals at the union's hiring halls.

¶Refusal to grant Negroes a fair share of the work.

¶Refusal to admit Negroes to union membership.

Conciliation a Failure

Normally the commission strives to settle complaints on the threshold of public hearings. This was attempted in the case of Local 1345, but without success. Commissioner Elmer A. Carter tried for many months to find a peace formula through conciliation and education—the two favored procedures of the commission.

In January, after a long and delicate negotiation, a labor-management agreement was formulated for the brewing industry here that would have granted seniority rights to twenty Negro workers. But Local 1345 refused to sign it.

The local's contention was that there never had been any discrimination in the local and that to sign the agreement would be to acknowledge "something that does not exist." However, three other brewery locals and five brewers did sign—without conceding any violation of the law against discrimination.

The locals—all sister affiliates of Local 1345 in the teamsters—were Bottlers and Drivers Union, Local 1096; Beer Drivers Union, Local 323, and Beer Drivers Union, Local 124. The brewers were Liebmann, F. & M. Schaefer, Schlitz, Piel Brothers and Piel's, Inc., and Jacob Ruppert.

Effect of Agreement

The net effect of the labor-management agreement would have been to give the twenty Negroes seniority rights they do not now have. The complainants charged that though they had worked in breweries a great many days a year, they had been deprived of seniority because of existing patterns of discriminatory job referrals.

Recent changes in beer drinking habits, one source said, have given Local 1345 a controlling hand over extra brewery labor. Increasingly more beer is drunk from bottles and cans than from kegs. Local 1345's jurisdiction covers bottle delivery, bottle shop work and warehouse employment.

Because of the large amount of extra work available in these occupations, it is in the jurisdiction that Negroes in recent years have been seeking employment. The commission's interest in the problem goes back two years or more. Another articulate group in attempting to wipe out discrimination in brewery employment has been the Urban League.

Behind the refusal of Local

Continued on Page 72, Column 4

WHEN you think of writing—Think of Whiting. WHITING PAPER COMPANY—Advt.

STATE CITES UNION ON BIAS CHARGES

3/27/55

Continued From Page 1

1345 to accept the labor-management agreement is an intra-union dispute. The local has long been at odds with the leadership of the Brewery Joint Board, representing the four teamster beer unions, on political grounds. Local 1345 regards the joint board as under left wing control.

The public hearing is scheduled for tomorrow morning at the commission's office, 270 Broadway. However, Local 1345, which has filed an answer to the complaint, has asked for adjournment until April 15. The chances are that the commission will grant the request.

Under state law, the hearing will be conducted by three commissioners. Commissioner Carter will not be one because the commissioner who handled the informal situation is barred from sitting when the case becomes public.

After hearing the evidence the commission may—if the facts warrant—issue a cease and desist order containing certain affirmative provisions as to future procedure. The order is legally binding and the commission may go into the courts for enforcement. Violations are punishable by law.

Start Hearings On Charges Of Labor Union Bias

NEW YORK. — (ANP) — Hearings on racial bias involving a labor union's practices has been ordered by the State Commission Against Discrimination with the Bottlers and Drivers Union, Local 1345, International Brotherhood of Teamsters AFL as the offender.

The complaints, brought by 15 Negroes against the local and its president, Alfred P. Dunn, are discrimination against Negroes in job referrals at the union's hiring hall, refusal to grant Negroes a fair share of the work and refusal to admit Negroes to union membership.

Normally, the commission tries to settle complaints before they reach the public hearings stage. This was attempted in the case of Local 1345 but without success. Commissioner Elmer A. Carter tried for many months to work out a peace formula through conciliation and education—two procedures favored by the commission.

Last January, after a long and delicate negotiation, a labor-management agreement was formulated for the brewing industry that would have granted seniority rights to 20 Negro workers, but the local refused to sign it.

The local's contention was that there never had been any discrimination in the local and that to sign the agreement would be to acknowledge "something that does not exist."

However, three other brewery locals and five brewers did sign—without conceding any violation of the law against discrimination.

Recent changes in beer drinking habits, it is reported, have given Local 1345 a controling hand over extra brewery labor. Increasingly, more beer is drunk from bottles than from kegs. Local 1345's jurisdiction covers bottle delivery, bottle shop work and warehouse employment.

Because of the large amount of work available in these occupations, it is in this area that Negroes in recent years have been seeking employment. The commission's interest in the problem goes back two or more years. At that time there had been considerable agitation in Harlem. one of

Black Dispatch
4/9/55
CCC

Labor Front

Negro for Labor Post

By WILLARD S. TOWNSEND

THE UNITED STATES Dement of Labor has made it known that the vacancy in the top post of assistant secretary of labor will be filled from the ranks of labor some time in July.

Secretary of Labor Mitchell gave this assurance a few days ago in the hearing before the House Appropriations Subcommittee. Mr. Mitchell told members of the subcommitee that he had offered the post of assistant secretary of labor to several labor people, but could not get any takers.

Mr. Townsend

Certainly, it would be encouraging to Negro labor leaders and to Negro workers generally if a Negro from labor were chosen.

It would certainly give them the feeling of participation in Government since the problems of Negro workers are certainly better understood by one who has spent his lifetime in the ranks and developed all the skills required in such a high office, rather than one who has not.

This column would nominate A. Philip Randolph, who is a dean of Negro labor leaders and most certainly representative of the aspirations of the Negro working class.

• • •

THE CIO Newspaper Guild of New York has selected George Meany for its Page One award in the field of labor.

In making the award they point out that he was being honored "for the skill, patience and statesmanlike vision he displayed as chief architect of labor unity."

The awards consist of sticks of type, mounted and bronze-coated, and an accompanying citation explaining the nature of the award. Presentations will be made at the annual Page One Ball, April 29, in the Sheraton-Astor Hotel, Manhattan.

The National Public Affairs Award goes to Thurgood Marshall, general counsel of the NAACP, for leading the fight culminating in the Supreme Court decision against discrimination.

James C. Petrillo, president of the American Federation of Musicians, and ex-President Harry Truman posing "in a jolly, let-your-hair-down mood," won Sam Goldstein of INP the Graphics Arts Award for a photograph taken at the AFM convention in Milwaukee.

Pitt. Cour.
4/9/55

CCC

N.Y. Times
4/15/55

MINORITIES AIDED IN LABOR MERGER

CCC

Jewish Group Is Reminded of Aim to Protect Civil, Racial, Religious Rights

The determination of the nation's two merging labor bodies to work for strengthening of civil rights and to combat racial and religious discrimination was stressed yesterday by a labor leader.

Charles S. Zimmerman, vice president of the Internatinal Ladies Garment Workers Union, A. F. L., brought this out in an address to the twentieth biennial convention of the Jewish Labor Committee at 25 East Seventy-eighth Street. The committee represents 500,000 Jewish workers in the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

In noting that the proposed constitution of the united movement contained a clause attacking racial and religious discrimination, Mr Zimmerman said the new federation would establish a special civil rights department.

"Labor unity means that minorities both in and out of the trade union movement will be given the protection of the American labor movement," he declared.

Answer to Reds at Bandung

At another session, Emanuel Muravchik, national field director of the committee, said that the Supreme Court's decision on desegregation "had a great deal to do with the fact that America presented a brighter idealistic face at the Bandung Conference."

"No longer were Communist propagandists able to point to America and claim that segregation was a national policy condoned by weak laws," he observed.

He said that Communist propaganda in this country had become ineffectual "because the labor movement has taken the initiative in forging better weapons, weapons beaten out on the anvil of democracy, not out of the molden mass of tyranny and suberfuge."

Minority groups in this country, he added, "are no longer fooled by slogans coined by the slave masters of the Kremlin and echoed by their stooges in this country."

At a special session in the New School Auditorium, 66 West Twelfth Street, the committee honored Adolph Held, its national chairman. He will mark his seventieth birthday on Tuesday. Congratulatory messages were received from President Eisenhower and other public officials as well as from labor leaders.

Mr. Held received a scroll citing his efforts in behalf of humanitarian causes and the labor movement.

Labor Front

CCC

Church Leader Speaks His Piece

By WILLARD S. TOWNSEND

LAST WEEK while attending the Louisiana State Industrial Union Council Convention in New Orleans, I became fully aware of the new spirit of the South. The convention was addressed by the Rev. James L. Stovall, pastor of the North Baton Rouge Methodist Church.

Mr. Townsend

It was indeed heartwarming to listen to a white minister in the South speak so forcefully on the values of brotherhood. The Rev. Stovall said in part as follows:

"Be a steadying influence in our state, and in the South as we face up to the implementation of the Supreme Court decision in regard to segregation in public education. This is one of the most important issues before our state today, and the way we handle it will be a measure of our democracy and of our Christianity. I want to remind this audience of something. What did the last legislature take that was a slap in the face to you? It was the so-called 'right to work' law. Now, the men who were responsible for the so-called 'right to work' legislation are the same legislators and men in our state who are today trying to stir up racial animosity, and who are seeking to confuse the people of Louisiana so that a reasonable solution to this problem will be impossible. The proponents of so-called 'right to work' legislation and the proponents of racial antagonism in Louisiana are one and the same. This says to me that we have a group of men who have lost faith in America and in the strength of democracy; so they turn to desperate measures. I would hate to think that America is so weak that we cannot deal with this in a mature manner.

"We need today a rebirth of faith in America and in democracy. We need to believe in people and in their ability to work together if given the opportunity. The CIO has rendered a great service to America in creating a climate in which people of different races, creeds and colors, can work together in an atmosphere of equality and mutual concern. I commend you for your excellent achievements, but remind you that our task is still incomplete. You can render a great service to Louisiana during the next few months by acting with cool heads and warm hearts. This will lead us to be true to our democratic and Christian heritage. It will prevent us from destroying our public school system and from putting our parochial schools in an embarrassing and impossible position. It will keep us from discrediting America abroad by stirring up racial conflict at home. Let us not be afraid of justice and good will, but let us re-assert and act upon our basic democratic and Christian faith."

It is such men as the Rev. Mr. Stovall and his colleagues, together with the CIO and the NAACP who are bringing about a social and economic revolution in the South.

Pitt Courier
4/23/55

9/13

News from CIO

EXecutive 3-5581 Congress of Industrial Organizations 718 Jackson Pl. N.W., Washington 6, D.C.

CWA PRESIDENT BEIRNE 'DISAVOWS' AND 'CRITICIZES' VIOLENCE, IN REPORT TO CIO PRESIDENT REUTHER; SAYS CWA SEEKS PEACEFUL SETTLEMENT WITH SOUTHERN BELL

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE, TUESDAY, MAY 3, 1955

The CIO today made public an exchange of letters between CIO President Walter P. Reuther and President Joseph A. Beirne of the CIO Communications Workers of America, in which the CWA head declared "we neither condone nor sanction damage to company property during a strike -- or at any other time."

Mr. Beirne said the union does all it can to "prevent such damage" since it knows that such action is "more likely to harm our cause with the public than it is to do it any good."

Mr. Beirne said: "We deplore goonism, whether practiced by the union, the company or agents of either."

Noting that property damage is a normal year-round problem for phone companies, Mr. Beirne suggested that "for all we know, CWA may have enemies" who would deliberately damage company property to bring "discredit" to the union. "For all we know," he added, striking CWA members may have friends outside our ranks "who mistakenly assume that CWA members benefit in some way from damage to telephone plant... We are not responsible, nor do we condone such activity on the part of these people."

"For all we know," Mr. Beirne added, "the telephone company has enemies, people whose normal inclination would be to seize the opportunity a strike offers to revenge themselves on the company for a real or fancied wrong."

The CWA President said the union's policy is to carry on "orderly, peaceful picketing during a strike, to inform the public about the dispute, meanwhile seeking a peaceful settlement across the bargaining table... Not only do we disavow other means but we vehemently criticize such action."

On April 27, Mr. Reuther wrote to the CWA president:

"During recent weeks, I, like millions of other Americans, have been reading almost daily reports in the press of damaged telephone company property in the area affected by the strike. I trust that this damage to company property is not the work of the union or of its highly responsible officials and members."

-more-

"Your union, I am confident, recognizes that malicious damage to property should have no place in the industrial relations sphere. I know, also, of the splendid service to communities all over the country which has been performed by telephone workers, and which is symbolized by your leadership of the CIO Community Services Committee.

"Since these stories in the press tend to reflect adversely not only on the CWA but on the CIO as a whole, I wonder if you could give me a report concerning the union's attitude toward the reported cases of malicious damage of Southern Bell properties. I would appreciate hearing from you as soon as possible."

Mr. Reuther expressed his hopes that the union would win its strike for a decent contract and for that manner of economic and social justice to which your members and their families are entitled."

Mr. Beirne, in a reply dated April 29, said the union feels that "peaceful picketing, plus continued negotiations across the conference table, plus publicity of the union's position, should ultimately bring about a settlement of the strike." He noted that the CWA had "offered to arbitrate all disputed items even before the strike began. We are still ready to do so. The company, however, has steadfastly refused to arbitrate.

"CWA takes the position that the Southern strike could be brought quickly to a close if the company would sit down and bargain in good faith. There has been absolutely no change in company position on a single disputed item since before the strike began."

Mr. Beirne sent Mr. Reuther a memorandum that had been sent earlier to CWA local presidents throughout the country. He noted that damage to telephone equipment is a constant problem, year in and year out.

"We are sure that Southern Bell -- now that a strike is in progress -- is willing to see the blame for these plant damages at the door of CWA in an attempt to discredit the strike in the minds of the public."

TEXTOF MR. REUTHER'S LETTER, MR. BEIRNE'S LETTER AND MR. BEIRNE'S MEMO TO LOCAL UNION PRESIDENTS, ARE ATTACHED.

LETTER FROM CIO PRES. REUTHER TO CWA PRES. BEIRNE:

April 27, 1955

Dear Joe:

I am glad to get your report that the ranks of the striking CWA members in the South are holding strong and firm and that they are united in their determination to win a fair contract, including the impartial arbitration of disputed points. This point has been so universally accepted in normal labor-management relations in a large number of industries that it is a mystery to me why the Southern Bell System has refused this reasonable union request which would greatly improve relations between the union and the company.

During recent weeks, I, like millions of other Americans, have been reading almost daily reports in the press of damaged telephone company property in the area affected by the strike. I trust that this damage to company property is not the work of the union or of its highly responsible officials and members. Your union, I am confident, recognizes that malicious damage to property should have no place in the industrial relations sphere. I know, also, of the splendid service to communities all over the country which has been performed by telephone workers, and which is symbolized by your leadership of the CIO Community Services Committee.

Since these stories in the press tend to reflect adversely not only on the CWA but on the CIO as a whole, I wonder if you could give me a report concerning the union's attitude toward the reported cases of malicious damage of Southern Bell properties.

I would appreciate hearing from you as soon as possible.

With all best wishes for a successful conclusion of your strike for a decent contract, and for that manner of economic and sound justice to which your members and their families are entitled, I am

Sincerely and fraternally,

s/
Walter P. Reuther

TEXT OF LETTER FROM CWA PRES. BEIRNE TO CIO PRES. REUTHER:

April 29, 1955

Dear Walter:

I could best answer the questions contained in your April 27 letter by repeating to you what our fundamental policy regarding strikes is and always has been.

We neither condone nor sanction damage to company property during a strike -- or at any other time. On the contrary, we oppose this as action more likely to harm our cause with the public than it is to do it any good.

We do all we can to prevent such damage.

We feel that peaceful picketing, plus continued negotiations across the conference table, plus publicity of the union's position, should ultimately bring about a settlement to the strike.

We deplore goonism, whether practiced by the union, the company, or agents of either.

So that you will understand more fully our position in strike matters, attached is a copy of a letter we sent yesterday to our 730 locals throughout the United States and in Canada.

As for arbitration of the Southern Bell dispute, CWA offered to arbitrate all disputed items, even before the strike began. We are still ready to do so.

The company, however, has steadfastly refused to arbitrate. When we first offered it, the company said arbitration was "not in the public interest." So far as we know, they still hold to this view.

CWA takes the position that the Southern strike could be brought quickl to a close if the company would sit down and bargain in good faith. There has bee absolutely no change in company position on a single disputed item since before the strike began.

If the company has no intention of bargaining in good faith, we then fee they should be willing to submit the dispute to an impartial arbitrator. CWA stand ready to agree to such a step.

Sincerely and fraternally,

s/
J. A. Beirne
President

MEMO FROM CWA PRESIDENT BEIRNE TO CWA LOCAL PRESIDENTS :

Fellow Officers:

CWA members across the country have phoned me about the Southern strike with particular concern for the implications that members, officers, or agents of CWA may be involved in the accounts of damage to company property that may be occurring in the area.

I've spoken on a number of occasions about this subject both in the Southern area and in other sections of the country. I state unequivocally -- as I have on these other occasions -- that CWA is not engaged in any attempt to damage company property. Responsible union officials have been so instructed, and also have been instructed not to engage in any sort of violence anywhere at any time in connection with the strike.

Most of us in the communications industry know that telephone equipment is peculiarly susceptible to damage, all sorts of damage. Most of us know that damage to company property goes on all the time, year in and year out. Most of us know that the telephone industry spends millions of dollars each year repairing and replacing cable, poles and other equipment damaged in one way or another.

We are sure that Southern Bell -- now that a strike is in progress -- is willing to see the blame for these plant damages placed at the door of CWA in an attempt to discredit the strike in the minds of the public.

For all we know, striking CWA members have friends outside our ranks, people who may mistakenly assume that CWA members benefit in some way from damage to telephone plant which interferes with normal operation of the telephone business. We are not responsible, nor do we condone such activity on the part of these people.

For all we know, the telephone company has enemies, people whose normal inclination would be to seize the opportunity a strike offers to revenge themselves on the company for a real or fancied wrong.

For all we know, CWA may have enemies, people who may be willing to go so far as deliberately damaging telephone plant -- for the purpose of bringing discredit to the union.

To our members and friends we ask that any possible damages over which they have control be prevented for the reason that CWA is being blamed for acts it hasn't committed.

CWA policy is to carry on orderly, peaceful picketing during a strike, to inform the public about the dispute, meanwhile seeking a peaceful settlement across the bargaining table. This we have been attempting to do in Southern Bell. Not only do we disavow other means but we vehemently criticize such action.

Sincerely and fraternally,

s/ J. A. BEIRNE
President

U. S. Must End Bias, Labor Official Says

Phil. Wor. 6/15/55

PHILADELPHIA (ANP) — If the the United States is to insure global peace and avert a critical shortage of skilled labor that is becoming more and more apparent by the day, it must cease racial and religious discrimination," according to a statement made here recently by national Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell.

Mitchell speaking to a capacity crowd at the General Federation of Women's clubs convention, said the present administration has taken equal job opportunities under Federal contracts "off the agenda of political debates." He called on management and labor to discard discrimination, which he pointed out, "effectively bars some 6,000,000 Negroes from many forms of skilled employment."

Mitchell says he expects 1955 to be a record year for the American worker and his family and pointed out that the average factory employe in April earned $74 77. The amount represents an increase of $4 50 over last year's earnings.

Mitchell further stated that the available number of skilled workers in the country is not sufficient to meet the growing demands of military and civilian production.

"We must make provision for more and better training and retraining," he said. "The nation's employers must discard their traditional prejudice against hiring workers who are over 45 and yet still fully capable of valuable work. Our country must improve its educational facilities to give our workers the basic training and education they need to develop any sort of skill."

CCC

CIO Official Hails Plans To Make Merged Union Unbiased

6/24/55 Houston Informer CCC

WASHINGTON, D. C. (NNPA)—Guarantees against racial discrimination in the proposed constitution of the new labor federation established by merger of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations were hailed Saturday by James B. Carey, chairman of the CIO's Civil Rights Committee.

The constitution was ratified by the CIO Executive Committee at a special meeting Saturday. Mr Carey is secretary-treasurer of the CIO and president of the CIO Electrical Workers and was a member of the CIO-AFL unity subcommittee which drafted the constitution to govern the merged organizations.

"The civil rights guarantees and the built-in protection for every worker regardless of race, creed, color or national origin are an integral part of the document I am proud to have had a share in fashioning," Mr Carey said, adding:

"The new constitution, in this respect, goes far beyond anything in the present CIO constitution, it exceeds anything in the AFL constitution. There are at least four references to this important subject, direct or implied, in the constitution which will govern a federation embracing 15,000,000 workers.

"They are not empty words or hollow phrases intended to gloss a situation which must be met head-on. They carry authority and they lend vigorous determination to a sincere desire to insure eradication of the twin evils of discrimination and segregation."

The preamble of the new constitution pledges unceasing effort to win full respect for the dignity of the individual whom the unions will serve. It also pledges resolute combat against those forces which seek to undermine the nation's democratic institutions.

One of the stated objectives of the new organization, made implicit in the constitution, is to encourage all workers to share in the benefits of union organization. "That means, as it clearly says, all workers, without regard to race, color, creed or national origin," Mr Carey said.

Mr Carey said the executive council of the new organization is charged with the responsibility of seeing that the full benefits of union organization in craft or industrial unions are made available to every worker.

"The language is so clear, so forthright on this score that it banishes at once any qualms or misgivings that even the most timid could hold," Mr Carey declared.

Establishment of a committee on civil rights is also provided for in the new constitution. This committee will assist the executive council in bringing about implementation of the principle of nondiscrimination.

Blest Be The Tie That Washes

No more excuse for necktie stains, now that one practical manufacturer has come out with washable, shrink-proof, colorfast, all-wool ties. No man will have to discord a favorite tie if he discovers this new soap-and-water neckwear. It costs only $1, and comes in 19 solid colors.

g to leave man of the d the overthe small house, that ice but to order.)

s rts

Pioneer
d of the explain-y real t when after to the rday, until uled

tine
ose

f-

Discrimination Cited Wasting Manpower

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (UP)—Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell says neither the South nor the nation can afford any longer to waste manpower through discrimination against Negroes.

Mitchell told the 12th annual Institute of Race Relations at Fisk Negro University yesterday that "unless Negroes and other minority groups are given the chance to develop skills," national defense and economic progress of the race will be damaged.

Mitchell said industrialists of the South should realize they are losing much of the area's best trained and educated Negro manpower.

The South eventually must eliminate segregation in industry because "self interest will demand a reappraisal of the present policy," Mitchell said.

W. S. Sentl. June 20, 1955

CCC

The Gila Cliff Dwelling national monument, New Mexico, with an area of about 50 miles, is accessible only by foot or horseback.

1941: The Pullman Porters March on Washington

In January of 1941, A. Philip Randolph and Milton Webster of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters were leaving Washington to tour the South. The defense boom had begun, but it appeared to hold no place for the Negro. The new war plants would not hire him. Just 240 of the 107,000 persons employed in the aircraft industry, the lustiest of the war babies, were Negroes. Vultee of Nashville had limited itself to the hope that it could take on a few porters when things got moving. North American Aviation said frankly that no Negro, whatever his training, could expect employment as a mechanic; applications would be entertained only from janitors.

Randolph, as a representative Negro, had just been to see President Roosevelt to file one of the customary memorials against the immutable state of things. The President had been very gracious, but there was no indication that he felt capable of any particular performance.

Randolph and Webster sat on their southbound train and talked about this, the latest of so many feckless interviews. Randolph said that he did not think further conferences with the President could help much in placing Negroes in the defense industries. Webster agreed with him; there was a silence for fifteen minutes while Randolph observed the Virginia hills. At last he said in his soft and distant accents:

"I think we ought to do something about it. I think we ought to get ten thousand Negroes and march down

The New Leader
7/11/53

Pennsylvania Avenue and protest against the discriminatory practices in this rapidly expanding defense economy."

"And where," asked Webster, "are you going to get the 10,000 Negroes?"

Randolph listened awhile to his inner voice and observed at last that he believed they could get them. So they continued south, offering the idea of a Negro March on Washington wherever they could find an audience.

"I think the first place we talked March on Washington was Savannah," says Milton Webster. "It scared everybody to death. The head colored man in Savannah opened up the meeting and introduced me, and ran off the platform to the last seat in the last row."

"So we talked March on Washington all through the South and then we came on back to the real God's country, and I went back to Chicago and he went on to New York, and, within the next thirty days, it had caught fire, particularly in the East, and everybody was talking March on Washington."

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, the Urban League, and a dozen other organizations representative of the Negro community joined the porters to announce that 10,000 Negroes would march on Washington on July 1 to shout their demand for defense jobs. The Negro is a buried segment of American life, and for two or three months Randolph's fire burned beneath the surface. In May, the Roosevelt Administration began to get reports of the blaze: Negroes were hiring trains for the trip from Chicago, from Memphis, and from Cleveland. There was every sign that not just 10,000 but 25,000 Negroes would pour into Washington crying for their rights, to the boundless embarrassment not merely of politicians but of the arsenal of democracy which had forgotten them.

President Roosevelt's first response to Randolph's threat was a June 1941 letter to his defense subordinates urging industry to "take the initiative to open the door of employment to all loyal and qualified workers regardless of race, creed, and color." This appeal was offered to Randolph and his allies as proof of good faith. He answered that it was only a hope and a prayer and that he would launch his battalions against Washington on the appointed date.

Then he was called to New York's City Hall to be begged off by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mayor LaGuardia, two old friends of the Brotherhood whose intentions he could not question. "They, as all good white people, told us that the March on Washington was too drastic," Webster says now, "and you ought to depend on the people that are friendly to get the desired results."

Mrs. Roosevelt explained that the march was impractical: Where would 25,000 Negroes eat in Washington and where would they stay? Randolph answered, after due reflection, that they would go to the hotels and the restaurants and register and order dinner. Then his two good friends began to understand the dimensions of the challenge. Randolph was unchangeable in his dire intentions. And so at last President Roosevelt invited him and the other Negro leaders back to the White House.

RANDOLPH: IN 30 DAYS, A FIRE

Randolph told Mr. Roosevelt that his price for peace was an executive order barring discrimination for reasons of religion and color in the war industries. The President replied that he was reluctant to issue the order with a gun at his head. He looked at Randolph, and Randolph held the gun. On June 20, 1941, the President issued Executive Order 8803, banning discrimination on defense projects and setting up the Fair Employment Practices Committee.

Still Randolph would not take his gun away. He would only defer the March; and at every crisis in the FEPC's affairs, he was back with his hand on the trigger. His March on Washington touched the ordinary Negro as nothing had since Marcus Garvey's Back-to-Africa movement. In March of 1942, he brought 25,000 Negroes to Madison Square Garden; that evening Harlem's merchants cut off the lights in their stores for fifteen minutes to demonstrate their support. Milton Webster, the porter's representative on the FEPC, flew from the Garden to Birmingham, where the committee was holding its hearings on discrimination in the Deep South.

There were shouts and murmurs in Congress. Eugene Talmadge plastered Georgia with photographs of Webster sitting in judgment upon the white South. The Administration backed and filled and doubted and fumbled. At every crisis in the FEPC there was the threat that Randolph would invade Washington; and the committee remained alive throughout the war.

The Negro did not come out of the war as a free worker in an open economy. But the FEPC had given him a place in the basic industries which he had never held before. In the future, whites and Negroes would work together in factories where the Negro had never existed as a skilled worker. There were many factors in this revolution, but none were more important than Philip Randolph and his Pullman Porters and their March on Washington.

Features

A. Philip Randolph Discusses
The Negro And CIO - AFL Merger

By A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

When recently the two Unity committees of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations agreed on a name the final obstacle blocking a merger was removed. In the not too distant future we can expect for the first time in 20 years, unity between the two dominant labor bodies. The wholesome impact of such a movement is tremendous.

The effect on the politico-economic life of the nation in bringing together more than 16 million organized workers staggers the imagination. I believe sincerely that the merging of the AF of L and CIO will serve the public welfare of the nation and will accelerate the efforts of the American Negro to eliminate racial bias from the American scene.

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH

More than a million and a half Negroes are members of the AFL and CIO unions. Simply stated one in every 10 Negroes is a trade unionist. Three out of every four Negro families counts some member a dues payer in an AFL or CIO local union.

The Negro has a twofold task in respect to his union membership. First, he must assume his responsibility as a member and participate with other members to improve his economic standard of living.

He must make certain that the union develops policies and programs designed to achieve a dynamic industrial democratic society. It would seem, therefore, that the Negro's first job is to make certain that he as a member is a participant in every phase of his local union's program.

Second, he must wage continuously an unrelenting campaign to remove those practices of union racial bias whether by virtue of constitutional provisions or the more subtle mannerisms far to prevalent in some local bodies.

WAGE EARNER

Essentially the American Negro is a wage earner. This makes him potentially a trade unionist. The free trade union movement provides a medium through which he can accomplish much to improve his economic life.

One hears a great deal pro and con about the responsibility of a democratic society to the economic welfare of the individual.

Federal and state legislation dealing with maximum hours and minimum wages, women and child labor laws, social security, railroad retirement provisions, federal health program, federal aid to education and federal aid to public housing are just a few of the legislative acts which concern officially the AFL and the CIO.

In recent months Negroes in and out of AFL and CIO locals together with thousands of interested fellow white citizens have expressed great interest in the anti-discrimination clause in the proposed constitution for the new AFL-CIO organization.

It is an evidence of wisdom on the part of Presidents George Meany and Walter Reuther, the heads of the AFL and CIO respectively, and their colleagues on both Unity committees, to recognize the clamor from men of good will of both races to eliminate racial segregation from the new body as one of major importance.

The new constitution states in simple terms that one of the objects and principles of this federation is "to encourage all workers without regard to race, creed, color or national origin to share in the full benefits of union organization."

The constitution calls for the creation of a department of civil rights and already George Meany, who will be the president of the new organization, has stated that such a department will be a major wheel in the new AFL-CIO operational machinery.

It would seem that this department buttressed with the support of the president and executive council of the new body could do much in the beginning by stat some are not "their brothers' keeper."

The new merged body can go far in giving leadership and vitality to the fight against racial discrimination. Such organizations as the NAACP, and numerous religious and welfare groups which are dedicated to improving human welfare could move faster in their programs with cooperative assistance from the new AFL-CIO body.

GREAT RESOURCES

Unions have great resources for not only cooperating with such organizations but can and should give leadership drawn from their wide experience in the industrial, political and legislative field.

Through their ability to accumulate and to spend great sums of money from their financial resources, the free trade union movement could do much to alleviate human misery from great masses of people in programs conceived and executed through democratic planning.

Therefore, it is easily seen that such a movement is truly a force to be reckoned with in the civil rights fight of the American Negro.

One cannot emphasize to strongly that the dues paying member is the backbone of the labor movement. Functioning essentially through his local he can exert constructive pressures not only for increasing his wages reducing his hours of work and improving his working conditions, but also for effecting policies and programs designed to make his community a more wholesome place for all to enjoy.

It is in this context that the more than one and a half million Negroes who pay union dues can contribute to hastening the elimination of racial and religious discrimination from our national society.

If the Negro is to make progress as a result of the merger he will have to do many things. He must willingly assume all of the financial responsibilities and accept the basic philosophy that governs the free trade union movement. For this is basic to the worker's salvation in a democratic society.

Not only must he pay joining fees, regular dues and assessments, but he must function earnestly and consistently in every phase of the union's program. He must be seen and heard at meetings, participate in debates concerning issues before the local and national union body and run for local and na-or retarding a democratic society.

CREDIT SIDE

On the credit side of the ledger the recent increase in the federal minimum wage law to $1.00 an hour from 75c represents a notable legislative achievement for the trade union movement.

Although the unions rightly attempted to get the figure for workers in interstate commerce at $1.25, Congress was unwilling to heed the plea for the higher figure.

This increase not only benefits members of the trade union movement but all workers are effected wholesomely. In fact the national economy is the beneficiary of such an achievement.

When one recognizes also the great improvement in the Social Security and Railroad Retirement acts, the laws affecting child and women workers, federal funds for public housing, it can be seen that we have moved forward.

Yet be aware that the trade union movement is still threatened in numerous places. Increased efforts are being made by powerful forces to place upon the state statute books a low which would limit unions in their efforts to achieve a semblance of union security.

These laws, misnamed "right to work" laws, would nullify, if not completely wipe out the free trade union movement.

All unionists must participate in alerting the public to the dangers inherit in such laws and the general public should repudiate legislators who favor such legislation.

The Taft-Hartley act after eight years is still on the federal statute books. If recognized labor is to expand and continue to make its contribution to the general welfare of the nation, we must defeat the efforts of this anti-labor statutes.

SEEK LEGISLATION

Labor still seeks to get effective legislation establishing a national health program.

More than 65 years have passed since Congress last enacted any civil rights legislation. We still seek earnestly a federal FEPC with sanctions and penalties. At the same time, we work ardently for an effective housing program, free from jim-crow, anti-lynch and anti--poll tax laws.

These issues continue to be political footballs drawn out by both political parties at election time to be kicked around, with FEPC for the Negro vote.

Therefore, the American Negroes who are privileged to be members or who have the opportunity to be members of a democratic free trade union movement AFL or CIO have the responsibility to participate actively, vigorously and faithfully in every phase of his union's program.

He must ever seek to use the free trade union movement, especially through his local, to make certain that his union is operating effectively to increase his wages, reduce his hours of work and improve his working conditions.

He must go further. He must see that his union is participating aggressively in removing all practices that affect adversely any member in exercising his right to a job. He should hold his government responsible for leading the way in eliminating racial bias.

The Negro worker can increase his effectiveness by being a union member and advancing the course of free trade unionism; a bulwark against Communism and Fascism and the advanced guard for freedom, peace and plenty.

Diggs Opposes Coeds' Eviction

WASHINGTON — Congressm Charles C. Diggs, jr. (D. this week pledged himself for a reversal of a Ho versity decision order more women reside residence hall her August 31.

A letter from Slowe Hall vised that vacated Howa

A dent nun

DO YOU NEED

he can accomplish much to improve his economic life.

One hears a great deal pro and con about the responsibility of a democratic society to the economic welfare of the individual.

Federal and state legislation dealing with maximum hours and minimum wages, women and

The constitution calls for the creation of a department of civil rights and already George Meany, who will be the president of the new organization, has stated that such a department will be a major wheel in the new AFL-CIO operational machinery.

It would seem that this department buttressed with the support of the president and executive council of the new body could do much in the beginning by starting the new department off with the firm determination to tackle racial bias and to use the organization's resources, influences and most of all its humanitarian purposes in eliminating racial discrimination.

There is no doubt that great progress has been made both by the AFL and CIO in eliminating racial discrimination. This is due essentially to an increase awareness of free labor's role in a free society.

Through constitutional changes, some unions in both bodies have struggled aggressively, and others not too aggressively, with the task of eliminating from their bodies various practices of racial prejudice.

Yet, one must be ever mindful that there still exists in far too many places both in the AFL and CIO, at times subtle, at other times not too subtle, practices which give evidence that perhaps this is basic to the worker's salvation in a democratic society.

Not only must he pay joining fees, regular dues and assessments, but he must function earnestly and consistently in every phase of the union's program. He must be seen and heard at meetings, participate in debates concerning issues before the local and national union body and run for local and national offices.

He should seek to be elected a convention delegate to his union convention and also represent his union at annual conventions of the federated body. No union member should say that he has nothing to do.

No member should leave it to someone else in the local to do all the required tasks. For such lethargy can only assure a movement lack of growth and vision.

If only a few Negroes occupy positions affecting the basic AFL and CIO policies and programs this cannot be blamed entirely on our white union brothers. The AFL and CIO can feel justly proud of the progress made in improving the wages, reducing the hours and improving the working conditions of all workers white and black, union and non union members.

Both the AFL and the CIO recognize that federal and state legislation are means for achieving

NEW LABOR GROUP MAY ELECT NEGRO

N Y Times

Possibility Grows as Quill Drops Out of Contention for Vice Presidency

9/25/55

By A. H. RASKIN

A strong possibility developed yesterday that a Negro would be elected a vice president of the merged labor federation this December.

This became known after Michael J. Quill, an outspoken foe of the merger, had eliminated himself from consideration as a vice president.

The announcement by the president of the Transport Workers Union, C. I. O., that he would not take a top spot "if they handed it to me on a silver platter" solved an embarrassing problem for leaders of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Under the merger compact, which is scheduled for formal approval at a joint convention in this city Dec. 5, the A. F. L. will have seventeen vice presidents in the unified executive council and the C. I. O. ten. Mr. Quill, as a present C. I. O. vice president, would under normal circumstances have carried over as a member of the new council.

Quill Attacks Merger

However, the violence of his attacks on the proposed merger had led leaders on both sides to consider his elimination. The transit unionist had assailed the A. F. L. as a "cesspool" of corruption and racial discrimination, and had charged that the entire consolidation plan represented a "shotgun marriage" of no benefit to union members.

In a speech before 100 delegates to the annual convention of the United Stone and Allied Products Workers, C. I. O., at the New Yorker Hotel, Mr. Quill asserted that he had had assurances that his vice presidency would be "protected" under the merger but that he wanted no part of office in the new group.

The plan to put a Negro on the executive council of the new federation originated long before Mr. Quill made his withdrawal known. George Meany, president of the A. F. L., who is slated to head the combined body, first mentioned the possibility to associates six months ago.

The A. F. L., which now has fifteen vice presidents, will be entitled to select two more to complete its roster. The leading possibility for one of the posts is A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters.

The New York Times

ELECTION LIKELY: A. Philip Randolph of Sleeping Car Porters union. He may become a vice president of merged labor federation.

An Effective Speaker

An ardent champion of Negro rights in particular and civil liberties in general, Mr. Randolph is one of the most effective speakers in the latter movement.

Neither the A. F. L. nor the C. I. O. has had a Negro vice president, and leaders in both groups feel that the selection of a Negro now would be dramatic evidence of the intention of the merged federation to crusade for the elimination of Jim Crow restrictions on union membership or employment opportunities.

Mr. Quill's withdrawal raised the possibility that the C. I. O. might add a Negro to its list of vice presidents. He would be Willard S. Townsend, president of the Transport Service Employes Union. Mr. Townsend, like Mr. Randolph, has been a pioneer in the organization of Negro workers.

Labor
N Y Times

NEGRO MEETING FIRED ON

12 Hurt at Union Organization Gathering in Florida

UMATILLA, Fla., Oct. 21 (UP)—Twelve Negro citrus workers were wounded by mysterious shotgun blasts fired into a union organizational meeting Wednesday night, the Lake County sheriff's office disclosed today.

None of the victims was wounded seriously. Deputy Sheriff A. J. Grove said a white union organizer identified as Otis G. Nation of Lakeland was addressing the men in a Negro Masonic hall when the shots were fired from outside the building.

TALLAHASSEE, Fla., Oct. 21 (AP)—Gov. Leroy Collins offered the assistance of his office and the State Sheriffs Bureau in investigating the Umatilla incident. He ordered Sheriff Willis McCall of Lake County to investigate "fully."

CLU Rescinds Its Support Of Integration; Is Neutral

Chattanooga Times
Labor
9/13/55

By FRED HIXSON

The Chattanooga Central Labor Union last night reversed its position on the public school integration controversy, and adopted a new policy which declared that it would "henceforth refrain from involving itself on either side of this issue" and at the same time it urged all affiliated locals to "likewise refrain, leaving the matter to the individual."

Stanton E. Smith, president of the Tennessee Federation of Labor and secretary-treasurer of the Chattanooga central, released the resolution adopted by the delegates. He said the resolution was adopted "without a dissenting vote." Moreover, the state federation president revealed that last night's meeting was one of the largest attended by the group in many years—in fact "since the depression days" when organized labor was making its greatest push forward.

The action of the central body rescinded a resolution that had been adopted last July 25, which, among other things, placed the central body "on record as supporting the statement of policy of the Chattanooga board of education in its declaration that (1) the board will comply with the decision of the Supreme Court and (2) the board plans to seek participation of all our citizens in finding a fair and just answer to the problem."

Resolution Assailed

The July 25 resolution inflamed certain elements in the local labor movement with the result many locals adopted resolutions demanding that the CLU resolution be withdrawn.

The bitter protests that came from locals led to the action taken last night. The July 25 resolution also had stated that the American Federation of Labor, to which the central body and its affiliates belong, "believes that the Supreme Court decision on segregation (proceedings of the 73rd convention, Los Angeles, Sept. 20-27, 1954) has 'given meaning to our law,' but even more to our basic belief in freedom of each and in dignity of man." The July 25 resolution went on to state that "the American Federation of Labor states further in resolutions adopted by the convention that the labor movement now has a great opportunity and a grave responsibility to help implement these laws"; and that the federation convention "called upon central bodies in the local communities to support and help bring about the implementation of the Supreme Court decision."

See Page Eleven, Column Three

From Page One

The resolution adopted last night flayed what it called "certain politicians" and the Chattanooga News-Free Press.

The resolution stated that the action of the central body on July 25 "has been seized upon by certain politicians long opposed to the trade union movement, and by the News-Free Press, whose hatred of unions is well known, as a weapon to divide labor and thus, to nullify labor's strength at the polls."

"Labor needs maximum unity within its ranks," the resolution continued, "in its efforst to elect men to public office who are devoted to the general welfare, rather than to the welfare of the privileged few and their political laceys.

"Because of the highly controversial nature of the issues raised by the Supreme Court's decision on segregation in the public schools, issues which cut across our ranks tending to divide us, it is hereby declared to be the policy of the Chattanooga Central Labor Union, henceforth to refrain from involving itself on either side of this issue.

"We urge all AFL unions in Chattanooga likewise to refrain, leaving the matter to the individual, so that labor will not fall prey to the political vultures

Florence
Labor
11/4/56

THE Oil
ıds:
ton:
000;
At Const. TEL. WA. 5

Griffin Says Latex Strike Troops Stay

Walkout Leaders Ask Arbitration

By ALBERT RILEY

Gov. Griffin Thursday rejected a request that he withdraw state troopers from a strikebound plant at Dalton until "violence ceases."

Union leaders who want the troopers removed then asked the governor to propose arbitration of their strike dispute to the management of the struck General Latex and Chemical Corp. plant.

And a Baptist minister who handed Griffin petitions asking for withdrawal of the troopers bitterly criticized the governor's refusal to do so.

The Rev. J. B. Watters, pastor of the Olivia Baptist Church at Dalton, headed a delegation of Whitfield countians to present petitions he said were signed by 3,500 Whitfield countians.

'GUARD STRIKEBREAKERS'

The petition charged that the "only purpose of the Patrol is to guard scabs and strikebreakers" who never before worked at General Latex, and said local law enforcement agencies are able to preserve order at Dalton.

It also said that petitioners regarded Griffin's assignment of the State Patrol to guard the plant as "an act of company favoritism and a violation of labor rights."

The governor told the delegation, however, that troopers were sent to Dalton two weeks ago to preserve order "after several breaches of the peace took place."

EGG THROWING REPORTED

He said he had received reports of an egg-throwing incident at the Dalton plant only Thursday morning and suggested the delegation return home and "talk to your people and let's get this violence stopped."

The group told the governor that the strike would be ended if he would agree to act as arbitrator or name an arbitrator in the dispute involving discharge of five CIO Textile Workers of America members at the mill.

Griffin replied that he had no authority on labor matters but said that if the union would make the proposal in writing he would forward it to the management.

Later in the day, Morris Maken, who identified himself as an

Continued on Page 21, Column 1

The governor told the delegation, however, that troopers were sent to Dalton two weeks ago to preserve order "after several breaches of the peace took place."

EGG THROWING REPORTED

He said he had received reports of an egg-throwing incident at the Dalton plant only Thursday morning and suggested the delegation return home and "talk to your people and let's get this violence stopped."

The group told the governor that the strike would be ended if he would agree to act as arbitrator or name an arbitrator in the dispute involving discharge of five CIO Textile Workers of America members at the mill.

Griffin replied that he had no authority on labor matters but said that if the union would make the proposal in writing he would forward it to the management.

Later in the day, Morris Maken, who identified himself as an international representative of the TWA-CIO, released a copy of a letter calling on the governor to live up to his promise.

Continued on Page 21, Column 1

The letter, from Maken and Earl Webb, chairman of the General Latex Campaign Committee, said that if the company accepts the union's arbitration proposal the strike will be brought to an end.

Maken also released a statement attributed to the Rev. Mr. Watters declaring the governor's refusal to remove the troopers is "an insult to our community."

"In rejecting our request," the statement said, "the governor is giving a green light to scabs and strikebreakers all over the state."

It termed Griffin's refusal "to remedy this injustice" a "double shock" and said: "Our faith in the governor's political integrity is now smaller than ever."

The statement charged the governor with being "chiefly concerned with serving the profit interests of business" and with being willing to "trample on the economic welfare" of workers.

"In our opinion," the statement concluded, "the governor is not being true to his campaign promises to organized labor and is not being faithful to his obligations to the people of Georgia."

In a statement released after his conference with the Dalton delegation, Griffin said:

"I abhor violence or intimidation of any kind and will not permit it to occur in Georgia while I am governor. State Patrolmen were assigned to Dalton to preserve order after several breaches of the peace took place. They were sent to protect the lives and property of all citizens, both strikers and non-strikers alike, and will be kept there until all possibility of violence has subsided."

NEGRO HELD INDEX TO FUTURE OF U. S.

13 Nov 55

Influence of Democracy Tied to the Social, Political and Economic Gains of Group

The future and influence of democracy depend upon the social, political and economic gains of the Negro, it was asserted here yesterday.

The theme was developed at the final session of a two-day conference of the National Trade Union Committee for Racial Justice in the Rand School, 7 East Fifteenth Street. The conference was attended by 250 representatives of unions with a membership exceeding 500,000.

State Rent Administrator Charles Abrams said that the racial issue in America was "being pointed up as the outstanding example of the failure of democracy." He urged that this country "take the leadership in establishing the 'fundamental freedoms' so that people will 'live together in peace with one another as good neighbors.'"

Interracial housing projects, Mr. Abrams continued, have demonstrated their economic and social feasibility. He called for a "positive policy" by the Federal Housing Administration against developers who discriminated on account of race, creed or color.

Domestic Relations Justice Edward R. Dudley, a former United States Ambassador to Liberia, said that if this country was to "lend any hope to a lasting peace it must first clean its own house" in its attitude toward Negroes.

"When that time comes," he added, "we can provide the inspiration and the hope to countless millions while at the same time providing pressures on our European friends which cannot be laughed away because of what they know to be our true situation."

A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, A. F. L., and chairman of the Trade Union Committee, said it was the "unfinished business" of American democracy to give the Negro "first-class citizenship" in labor unions, industry, politics, government, school, church and human relationships.

Declaring that racists, like Communists and Fascists, were "the enemies of democracy, freedom and human dignity," Mr. Randolph demanded the "exclusion or expulsion" from the new united trade union movement of groups that practiced discrimination and segregation.

The conference adopted resolutions urging that the Government, through its representatives in the United Nations, work for the establishment of independent democratic regimes in Africa based upon equality of all citizens; that the constitution of the united labor movement (the merger of the Congress of Industrial Organizations and the American Federation of Labor) provide "full and complete equality, without any reservations" to the Negro, and that Congress be called in special session to vote "effective" civil rights legislation.

Student Slain, Youth Held

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12 (AP) —A University of Maryland sophomore was stabbed to death last night while struggling with a car thief. The police arrested a 16-year-old youth early today and charged him with murder. They said Edward Vincent Marcionette of Silver Springs, Md., had bragged of killing Richard E. Gibson, 20, of Leetonia, Ohio.

New Levittown Library Room

LEVITTOWN, L. I., Nov. 12 —The Levittown Public Library will dedicate its new children's room on Nov. 20 at 2:30 P. M.

Labor 1955

N. Y. Times

US Supreme Court Order New Trial In Negro Workers Suit

HOUSTON — The United States Supreme Court, Tuesday reversed a decision of the U. S. Eastern District Court at Beaumont and the Fifth Circuit Court at New Orleans which upheld a discriminatory agreement between the Oil Workers International Union, Local 23 and the Gulf Oil Corporation, barring Negroes from promotions and relegating them solely to labor divisions.

The suit was filed in May of 1954 by John Syres and Louis J Warrick of Port Arthur, acting for all other Negro employees of the Gulf Oil company refinery at Port Arthur and for members of the all-Negro Local 254. It asks that the agreement be set aside as in violation of the Labor Relations Act and of the Fifth Amendment of the United States Constitution, and that plaintiffs be awarded $150,000 and court costs.

The plaintiffs charge that F A McDuffie, chairman and the all-white Local 23, of the Oil Workers International Union, E R McAdams, chairman of the Gulf Workmen's Committee and the company with forming a conspiracy against them and all Negro employees at the Port Arthur plant, denying them working rights guaranteed by the Labor Relations Act and the Constitution solely because of race or color.

The case was appealed to the Fifth Circuit Court by the plaintiff's attorney, Roberson L King of the Law Firm of Dent, Ford, King and Wickliff of Houston. After the Circuit upheld the decision of the District Court, in April of this year, the case was appealed last September to the United States Supreme Court which ordered the new hearing in the Beaumont Eastern District Court.

The suit is a similar case to a series of other cases involving big industry in which the Negro laborer is kept in the labor division regardless of his seniority or skill. It is part of a wide-spread labor movement towards reforms in union and company policy involving Negroes all over the country. Complaints in each of the cases are identical and are regarded by Negroes as a deliberate pattern followed by "unlawful" agreement between white-controlled unions locals in "conspiracy" with companies.

Rights plaintiffs allege have

(Continued On Page 12)

(Continued from Page One)

been denied them are set out in five sections:

1) The right to be represented by the exclusive collective bargaining representative of the class without discrimination because of race, creed which is required as a duty by the National Labor Act.

2) The right not be subjected and limited in employment to one line of seniority by the collective bargaining agreement negotiated solely by Local 23, Oil Workers International Union and the Gulf Oil Company, Port Arthur Refinery.

3) The right not to be limited by the collective bargaining agreement in the exercise of seniority rights and privileges to jobs in one division of the Gulf Oil Port Arthur Refinery.

4) The right not to be discriminated against because of race or color in the exercise of seniority rights as the same pertaining to jobs in the Operating-Mechanical Division of the Gulf Oil Company's Port Arthur Refinery.

5) The right not to be deprived of the right to represent members of Local 254, Oil Workers International Union and by signatory to any agreement affected between the Oil workers International Union and the Gulf Oil Refinery at Port Arthur.

The plaintiffs allege that after an agreement to combine the Negro and white locals and form the Workmen's Committee, the white members outvoted the Negro members which resulted in an all-white Workmen's Committee. They allege that the Negro local had been promised that after the merger the Committee would not discriminate against Negroes in representation in the collective bargaining agreement with the company, but that they proceeded tto do so.

They charge that a contract was negotioated with the Union and the company through the Workmen's Committee composed of eight persons from Local 23 and that the committee unlawfully and in conspiracy to deny them and those they represent of employment rights.

The plaintiffs allege that they were denied by design to bid on jobs. Promotions are made through bids which are posted on bulletin boards. The plaintiffs allege that the company began posting senioirty lists by departments or divisions and did not post on boards where plaintiffs did their bidding and that they were restricted in their promotional rights because of face or color. Only Negroes make up the labor division and only whites are in the operating division, the plaintiffs charge.

Lewis Tries To Balk Merger, Dunning CIO for $1,665,000

NEW YORK, Nov. 30 (AP)—John L. Lewis tried to throw a last-minute monkey wrench into the smoothly moving merger plans of the AFL and CIO.

The United Mine Workers chieftain dunned the CIO for $1,665,000 in loans he claimed the mine union made to the CIO in its struggling infancy in the late 1930s.

And Lewis said he wanted the debt paid before the CIO completes its merger with the AFL. The labor bodies vote on the matter in separate conventions starting tomorrow. The merger would be completed in a joint convention next week.

In a quick reply by letter, the CIO secretary-treasurer, James B. Carey, said Lewis was wrong about two things.

First, the CIO will not be "liquidated" in the merger, Carey said, and second, "The CIO owes you no money."

"You have achieved the momentary ripple of publicity which you sought to relieve the boredom of your isolation from the democratic labor movement," Carey told Lewis.

CIO spokesmen said tonight the funds advanced by the United Mine Workers had always been considered gifts to the CIO.

Lewis at the time was head of both the UMW and the CIO. It was he who broke away from the parent AFL and led the formation of the CIO as a rival organization.

Later he left the CIO and led his mine workers into the independent status they retain to this day.

Lewis is known to be against the AFL-CIO merger. His action was interpreted by observers as a last-ditch attempt to embarrass CIO and AFL leaders who are set for quick approval of the combination.

Lewis' dun for the loans was in the form of a letter from the UMW secretary-treasurer, John Owens, to Carey.

The letter said the UMW had "extended services and cash totaling approximately $7,250,000" in the days when the CIO was getting organized. All but $1,665,000 has been repaid, the letter added.

A UMW spokesman declined to say what the UMW would do if the money was not repaid. Asked if he expected the CIO to take the matter up at its convention opening tomorrow, he said, "I would assume that's the honorable thing to do."

The AFL and CIO today completed final plans for formation of a single 16-million-member union federation.

N.YT. 12/11/55 Labor

THE N

Jersey A.F.L. Head, Addressing C.I.O., Predicts Merger in State Will Be Smooth

By RALPH KATZ

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, Dec. 10—The president of the New Jersey State Federation of Labor said today he saw few obstacles in the path of merger with the state council of the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Louis R. Marciante told 1,000 delegates from 400 unions attending the state C. I. O.'s biennial convention here that he hoped consolidation would be accomplished before his A. F. L. group convened in May. He said the two unions' state organizations were not far apart on three issues raised by top C. I. O. leaders. These were in the fields of political action, legislation and civil rights.

Mr. Marciante said both bodies agreed to the need for union activity in these areas, but that small differences on programs and procedures did exist.

"If these are the only issues," he said, "the merger can be completed tonight."

He termed as "exaggerated" newspaper accounts of personality clashes between officials of both bodies. While conceding that he did not "love everyone" in the C. I. O., Mr. Marciante said the merger was not predicated on the personal feelings of union leaders. He declared that workers in the state had lost millions of dollars in income because there had been no labor unity.

As to the structure of the new state organization, the A. F. L. official suggested there should be no discussion about filling top posts until after agreement had been reached on the kind of organization that would evolve.

Merger at the top is nothing, he asserted, unless it is accompanied by corresponding mergers of member unions and avoidance of fights among competing unions.

He echoed the sentiment of the recent A. F. L.-C. I. O. convention in New York by declaring that "bigness" alone should not become an objective. Stressing that strength through unity was a prime concern, he pointed to mergers of large corporations and automation as the facts labor must face.

It was the first time in twenty years that an A. F. L. executive had addressed a C. I. O. meeting in this state.

DO NOT FORGET THE NEEDIEST !

A. F. L. UNANIMOUS FOR UNION MERGER

C. I. O. Will Act Here Today —Quill, Holding Out, Is Demoted to the Ranks

12/2/55 NY

By A. H. RASKIN

Labor unity became virtually an accomplished fact yesterday.

The American Federation of Labor convention voted unanimous approval of a merger with the Congress of Industrial Organizations.

The C. I. O. convention, meeting three blocks away, unanimously endorsed a resolution calling for unity with the A. F. L. However, the C. I. O. put off until today final action on the formal merger arrangements.

This morning's vote will end twenty years of conflict between the two organizations. Their 15,000,000 members will be welded into the largest labor federation in the free world.

The sole dissent at today's C. I. O. meeting is likely to come from Michael J. Quill's Transport Workers Union. And few leaders in either union camp believe that the Quill group will elect to go it alone after the "marriage" becomes official next Monday.

Quill Dropped From List

The one tangible result of Mr. Quill's revolt against the amalgamation compact appeared to be the loss of the vice presidency he was originally slated to hold in the unified organization.

The C. I. O. executive board dropped the transit union chief from its list of ten nominations for vice president of the combined A. F. L.-C. I. O. The action came after Mr. Quill had announced that he would not take the post if it were offered "on a silver platter."

At the same time that Mr. Quill was being demoted by the C. I. O., the head of a rival transit union in the A. F. L. was being elevated to a vice presidency. He was Abe L. Spradling, president of the Amalgamated Association of Street, Electric Railway and Motor Coach Employes.

Mr. Spradling, whose union has 140,000 members to 90,000 for its C. I. O. counterpart, will be the only spokesman for transit labor on the executive council of the new federation.

Actions by the high command of the A. F. L. and C. I. O. yesterday guaranteed that there would be two Negroes among the twenty-seven vice presidents. The A. F. L. will send A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters. The C. I. O. representative will be Willard S. Townsend, president of the United Transport Service Employes.

Continued on Page 20, Column 3

A. F. L. UNANIMOUS FOR LABOR UNITY

Continued From Page 1

In the separate existence of the A. F. L. and C. I. O., no Negro ever attained the rank of vice president. Union leaders hailed the choice of Mr. Randolph and Mr. Townsend as the first specific implementation of the no - discrimination pledges contained in the charter of the new federation.

Two other new vice presidents were formally nominated to round out the top echelon of the combined body. They were Jacob S. Potofsky, president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, C. I. O., and Richard F. Walsh, president of the International Alliance of Theatrical Stage Employes, A. F. L.

In designating its three new executive council members, the A. F. L. was at pains to exclude representatives of any union in which gangster influence was considered strong. This accounted for its failure to propose that the 1,231,000-member International Brotherhood of Teamsters get an additional seat on the council. The truck union had had two vice presidents until the death last month of Daniel J. Tobin, its president emeritus. The constitution of the merged federation makes elimination of corrupt elements a primary mission of the new group.

Despite the unanimity of the two conventions on merger arrangements, outcroppings of old feuds continued to assert themselves behind the scenes. It became known that most of the old A. F. L. trade departments had taken steps to increase the terms of their officers to four years as a means of "freezing out" new leaders from the C. I. O.

However, it was understood that harmony moves were under way to guarantee that the lists of officers would be expanded in the interest of giving C. I. O. representatives a voice in determining policy.

Special committees consisting of three vice presidents each from the C. I. O. and A. F. L. will meet this morning to try to lay down ground rules for the possible affiliation of some federation groups with the newly created industrial union department. All the C. I. O. unions are expected to join the department, and leaders of both groups fear it may turn into "a union within a union."

To guard against this possibility, the C. I. O. hopes that the 864,000-member International Association of Machinists, A. F. L., will come into the industrial department. Albert J. Hayes, president of the machinists, is a member of the special committee. However, the union has made no decision on whether to affiliate.

The A. F. L. approval of the unification pact was given by standing vote of 800 delegates at the Statler Hotel. It came after George Meany, president-to-be of the combined group, had assured the representatives of 10,000,000 federation members that there was no warrant for fears that the new agency would have too much power over the jurisdiction or internal affairs of its affiliates.

The C. I. O. delegates, meeting at Manhattan Center, applauded a forecast by their president, Walter P. Reuther, that living standards in this country would double within twelve years after the consolidation.

The convention ignored a demand from John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers for repayment of $1,665,000 in "loans" made during the early organizing campaigns of the C. I. O. fifteen and twenty years ago.

The Lewis union is outside both the A. F. L. and C. I. O. It has not been invited to join the unified group.

12/2/55
N.Y. Times
Labor

THE

A. F. L. TAKES STEP WITHOUT FANFARE

Convention Unanimous for Merger, but Lacks Mood of History-Making

By STANLEY LEVEY

The American Federation of Labor's seventy-fourth and last convention was strictly business yesterday—and with a minimum of oratory.

The great decision to merge with the Congress of Industrial Organizations was introduced, debated and approved before the morning session at the Statler Hotel was over. There was no mood of history in the making, and there was scarcely a glance at the past.

Once the unanimous vote was recorded in favor of unity next week, there was a brief burst of applause from the 800 delegates. But no demonstration followed, no confetti flew, and the convention droned its way to adjournment for lunch.

Yet there was a man of the moment. He was George Meany, the A. F. L. chief and president-to-be of the unified labor movement. Powerful of voice and figure, he dominated the session, whether standing at the speaker's rostrum or masked by cigar smoke in his dais seat.

In his opening address, given without notes and in his pedestrian but persuasive style, Mr. Meany pronounced a declaration of faith in the future of the American trade union movement.

Success Is Held Sure

"I am sure," he said, "that there is enough wisdom, enough common sense, enough dedicated loyalty to the principles of our movement in both the C. I. O. and the A. F. L. to make this merger work.

"I believe we can make it work so that we can look forward, not just to the protection of the achievements of the past, not just to maintaining the standard of life that has been achieved in this great country of ours, but that we can through this merged organization go forward to an even better day.

"We can make a better and more vital contribution to the community as a whole and to the welfare and security of our nation. We can and we will face up to our responsibilities and discharge our obligations to millions of American men and women whom the people in this room have the privilege of representing."

In conversational tones Mr Meany conceded that the constitution of the new A. F. L.-C. I. O. was not perfect and that time would bring changes. At the same time, he called for "good faith" and "determination" to "live together to meet the problems of the American worker in a way consistent with the policies, ideals and traditions" of the founders.

After Mr. Meany completed

Labor.

community as a ... the welfare and security of our nation. We can and we will face up to our responsibilities and discharge our obligations to millions of American men and women whom the people in this room have the privilege of representing."

In conversational tones Mr Meany conceded that the constitution of the new A. F. L. C. I. O. was not perfect and that time would bring changes. At the same time, he called for "good faith" and "determination" to "live together to meet the problems of the American worker in a way consistent with the policies, ideals and traditions" of the founders.

After Mr. Meany completed his remarks, the convention in due course came around to the reason for the gathering—the merger agreement. Woodruff Randolph, president of the International Typographical Union, spoke at length on his union's determination to yield none of its historic rights.

Then Mr. Meany was back at the microphone, moderately—almost ploddingly—rebutting Mr. Randolph's arguments and setting at rest fears that he called "academic."

Using the historic record of the federation, he cited example after example to show how the I. T. U. "in practice has ignored its high principles of noninterference" by joining in action against other unions at A. F. L. conventions.

Patiently he explained that some kind of machinery was necessary to run a huge organization of 15,000,000 members. Fears of "excess use of power" were unfounded, he said.

During the brief afternoon session there were speeches by fraternal delegates from Great Britain. Then there was a reading of the list of deceased labor leaders since the last convention, and the session was over.

Today is the final session in the life of the A. F. L. On Monday there will be a brand-new American labor movement, George Meany, president.

Labor.

AFL Convention Votes Unanimously for Merger

CIO Delegates' Approval Due Today, Paving Way for Consolidation Monday

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (UP)—AFL convention delegates voted today to merge with the CIO into a huge labor organization with 16 million members.

Associated Press Wirephoto

AFL-CIO LEADER

George Meany

CIO delegates, meeting in a separate convention here, are scheduled to take similar action tomorrow to set the stage for the actual merger Monday.

BANDS BLARE

Delegates met with bands blaring at the two pre-merger conventions held three blocks apart in mid-Manhattan and heard fiery speeches from their leaders, including a prediction from CIO Chief Walter P. Reuther that the historic merger would give labor a chance to turn the federal government "back to the people" in 1956.

Addressing 650 delegates at the opening session of the CIO conclave, the red-haired labor leader also predicted that in the next 12 years the combined labor movement could double the standard of living in the United States.

"In 1956," Reuther told the cheering delegates, "we will have a great opportunity. I feel if we work hard enough we can turn the government back to the people and get a government in Washington more responsive to the needs of the people rather than to big business."

MERGER APPROVAL

President George Meany opened the AFL convention by telling the 800 delegates that merger of the two groups, split apart since 1935, "can very well be a built-in guarantee that there can be no dictatorship in America."

Final action on the merger will be taken Monday by 1,800 delegates to the inaugural convention of the new AFL-CIO. Meany will become president of the new group. Reuther will be one of 27 vice presidents and head of the industrial union department.

The AFL delegates approved the merger in a four-part standing vote that took three minutes. The vote was unanimous on three of the votes. On the fourth approval of the proposed constitution for the merged organization — one of the 800 delegates dissented.

The delegate, Peter Yablonsky, 47, Newark, N.J., a member of the AFL painters' union, later said he had "misunderstood the situation" and reversed his vote, putting the convention in unanimous approval of all four parts of the merger resolution.

Defender 12/3/55

Labor

Unionists Worry Over Racial Status In Merger

By ETHEL L. PAYNE

NEW YORK — On the eve of the ratification convention merging the AFL and the CIO, there is an uneasy feeling among rank and file unionist, that all is not well. Nobody is against unity.

Labor believes that the bigger it is, the more powerful it can become and the more it can press its case with the American people.

But what disturbs many people and this includes the private opinions of top executives in CIO is that conservatism of the bigger AFL will swallow up the aggressive cockiness of the CIO.

Already there are reports that in pre-convention planning talks where names are being selected, George Meaney, head of the AFL, and Vice President William F. Schnitzler of the AFL, have been talking tough to CIO leaders and laying it on the line about how things are going to be run.

BIAS AREA

Negro labor leaders are disturbed over the apparent pattern taking shape in the anti-discrimination area.

A year ago, in merger agreement, a clause was inserted pledging the combined trade union movement to work to eliminate discrimination within and without the organization, but it carefully skirted any compulsory language.

In an interview with Meaney in March, he gave assurances that the job of ending discrimination would have top priority in the merger, but this would be accomplished through education and persuasion.

He emphasized that the principle of autonomy for each individual union would remain the basis of operation. This came in reply to questions put to him about certain AFL unions which permitted Jim-Crow auxiliaries for which they did all the collective bargaining and collected dues, but whose all-Negro members were not admitted to the parent body nor given voting or policy making rights.

Meaney predicted gradual elimination of this practice. He pointed out that this also prevailed in some CIO unions.

Meaney also said that A. Philip Randolph, president of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL, would be closely consulted on the makeup of the administrative staff of the anti-discrimination department and would have final approval of selections.

In addition, he said the supervisory committee would include Milton Webster of Chicago, vice-president of Porters Union, and Willard Townsend, president of the United Transport Service Employees Union, CIO and a goodly representation of Jewish labor leaders.

KEPT IN DARK

Last week there were indications that initial selections had been made without above named individuals and organizations being aware of it.

Heading the committee as chairman will be James B. Carey, secretary - treasurer of the CIO. Director is Boris Shiskin, former AFL research director, and secretary is George L. P. Weaver, director of the CIO Civil Rights division.

No word has been received as yet on the makeup of the committee, but it is clear that the department will have neither the strength nor the prestige it was hoped to have.

All down the line there were expressions of disappointment over this and Negro workers were shaking their heads in skepticism over sincerity of the combined movement.

Another area of concern is the absence of Negroes in policy making positions. According to the structural makeup of the governing councils, only two Negroes in the entire labor movement are even in line for policy making spots.

They are Randolph and Townsend who by virtue of being heads of individual unions can be considered. But even now no assurance is that either one will be included in the powerful executive council of the unified body.

Considerable sentiment has been whipped up in some quarters to start a draft to make Randolph a vice-president and member of the executive council, but Randolph who enjoys considerable prestige, indicated he would concentrate on forcing a showdown on discriminatory unions and fighting the admission of the Big Four Railroad Brotherhoods.

These have long had clauses in their constitutions barring Negroes from membership.

TOP UNION LEADERS

Negroes who have risen in the trade union movement are all in administrative positions with the exception of the above named and in some positions in local unions.

Nationally, some have gained stature like, Weaver, William Oliver, director of the Civil Rights Department of UAW; Boyd L. Wilson, assistant to David MacDonald of the United Steelworkers; and James Turner, director of the Civil Rights Department of the United Rubber Workers union.

In the Political Action Committee of CIO, the top Negro is Philip M. Weightman, a field director, who has the important job of organizing registration campaigns.

Here again, is the question of how much emphasis will be given to minorities registration campaigns, whether the fast tempo set by CIO-PAC Director Jack Kroll will be enhanced or go under the axe.

As ratification approaches, it becomes clear that if Negroes are to have a voice in labor, they will have to assert themselves more aggressively. One of the biggest projects of the merger will be going after the great unorganized masses.

The new labor body will be 15 million strong, but there remain at least 30 million outside of organized labor. The focal point of the battle will be in the South, hostile to progress and strongly anti-union.

Any organizational drives must include thousands of Negroes whose plight is only slightly worse than that of poor whites.

In big industries like textile manufacturing, however, Negroes are only a negligible part. But in the sugar cane, stevedoring, oil, etc., they are a large part of the labor force.

Long-Awaited Labor Merger Approved

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (AP) — CIO convention delegates, singing "Solidarity Forever," today ended a 20-year split in union labor by approving a long-awaited merger with the AFL.

CIO delegates voted 660-3 for the merger, which the AFL had approved unanimously a day earlier. Separate AFL and CIO conventions came to an end and both groups prepared to meet Monday in a week-long joint session.

The historic merger action, welding 140 unions into a 16-million-member federation, climaxed two years of active negotiations. The basic merger agreement was reached last February in Miami Beach, Fla., and it took until now to complete it.

The new organization is called the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations—AFL-CIO.

The CIO's ratification came at a convention session filled with sentiment over the ending of the organization. The CIO was formed into a rival labor group over two decades ago by AFL unions which seceded because they wanted to organize workers in whole industries. The AFL unions are organized along craft lines.

Walter Reuther, CIO president who is stepping aside to let AFL President George Meany head the merged organization, told the final CIO session, that, "this is not the end. The CIO goes on, the AFL goes on, but they go on together in a unified labor movement."

Meany told concluding AFL sessions the merger was a milestone in labor history. He sought to calm misgivings of a few union leaders that the new organization would be too large and unwieldy by saying, "I may be a chump but I don't think so."

"I am convinced this merger agreement was entered into in good faith," he said. "I am convinced it is an honorable settlement of differences between the two organizations. I haven't the slightest doubt that some old rivalries will spring up."

Meany went on to say he was sure all union members wanted the merger and that "despite some hassles here and there we are going to get along."

The principal dissent in the CIO convention was cast by Michael J. Quill, president of the Transport Workers Union and a CIO vice president. Quill said the CIO was being "liquidated" and it was a "black day" for CIO unions.

Quill charged Meany was too conservative and "just slightly to the left of Sen. Knowland," the Senate Republican leader from California. Quill said his union would conduct a membership referendum to see if they wanted to join the merged organiza on.

CLOSING CIO CONVENTION — Walter Reuther, president of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, wields huge gavel as he closes annual convention of the CIO at New York City. The organization approved merger with the American Federation of Labor. Next week the merger is expected to be made effective at joint meetings. (AP Wirephoto.)

News & Observer 12/3/55

11/8/55 N.Y. Times

36 L

PLEA MADE TO AID AREAS OF LOW PAY

U. S. Official Says 'Private Initiative' Must Provide 'Major Part of Solution'

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23 (AP)—Ewan Clague, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, said today that private initiative would have to do much of the job of improving conditions in low-income areas.

Federal action also is essential to relieve unemployment in hard-hit industrial areas and to improve conditions in distressed farm sections, he asserted.

But he told a Senate-House Economic subcommittee that the Federal Government could not ease the sore spots in a generally prosperous economy. State and local agencies, public and private, will have to pitch in, he declared, and a "major part of the solution will have to be contributed by private initiative."

Earlier Senator John J. Sparkman, Democrat of Alabama, the subcommittee chairman, said a Labor Department survey had found twenty-six major and ninety-four smaller areas of substantial labor surplus in September. These pockets contained 500,000 of the two-to-three million persons then looking in vain for work, he added.

Mr. Clague testified on the last day of hearings called by the subcommittee to devise methods of bringing relief to low-income groups. The Labor Department official said more than 2,500,000 non-farm families had an income of less than $2,000 last year.

While current figures are not available, the Commerce Department estimated earlier this year that 41 per cent of American families had incomes of $5,000 a year or more, and 55 per cent received at least $4,000.

In 1953, the department said, the average income for non-farm families was $6,390 as against $3,460 for farm families.

Senator Sparkman said the subcommittee would hand Congress a report for use in working up corrective legislation next year. He has proposed a bill to provide Federal aid for family-size farms. Senator Paul H. Douglas, Democrat of Illinois, has prepared another to aid distressed areas.

Mr. Clague in his testimony recommended increasing emphasis on worker education and training. He also urged the removal of discrimination in employment and promotions.

The commissioner backed the continuation of such programs as unemployment insurance and workmen's compensation, the Federal-state employment service, minimum wage and help for migratory and older workers.

Mr. Clague said, however, there was "no one solution" for the several million families and individuals who he asserted were existing on substandard incomes.

Ike Praises Merged Labor Goals; Chief Meany Rips Foreign Policy

NEW YORK, Dec. 5 (UP) — The AFL and CIO merged into the world's largest free trade union today to the cheers of laboring men and the "earnest prayer" of President Eisenhower that a new era of harmony for all men is dawning.

The President spoke to the AFL-CIO inaugural convention by telephone from his temporary White House in Gettysburg, Pa. It was his first formal speech since his Sept. 24 heart attack.

President Eisenhower's words of confidence and hope were piped into the huge stone 71st Regiment Armory on Park Avenue soon after the 16 million member AFL-CIO union was formed officially and George Meany was selected its early president.

President Eisenhower spoke to the 1,500 delegates and 2,000 spectators after Meany's inaugural address which contained a blistering attack on the present administration's foreign and domestic policies.

The President called for an end to bitterness and strife.

". . . It is fitting," he said, "that we let our hearts be filled with the earnest prayer that, with the help of a kind providence, the world may be led out of bitterness and materialism and force into a new era of harmony and spiritual growth and self-realization for all men."

The chief executive praised labor leaders for helping to make a unique contribution to the nation's welfare—"the development of the American philosophy of labor."

"This philosophy, if adopted globally, could bring about a world, prosperous, at peace, sharing the fruits of the earth with justice to all men," he said. "It would raise to freedom and prosperity hundreds of millions of men and women—and their children—who toil in slavery behind the curtain."

The President listed "these simple tenets" of the free labor movement—that man is created in the divine image and has spiritual aspirations transcending the material; that the real interests of employes and employers are mutual, and that unions and employers can and should work out their own destinies.

"As we preach and practice that message without cease, we will wage a triumphant crusade for human prosperity, freedom and peace among men," he said.

Labor 12/6/55

Labor

AFL-CIO Seats Two Negroes

A. Philip Randolph, Townsend Named to Union's Exec. Board

By HAROLD L. KEITH
(Courier Staff Writer)

A. Philip Randolph and Willard S. Townsend will be seated on the executive boards of the newly merged AFL and CIO as a result of actions taken at the founding convention of the organization in New York City.

Mr. Randolph is president of the International Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters (AFL) and Mr. Townsend is president of the CIO United Transport

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH
. . . a foregone conclusion

Service Employes Union.

Both men are Negroes and their appointments were hailed by labor leaders as "evidence" that labor intends to back up its "pledges" against segregation and discrimination in employment.

* * *

MR. RANDOLPH will be one of seventeen AFL vice presidents, and Mr. Townsend will be one of the ten representatives of the CIO on the AFL-CIO executive board.

Mr. Townsend's appointment was made possible by the defection of Mike Quill, International president of the CIO United Transport Workers Union. Mr. Quill had dissented regarding the merger on several key issuses. Oddly enough, one of the things which led to Mr. Quill's refusal to take a vice presidential seat was his insistence upon a more strongly worded clause against segregation or discrimination.

Mr. Quill had protested strongly against other provisions of the merger agreement and then announced that he would not take a seat on the executive board "under any circumstances."

* * *

HOWEVER, Mr. Townsend was not without opposition. Many of the executives within CIO ranks had ripped into his appointment on the grounds that Mr. Townsend's union did not have enough members.

They claimed that there were other CIO unions with larger and more representative memberships who should have recived representation.

They noted that Mr. Townsend's union has a membership of a little more than 10,000 spread out over the nation, while there are many CIO local unions with more members.

The CIO Executive Board in two separate sessions held prior to the New York meeting had turned down Mr. Townsend as an executive board possibility.

WILLARD S. TOWNSEND
. . . not without opposition

But, the big industrial union was faced with the practical necessity of having Negro representation on the board and Mr. Townsend was the only choice.

* * *

GEORGE L. P. WEAVER, longtime stalwart of the CIO Civil Rights Committee, had been mentioned as a possible choice but overtures made in his behalf met with so many objections that Mr. Townsend ended up with the prize.

Mr. Townsend was recommended for the post by David J. McDonald, president of the CIO United Steelworkers of America.

Mr. Randolph's appointment was a foregone conclusion. Long one of the most eloquent among the AFL's leadership, he like Mr. Townsend was the only possible choice for appointment to the board.

* * *

HIS APPOINTMENT was made despite his outspoken opposition to what has been termed the "mousy, mealy-mouthed" anti-segregation provision of the AFL-CIO merger constitution.

Mr. Randolph has staged rallies in New York and Cleveland on this issue and is expected to continue to fight for a more positively worded clause with punitive provisions for unions which discriminate.

The merger means that the combined strength of the nation's biggest labor group is now 15,000,000 members with only the Mineworkers of John L. Lewis and several independent unions outside the folds.

A Three Days' Cough Is Your Danger Signal

Creomulsion relieves promptly because it goes into the bronchial system to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, inflamed bronchial membranes. faster Creo-

When Legs ACHE

$100,000 Pot

A. F. L.-C. I. O.—A HARMONIOUS BEGINNING, BUT—

Labor — N.Y.T. 12/11/55

Unity Achieved in the Merger Is Threatened by Dissident Forces

By A. H. RASKIN

The American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations moved under one roof last week. By the end of their first day together, the delegates looked and sounded so much alike that you could not tell who was who without a scorecard.

All the feuds that had threatened to mar the nuptial period faded into innocuous mumbling in convention corridors and hotel bars. The prima donnas whose egos required special massage were obliged to accept the fact that the merger was bigger than any of them.

The speed with which the hostilities of twenty years were muted was a tribute to the effectiveness of the united movement's leader, George Meany. In his prosaic, unspectacular fashion, the one-time Bronx plumber's helper gathered up the monkey wrenches that could wreck his new vehicle, and put them safely away.

Every officer was elected unanimously; every resolution went through without dissent. Even in the drafting committees, the A.F.L. "conservatives" and the C.I.O. "progressives" found little trouble in harmonizing their views on such troublesome issues as foreign policy and civil rights.

Reuther Applauded

Some of the old craft unionists had made little secret of their distaste at the prospect of having to applaud "young smart-alecks" like Walter P. Reuther. In the past their estimate of Mr. Reuther's talents and ambitions often has been as harsh as that of any member of the National Association of Manufacturers.

But when Mr. Reuther got up on the convention's last day to plead for an "organizational crusade such as this country has never seen," he stirred even more enthusiasm from the A.F.L. tables than he did from his own. Perhaps it was just the novelty, but it did mean they were ready to recognize him as a member of the new leadership team.

Mr. Meany already has done much to obliterate the "we" and "they" approach of veterans of the two old federations. With Mr. Reuther's help, he has seen to it that the new Industrial Union Department will not turn into a C.I.O. "colony" within the combined movement.

At the start there was danger that the department would consist solely of the former C.I.O. unions, with Mr. Reuther and James B. Carey holding their old posts as president and secretary-treasurer. Such a set-up could only retard real unification by preserving a sense of separateness, politically and economically, among the C.I.O. groups.

Largely through Mr. Meany's missionary efforts among A. F. L. unions with sizable industrial memberships, the initial roster of the department embraces more groups that used to be in the Federation than were in the C. I. O. However, the weight of membership favors the C. I. O. by two to one. The combined total of 7,000,000 dues payers makes the infant department far larger than such old established units as the building and metal trades.

All the A. F. L. groups lined up with the C. I. O. to pick Mr. Reuther and Mr. Carey for the top posts in the department. That marked the final fizzle in a series of anti-Reuther power moves by the International Botherhood of Teamsters, largest and strongest union in the old A. F. L.

It was Mr. Meany who pulled the plug on the teamsters. When they demanded admission to the department for all their 1,400,000 members, he backed the C. I. O. in holding that only those in canneries, breweries, milk processing plants and other industrial units could come in. The teamsters insisted that still would entitle them to 700,000. When Mr. Meany put the ceiling at 400,000, they submitted meekly.

Teamster Trouble

No one believes that the teamsters' capitulation means they are prepared to live at peace with the rest of the A. F. L.-C. I. O. family. Sooner or later there is bound to be an explosion, and Mr. Meany will have to decide whether the merged federation can get along without its most strategic union—or with it.

No man to conceal his feelings, the A. F. L.-C.I.O. president has made known his displeasure at the teamsters' free-wheeling tendency to snatch members from other unions and to make alliances with groups cast out of the bona fide labor movement for corruption and communism.

While the convention was on, the teamsters pledged a $500,000 loan to the scandal-stained International Longshoremen's Association and threw a protective mantle around the left-wing Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers, who were expelled from the C. I. O.

The truck union itself is honeycombed with men denounced by Congressional and state investigators for racket associations.

In this city underworld forces have been steadily gaining ground in the teamsters in preparation for a coup that will give them simultaneous control of trucking and the waterfront, twin mainstays of the city's commercial life. Dave Beck, the union's international president, blandly insists that this is a "local matter" that is beyond his control.

Each day indicates growing authority in the hands of the union's Midwest boss, James R. Hoffa, whose activities have come in for frequent criticism from official bodies. He dominates the union's councils in the East and South and has an important voice in Canada. Some teamster insiders say Mr. Hoffa's next step will be a promotion to executive vice president, the job Mr. Beck used as his lever for the presidency.

Mr. Meany knows that corruption in the teamsters fans out into dozens of other unions. No organization touches more unions at more points than the truck union. That is why it is so hard to contemplate a showdown in which it would get out or be thrown out of the united labor movement.

Many unions, especially those dealing with relatively small business, depend on the support of the teamsters to organize. By witholding deliveries, the truck drivers can win a strike for another union. By ignoring the picket lines, they can doom the strike.

Key Position

Without the teamsters, the A. F. L.-C. I. O. would lose much of its economic muscle. But if he becomes convinced that the choice lies between morals and muscle, Mr. Meany is not likely to shrink from the hard road. He promised the convention that he would not abandon principle for expediency, and few who heard him thought he was merely talking.

In the field of racial equality, Mr. Meany has been making some quiet headway. He wants to bring within the merged organization the two largest of the independent railroad brotherhoods, but he has no desire to see them perpetuate the racial barriers they still maintain. Associates report that both groups are considering steps to bring their constitutions in line with the new group's standards of racial equality.

Mr. Meany is busy on still another front. He is heading a committee to try to end the dispute betwen the Air Line Pilots Association and the Flight Engineers International Union over the United Air Lines strike. The pilots will lose their charter if they fail to make peace. But Mr. Meany is hopeful he can end the conflict and the strike at the same time, thus keeping his flock intact.

He is counseling unions with overlapping jurisdictions on merger arrangements of their own. Two meat unions already have arranged to amalgamate into a single 500,000-member organization.

Similar talks are under way in textiles, shoes, paper and other fields. However, he does not expect overnight success in eliminating the duplications that grew up since 1935. In some areas, notably the maritime and electrical industries, it is doubtful that rival unions will get together at any time within the next ten years.

Optimistic Feeling

The progress recorded in the first week of unity has encouraged the leadership in the belief that learning to live together will not be so trying that labor will have no energies left for anything else.

The duPont chemical empire is high on its list of targets for new organizing; political machinery is being made ready for active use in the 1956 campaign; contacts with free trade unions in all parts of the world will be sharpened at a series of meetings in this city this week.

And, with all this, Mr. Meany still hopes he can bring alive the proposal for a "live and let live" pact with industry that he broached in The New York Times Magazine last week. He is a patient man and his rebuff by the National Association of Manufacturers has not killed his belief that a better understanding between labor and management can be forged at the national level.

He is just as sure of that as he was that unity with the C. I. O. could be achieved when he started down that road three years ago.

'MIND IF I LOOK OVER YOUR SHOULDERS?'

Crockett in The Washington Star

DO NOT FORGET THE NEEDIEST !

Hopes for Merged Unions

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEW YORK TIMES:

In the ~~deluge of~~ congratulations from notables all over the world the voice of the plain citizens will be submerged, but certainly, as a whole, the 75 per cent of the nation's workers who are not union members view the historic merger of the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations with goodwill and good wishes.

They hope that the new and powerful organization will never forget the cost of living to the other 75 per cent and their welfare; will always consider, in the wage-price race, the other 75 per cent who must foot most of the bills; will eliminate the jurisdictional disputes and racketeering that discredit and hurt the unions and union members and impose injustice and injury upon employers and the other 75 per cent, and will so organize and conduct the vast and growing union insurance business that the power inherent in the billions of dollars represented will never be abused nor the funds misapplied. That, in short, the greatest body of free, organized workers in the world will so conduct all of its affairs that the other 75 per cent will never be impelled to support laws inhibitive to free labor.

So conducted, the merged A. F. L.-C. I. O. should expand and prosper and, in my belief and that of the great majority of my friends and those whom I contact, could function as the greatest force in this nation and the world for economic stability, justice and freedom.

ALLISTON CRAGG.

New York, Dec. 7, 1955.

12/11/55 N.Y.T. Letters

Thomas L. Stokes

'Big Labor' ~~Means~~ 'Big' Responsibilities

WASHINGTON—We are a people who are uncomfortable about "bigness" in our society and institutions, if not actually fearful and distrustful. But we have had to become accustomed to it because of our mass production, machine civilization which has created bigness in three institutions that touch all our lives—government, business and labor.

Big labor is currently dramatized for us very tellingly in the first convention of the merged AFL and CIO in New York celebrating one big union.

Decry this debut of big labor as some are busily doing, it is nevertheless a natural development historically and economically. It is up to us, the public, to see that big labor lives up to the responsibility its size and position impose upon it, just as it is up to us to see that big business and big government live up to their responsibilities.

Historically, bigness came first in business. We saw this initially in our transcontinental railroads in the years after the Civil War which represented huge investments — as well as lavish land grants — and affected the lives of a great many people, employes, investors, financial institutions, shippers and others who did business with them. In later years, we saw bigness in the merging of iron and steel and oil companies in what came to be called "trusts."

Some of these great aggregations of capital, these "trusts," abused their great powers which in time caused the government to intervene to protect the public interests. The first of these government regulatory bodies was the Interstate Commerce Commission to regulate the railroads.

Then there was the Sherman Antitrust Law which President Theodore Roosevelt first used most theatrically against giant corporations to win fame as the "trust-buster."

Labor began early to try to organize workers to protect themselves. But this was a very slow process. Gains were wiped out periodically by recurring depressions, including our last big one in the late 1920s and early 1930s which greatly depleted union strength and membership.

But from this there was quick recovery for unions under the Franklin D. Roosevelt administration. It was friendly to labor and drew labor leaders into its councils.

Now the creation of one big union has split the Republican Party by a controversy growing out of labor's potential political power.

To be realistic, there is no question but that the open and avowed influence of big business in the Eisenhower administration has been instrumental in solidifying labor about the Democrats, but to what extent we won't know until next year's election.

Anyhow, both big business and big labor are with us to stay — and so is big government.

(Labor) Cont
12/8/55

Jackson Daily (12/13/55)

Now comes George Meany, president of the newly merger AFL-CIO talking some balderdash. He says "the United States will not be able to fight Communism successfully until Southern Negroes are assured of their constitutional rights." Well, this isn't the first time Mr. Meany has advocated complete social equality under the absurd guise of "constitutional rights." The day is dawning when Southern workers are going to have to decide between orders from their leaders and the Southern way of life. The number of Southern AFL-CIO members who really favor social equality is mighty small.

* * *

AFL APPROVAL GIVEN MERGER

12/2/55

Last Vote Unanimous—CIO Ballot Scheduled Today to Complete Action

NEW YORK, Dec. 1 (AP)—Merger of the AFL and CIO became practically an accomplished fact today. The AFL voted its final unanimous approval and the CIO is due to ratify the merger tomorrow.

The consolidation brings together unions of the American Federation of Labor and those of the Congress of Industrial Organizations to form a single 16-million-member union group.

The new organization will be known formally as the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations (AFL-CIO).

George Meany, onetime New York plumber who heads the AFL and is due to become president of the merged AFL-CIO, pledged in a speech to AFL convention delegates that the new organization would be devoted to improving the lot of workers in the nation as a whole.

Sees New Gains

Meany said there had been no real reason for unions splitting away from the AFL to found the CIO two decades ago and now that they will be back together again organized labor could forge ahead to new economic and political gains.

"This merged organization can go forward to a better day," Meany said. "It can make a better and more vital contribution to the community as a whole and to the welfare and security of our nation."

CIO President Walter Reuther told a separate CIO convention, meanwhile, that his organization during its brief history has helped win "a full measure of human dignity for the worker."

Reuther said the merged organization must not rely on power alone but most operate with "a sense of dedication and social responsibility."

Two Leaders Complain

The AFL convention's unanimous vote for the merger climaxed a short but spirited debate in which two union leaders complained about some aspects of the merger terms.

Meany took the floor to reassure them.

Woodruff Randolph, president of the AFL International Typographical Union, claimed the AFL-CIO would have too great powers over jurisdiction, or organizing scope, of the various unions. He also said the merged group should make "a thorough house-cleaning" of racketeer elements as a first order of business.

Meany replied that the new organization would have no greater power than the present AFL. He said some machinery was necessary as a last resort to settle union on Oct. 12, "to come and discuss this most serious problem with us and the advisory committee. We want ideas and suggestions from everyone; for, as we understand the Supreme Court's decision, this is what the court intended for us to do first."

See Page Fifteen, Column Five

UNIT IS CHOSEN ON INTEGRATION

From Page One.

It is the board's intention to have the advisory committee sit with the board at the hearings. It is planned to have a stenographic record made of each hearing so that the advisory committee and the board may have available all that is said during what probably will be a long series of meetings.

The school board will sit as a committee of the whole with the advisory committee at the hearings.

Alf Law Jr. made the motion that the individuals named be invited to serve on the committee. It was seconded by Harry Miller and carried unanimously.

Raymond Witt Jr. said the school board may from time to time add persons to the advisory committee.

24 CEN[illegible] ACRES

Labor (1955)

Labor 12/10/55

THE CHATTANOOG

QUILL PUTS UNION IN MERGED FORCE

He Decides Transport Unit Belong in Unified Labor Movement After All

By STANLEY LEVEY
New York Times News Service

NEW YORK, Dec. 9—To the surprise of practically nobody, Michael J. Quill has decided his Transport Workers Union belongs in the united labor movement after all.

Quill, president of the union, still wasn't making it official. But it was learned today that the TWU executive board has voted unanimously to recommend affiliation to a membership referendum.

The decision comes after 10 months of sharp-shooting by Quill against the provisions of the merger agreement that was finalized this week between the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations.

Reuther Accused

Throughout the months of attack, Quill accused Walter Reuther, former president of the CIO, of taking that group into the merger without proper safeguards against "racism, raiding and racketeering." Nothing has happened in the last week to improve Quill's opinion of the combined group.

However, strong internal pressures from several sections of his own union motivated Quill in midweek to seek a way out of the deadend into which he had talked his organization. For that purpose, he staged a special press conference on Wednesday at which John V. Riffe, former executive vice president of the CIO, obliged by publicly urging the course since adopted.

As a result of his last-ditch holdout against participation in the AFL-CIO, Quill cost himself the vice presidency in the merged federation that would have been his automatically. He also lost a similar post in the group's Industrial Union Department.

This development became known as the 29-member executive council of the AFL-CIO held a post-convention session at the Commodore Hotel.

EX-IBS AGENT

UNION HEAD ASKS FOR COOPERATION

Chat. 12/10/55

U.S. Labor, Industry Have Too Much in Common to Fight, Says Meany

NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (AP)—AFL-CIO President George Meany today appealed for cooperation between American labor and industry and said "We have so much in common it seems silly to fight."

Meany spoke at a luncheon meeting of the National Association of Manufacturers.

Charles R. Sligh Jr., chairman of the NAM executive committee, in reply referred to Meany as "an outstanding American" and said that industry has "no basic quarrel with labor organizations."

Sligh, however, appealed for the right of workers to decide whether they want to join unions without compulsion, and "a striving for the utmost efficiency and productivity and the elimination of economic waste of every type."

Both Aims the Same

Meany said there were so many compelling reasons for labor and management to get along together that it was "silly" for them to quarrel constantly. He said they both wanted to preserve and expand the American system and its economy.

The AFL-CIO chief said that essentially they differed only on the dividing of the wealth produced by labor and management together, and he felt sure, he said, "There is enough intelligence to solve that problem in a reasonable manner."

No union, Meany said, has any intention of trying to put management out of business because it would only rob workers of their livelihood.

Labor 12/15/55 Chat.

UNIONS END DISPUTE

Meat-Cutters, Retail Clerks Agree on Jurisdiction

WASHINGTON, Dec. 14 (AP)—Officials of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen and the Retail Clerks International Assn., both AFL-CIO and formerly AFL unions, have announced a jurisdictional agreement.

Their joint announcement said the pact ends "decades of quarreling over the two unions' jurisdictions in retail food stores."

Violence and threatened walkouts flared recently in the San Diego, Calif., area in the latest outcropping of the dispute. It spread to Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Each union claims more than 300,000 members.

The agreement provides that members of the Amalgamated will handle the jobs in retail store meat departments, including the handling of frozen meats which was the object of the San Diego controversy. The Retail Clerks' Union will have jurisdiction over all other retail food store jobs.

Labor

12/17/55

Combined AFL-CIO Launches Strong Fight Against Jim-Crow In Nation

Chicago Defender

By ETHEL PAYNE

NEW YORK — Labor unity in its first convention of the combined AFL-CIO ended last week on a strong note of brotherhood and determination to wage a vigorous fight within and without trade unionism to give the knock-out punch to racial discrimination.

In its final resolutions, the new federation adopted these goals for civil rights:

1. Endorsed legislation for enactment of a Federal Fair Employment Practices Act and urged states and cities which have not already done so to adopt such laws.

2. Called for a change in Senate Rule 22 to limit debate and end filibustering against civil rights legislation.

3. Unions to demand that management with whom they do business and who hold federal contracts adhere to non-discrimination provisions; include non-discrimination clauses in collective bargaining contracts and work continuously to get rid of bias in individual trade unions.

BACK SCHOOL ISSUE

4. Support the Supreme Court decision on de-segregation of public schools, and co-operate with community efforts to ease the transition. Urge the Administration to utilize its full power to frustrate and punish unlawful attempts to block implementation of the decision.

5. Urge Congress to enact legislation making lynchings a federal crime and to invalidate state laws requiring a poll tax.

The expected floor fight against the admission of the Jim-Crow railroad brotherhoods to be led by A. Philip Randolph failed to come off after President George Meaney held private conferences with the heads of the 200,000 member Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and the 95,000-member Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen and won agreements from them on revoking their color clauses.

Action on admission was postponed for a later date, although Meaney stated he favored bringing the rail unions in now.

CLASHES AVOIDED

The avoidance of the clash over racial restrictions is due to the skillful negotiating ability of Meaney and his ability in general to bring warring factions in line; yet at the same time, this was another demonstration of the immense prestige of Randolph in his long fight against bias in trade unionism.

The convention heard strong pleas for support of civil rights efforts from Thurgood Marshall, NAACP counsel and Adlai E. Stevenson, candidate for Presidential nomination.

Marshall warned that the organized campaign of tyranny against Negroes was linked with the determination of bigoted white Southerners to stop the drive to organize the unorganized.

Stevenson called for no compromise with principle in the fight to eliminate discrimination. He also denounced the drive in the South to deprive Negroes of the right to vote.

 12/22/55 Chron.

CAREY DENIES IUE PLANS UE MERGER

But Declares Union Not to Halt Efforts to Asborb Individual Members

PITTSBURGH, Dec. 21 — James B. Carey, president of the AFL-CIO International Union of Electrical Workers, said today a merger of his union with the United Electrical Workers Independent "is impossible."

Atty. Gen. Brownell yesterday asked the Suberversive Activities Control Board to make a formal finding that the UE is Communist-infiltrated.

Brownell said he noted recent published reports that some UE locals have merged with the IUE, and added:

"Efforts on the part of UE are being guided and directed toward this end by the Communist party itself."

Carey said there have been no mergers or amalgamations. He said:

"If the attorney general infers that the IUE has entertained any idea of merger with UE, I categorically deny it. IUE has always made it clear that it would never consider a merger with UE."

The CIO expelled the UE in November 1949 on grounds the union was Communist-dominated. The IUE then was organized as the CIO union for electrical workers. Today the UE claims more than 100.000 members. The IUE claims more than 300,000 members.

Carey said the IUE never has and will not stop its organization drives to bring UE members and all other electrical workers into the union.

Missing Sailor Found

NEW YORK, Dec. 21 (AP)—The Seamen's Church Institute has just located its 11,000th missing merchant seaman in 40 years of such service. He was found in Australia after a five-year search and put in touch with the family he hadn't seen in 20 years.

UNIONS AND THE WORKERS

The figures on union membership in the United States just issued by the Bureau of Labor Statistics have special interest because of the coming merger of the A. F. L. and C. I. O. and the stepped-up organizing efforts planned for the joint operation. The two organizations—with about eleven and five million members—have bulked large in American life as they are, but a single federation of sixteen million will call for some multiplication, as well as addition, in computing its effects. In spite of the formidable impact which organized labor has made on our national life, however, only about one out of three non-farm workers in the United States now belongs to any union.

In the decade of 1935 to 1945 union membership in the United States rose with spectacular speed: from 3.6 to 14.3 millions. Since then, surprising as it may seem, new members have barely kept up with the growth of the entire labor force outside the farms. But the proportion of the organized may well increase again when the A. F. L. and C. I. O. finally get together.

The B. L. S. figures do not show by sections of the country the proportion of the workers who are organized; but everyone knows it is far less in the Deep South than it is in the North and West. If the A. F. L.-C. I. O. campaigns could merely wipe out that differential many millions would be added to the unions' roster. Obviously, the South will be the main target for tomorrow.

The B. L. S. report gives the "union shop" as "a significant factor" in the past increase of union membership. Conversely, the laws in eighteen states, mostly in the South, which prohibit the union shop will be one of the chief hurdles the organizing campaign will have to take—or to remove. For that reason alone the new federation's intensified political activities seem certain to be focused on getting these statutes off the books and in preventing them from spreading any further.

NY Times 11/15/55

Labor

Secret Six Famed As Founders

A. Philip Randolph Heads Brotherhood; 30th Year Observed

A. PHILIP RANDOLPH
President-Founder

NEW YORK—Three decades of trade union crusading was marked on Thursday, August 25, at the thirtieth anniversary of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL.

The Brotherhood is the first, and the only, Negro international union in the United States. Its militant history in labor relations is closely tied with the overall social struggle for racial equality and civil liberties.

* * *

ITS HISTORY is equally the story of its president and one of its original founders, A. Philip Randolph, who, more than anyone else, today speaks for the American Negro worker.

With characteristic religious zeal, overpowering oratory and relentless devotion to basic principles, Randolph has carved for himself an impressive niche in American public life as well as in American trade union history.

But the early years of Brotherhood history, etched so painfully under the guidance of Randolph, have been years of quiet desperation and terrible struggle against the most formidable odds conceivable.

* * *

WHEN, ON that fateful evening of August 25, 1925, a half dozen courageous sleeping car porters—the then-famous "Secret Six"—met in New York City to organize the Brotherhood not even they could realize the scope of the struggle which lay ahead. Their most immediate and perhaps most formidable foe was the gigantic Pullman Company, whose record until then in the labor field had been characterized by the violent Pullman car strike of 1893.

True to its advance notices, the Pullman Company met the threat of an organized labor union with intimidation and force. Porters who dared defy the company union by joining, or even speaking on behalf of the newly-formed Brotherhood, were given time on the streets and fired.

ington." Until 1940, M.r Randolph and other Brotherhood leaders had been quietly pushing for equal opportunities for minority groups.

After scores of fruitless conferences and an equal number threat of an organized labor union with intimidation and force. Porters who dared defy the company union by joining, or even speaking on behalf of the newly-formed Brotherhood, were given time on the streets and fired.

* * *

MR. RANDOLPH, Ashley Toten, M. P. Webster, Bennie Smith, C. L. Dellums, T. D. McNeal and others journeyed countless miles from Boston to Oakland, from Jacksonville to Denver, rounding up support for the Brotherhod. But the law and public opinion were not yet with them. Fear raced neck-and-neck with courage.

To be a militant trade unionist in the 1929's was a truly dangerous assignment.

The struggle for recognition as a bonafide trade union representing the nation's sleeping car porters was not to reach full fruition until the mid-1930's when, under Franklin D. Roosevelt, new labor legislation was passed, specifically including the porters as workers entitled to collective bargaining and other labor rights. Twelve years to the day after the "Secret Six" first met ,the first agreement with the Pullman Company was signed. The Brotherhood had, through a federal mediation election, gained the right to represent the porters almost two years before.

* * *

BETWEEN 1925 and 1937, the Brotherhood had fought anti-labor laws, hostile newspapers and church groups, the Pullman Company, tradition-shackled porters who feared anything new, and an organized white labor movement which resented the prospect of an integrated labor union.

The struggle was by no means concluded with the signing of the first contract. Prior to the first contract the minimum monthly wage for a porter was $77.50; the initial agreement in 1937 called for $89.50; today the minimum wage is $304.18; with 18 days of paid vacation and other significant benefits. In less than 20 years, then, the Brotherhood has succeeded in gaining more than a four-fold wage increase, plus all the other benefits not previously enjoyed by American porters.

* * *

BUT IF the Brotherhood's role in the labor union struggle is important, its leadership in the general area of social relations is perhaps more significant to the larger community of American Negroes. Perhaps most memorable is the role played by Mr. Randolph and the Brotherhood in galvanizing American Negroes and other minorities in the memorable "March on Washington." Until 1940, M.r Randolph and other Brotherhood leaders had been quietly pushing for equal opportunities for minority groups.

After scores of fruitless conferences and an equal number of promises by government officials, Randolph became convinced that bold and dramatic action was at last necessary. To dramatize the needs of the Negro worker, he planned and organized the famous "March" on the White House a quiet yet massive demonstration which brought to the front page of every American newspaper the Negro's plight.

* * *

AS A RESULT, President Roosevelt signed the historic Executive Order 8802, which prohibits discrimination in hiring in all interstate commerce and in all enterprises under contract with the federal government. At last, the door had been opened with the first FEPC law in history. The Brotherhood, joining forces with other groups, then proceeded to press the fight for federal and state FEPC laws, meeting with increasing success in recent years.

In labor circles, in fact, it reached the point where FEPC, the Brotherhood and A. Philip Randolph had become almost synonomous.

* * *

LESS recognized but as important are the other victories gained in the general field of race relations and labor. The Brotherhood is responsible for eliminating Negroes as a source for "scab-labor" for big businesses which are still trying to smash organized labor. Because of the Brotherhood's efforts, Negro labor has been transformed from an unorganized, amorphous group, accepting its inevitable "second-class" status, to a militant, dignified force, with consolidated power to operate in the labor market and through the labor movement.

And the Brotherhod has continually remained in the forefront of the crusade to eliminate racial discrimination in the labor movement. While not solved, the great strides that have already been made are due in large measure to the concerted campaigns of the Brotherhood.

With the prospective merger of AFL and CIO already promising a new deal for workers of minority groups, the process promises to snowball. And you can bet your newly-achieved prosperity that A. Philip Randolph and the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters will be in the vanguard again—as they have been for thirty hard-fought but fruitful years.

Labor Leader Claims DUPEC Being Used By Labor's Foes

Millard M. Barbee, president of the State Federation of Labor, charged Wednesday night there is a political "coalition . . . of some DUPEC leaders, Eisenhower Democrats, and the scraps of the old dilipidated political machine" who are "trying to pit class against class."

In a talk before the Building and Construction Trade Council at the local Labor Temple, Barbee acknowledged, "There are many sincere, honest people in DUPEC (Durham United Political Educational Council) who are dedicated to making it a constructive organization. But," he charged, "some of the would-be political dictators are trying to use the really sincere people in DUPEC as puppets for selfish purposes."

Barbee's blast was the first direct counter-charge to DUPEC charges that the present Democratic organization in Durham County is a labor-Negro coalition dedicated to the use of the block vote.

DUPEC has been credited with showing considerable strength in last Saturday's precinct meetings, and is expected to have a candidate to oppose J. Leslie Atkins Jr. for County Democratic Chairman at the convention Saturday.

Barbee, who is a member of Voters For Better Government, a union-associated political action group, said:

"Durham has become what it is today because all its people worked together.

"But right this minute we have a lot of hatemongers working overtime. They are country club Klu Klux Klanners, prejudice night riders who are trying to pit class against class.

"They are desperate, and they will do anything to use any and everybody they can for their selfish ends.

"They talk about block voting.

"Look at what the same string pullers did in the school bond issue less than a month ago.

"In Mangum-Umstead precinct the vote was 55 to 2 against the bond issue. In Carr township it was 78 to 3 against, and in Rougemont it was 71 to 4 against.

"This was no accident. It was block voting. And the very people who are yelling now are the ones who angled the bond issue dea.

"Look at who they are. They are the same people who have tried to keep a strangle hold on Durham for years and years. They would let our school children run helter skelter on the streets before they would build new buildings. They smile pretty and put the monkey wrench on any new industry coming to Durham.

"They are the scraps from an old, worn out, bedraggled political mamchine that conked out long ago. They are political bosses who want to barge in and take over with hate and prejudice.

"It is a coalition of vicious, power-hungry people. The coalition is made up of some of the DUPEC leaders. Eisenhower Democrats and the scraps of the old dilipidated political machine."

5/10/56 Durham Labor Tel.

Durham Labor Jnl. 5/17/58

Jim Carey Warns Unionist About White Citizen Groups

NEW YORK.—The chairman of the AFL-CIO Committee on Civil Rights warned that the real aim of the "great recruiting effort among union members now being conducted by the white citizens councils in the South is "seducing the union man in fighting his union."

Speaking before the Jewish Labor Committee's second national trade union conference on civil rights, AFL-CIO Vice Pres. James B. Carey said that if the white citizens councils are successful "it would mean an end to unionism in the South."

"Standards of living would decline for the working man and economic progress would stagnate," he continued. "Social progres would end such a disaster would have a terrible effect even on the Nothern working man. The ultimate effect would be felt all over the world."

This consideration, he declared is one of the important reasons why the American labor movement is dedicated to a "permanent, uncompromisable" policy of "complete eguality."

Carey was one of a score of speakers from the AFL-CIO affiliated unions before the three-day anti-bias conference at the Belmont Plaza Hotel. About 300 delegates from 18 internationals unions, 55 locals, joint boards and councils and nine civil rights and fraternal organizations participated.

The conference turned the spotlight on current civil rights and civil liberties problems throughout the world.

Unanimously approved were resolutions which:

1. Warned community organizations working for civil rights and have launched a new campaign of inflitration and flatly rejected unity with "those who condone practices of enslavement, of murder, of human indignation."

2. Proposed increased legislative an community action to wipe out discrimination in employment.

3. Condemned Soviet anti-Semitism, charging that Communist policies are destroying the Jewish community behind the Iron Curtain and demanding full democratic and cultural rights for Jews in the U.S.S.R.

The delegates also approved recommendations of a committee appointed at last year's conference which call for the immediate establishment of a new National Trade Union Council to greatly expand the anti-discrimination work of the Jewish Labor Committee. It will be comprised of 500 trade union leaders from throughout the nation.

He warned that the white citizens movement has definite ties to anti-labor organizations in the North and predicted that a white citizens council would be established in Detroit and other nothern cities "within a year." He said labor haters clearly were trying to use the race issue to "divide and conquer" organized labor.

ATTEND YOUR UNION MEETINGS!

Labor News

THINKING ALOUD

Reflections On the Negro and Labor

By Daniel Bell

SOME YEARS AGO, an older friend, an official of one of the out-of-town locals of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and a Socialist, complained to me about the apathy of most of the members in his local, and, in some cases, the resentment of a minority against the union leadership. "I don't understand it," he said. "I work hard for them. I spend long hours negotiating for them. I don't let the boss get away with a nickel. But they don't appreciate it."

I was reminded of his remarks recently on reading the charges made by Herbert Hill, the Labor Secretary of the NAACP, of racial discrimination in the Garment Workers' Union, and the outraged rejoinders by David Dubinsky and other ILGWU officials. Like most of the young Socialists who were active in the Young People's Socialist League in the '30s, I have long had a warm feeling for, even an emotional identification with, the ILGWU. The union supplied us with some of the best jokes (copies supplied upon request) about the radical movement. It provided intermittent employment for many of us (I did "educational work" and editorial chores for Local 62 during my graduate-school days). Through generous contributions, it supported most of the Socialist institutions during the bleakest days of the depression and after. Its record of progressive leadership in a variety of areas is too well documented to need repetition. The idea, therefore, that the ILGWU practiced racial discrimination seemed absurd.

Hill's statement, compiled originally for a Congressional subcommittee, stated that Negroes were excluded from the higher-paying jobs in the garment trades (specifically in the cutters' local); that certain locals excluded Negroes; that a predominantly Negro local (composed primarily of shipping clerks) was attached to a larger local of pressers and was thus deprived of full citizenship rights in the union; and that Negroes and Puerto Ricans were under-represented in the union's leadership, which was, and remains, predominantly Jewish.

The ILGWU's answer, which appears in the Fall 1962 issue of New Politics, was prepared by Gus Tyler, the union's political director. It is, I think, quite convincing as a rebuttal to the specific charges. Hill's statement was sloppy (Local 89, accused of rebuffing Negroes, is an Italian-language local, and accepts only Italian members—a hangover from an early organizational structure), his figures were often incorrect, and his portentous social analysis (e.g., that the Jewish labor leaders have more in common with the Jewish employers than with the rank-and-file membership) was a piece of pseudo-sociology.

It also seems clear that the original occasion for the statement was unfortunate, since the Congressional hearings were being conducted, in New York rather than in Washington, during a primary campaign by a Congressman who had been denied endorsement by the ILGWU-dominated Liberal party in New York. And for anyone who has known the long devotion to liberal causes of such men as Charles Zimmerman, the manager of the union's Dress Joint Board, the idea of their condoning overt racial discrimination, even for reasons of expediency, did not ring true.

Yet, wrong as Hill's charges are in detail, deeper problems remain, problems that have been obscured by the stridency of charges and replies. The first is symbolized by my friend's observations about the apathy and ingratitude within his local. But this is only part of a broader, more vexing issue: the propriety of attacking one's friends, rather than one's enemies, as the Negro organizations are now doing. And this, in turn, is part of a still larger question which few persons have cared to discuss openly: whether in his fight to overcome second-class status, the Negro should receive not merely equality of opportunity but, in order to establish himself as a full citizen, preferential treatment as well.

DANIEL BELL, a regular contributor to this department, is author of Work and its Discontents and The End of Ideology. A former managing editor of THE NEW LEADER and labor editor of Fortune magazine, he is now Professor of Sociology at Columbia University.

1/21/63

THE FIRST PROBLEM (which has been caricatured by the charge of racial discrimination) is really, in its way, the familiar family chronicle of the original generation that built an institution (or a business or a store) and won't let go for the next one. The telling phrase in the complaint that my old Socialist friend made was the reiterated "for them." He was doing a good job, for them. He was honest and conscientious, for them. He had negotiated a good contract, for them.

But as I tried to tell him at the time, sometimes people like to do things for themselves, even if they do them less well. His reply, on reflection, was that the workers could not negotiate a contract: They did not possess the skills, the boss would outmaneuver them, they would be too exorbitant in their demands, they did not understand the economics of the industry, etc. When I asked him if they could not learn—after all, he had come up from the shop—his answer was that they were not interested, that in his generation the talented people had gone into the shop because there was nowhere else for immigrants to go, but now the more educated ones did not go into the union, and so on.

My friend was no fool. He knew all about Robert Michels' "iron law of oligarchy," had read Will Herberg on union bureaucracy, was aware of the growing gulf between the leadership and the rank-and-file, and his reply reflected an awareness of being trapped in this disparity. "Besides," he said, "I am 55 years old. Am I supposed to get out of the union now, after 30 years of service, because the new membership, which had little to do with building the union, is ethnically different from me?" He had helped build a useful social institution, and had identified himself so completely with it that he found it hard to conceive of its continuing without him, and others like him.

And in a way he is right. Once the older generation passes, the ILGWU will be a different union. The tragedy is that the change is going on now, amid circumstances of growing resentment rather than of honor. Clearly, there is no easy answer.

The other problems are of equal difficulty, going far beyond the dilemmas of the ILGWU. It is startling to realize that in the quickened pace of the Negro effort to gain higher status in this country, the liberals (Dubinsky, Walter Reuther and even George Meany), rather than the reactionaries, are the ones who find themselves under the gun in the Negro community. Why does the NAACP pick on us? a friend in the needle trades recently asked me. Why doesn't it go after the building trades, the electrical unions (apart from Local 3 in New York) and other places where Negroes can't even get jobs, let alone leadership positions, because of union discrimination? One reason, he said, answering his own question, is that the NAACP is itself under fire from the more militant sections of the Negro community, and to maintain its own position it picks on the liberal unions because they are more vulnerable.

Wasn't this, I asked, exactly the reaction that the Jewish employers in the needle trades had 50 or more years ago, when the ILGWU was first trying to get a foothold in the industry? The Italian bosses run worse sweatshops, they said, yet the unions pick on us because they can shame us in the Yiddish press. But precisely because the ILGWU was able to do so, the union succeeded in winning such victories as the establishment of arbitration councils under Louis D. Brandeis and other prominent Jewish spokesmen. Such tactics are bound to be repeated, and they are understandable.

WHAT IS IT, then, that the Negro community wants, and why so much more demandingly from its liberal friends? The fact is—and this is the "bite" in Hill's charges—that the Negroes are underrepresented in the leadership of many of the unions where they form a significant proportion of the membership. In the case of these unions, what the Negroes want is "recognition" at the level of top leadership and a growing share of the spoils of office.*

Demands such as these are usually voiced behind closed doors rather than openly, because they fly in the face of the American mythos that all individuals are equal and there is no such thing as a group identity. And they usually provoke the response (which Reuther, for one, has articulated) that this is Jim Crow in reverse, that a man ought to be judged on the basis of individual merit and not for any "extraneous" capacity. Yet there is a curious paradox in this "democratic" response. For one thing, the realistic political process in the United States, at least in the northern urban centers, has been one of ethnic groups advancing themselves precisely in this fashion: by organizing on bloc lines, electing their own kind, and using the patronage system to enhance the wealth and status of their group.

A second, more complex fact is that the basic existence of the labor movement is rooted in the conception of "group" rather than individual rights. Legally, the individual's protection on the job—where, for example, a union shop exists—is based on the "collective" contract, not on his individual right. (Thus, under an old NLRB ruling, employers are forbidden in certain circumstances to give individual workers merit wage increases on the ground that this may be a form of favoritism and would violate the group's rights.)

* A few years ago, the ILGWU did begin to make a more determined effort to bring Negroes and Puerto Ricans into leadership positions. But, ironically, the union found that leadership training enhanced the market value of its best candidates and, because the ILGWU pays relatively poorly, it "lost" the trainees to other unions or to government, where they could command more money and status.

How far down does the group right extend within the union? Often a union recognizes certain "functional" groupings (for instance, the skilled trades in the United Auto Workers) as legitimate claimants to its own rights of representation. Does the Negro community—if it so organizes itself—have a legitimate claim for representation in group terms?

This has to be answered in a still wider context, which is the unspoken premise that "equality of opportunity" is an inadequate springboard from which the deprived sections of the Negro community—that is, the overwhelming majority—can advance economically and educationally. The phrase "equality of opportunity" has meaning if the competitors are roughly equal from the start (which is why there are handicaps in a horse race). But in many instances, even if a genuine equality of opportunity—for jobs, school places and the like—prevailed, the Negro would still lose out, with harmful social consequences for the community, simply because of extra, inherited handicaps he bears.

Admission to an elite public school like New York's Bronx High School of Science, for example, is by competitive examination, a matter purely of merit. Yet the number of Negro children in that school is scandalously low, and this failure to get on the first step of the educational escalator becomes a self-reinforcing vicious cycle as regards future opportunities. The solution is not necessarily a double standard, wherein Negro children with lesser qualifications are admitted on a quota basis; it may require the creation of special classes to coach bright but culturally deprived Negro children, in order to allow them to compete on a better footing.

But why even blink at the "double standard?" Why should intellectual merit alone be the determining basis for entry into an elite school? Ivy-league colleges such as Harvard, Yale and Columbia maintain geographical quotas in order to gain a representative national student body, on the ground that such mixtures are more valuable to the educational process than those selected by grades or college-board scores alone. On the same basis, a larger proportion of Negro children in the elite schools would both act as a spur to these children and "broaden" the experience of the other students.

ALL THIS may seem a far cry from my opening story; yet there is a consistency and a connection. The implicit demand of the Negro community today is for special efforts and even special treatment in order to win basic social rights. It arises for the same reason that Tocqueville noted in all revolutionary movements: Increasingly radical demands are made not when one's lot goes from bad to worse, but when it goes from bad to better. For what may have been formerly accepted as destined and inevitable now, with the possibility of improvement in sight, becomes intolerable; and the demand for improvement quickens.

But the demand for special treatment is nothing new in the United States. It is the very basis for the existence of the labor movement. The preamble to the Wagner Act points out that equality of bargaining is a necessary aspect of social justice, and in order to redress unequal power, the workers have to be given the added protections of the law to organize, to compel the employer to bargain, and so on. Farmers receive price supports, subsidies, mortgage insurance and the like. In economic and educational opportunity, the Negro is in a position of inequality, and the government is bounden to help him move ahead. But doesn't the trade-union movement have a special obligation to help redress the balance?

To return to my original tale, the tragedy of old institutions is that they are like Cheshire cats: The image remains after the body has disappeared. In the end, the image without the body is insubstantial, and quickly fades away. Or, to change the metaphor, and make the issue more plain: The "genius" of American democracy is that the society survived because the older ruling groups learned to share their power instead of resorting to class war, most notably in the acceptance by employers of collective bargaining in the factories. How curious that the labor leadership which benefited from that historical lesson should so plainly fail to see the virtue of applying it to its own institutions.

1909 SHIRTWAIST STRIKE: ILGWU MARCHES ON NEW YORK'S CITY HALL TO PROTEST POLICE ACTION

New Attack on Unions

Labor

Labor's foes have been quick to cite recent and current strikes as reason for crippling unions and destroying the collective bargaining process. With echoes of the longshore strike still sounding across Capitol Hill in Washington, attempts are being made to picture work-stoppages an affront to the public interest and to bolster public support for union-curbing legislation.

Even newspaper strikes in New York and Cleveland are being termed too great a burden for the economy of the world's wealthiest nation to bear. A press that can hardly claim to be disinterested has sought to create the impression that the publishers are blameless and that labor is irresponsible.

The City of New York could have had newspapers despite the printers' strike in that city. There has been no walkout against the New York Post, the Daily Mirror, or the Herald-Tribune.

The three papers in question have claimed financial difficulty and intimated that they would fold if they were shut down. Yet, they have locked out their employees and ceased to publish at the command of the publishers' association. Had they published, they would have reaped a big financial harvest and much strengthened their positions.

ITU members employed by the papers have fallen behind those in the job-shops. The union, which has had no strike for 65 years, has asked an adequate wage increase, five days' paid sick leave annually, a 15-minute reduction in the workday, increased fund payments to make up for cuts in welfare, higher night shift differentials, and an added week of vacation.

The publishers have offered a cash raise of only 55 cents in the first year of a new contract, and have refused adequate fringes. They have also demanded changes in work rules.

"We want to bargain on a realistic basis; we have asked for continuous negotiations. But the publishers refuse to bargain in good faith," the ITU stressed in a recent public appeal.

A. J. Liebling, author of the New Yorker's "Wayward Press" column, recently noted that labor is almost invariably cast as villain in industrial disputes. He pointed out that a close look usually reveals justice more generally on labor's side than on management's.

Long columns of type are now being devoted to the premise that any truly effective strike is too costly for U. S. democracy to bear. In this view, the only permissible strike is one that has no discernible impact.

Pandora's Box

Solutions offered by these pundits would destroy free trades unions as they now exist. They would substitute state compulsion for free collective bargaining. The "cures" would break up unions, impose compulsory arbitration, create labor courts, and deny the right to withdraw labor in concert.

A mishmash of antiunion bills has already been poured into the Congressional hopper. Proposals of Sen. Barry Goldwater (R., Ariz.) are typical.

Goldwater recently told the U. S. Chamber of Commerce that the strike "is the only weapon labor has." He opposed "violent steps" to curb unions and, particularly, compulsory arbitration, which he admitted would open the door to government control of factories, prices, and workers.

Goldwater's nonviolent cures would be deadly. He has introduced a bill placing the right to strike under NLRB supervision. It would require unions to give the Board 30 days' advance notice of intent to strike, require a petition to strike from 30 percent of the members, and then permit a strike only after the NLRB has conducted a poll and certified a majority vote in favor.

The Arizona solon would also end the union shop by making it legal only in states which pass laws permitting such union security. He would end all industry bargaining, such as in steel or in the longshore industry. While Goldwater would not end the "right to strike," he would make an effective strike virtually impossible.

Sen. John McClellan (D., Ark.) would bar strikes in defense facilities and substitute compulsory arbitration by a board appointed by the Secretary of Defense. He would also put transportation unions under antitrust and bar them from striking, picketing, or acting in concert "with an employer or any other labor union."

Rep. Dave Martin (R., Neb.) would put unions under antitrust laws and break them up into individual locals incapable of effective bargaining. Sen. Everett Dirksen (R., Ill.) would establish compulsory arbitration in the maritime trades.

A recent symposium of the National Industrial Conference Board in New York heard from most participants that the public is becoming "disenchanted" with the U. S. bargaining system, that only the "disinterested" public is the "loser" in strikes, and that action must be taken to protect the public from work-stoppage disruptions in the economy.

Yet, there were fewer strikes last year than in any since the war. Losses caused by joblessness had a far greater impact upon the economy than the relatively minor losses resulting from strikes.

A democracy can endure only if it accepts the price of freedom. Part of that price is the ability of workers to withdraw their labor in concert. The alternative is involuntary servitude, even if dressed up in the clothing of compulsory arbitration.

Compulsory arbitration—or labor courts—places a premium upon decisions of state bodies. There is no compulsion to bargain, since the state will decide anyway. Technicality replaces justice and the lawyer replaces the negotiator. The union tends to become an empty husk. Cases drag on through the labor courts for years until justice delayed becomes justice denied.

Some nations have experimented with compulsory arbitration, only to find that it brings unrest and large-scale, wildcat strikes. In some cases, it has resulted in virtual servitude for the worker.

The Philippine Republic discarded compulsory arbitration a decade ago because it proved incapable of coping with postwar conditions. A recent study reported that it was abandoned because "more fundamental importance was attached to the exercise by the worker of his right to self-organization" than to "the prevention of strikes."

Free collective bargaining does not deny a voice to the state in helping to resolve labor-management disputes of significant magnitude. The weight of the state can, however, be brought to bear without destruction of the right to strike and the bargaining process.

McDonald Cites Attack on Labor

United Steelworkers Pres. David J. McDonald has warned that organized labor is under increasing attack by those who want to return to "industrial cannibalism where the strong devour the weak and each man is fearful of his neighbor."

In a message sent to a conference of Steelworkers District 35, McDonald declared that "propaganda machinery is operating full blast, seeking to force intemperate and hasty action by Congress which would further reduce labor's rights and shackle us in pursuit of just objectives."

McDonald said the goal of those seeking to cripple unions "is to spread suspicion and disunity in the ranks of labor so that the working man, bereft of a strong union, will be weak and compliant to any erosion of his rights and too insecure to demand and fight for his due."

COMMENT

SINCE the recent visit of a T.U.C. delegation to Sweden the pundits have been trying to persuade us that much of the industrial strife which arises in this country could be avoided if only the British Trade Union Movement would adapt its methods and structure to conform to the Swedish pattern.

This theory would appear to be based on the false assumption that the Unions alone are responsible for industrial disputes and that the establishment and maintenance of good industrial relations is a one-sided business. We recognise that harmonious relationships between Employers and Unions are an important contributory factor to the economic stability of any civilized community, but we must stress that the responsibility rests equally on both sides.

If a comparison is to be made between Sweden and Britain, it should first of all be explained that there is a much more ready acceptance on the part of Swedish employers of the important role of the Unions and that they encourage the development of trade union organisation. In sharp contrast British trade unions have been established and developed in the face of intense and often bitter opposition from employers who, even today, resort to various devices to weaken and render more difficult efforts to develop and expand trade union membership.

Especially is this true in relation to the organisation of 'White-collar' workers. Time and again when staff employees have indicated an interest in membership of a bona-fide trade union the employer has moved in quickly to establish a 'House' union or staff association.

Although the powerful Engineering Employers' Federation would strenuously deny that it is opposed to the development of trade union organisation amongst staff workers, it is no secret that representatives of management in many of its member firms encourage and foster the development of the "Foreman's Mutual and Staff Benefit Society". Employees who seek to become members of this society are obliged to sign a declaration that they are not members of a trade union.

It may be that the British trade union movement could, with advantage, adopt some of the ideas and methods of its Swedish counterpart but this is also true of the Employers. We do not doubt the need for changed attitudes but this must come from both sides.

Position of negroes biggest moral and political issue

as seen by EC member, Joan Lipson

Miss Lipson in Portland, Oregon, with A. F. Hartung, President of the International Woodworkers of America

Miss Lipson was one of seven trade unionists selected by the English Speaking Union to visit the U.S.

THE first thing to catch the eye in the airport bus from Idlewild to New York was the notice: "Seating aboard this vehicle is without regard to race, colour, creed or national origin—by order of the Inter-State Commerce Commission." Two weeks later, in Atlanta, in the corridors of the offices of the State of Georgia, I read: "White Men" and "White Women". The State Commissioner of Labour had just told me that "we in the South treat coloured people much better than in the North; we are good to them—my wife looks after our maid if she is sick. We got on well until integration started to damage relations." In Atlanta, an integrated city by Southern standards, there are still only about fifty negro children in "integrated" schools; yet negro schools are working shifts through overcrowding while many white schools are half-empty. It is, however, on voter registration that most of the organisations working in various ways for integration are now concentrating their efforts, and people are still risking their lives so that negroes can exercise the most elementary right in a democracy—the right to vote.

The position of the negroes is the biggest moral and political issue facing the American people, and for the trade unions the challenge is an economic one as well. If the South were as well organised as the rest of the country, union membership in the U.S.A. would be doubled.

A challenge of a different kind to union organisation is the growing proportion of "white-collar" workers. American unions believe we are ahead of them in this and they have some different obstacles to overcome. But the union "contract", once it is signed, usually runs for several years, provides for deduction of contributions from pay, and covers all aspects of pay, grading, promotion and conditions of work.

At local level the problems are often familiar ones. I found this talking to the President of the New York Stock Exchange "Local" of the Office Employees International Union about running a Union Branch; comparing the agreement for clerical staff of Pan American Airways with ours in C.A.T.; in a "Grievance Committee" meeting at an engineering factory hearing promotion procedure cases argued with the management; in discussions with students at a union school in Texas.

The differences in American unions pose many questions: How does the high ratio of officials and staff to membership—enviable as it is to us—affect the initiative of the rank and file? What is the effect of the complicated network of Federal and State laws which enmesh union activity? Above all, how—lacking an independent political philosophy and organisation—are they to meet the challenge of their own economy? Of an unemployment rate twice our national average, of the tremendous impact of automation adding to the country's already boundless productive capacity? Although many American unions are, as their literature and their election activity showed, now deeply involved in politics and aware of its impact on their members, this is the challenge they are perhaps least equipped to meet.

Almost my only "sight-seeing" in the U.S.A. was a visit to the United Nations. Situated in the heart of New York, inside it seemed like another world, at first perhaps by contrast with the commercialism outside. But going round the building, listening to the disarmament committee in session, seeing the Security Council chamber where so recently Cuba was debated, the reason became clear: this is the place where the nations can settle their differences by discussion, where all peoples are equal. It has been suggested that it might be better if the U.N. headquarters were not in the United States, but I think probably they need its influence most.

NO CASE FOR LONGER NOTICE BY WORKERS

Contracts of Employment Bill

TUC Criticism

CRITICISM of the Contracts of Employment Bill has come from the General Council of the TUC who have informed the Government of their views.

No case, they claim, has been made out to justify imposing on many workpeople the obligation to give employers longer notice. It is said this is being done to maintain reciprocity between employer and employee but the freedoms of employers to discharge and of employees to leave are not equal. It is excessive to require a month's notice from an employee whose wages are calculated by the hour and paid by the week.

Not Best Means

Nor do the General Council feel that legislation is the best means of obtaining improvements in this field, but this apart, they claim that the Bill has not gone far enough.

It does nothing for most of those workers who can be dismissed at two or one hour's notice, e.g. building and ship-repairing. The minimum period of notice to be received by a worker who has been working for an employer for, say, four weeks should be one week.

Arbitary Dismissal

When the Bill becomes law, greater use will be made by some employers of their powers of summary dismissal in order to avoid giving longer notice. This will give a greater prominence to the widespread absence in private industry of procedures to deal with appeals against arbitrary dismissals.

The General Council also point out that, apart from summary dismissal there are other ways in which some employers may avoid the obligation to give four weeks' notice or pay. For instance, they may refuse to give more than one week for although the Bill provides that workers may seek damages through the courts in such cases, the opportunity to obtain damages will be illusory in areas of high employment; or they may put workers on short-time in the hope that they will seek and obtain other employment.

Penalise All

Some of the sudden strikes which take place have been condemned by the General Council as irresponsible, but the Bill will penalise all strikers whatever the provocation and whether or not the joint machinery is available for the settlement of grievances.

The Second Reading of the Bill is expected in the Commons in February.

Labor

THE FUTURE OF LABOR AS A POLITICAL FORCE IN THIS REGION -- DOES IT HAVE ONE?

By Henry Woods
McMath, Leatherman Woods & Youngdahl
1330 Tower Building
Little Rock, Arkansas

For COPE (Committee on Political Education)
March 16, 1963 AFL-CIO
Little Rock, Arkansas

The South has always constituted a special problem for organized labor. It is still largely unorganized, in spite of huge expenditures of money, sweat and manpower - and even the life and limb of a few union representatives. Labor's political influence is still weak. Why is this so? From one perspective, the South should be the easiest section of the nation to organize. Nowhere else has labor been so mercilessly exploited.

"I have known mills", wrote Edgar Garner Murphy of Alabama, "in which for ten or twelve days at a time the factory hands -- children and all -- were called to work before sunrise and dismissed from work only after sunset, laboring from dark to dark. I have repeatedly seen them at labor for twelve, thirteen, and even fourteen hours per day. In the period of the holidays, or other 'rush times' I have seen children eight and nine years of age leaving the factory as late as 9:30 at night, and finding their way with their own little lanterns through the unlighted streets of the mill village, to their squalid homes."

The advent of the social legislation of the New Deal and the continuing assaults of organized labor have served to ameliorate the most outrageous abuses of the southern factories and mills, but wages are still lower in the South than elsewhere in the nation. In Arkansas and Mississippi they are the lowest of all -- $1.56 per hour is the average wage in manufacturing in Arkansas as compared with $2.24 in our neighboring state of Missouri to the North - $2.10 in Oklahoma to the West and $2.12 in Louisiana to the South. Again we here in Arkansas may say "Thank God for Mississippi" because there the figure is $1.52 per hour.

Where labor has been so cynically exploited, the fields should be ripe for the harvest of unionism. But such has not been the case. Why? The answer is complex. Within the limits of this short talk, I cannot explore all the reasons that thoughtful students have assigned for this phenomenon. Most are agreed that the answer lies within the peculiar power structure of southern society -- its customs, economy, its about 5½ pages

social, cultural and political leadership.

To explore the problem even cursorily we must go back to the Reconstruction after the Civil War to that period so aptly described as "The Tragic Era". In a chaotic and prostrate society the planter and business groups were able to finally impress a political system that disenfranchised the lower income groups in our population. Limitation on the franchise was defended on the ground that it was necessary to keep the vote in the hands of the white man. Many property-less whites did not bother to notice that they too were being disenfranchised.

Indeed this was the idea from the beginning -- as is pointed out so convincingly in a small but golden volume just published called "Romance and Realism in Southern Politics" by Harry Williams, a history professor at L.S.U. Mr. Williams quotes from articles in the New Orleans TIMES and PICAYUNE during the Reconstruction Period when these papers were considered to be the leading voice of Louisiana business interests.

Wrote the TIMES: "There was a time when universal suffrage was regarded as one of the grandest features of American institutions, but it has been demonstrated, especially in large cities, that universal suffrage means the rule of the mob .... The right to vote should be given to those only who can use it with discretion and sound judgment, and as our electoral privileges are already too wide, it would be the maddest folly to extend them ... wherever voters greatly outnumber property holders, property assuredly will be unsafe ... were universal Negro suffrage to be added to white universal suffrage both life and property would be greatly weakened ..."

Said the PICAYUNE: "We look upon voting as a duty rather than a right and we regret that there is so much of it among the whites. Universal suffrage is the unlimited suffrage of the ignorant, landless and lawless."

So the cumulative poll tax was passed in some states; in others (such as Arkansas) it was made payable with property taxes almost a year before the election date -- at a time when no one is thinking about elections. That this has operated as an effective method of disenfranchisement is shown by the fact that only about one-third of the eligible voters participate in either primary or general elections in this state.

By skillful use of the race issue, this program was sold throughout the South and resulted in the election of governors, legislators, congressmen and senators who have been nothing more than tools of the vested interests and who have used their vast political power to forge ever new shackles for the working man.

The Arkansas AFL-CIO in 1956 made a determined effort to eliminate the poll tax by the initiation of a constitutional amendment -- but the race issue was stirred up by the same old interests who fear the extension of democracy in this state. Powerful groups are still at work to limit the franchise.

Robert Welch, the leader of the John Birch Society, was recently quoted as follows in the NEW YORK POST: "This is a Republic, not a Democracy - let's keep it that way. Democracy is a government by majority vote which provides no protection to the rights of minorities nor even to the best interest of the majorities themselves against the sudden whims of the electorate or the results of the voters' gullibility."

H. L. Hunt, the Texas billionaire and chief financial angel of the ultra right has seriously proposed in a book he has written called "Alpaca" -- about a fictional Utopia -- that the right to vote should be based solely on wealth. The more money a man has, the more votes he should be permitted to cast. One humorist has dubbed Mr. Hunt's Utopia as cashocracy. Dan Smoot, of Facts Forum - Mr. Hunt's protege - recently described democracy as "The most evil form of government". Despite the Birchists and their ilk, a great step forward was made when Congress recently referred an amendment abolishing the poll tax. When this is ratified by three-fourths of the state legislatures, as will surely happen, a great new opportunity will present itself to labor in Arkansas and Mississippi. Whether this opportunity will be grasped remains to be seen. What kind of registration law will be passed?

The Arkansas Legislature has just adjourned without passing any such law, although several were introduced. I am not sure that the composition of the Arkansas Legislature is such that a decent law could be passed -- one that would give everyone a fair and seasonable opportunity to register and vote and HAVE THAT VOTE COUNTED HONESTLY.

I would like to propose here and now that organized labor join with other interested civic groups in considering the possibility of initiating by petition a fair and decent registration law. The people want this done -- they are calling for it -- and you could answer their call.

This registration bill should make it easy for any citizen to vote. It should do one other thing. It should make the voter declare his party preference. If he is a Republican, he should not be permitted to vote in the Democratic primary. John McClellan won the Democratic senatorial nomination in 1954 with the votes of Republicans who were instructed to vote in the primary. Let me be frank with you. I favor a two party system in the South. I think Arkansas and Mississippi would be better off if they were two party states.

I think that requiring Republicans to register as such would go a long way toward building a two party system. Let the McClellans, Thurmonds, and the other conservatives join with the Goldwaters and Dirksens. -- They think like they do -- they vote like they do. A man has every right to be a reactionary -- just as much right as I have to be a liberal. But if he is a reactionary, he belongs in the Republican Party, just as I belong in the Democratic Party.

The Texas Democratic Party is achieving new vitality because at long last the reactionaries are leaving it and finding their real home with Senator Tower and Republicans. This has caused such a change in the complexion of the Texas Democratic organization that an unknown young Houston lawyer running on an out and out pro-labor program came within 19,000 votes of winning the Democratic nomination in spite of the active opposition of Lyndon Johnson, who professes great liberalism on the national scene -- but is something else again on his home grounds, where he connives and consorts with the worst elements in Texas politics.

Abolition of the poll tax and a fair permanent registration system in this state will permit you to achieve a maximum utilization of your voting potential. You have estimated this to be 283,000 votes. I am convinced that not one-fifth of this potential is being realized. I have been in union meetings where I have asked for an honest show of hands on poll tax holders. Not one in ten would respond.

It will mean something else. Thousands of Negro voters are going to be added to the voting rolls. Are these votes going to support your candidates? Or will you let the blatant voice of the racist demagogue alienate you from this growing bloc of votes? The racist demagogue is rarely a friend of the working man. It has been my experience that when you scratch the thin veneer from a racist - underneath you will find a labor hater.

The racist Dixiecrat movement of 1948 had its genesis among a group of labor haters. I quote from V. O. Key's monumental and definitive work, "Southern Politics", with regard to the Dixiecrat movement: "The center of agitation against Truman's renomination and for commitment of the Democratic electors for Thurmond and Wright was in the plantation counties of Eastern Arkansas. The Arkansas Free Enterprise Association, with headquarters in the area, was prominent in all the Dixiecrat maneuvers. Its Executive Director, John L. Daggett and his associates attended Gov. Wright's Jackson conference in full force. The same Association, consisting of big planters and industrialists, had earlier sponsored a "right-to-work" amendment to the state constitution and it had been hostile to all the New Deal foolishness".

The Arkansas Free Enterprise Association was employing the old time tested technique of the southern demagogue. Raise hell on the race issue -- but all the while serve the cause of big business, and the special interests. This technique has been developed into a fine art by many of our southern politicians.

In speaking of one of the early successful racist demagogues, Cole Blease, Governor of South Carolina, Professor Williams writes in "Romance and Realism in Southern Politics": "Blease offered these people no program of betterment, and he consistently opposed and defeated legislation to benefit labor. Yet the very people that he undercut cherished him as their champion".

I know that you leaders of organized labor in Arkansas and Mississippi have a hard time weaning your rank and filers from the "Cole Bleases". The leader of the Citizens Council here in Little Rock is a former local head of the Free Enterprise Association, yet some of his most active supporters are labor union members. When the riots occurred here in Little Rock around Central High School, there were labor union members in the forefront. When the headquarters of the School Board was bombed here, one of those convicted was a union man.

Yet I am glad to say that the leadership of organized labor in this state denounced both of these episodes vigorously. In doing so, labor's leadership aligned itself with the churches, leading women's organizations, and even the Chamber of Commerce. I say to you that it would have been tragic if the voice of labor had been silent in these days. I want you to remember that in the great Eastern States, with their permanent registration systems, it was a coalition of the Labor and Negro vote that kept Richard Nixon from being President of the United States.

It is necessary that labor in Arkansas and Mississippi should take into account the growing role that the Negro will necessarily play in Southern politics. On the national scene Labor has built a tremendous reservoir of goodwill with the Negro people for it has given effective support to their struggle for a decent life in America. It would be unwise to dissipate this by parochial and provincial attitudes in the state labor organizations.

The labor movement in this country has always championed the rights of minority groups. At present both Labor and many minorities are being subjected to a well-financed, well organized barrage from extreme right groups. Labor has withstood the threat of the extreme left and it will meet the threat of the extreme right.

But the threat must not be taken lightly. Robert Welch, the John Birch fuehrer, and H. L. Hunt, the Texas billionaire, have placed millions at the disposal of the extreme right wing groups. We have an institution in Arkansas - Harding College at Searcy, which is an important part of the far right political and propaganda structure. This college has a six million dollar endowment, virtually all received from big business donors. It received $300,000 alone from the late Alfred P. Sloan, President of General Motors. The President, Dr. George Benson, has a simple message: what is good for big business is good for the country. He is against the New Deal and the Fair Deal. He opposes all welfare legislation. Unionism is bad for the country because it is "monopolistic". He has campaigned rigorously for "right to work" proposals. He hired Glenn Green, former executive secretary of the Free Enterprise Association to act as his public relations director. Green, while at Harding, produced a film called "Communism on the Map" which some of you may have seen. Some employers have made their employees view it as captive audience. Some unions have had the good judgment to protest. The film carries the very defeatist message that Communism has already taken over the world except for West Germany, Formosa, Switzerland and the U. S. The United States is almost gone because the Communists have virtually subverted the government and the labor unions.

The film follows the Blue Book of the John Birch Society quite closely which may be no accident because Glenn Green is an active and vociferous member of the John Birch Society.

In the April, 1961, Bulletin of the John Birch Society, Robert Welch wrote "our people have also been responsible for the producing, and then, during the past several months, for virtually thousands of showings of a film strip called Communism on the Map . . . Full credit for providing the organization, financing, prestige and practical circumstances for such work must go entirely to the National Education Program of Searcy, Arkansas, headed by that great American, Dr. George Benson. But this film strip was conceived, prepared, and produced by an ardent member of the John Birch Society, partly from our materials."

Another right wing stalwart who makes the rounds in Arkansas - and I am sure in Mississippi - is Rev. Billie James Hargis, the head of the Christian Crusade and We the People. Rev. Hargis' headquarters is in Tulsa. We the People is based in Chicago. Its hero seems to be Senator Barry Goldwater. It publishes a propaganda tract called "Free Enterprise". The June, 1961 issue of the latter recommended reading Gerald L.K. Smith's "Cross and the Flag" and "Common Sense", two of the most anti-semitic publications in the United States.

In 1961 Hargis had a summit meeting of his Christian Crusade addressed by Robert Welch, who announced at that time the subject of his high school essay contest -- "Why Chief Justice Warren Should be Impeached".

Another former Arkansan, Tom Anderson, is now a resident of Nashville, where he publishes a magazine "Farm and Ranch" which has wide circulation in the South. Anderson is on the National Board of the John Birch Society. About a year ago he was the principal speaker at the annual banquet of the local Chamber of Commerce where he received a standing ovation after delivering a diatribe against labor and the national administration. One of Anderson's pet projects is the complete abolition of the income tax. He is Co-Chairman of a national organization with this as its objective.

The airwaves in Arkansas and Mississippi are being swamped with right wing propaganda featuring attacks upon the labor unions and the national administration. Three of those we hear most in this area are "Lifeline" featuring Wayne Poucher, another protege of H. L. Hunt, -- Dan Smoot's Facts Forum, and Dean Clarence Manion's, Manion's Forum. Financed by Hunt and some segments of big business, these programs are reaching saturation intensity in some areas --the Shreveport area is one that comes to mind. Many of these programs are run by the stations as a so-called "public service".

One of their principal objectives is to brainwash the people into believing that unions are "un-American". No section of the country is receiving such a massive dose of anti-union and ultra-right wing propaganda as the South.

Here then is another reason why union organization and COPE effort is so difficult in this area. A massive well-financed propaganda campaign against unions is reaching into every home in this area. You have not had the funds to counteract these sinister forces. But you must find and provide them if unionism is to progress.

The people must be told that the greatest counter movement in the world today is the free trade union movement. The way to really combat communism is to strike at the conditions on which it feeds. Communism is making strides in those parts of the world where workers have no jobs or else must work long hours for starvation wages -- where they are forced to live in hovels and see their children go to bed hungry. These are the areas where communism is a great threat --. Where a free and active trade union movement is bringing fair working conditions, adequate wages and decent housing, communism is on the wane.

I do not deprecate the military threat of communism or the dangerous appeal of its ideology to the under developed nations of the world. But the way to fight communism is not the way of the extreme right. The military threat of communism cannot be met by abolition of the income tax. The ideological threat cannot be met by destruction of free trade unionism and by convincing the people that their President, his Cabinet and the Supreme Court are dangerous subversives.

Robert Welch has gone so far as to label President Eisenhower a "conscious agent of the communist conspiracy". Among others dubbed by Mr. Welch as "hidden communists" are Chester Bowles, the late Eleanor Roosevelt, Walter Reuther, and even Harry Truman. That this sort of claptrap is being accepted by major industrialists and even some military leaders is almost incomprehensible. But it is. What is more - they are spending millions to peddle it to the public at large.

The other day I was shocked to read that the Birchist faction had virtually taken over the Young Republican organization in California. California voted Republican in the last presidential election. It is now the most populous state in the union. The darling of the Birchists is Barry Goldwater. It is no accident that he is one of the greatest enemies of organized labor on the political scene today.

Labor must take positive steps to combat these sinister forces at work in our society. These have even alarmed such a certified conservative as President Eisenhower. In his last speech as President, he issued the following dire warning to the American people:

> "The conjunction of an immense military establishment and a large arms industry is new in the American experience. The total influence -- economic, political, even spiritual -- is felt in every city, every state house, every office in the Federal Government. We must not fail to comprehend its grave implications. We must guard against the acquisition of unwarranted influence, whether sought or unsought, by the military-industrial complex."

LABOR AND CIVIL LIBERTIES

by Harry Fleischman

Organized labor learned the need for civil liberties the hard way. As early as 1806, when Philadelphia shoemakers went on strike, they were brought on trial and found guilty for forming "a combination and conspiracy to raise their wages." In 1894, in the Pullman strike, a labor injunction—called by union leader Eugene Debs a "Gatling gun on paper"—helped crush the strike and smash the American Railway Union. Lockouts, blacklists, yellow-dog contracts, labor spies to undermine and betray unions and the use of troops and deputized thugs to terrorize workers and organizers were all part of the employer arsenal in the past.

Even today, as the last AFL-CIO convention pointed out, "freedom of speech, assembly, association and solicitation of membership for union organizers and factory workers are virtually non-existent in the rural South and all efforts to exercise these rights have been and are being frustrated, despite the guarantees of the Constitution." In 1961, two organizers of the American Federation of Hosiery Workers were brutally beaten by hoodlums in Ellijay, Georgia, and then arrested for "fighting, disorderly conduct, inciting a riot and soliciting membership without a license." A union organizer was beaten and kidnaped by a mob in Franklinton, North Carolina, while the city police and the county sheriff turned their backs. When two organizers of the Textile Workers Union of America were knifed in Fitzgerald, Georgia, police blandly wrote this incident off with a report that they got into a fight and knifed each other.

The right to dissent, to hold unpopular views, to try to convince others and change existing practices by peaceful and lawful means is the very cornerstone of American liberty, laid down 40 years before the Declaration of Independence in the celebrated trial of Peter Zenger.

Zenger, an obscure German immigrant, was thrown into jail for printing in his small newspaper, the New York Weekly World, articles criticizing the governor of the colony. To his defense came 80-year-old Andrew Hamilton, one of the most prominent attorneys in the colonies, who traveled from Philadelphia to deliver his eloquent and successful plea to the jury. It was not just the cause of a poor printer he was defending, Hamilton explained, but the cause of human liberty—"the liberty both of exposing and opposing arbitrary power . . . by speaking and writing the truth."

Yet while every AFL-CIO convention has unanimously passed tough resolutions in defense of civil liberties, there are grounds for believing there is a gap between the positions taken at conventions and the views of rank and file unionists.

Back in 1954 the Fund for the Republic polled 5,000 rank and file Americans and 1,500 community leaders on their attitudes on communists and civil liberties. The survey's results were included in a fact-packed book, "Communists, Conformity and Civil Liberties," by Harvard Professor Samuel A. Stouffer. It included data on 1,500 rank and file unionists and local union leaders.

The next year a group of union education directors conducted polls of local union leaders at 14 union leadership training institutes. Questionnaires were filled out, without any discussion, by 647 union shop stewards, committeemen, local union presidents and other union leaders. Since then, similar polls have been conducted at union institutes, several as late as 1962, polling some 600 local union leaders at nine institutes.

The remarkable thing about all these polls was that the percentage varied only slightly.

HARRY FLEISCHMAN stresses civil liberties and civil rights in a column he writes as director of the National Labor Service, American Jewish Committee. He is co-author of the AFL-CIO booklet, "Security, Civil Liberties and Unions."

What were the results? True, the local union leaders scored high on their devotion to equal treatment of all, regardless of race, religion or national origin. More than nine out of ten insisted that unions should enforce equal opportunity in respect to apprenticeship training and job promotions. But they displayed considerably less enthusiasm for the traditional American principles embodied in the Bill of Rights. Their tolerance of people whose ideas and opinions differed from their own was lukewarm at best.

What is meant by "tolerance?" It does not necessarily mean approval. Tolerance means that, even if we disagree with other people's opinions, we uphold the civil liberties extended to them by the Constitution and the laws of the United States.

President George Meany of the AFL-CIO has stressed that "everyone devoted to democracy and human dignity must draw a sharp line of distinction between the democratic socialists and the totalitarian communists. One need not accept the doctrines of democratic socialism to realize that its adherents are true democrats who are uncompromising enemies of communism and all other forms of dictatorship. As a matter of fact, democratic socialists have often shared with free trade unionists the honor of being the first and main target of communist hostility, abuse, persecution and liquidation." And yet two out of five local trade union leaders would keep a socialist from teaching and one out of five would expel a socialist from his local union.

Although the Bill of Rights declares that Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion or prohibiting the free exercise thereof, more than half of our local union leaders would deny an atheist the right to teach and one out of four would keep him out of the local union.

As to communists, four-fifths of local union leaders would prevent them from teaching. Two out of three would strip American-born communists of their American citizenship.

Interestingly, less than half of the local union leaders would jail admitted communists. Apparently they feel that loss of citizenship is a smaller penalty than a jail sentence. Moreover, while five out of six would fire a communist working in a defense plant, more than half feel that communists should be allowed to work in non-defense jobs such as clerking in a store.

During the McCarthy period, labor was fearful of the witchhunts which spread throughout the land. While labor has hailed such investigations as the LaFollette probe into labor spying, AFL-CIO spokesmen have criticized "loosely-conducted congressional investigations where unfounded accusations and unproved charges had the effect of character assassination of good, loyal Americans." These inquiries were criticized as wandering from any proper legislative purpose into attempts "to enforce uniformity of opinions and to stifle the traditional American right to dissent." Yet two-thirds of local union leaders polled insisted that Congress should investigate political beliefs and associations in order to determine whether they are "un-American."

While the local union leader may not rise to the defense of an abstract principle of freedom, he tends to identify with individual victims and to respond far more affirmatively to redress specific violations of civil liberties. Thus although a majority supported security tests in other than sensitive posts, nine out of ten local union leaders supported the right of those accused as security risks under federal security programs to confront and cross-examine their accusers. Perhaps the strong support for this position comes from labor's vigorous activity against abuses in the various government security programs, as well as from the publicity some cases have received in the nation's press and on TV. Among cases enlisting their sympathy were the following:

- One "risk" was accused of "leftwing talk." What he had actually said was: "I would rather be a second-class citizen in Mississippi than a first-class citizen in Russia."
- Another man was accused of teaching languages to "persons of the Russian embassy and Russian soldiers." He had taught Russian to U.S. Army and Navy officers during World War II.
- A Negro worker defending himself against "security" charges was asked whether he favored "the mixing of Negroes and whites."
- Another worker was asked if he had dated Japanese girls during the Korean War.

When former Republican Senator Harry Cain was Chairman of the Subversive Activities Control Board, he charged that the incompetence of many government security officers was at least as dangerous as conscious sabotage. Among the derogatory information they placed against American citizens, some of it in formal charges, according to the Providence Journal Bulletin, were:

- Testimony by a neighbor who said he saw the subject on several occasions walking around his own home without clothes on.
- Statements that blood in blood banks should not be segregated by race.
- Evidence of contributions to the United Jewish Appeal.

Other stupidities of security officers included the suspension of a bachelor for "having a communist wife." A defense plant engineer was suspended because the security officer charged that he and his wife teamed up to make streetcorner communist speeches in 1939—when the husband was 15, the wife 11 years old and when they lived in different cities.

The American Legion reported a member was fired from his government job because his wife accused him of personal misconduct. Later the wife was fired from her government job because it was found that she lied about her husband. But the government refused to reinstate the husband because being accused in public was considered sufficient grounds for dismissal in his particular department.

In one of the classic cases, a unionist was declared a "security risk" because he was too active a union man! As Jim Schuetz told the Senate Subcommittee on Constitutional Rights recently, he had worked at Bell Aircraft since 1940. Chairman of the United Auto Workers' local stewards' council, he had held a government security clearance since 1946. In late 1950, Schuetz was called into the Army Air Force office at Bell and handed a letter withdrawing his security clearance. As a "security risk," the company then told him, he no longer could be employed at Bell.

After the union appealed, Schuetz learned months later that his clearance had been withdrawn because of "picketline offenses" in the Bell Aircraft strike a year and a half earlier, which the hearing board said had shown "poor discretion" and "lack of responsibility." Schuetz was not disloyal or subversive, they said, but they implied he was too active and militant a union man. When the hearing board refused to restore his clearance, UAW officers and the Workers Defense League took the case to the Secretary of Defense in Washington. Five months after he was fired, Schuetz was cleared of the "security risk" tag and reinstated on the job. But even then, it took almost a year to get his back pay.

In another case, when Julius P. Alston was denounced as a security risk and pulled off his job at the Lockheed missiles plant in Van Nuys, Calif., which makes the Polaris missile, the government kept identity of his accusers secret. The International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers helped him disprove the anonymous security risk charge that cost him his job back in April 1959. Union representative Hal Shean went with Alston before a hearing board in June 1959. Alston then learned that charges against him arose because he worked for an arms plant in Connecticut where communist infiltration had taken place 17 years ago. It took another 17 months to clear Alston even though Alston, with Shean's aid, showed at the hearing that the charge against him was groundless. His reinstatement order entitled Alston to $9,000 back pay.

Six days after the Alston hearing, the U. S. Supreme Court held the government's industrial security program invalid in an 8-to-1 decision because denial of confrontation and cross examination of government witnesses, without statutory authority, was illegal. Former President Eisenhower issued an executive order restoring the program with some changes to meet the court's decision, but did not apply the confrontation and cross examination principles to all cases. A bill to back up that executive order with congressional sanction went down to defeat in the last Congress as labor pitched in, along with other liberal forces and a small group of Republicans, to point up its dangers.

American labor traditionally has opposed blacklisting as an unmitigated evil. Labor history is full of examples of active union men fired from jobs because of union activity and blacklisted so they could find no other jobs in their trades. That is why unions campaigned so vigorously for a clause in the Wagner Act to make blacklisting illegal.

During the McCarthy era, a different kind of blacklist ran rampant—the exclusion of actors, writers and others in the entertainment industries because of alleged involvement with communist or communist-front groups. Blacklisters cowed the radio and television industry—networks and stations, sponsors and advertising agencies, even the performers' union—into accepting "political reliability" as a qualification for employment in broadcasting. In part, this was a reaction to earlier communist influence in the entertainment world, where communists and fellow travelers had worked together to blacklist anti-communist writers and actors.

In the mid-fifties, John Henry Faulk, a radio-TV personality earning $36,000 a year as a humorist, decided the blacklist wasn't funny. With several other entertainers he ran for office in the New York local of the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists (AFTRA) on a slate opposing both communism and blacklisting. When the slate won, a blacklisting newsletter, AWARE, charged that Faulk had attended some communist-front meetings years before. The late Lawrence Johnson, owner of a super-

The Bill of Rights

Congress of the United States, begun and held at the City of New-York, on Wednesday the fourth of March, one thousand seven hundred and eighty nine.

THE Conventions of a number of the States, having at the time of their adopting the Constitution, expressed a desire, in order to prevent misconstruction or abuse of its powers, that further declaratory and restrictive clauses should be added: And as extending the ground of public confidence in the Government, will best ensure the beneficent ends of its institution.

RESOLVED by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, two thirds of both Houses concurring, that the following Articles be proposed to the Legislatures of the several States as amendments to the Constitution of the United States; all or any of which Articles, when ratified by three fourths of the said Legislatures, to be valid to all intents and purposes, as part of the said Constitution, viz.

ARTICLES in addition to, and amendment of the Constitution of the United States of America, proposed by Congress, and ratified by the Legislatures of the several States, pursuant to the fifth Article of the original Constitution.

Article the first. After the first enumeration required by the first Article of the Constitution, there shall be one Representative for every thirty thousand, until the number shall amount to one hundred, after which the proportion shall be so regulated by Congress, that there shall be not less than one hundred Representatives, nor less than one Representative for every forty thousand persons market chain in Syracuse, N. Y., circulated AWARE's attack among Faulk's sponsors, threatening to remove their products from his stores. The sponsors deserted in droves.

Instead of bowing supinely to AWARE's power, Faulk sued AWARE, Johnson and Vincent H. Hartnett, author of the attack, for libel. Things happened fast. The Columbia Broadcasting System failed to renew Faulk's contract. Stations outside New York offered to hire him only if he dropped his suit. Faulk moved to Texas and opened a small public relations agency to try to keep going.

Finally, last year, when attorney Louis Nizer proved the AWARE charges were untrue, a jury awarded Faulk the unprecedented sum of $3.5 million in compensatory and punitive damages. How much he will collect is uncertain since multi-millionaire Johnson died just as the case went to the jury and a legal question exists as to whether his estate is responsible for his share of the damages. In the light of the Faulk verdict, other individuals similarly victimized may be expected to take similar legal action against their attackers.

Still another area of great concern to labor is the widespread use of wiretapping. As the law now stands, the Communications Act of 1934 makes it a federal crime for anybody, police included, to put a wiretap on somebody's telephone and disclose what was heard. The Supreme Court recently has ruled, in Mapp v. Ohio, that illegally obtained evidence may not be used in state or federal courts. Whether that ruling will eventually bar the use of wiretap evidence in all state courts is not yet settled.

To be able to move at top speed, the Justice Department now wants a law permitting the use of wiretap information in cases involving national security without having to request a court order. In cases where bribery, extortion, kidnapping or murder are suspected, the law would require specific court orders for permission to tap and use the evidence. State and local authorities have urged even wider use of wiretaps, leading the American Civil Liberties Union to demand a complete ban on wiretapping because "innumerable innocent people will have their privacy invaded by officials who, as Justice Brandeis said, at their best are 'men of zeal, well-meaning but without understanding' and, at their worst, susceptible to graft, corruption, extortion and other improprieties." The AFL-CIO, recognizing that wiretapping constitutes a serious threat to personal liberties and that technological developments have made it very difficult to control, has urged a law permitting wiretapping only to federal agents, under specific court orders, in an area clearly defined to cover espionage, treason and kidnapping. All other taps should be banned, said the last AFL-CIO convention, including a prohibition on divulging tapped information at congressional hearings.

In 1637, a stubborn English bookseller named John Lilburne stood trial before a star chamber, charged with having brought certain anti-religious books into Britain. Because he refused to testify against himself, he was sentenced to be whipped.

In 1641, the House of Commons voted this sentence "illegal and against the liberty of the subject." Lilburne's fight established in the English-speaking world the principle that no man should be compelled to bear witness against himself or be tortured into confession. This safeguard was later written into the American Bill of Rights as the Fifth Amendment to the U. S. Constitution.

The Fifth Amendment states in pretty plain language that in a criminal trial no man is required to testify against himself. It also includes the provision that "no person shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law"—that is, without a fair trial. These principles go hand in hand with the assumption that a man is innocent until proved guilty.

Communists and fellow travelers have, of course, made frequent use of the Fifth Amendment. Newspapers headline cases of "Fifth Amendment Communist," "Fifth Amendment Teachers," "Fifth Amendment Gangsters" and "Fifth Amendment Racketeers." As a result, many people forget that the Fifth Amendment was put in the Bill of Rights not as an "escape hatch" for the guilty, but to protect the innocent.

The Fifth Amendment has been called "one of the greatest privileges a free people can possess." Like the rest of the Bill of Rights, it is a symbol of democracy. There were no such safeguards in fascist Italy or Nazi Germany. There is no Fifth Amendment in communist Russia.

"The reason for the guarantee is of such overwhelming importance," wrote President A. J. Hayes of the International Association of Machinists, in his union journal, "that few people would seriously contend we should abandon it and revert to the old practice, still used by communist and fascist dictators, of extracting confessions by physical and mental torture. Indeed, the Fifth Amendment is one of the basic concepts of freedom which distinguishes our form of government from communism and fascism."

Nevertheless, in October 1953 the Eisenhower security order was amended to state that any person who pleads the Fifth Amendment is automatically a "security risk" and not eligible for work on classified government materials. Some companies even dismiss any employe who has claimed the Fifth in a court case or hearing, whether he is working on defense contracts or not.

The courts have ruled that pleading the Fifth Amendment may not be interpreted as a confession of guilt. In a recent decision, the U. S. Supreme Court declared:

". . . The privilege against self-incrimination would be reduced to a hollow mockery if its exercise could be taken as equivalent either to a confession of guilt or a conclusive presumption of perjury.

". . . A witness may have a reasonable fear of prosecution and yet be innocent of any wrongdoing. The privilege serves to protect the innocent who otherwise might be ensnared by ambiguous circumstances."

There are many reasons which may lead an innocent man to plead the Fifth. He may fear becoming involved in a case although he has committed no crime. He may be frightened and plead the Fifth to avoid further questioning. He may feel that whatever he says will be a link in the chain of his own prosecution.

In April 1956, the Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of the Immunity Act, which permits the government to grant witnesses immunity against prosecution and force them to testify in national security cases. Under the law the government may subpoena a man to the witness stand and make him testify against himself and former associates. If he refuses, he can go to jail for contempt of Congress.

An editorial in The Wall Street Journal argued: "The law flies directly in the face of the Fifth Amendment, for the granting of immunity from prosecution is only another way to force a person to testify against himself or go to jail. No one can say what future prosecution may flow from forced testimony."

Three Bethlehem Steel employes—in plants which had no defense contracts—were fired when they pleaded the Fifth Amendment before a congressional committee. The Steelworkers Union took the case to arbitration but lost. Furthermore, the workers were refused unemployment benefits on the grounds that they had been fired for "just cause."

The executive board of the Steelworkers declared that invoking the Fifth Amendment "standing alone cannot be the basis . . . for failure of the union to protect employe rights under a collective bargaining agreement, including the right to be free from unilateral and arbitrary disciplinary action or discharge."

The International Union of Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, the Newspaper Guild, the American Federation of Teachers and the United Auto Workers also have stated they would not go along with dismissals based solely on the fact that a worker claimed the privilege of the Fifth Amendment. If a local union has reason to believe that the individual in question is actually a communist, these national unions declare, he should be tried under local union procedure.

"From Jesus' injunction to swear not at all," noted Gordon M. Browne, Jr., past president of Local 460 of the American Federation of Teachers, "through the U. S. Supreme Court decision in Cummings vs. Missouri in 1867, which held that a test oath denying employment to non-signers was a bill of attainder and specifically forbidden by the Constitution, oaths have been despised and resisted. They have been the tool of tyrants seeking to coerce conformity, often on matters of religious belief."

Yet in the postwar era the prevalence of test oaths has grown mightily. Churches and other organizations in California enjoying tax exemption once were required to swear their corporate loyalty to preserve their tax exempt status. All over the country, teachers have been forced to sign non-communist oaths. Students must sign such oaths to receive federal aid grants. The Christian Century reported that a new subscriber had offered with his check a non-communist oath which he wanted the editor to sign for himself and all his employes before accepting the subscriber's money.

What have the oaths accomplished? They invariably are presented as a weapon against subversion, but communists and other totalitarians would have no hesitation in signing such an oath. After all, Lenin told them that lying, stealing and murder were justified because the end justified the means. The scores of teachers and professors who have been fired or forced to resign for refusal to sign such oaths have been people opposed to the oath on principle. The oath has punished no subversives but has made thornier the path of the non-conformist.

"But if you're not a subversive, why not swear loyalty to your country?" This is the classic question to which the only answer is "If we must suspect each other and be reassured only by oaths, how can a free society function?" Teachers have been special targets of oaths because their influence during the formative years of a child's development has been viewed with anxiety by oath proponents. Teachers, of course, resent such attention. They feel no more inclined to subversion than doctors or bankers—yet doctors are not asked to swear that they are not abortionists or bankers that they are not embezzlers.

What are some of the other civil liberties issues of concern to the trade union movement? Censorship and the McCarran Act are among them. The defeated Cunningham amendment to the postal rate revision bill would have banned from international and domestic mail all matter determined by the Attorney General to be communist political propaganda. The last AFL-CIO convention opposed such attempt at censorship, rejecting "the totalitarian philosophy that some government officials can judge better than the people themselves what they shall read, see or hear." Herblock, the political cartoonist, echoed this view when he suggested: "It seems to me that we were all better off when the postal department used to deliver mail and left it to a Higher Authority to deliver us from evil."

Junius Scales, a former Communist Party organizer arrested under the Smith Act in 1954, was found guilty of active and knowing membership in the Communist Party and sentenced to six years in jail. During the seven years the case was being considered by various appeals courts, a great deal happened in the world—and to Junius Scales. In 1957 Scales quit the party. In 1961, his conviction was upheld by the U.S. Supreme Court in a 5-4 decision. (On the same day the Court threw out the conviction of John F. Noto, an admitted and continuing party functionary, on the ground that the government had failed to present sufficient evidence of "illegal party advisory.") No other Communist Party member, past or present, has been convicted on the same charge that put Scales behind bars.

As The Washington Post put it: "What a laugh this must give the commies! The government of the United States . . . in effect joins hands with [communists] to punish an ex-member whom they hate for his apostasy. Moreover the absurdity of this paradox is heightened when one reflects that Scales is being punished for a political crime—holding bad beliefs and bad associations—which most Americans like to believe is punishable only in communist countries. If President Kennedy were to pardon Scales, he would be tempering justice not only with mercy but with equity and common sense as well."

And this did happen; in a series of Christmas amnesties, Kennedy set Scales free in commuting his term.

Last year, the U. S. Supreme Court, also by a 5 to 4 vote, upheld the constitutionality of the key clause of the Internal Security Act (popularly titled the McCarran Act). The U. S. Communist Party was ordered to register as the agent of a foreign power. When the party refused, it was indicted and was recently tried along with several of its leaders. A number of organizations, including one union, were designated "communist-infiltrated" as defined by the Act and prosecutions are pending. Several publications are under orders to label themselves as communist and are threatened with prosecution if they don't.

The four Supreme Court justices who dissented in the McCarran Act decision said:

". . . the freedoms of speech, press, petition and assembly guaranteed by the First Amendment must be accorded to the ideas we hate or sooner or later they will be denied to the ideas we cherish. The first banning of an association because it advocates hated ideas—whether that association be called a political party or not—marks a fateful moment in the history of a free country.

". . . Now, when this country is trying to spread the high ideals of democracy all over the world—ideals that are revolutionary in many countries—seems to be a particularly inappropriate time to stifle First Amendment freedoms in this country. The same arguments that are used to justify the outlawry of communist ideas here could be used to justify the outlawry of the ideas of democracy in other nations.

". . . This widespread program for punishing ideas on the ground that they might endanger the internal security of the nation not only sadly fails to protect that security but also diverts our energies and thoughts from the many far more important problems that face us as a nation in this troubled world."

It has been noted that on many of the civil liberties issues confronting the nation there seems to be a gap between labor's official views and the attitudes of local union leaders and the rank and file. Nor is it only unionists who share such limited views of democracy. A Purdue University poll of teenage opinions reveals that more than half of our high school students believe that wiretapping and the third degree should be legalized to help the police maintain obedience and that police should censor books, movies, radio and TV to shield citizens from improper thinking. Moreover, 41 percent would abolish freedom of the press and 34 percent would deny freedom of speech to people who hold unpopular views. Indeed, Chief Justice Earl Warren of the U. S. Supreme Court said several years ago that he doubted the Bill of Rights would win approval if it were submitted to this generation of Americans in a referendum.

In every union leadership training institute where civil liberties questionnaires were distributed, the replies—filled out without discussion—were disheartening. Yet in every case, after open discussion on the issues, support for civil liberties soared dramatically. Nor was this due to an indoctrination process of lecturing about the "right" answers. What was done was to elicit from the local union leaders their definition of democracy. Invariably, this included not only rule by the majority but protection of the rights of the minority—including freedom of speech, press, assembly and worship. Then as discussion was requested on the specific items in the questionnaire—and the students were asked how their answers related to the definition of democracy they had worked out—they realized the indivisibility of freedom.

When they understand the issues, American workers wholeheartedly support the principles of freedom and democracy. But how to bring about that understanding? Civil liberties should be stressed in labor's schools, press and meetings. And since union members only reflect the prejudices of the communities of which they are a part, labor must push for more intensive education in public schools and in all institutions on the values of democracy.

"Tougher Line" of Southern Companies Calls for Greater Union Efforts

Hard-won gains have been made in the Southeastern states despite "a tougher line" of opposition to organized labor than has been seen in many years, Director Lorne H. Nelles told delegates to the Sixteenth District Conference of District 35 at Roanoke, Va.

The two-day conference, at the Hotel Roanoke, heard a special message on tape-recording from President David J. McDonald, plus speakers from the USWA departments in Pittsburgh and Washington, and elected new members to the International Wage Policy Committee.

Besides Director Nelles, delegates heard Meyer Bernstein of the USWA's International Affairs Department, George Binsted of the union's Arbitration Department, Director Oral Garrison of District 36-G, and Frank N. Hoffmann, legislative director.

Here is the report of Director Nelles to the conference:

"We are meeting at a time of great international tension which affects our country and our union.

"Our nation has the responsibility of world leadership among the nations of the free world.

"The United Steelworkers of America will play a very important part in supporting President Kennedy to meet successfully the worldwide challenge of communism by improving our economy at home and abroad. It is a well-known fact that communism thrives only in countries where a large percentage of the population suffers from disease and hunger.

"In the United States there are powerful financial anti-union groups, such as the Chamber of Commerce, National Association of Manufacturers, 'Right-to-Work' Committees and many others who are working continually on a program to years. They have fought organization of their people with every trick, every intimidation and every advantage given them by the Taft-Hartley and Landrum-Griffin bills. As a result, elections for union representation have often had unhappy results. And we have found that, even after we have won elections by strong majorities, in too many instances management has made a mockery of collective bargaining by refusing to negotiate in good faith and even inviting strikes, in order to break the morale of its employes and destroy the union.

"Fortunately, the picture is not all dark. From a large number of efforts to bring the benefits of unionism to unorganized workers in the South, we have been able to wrest a few precious gains.

"In the Carolinas, we have been happy to welcome workers from two new locals in South Carolina—Local 6196 at Virginia Steel Company in Starr, S. C., near Anderson; and Local 6232 at the Greenville Steel and Foundry Company.

"In Georgia, although we won elections at Bridgeport Brass in Moultrie and at the Kawneer Company in Jonesboro, bitter opposition by the management has both these situations involved in unfair practice charges before the National Labor Relations Board.

"In Tennessee, we have found some measure of organizing success across the state. One new local—Number 5997—at the National Casket Company in Erwin, Tenn., was welcomed to our ranks just before our previous conference in November 1960. In the Chattanooga area Local 6170 at the Lloyd E. Jones Company joined our ranks and has made progress in contract benefits. Over in Memphis the employes of Excel Smelting Company have joined the ranks of Steelworkers in that area.

"From Virginia, we have had news since our last conference of two important victories for the kind of sound, responsible trade-unionism our union represents. Employes of the H. K. Porter Company at Danville voted two-to-one in favor of the United Steelworkers as their union. At Lynchburg the employes at Montague Betts Company cast their majority votes for the Steelworkers to represent them. And in one of our most heartening elections, the workers at the Lynchburg Foundry plant in Radford turned thumbs down on the attempt by the Mineworkers District 50 to raid a solid local union. They turned it down by a thumping vote of 345 to 64!

* * * *

"WE ARE PROUD of the loyalty and trust of these good union members. To all the officers of our local unions, to the delegates assembled here, to all their fellow members, to the staff representatives of the United Steelworkers in District 35, and to the hard-working committees in local unions who made all this possible, I extend in behalf of our International officers and myself our heartfelt thanks and congratulations."

"No Second-Class Industrial Citizenship," McDonald Tells District 35 Conference

Here is the tape-recorded message which delegates to the District 35 conference in Roanoke heard from President David J. McDonald:

"I genuinely regret that the extreme pressure of duties of paramount importance to our union prevents me from being present and accounted for at the 16th Conference of District 35.

"So I took the only alternative left and chose this method of communicating directly with you in order to examine our joint triumphs and troubles as candidly as I can.

"The past 12 months have witnessed some rather spectacular advances and unprecedented breakthroughs by your union. Some directly benefit you and segments of the membership you represent. For the others, the advance is yet to be made. And I pledge you, without reservation, that it will be made—despite the opposition and immense power mounted by anti-labor employers in many of the areas where you work and live.

"I recognize, too, that with the triumphs there is a darker side. It

"In the United States there are powerful financial anti-union groups, such as the Chamber of Commerce, National Association of Manufacturers, 'Right-to-Work' Committees and many others who are working continually on a program to destroy all labor unions, predicated on the assumption that unions are bad for America. We must meet the challenge with a firm determination to organize all non-union workers and to fight to maintain and improve our present labor agreements.

* * * *

"OUR UNION, the United Steelworkers of America, is dedicated to the proposition of eliminating substandard living conditions in our country or wherever they exist in the world. This is our responsibility and as citizens and free trade unionists, we must meet this challenge.

"Since our last conference, the opposition of anti-union employers in the South has taken a tougher line than we have witnessed in many Relations Board.

and troubles as candidly as I can.

triumphs there is a darker side. It

WAGE POLICY committeemen elected at the Roanoke conference talk things over (at right) with Director Lorne H. Nelles. They are (left to right) Sam Murphy, Local 309; Mr. Nelles; Harold D. McIver, Local 2401, and W. D. (Andy) Anderson, Local 2556.

New Wage Policy Committee In District 8

WAGE POLICY COMMITTEEMEN elected to represent United Steelworkers of America District 8 are shown above with Director Albert Atallah. The new members of the International Union policy making body were chosen by District 8 delegates attending a half-day conference in Baltimore, Md., last month. From the left are: Director Atallah; Neal Crowder, Local 2609; Paul Albert, Local 6221; John A. Cook, Local 3016; Lawrence Evering, Local 3185, and Julian Ross, Local 5054. The wage policy vote always highlights district conferences.

embraces the harrowing uncertainties of joblessness, or job insecurity. But, far worse, it also includes in your areas, fierce and often illegal opposition to the formation of a union and the arrogant refusal to bargain responsibly with your union once it has been formed and won recognition.

* * * *

"MY FRIENDS, this hostility to the advancement of man is not only anti-labor. It is anti-American. I say to you that we will not tolerate a condition which seeks to maintain an economic-social Mason-Dixon Line, which would preserve industrial slavery on one side against the advance of industrial emancipation on the other.

"I should like to elaborate on the industrial emancipation I have in mind and which your union has done so much to enhance in the past year.

"Slightly less than a year ago your union negotiated peaceably

Continued from Ole Miss.

LABOR

An 18-year-old boy went to sleep. A marshal pulled him up, hit him on the forehead with a club, two other marshals joined them, pushed the boy against the wall, struck him in the throat and jabbed him in the groin with clubs.

A captive's hands became cramped and one of his hands dropped off his knees. One marshal hit him across the back with a club and another jabbed him in the kidney.

Medicine required by one captive was confiscated. A disabled veteran begged the marshals for his medicine (required to prevent jerking and blackout spells) and they refused to give it to him. When he suffered from one such spell for lack of medicine, he was manhandled and clubbed.

A young boy went to sleep. He was first beaten on the floor by the marshals, then they stood him up against the wall and beat him some more, and when his father protested, he was also beaten.

A sophomore, after having been held in the lyceum building all night, had been beaten about the body and beaten so badly on the head that 16 stitches were taken in the wound. After being released, he was again seized and taken to the garage. When, through loss of blood and exhaustion, he was unable to maintain the required position on the torture slab, he was twice clubbed on the back by the marshals.

One prisoner who was ill begged for his medicine and was refused, and he passed out twice and each time the marshals kicked him in the mouth and forced him to sit back in the required position.

A disabled veteran had a pin in his knee so that he could not bend it up under his chin. The marshals changed shifts every 2 hours. Several times he was beaten on this leg by marshals when they saw it extended in the row.

DORMITORIES GASSED

Mr. FOX stated that the remainder of the report being finalized will be filed within a week and that it will reveal that dormitories to which students had withdrawn when the violence erupted in the early evening of Sunday, September 30, were deliberately gassed by the penitentiary guards, border patrolmen and other deputy marshals. He stated that the report will reveal that "this deliberate gassing of the dormitories forced the students out upon the campus, where they were mistreated as will be detailed in the final report. The dormitories which were gassed by the marshals included Faulkner Hall, Garland Hall, DuPree Hall, Barr Hall, Howry Hall, LaBauve Hall, and Odom Hall. The pattern of gassing the dormitories was observed by the university police, dormitory managers, Lt. Gov. Paul Johnson and many others who have testified under oath before the committee. Canisters of tear gas were thrown by the marshals into several dormitories and they heavily gassed other dormitories by throwing gas canisters and shooting gas projectiles into the quadrangles formed by the halls so that the dormitories would be filled with gas."

Mr. FOX further stated that "disorganized groups of deputy marshals roamed the campus in groups of from 8 to 15, shooting gas projectiles and throwing gas canisters promiscuously at students, members of the university staff, including Dean L. L. Love, university police, and highway patrolmen upon sight, without regard to their location or actions."

TREATMENT OF STUDENTS AND OTHER CITIZENS IN THE LYCEUM BUILDING BASEMENT

The committee found that a pattern of brutalities was also followed by the Justice Department in its treatment of students and others who were seized and imprisoned in the basement of the lyceum building on the campus Sunday night and during the day Monday; that at one time there were between 100 and 150 persons crowded into this room which was 17 by 40 feet, and during a part of the time the room was badly contaminated with gas, the marshals wearing gas masks, but the students were held for hours in this gas-contaminated basement without masks. The report stated that "prisoners were held in this basement up to as much as 18 hours, through the night of the 30th and the day of October 1, and some were then transferred to the soil sedimentation garage and handled there as outlined elsewhere in this report. Prisoners who were bleeding after having been badly beaten and in need of medical treatment asked repeatedly for a doctor, but were held for as much as 6 hours without being given any medical attention. Requests to use the telephone, to be permitted to go to the toilet, or to call a lawyer, were frequently met with either begin knocked to the floor with fists or hit with billies. Later captives were permitted to go to the toilet and, upon demand of the university authorities, to use the telephone. While some of the prisoners were permitted to sleep sitting on the floor, others were kicked by the marshals when they went to sleep. Some of the students taken to the lyceum basement were forced to tiptoe leaning forward against the wall with their backs to the marshals, and then were either beaten on their backs, or their legs were kicked out from under them after having been struck on the legs with clubs. A number of students, as they were taken down to the lyceum basement, were hit on the shins with the butts of the marshals' sidearms or jabbed in the back with their clubs. Students were spit upon and repeatedly cursed by the marshals. From time to time at the end of the hall leading to the basement the students were struck severely on the shins, jabbed, or hit on the back with night sticks or kicked on the legs."

TREATMENT OF STUDENTS ON THE CAMPUS MONDAY MORNING AFTER ORDER WAS RESTORED

Mr. FOX stated that the sworn testimony revealed "after students going from their dormitories to classes had been searched in plain view of a military group, they would then be forced by such group to lie spread eagle on the ground with faces in the dirt while they were again searched at gunpoint."

The committee findings concerning the treatment of students on Monday included:

"Students passing along the campus to go to classes were treated as the junior going to his thermodynamics class in the engineering building who made a remark to several deputy marshals concerning the mess the campus was in. He was seized by two marshals, his arms were twisted behind his back, he was hit in the back with a billy, cursed, taken to the Lyceum basement and, as he walked toward the basement, a marshal on each side kicked him in the shins. A billy was forced between his legs and he was struck on the testicles.

"Students were beaten or jabbed with night sticks or billies. Students who were seized, after being taken to the lyceum building, were forced to lean forward against the wall with their hands over their heads on the wall and then their feet kicked out from under them. They were beaten with clubs on their shins and ankle bones.

"Students from other schools were found asleep on the campus in the early morning, were hit on their legs, backs or heads with billies. One was awakened, forced to stand with his legs apart, beaten on both the inside and outside of his legs, and struck in his crotch and his groin.

"The above general patterns of conduct occurred after all disturbance had been quieted on the campus of the University of Mississippi."

RACIAL DISCRIMINATION IN THE UNIONS: AN EXCHANGE BETWEEN THE ILGWU AND THE NAACP

(Mr. CURTIS (at the request of Mr. KUNKEL) was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. CURTIS. Mr. Speaker, early this Congress, January 31, I made a speech on the floor of the House—CONGRESSIONAL RECORD, January 31, 1963, pages 1495–1499—in conjunction with a number of speeches given that day on the subject of civil rights. In this speech I called attention to the difficulties that Negroes were experiencing in getting jobs. Our incidence of unemployment is highest among the young workers and among the country's Negro minority; where these two factors meet—the young Negro workers just entering the labor market—we find our severest unemployment problem.

As part of that speech I included a statement which had been presented by Mr. Herbert Hill, labor secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, to the House Education and Labor Committee on the subject of racial discrimination in the labor unions of this country. I also included a letter which I had written Secretary of Labor Willard Wirtz forwarding a copy of Mr. Hill's testimony to him, asking him what action would be taken by the Department on this subject.

Thus the question has been referred to the two proper governmental bodies—the Department of Labor and the Education and Labor Committee—to be followed up, and both have failed to do so. The pages of the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD offer a second way to get into the details of this matter, a poor second I might say to the investigative process of either the Department or the committee, but in the face of the inactivity of these more adequate forums I am using the CONGRESSIONAL RECORD to try to get the facts of this matter before the Congress and the people of this country.

Apparently the Democratic Party leaders are backing off from looking into this. The leaders of organized labor are, in many cases, also the political leaders of the Democratic Party. Racial discrimination in our unions, led by those who have so large a part in guiding the destiny of the Democratic Party, is an important factor in the problem which I cited earlier—the extremely high rate of unemployment among young Negro workers. It is incongruous that the Negro voter will stand with a party led by those who, in their capacity as union leaders, have done so much to stand in the way of Negroes obtaining quality employment.

The testimony which Mr. Hill gave centered largely around the discrimination of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union against Negroes and Puerto Ricans. The ILGWU issued a statement in reply to Mr. Hill and Mr. Hill, in turn, has written an article responding to the ILGWU statement. I am placing both of these, although they are quite lengthy, in the RECORD. Unfortunately, this seems to be the only way in which we can carry this debate forward, and I believe it is a matter which we must look into.

I have assured the representatives of the ILGW union that I will place any further response they care to make in the RECORD if that is their request.

THE TRUTH ABOUT THE ILGWU

(This brief statement has been prepared for two reasons and in response to many requests: (1) To set it clear that the ILGWU has no quarrel with the NAACP or any other civil rights organization on the principles of equal opportunity; and (2) to make a factual examination of the charges raised publicly by Herbert Hill, labor secretary of the NAACP, about the ILGWU.)

On August 17, 1962, the labor secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Herbert Hill, began to read testimony to the subcommittee of the House Education and Labor Committee investigating the extent of discrimination, exploitation, and corruption in the garment industry and the union. Hill never had a chance to finish his statement. Committee members objected to its inclusion in the record because it was not factual testimony but "opinions, conclusions, and characterizations" (New York Times, August 19, 1962).

Unable to have his testimony accepted by the committee (to which he was a special consultant) as submitted, Hill used the facilities of the NAACP to circulate the statement widely. The same piece appeared as an article in New Politics, volume 1, No. 4.

When David Dubinsky, president of the ILGWU, appeared before the committee to refute charges, he was repeatedly told that the committee would not entertain replies to Hill since the Hill statement was not part of the record.

On October 8, Hill's testimony became the basis for a resolution passed by the NAACP board of directors demanding further congressional investigation of the ILGWU. The resolution stated that "the union leaders have as yet made no adequate answer to charges."

Since the Hill testimony is the basis for a widening rift between the NAACP and the progressive labor movement, it may be worth while to see how much truth there is in this basic body of charges.

Hill charge: "As a matter of practice and policy, Negroes and Puerto Ricans are barred from membership in these locals: Local 10, Cutters, Local 60, Pressers, and the Pressers Branch Local 89."

The truth: In local 10, there are 199 known Negro and Spanish-speaking members (the ILGWU has many Cubans, Panamanians, Colombians, Dominicans, Salvadorians, Mexicans, etc., as well as Puerto Ricans) as of the summer of 1962. There are probably more. An exact count is difficult since the union does not tag its membership by racial categories. The 199 names were found in a shop count. (The count rose to 239 by November 1962.)

The 200 or more Negroes and Spanish-speaking members of Cutters' Local 10 is an impressive demonstration of integration, since in this trade where there is very little turnover of employment, the total number of jobs covered by local 10 has fallen in the last decade. Despite a diminishing number of available jobs, there are at least 200 Negroes and Spanish-speaking members in the cutters' union.

Hill charge: "Local 60 has an all-white membership."

The truth: One out of every five pressers (a skilled craft) in local 60 is either Negro or Spanish-speaking, mainly Puerto Rican. The total is well over 300. This, too, was accomplished in the face of diminishing jobs for pressers in the New York market.

Hill charge: "Locals 10, 60, and 89 are lily white."

The truth: The charge is pure fabrication, as we have seen, in the case of locals 10 and 60. The charge is comical in the case of local 89. This local was created at a time when dressmakers' local 22 conducted its meeting in Yiddish, because the members could not speak English. The newcomer Italians did not understand Yiddish, so they set up a parallel local to conduct the union's business in Italian. Local 89 still does so, with the result that it is not lily white, but pure Italian, barring Negroes, Jews, Puerto Ricans and all non-Italians from membership. To put Negro pressers in local 89, as Hill seems to suggest, would be to disfranchise them completely from union participation unless they were Italian-speaking Negroes.

Negro dress pressers (who work in the same shops as Italian local 89 dress pressers under the same contract with the same wage rates) are members of local 60—where the business is conducted in English, a language more convenient for most of the Negro pressers.

Hill charge: "Negro and Puerto Rican workers (in the New York dress joint board) are limited to membership in local 22 and in the unit known as 60A which is the Jim Crow auxiliary of local 60."

The truth: The locals of the dress joint board are 10, 22, 60, and 89. There are Negro and Puerto Rican members in every single one of these locals except 89, the Italian affiliate of the joint board. Local 60A is not "Jim Crow," it contains all races, religions, etc. It is composed of dress shipping clerks no matter what their race, creed or color. It is a craft affiliate of local 60 and not a racial grouping. Most of its members are Negro or Puerto Rican, but to call it a Jim Crow local for that reason would be the same as calling the Sleeping Car Porters' Union a Jim Crow union because all or most of its members are Negro.

Hill charge: "To anyone acquainted with the realities of the union's operations, the reason for denying a separate local union charter to 60A is that, given the ethnic composition of the membership, there would inevitably be a Negro or Puerto Rican local union manager."

The truth: In the ILGWU, around the country, shipping clerks do not have separate locals, whether they are white, Negro, gentile, Jewish or Mexican. Generally, ILGWU locals are industrial, not craft. The cutter and presser locals in New York and a few other areas is a historic fact that does not apply to parts of the country or even to the trades in New York that have been more recently organized.

More important: A majority of the combined members of local 60 and local 60A are Negro and Puerto Rican. Each member has an equal vote—whether in 60 or 60A. If the present manager is not a Negro or Puerto Rican, it merely indicates that the members of this union prefer not to cast a racial vote.

Hill's suggestion that a separate local of shipping clerks would elect a Negro manager is both inaccurate and vicious. It is inaccurate because local 60A is "mixed" with no one ethnic group—Negro, Puerto Rican, Cuban, Irish, Jewish, or Italian in a simple majority. What is more, if a predominantly Gentile labor movement could elect a Jew, Samuel Gompers, as its president for more than three decades; and if a Protestant United States could elect a Catholic as President; and if the NAACP could choose a white Jew as its Labor Secretary, there is no reason to believe that the members of local 60A would elect a manager on a racist rather than unionist basis. The proposal is socially vicious because to create a separate local 60A just to guarantee the election of a Negro or Puerto Rican manager is to create a Jim Crow local—separate but equal. ILGWU members prefer integration: craft and color.

Hill charge: "These workers (members of local 60A) earn in the vicinity of $50 a week."

The truth: This may have been true before local 60A organized the shipping clerks into a union. A study of 536 shops, employing 1,220 members of 60A, shows: 3 percent earn from $46 to $49 a week; 13 percent earn from $50 to $60 a week; 21 percent earn from $60 to $70 a week; 22 percent earn from $70 to $80 a week; 17 percent earn from $80 to $90 a week; 9½ percent earn from $90 to $100 a week; 14½ percent earn more than $100 a week.

This means that about two-thirds (63 percent) earned from $70 a week up to more than $100. The truth is that the shipping clerks owe a vote of thanks to the pressers local, whose relatively stable membership, whose high dues rate (more than twice that of the shipping clerks), and experienced staff made these gains possible. Standing by itself, the clerks would have great difficulties primarily because of the very high turnover of workers in their craft. The clerks enjoy all benefits of being united in industrial union fashion with a more highly skilled craft. No student of labor relations has to be told why—and to destroy these advantages to create a Jim Crow local is bad economics and worse intergroup relations.

Hill charge: "Over a number of years, Negroes, who are members of other locals of the ILGWU, have attempted to secure membership in local 10 but are almost without exception denied membership."

The truth: Among the more than 200 members of Negro and Spanish-speaking origin (including Puerto Ricans) there are members of local 10 who were transferred from locals 23, 66, 91, 105, and even 60A.

Hill charge: "It is quite possible that for public relations purposes the ILGWU will produce one or two Negroes or Puerto Ricans who claim to be members of locals 10 and 60."

The truth: The actual count in locals 10 and 60 of members from these ethnic groups is well over 500. They do not claim to be members; they are. They have been for years.

On a November 9 broadcast, Hill stated, "There are in the vicinity of 50 [Negro] cutters of local 10 in the city."

Here it is clear that when Hill said "one or two," he had no regard for the truth. Now when he says 50 he still has no regard for the truth. This is the old McCarthy numbers game: a couple of thousand Communists in the State Department; a couple of hundred Communists in the State Department, may be a couple in the State Department.

Hill charge: Local 10 had been found guilty of excluding Ernest Holmes from membership because he was a Negro.

The truth: On November 4, 1962, WNBC-TV broadcast the following:

"On September 9, 1962, in the second half of a broadcast of 'Our Protestant Heritage," over this station, a guest, Herbert Hill, labor secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, made certain spontaneous and unrehearsed remarks concerning the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and two of its leaders.

"Mr. Hill stated that, in the Ernest Holmes case, local 10 of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union had been found guilty of discrimination by the State commission for human rights.

"The fact is that this case is still being investigated by the commission and no final determination of guilt has been made."

The full story will be available when the investigation is completed.

Hill charge: "To prevent the admission of nonwhite persons into that local union [local 10], the leadership exerts rigid control of admission into various training programs including the referral of young persons to the Fashion Institute of Technology High School."

The truth: Local 10, of course, does not prevent the admission of Negroes and Puerto Ricans. They are members of local 10.

The Fashion Institute of Technology High School is nonexistent. There are two separate schools of major importance to the needle trades in New York where the trade is taught. The first is the High School of Fashion Industries, run by the New York Board of Education. The other is the Fashion Institute of Technology, a 2-year college-level school, licensed by the State of New York. Despite the fact that these two schools are the great training ground for the industry since 1933, Hill has done so little research into the way people are trained and placed in the New York garment trades that he does not even know the names of these schools.

Neither local 10 nor any other union controls admissions, formally or informally, to the High School of Fashion Industries or to the Fashion Institute of Technology. Any grammar school graduate who wishes to may enroll in the high school. If that high school discriminates against any student, then the NAACP ought to denounce the New York Board of Education. The truth of the matter is that in the High School of Fashion Industries, the student body is presently about 40 percent Puerto Rican and about 30 percent Negro. The school graduates cutters as well as operators and has for years been successfully placing its graduates.

Hill charge: "The ILGWU continues to operate the union in the interests of a small and declining number of white garment workers with high seniority."

The truth: In the New York metropolitan area as in almost 95 percent of the ILGWU shops, there is no seniority clause in contracts. The ILGWU contracts call for equal division of work when there is not enough to go around.

The terrible irony is that the ILGWU is one of the few, perhaps the only major union, calling for equal division of work. In the ILGWU, the Negro or Puerto Rican in New York, or Mexican in the Southwest, or Japanese on the west coast is not the last hired and the first fired. Once a member of the union, any worker—regardless of origin—shares the work equally. No union in America—or anywhere in the world—has a greater job security clause for newcomers to the trade and union.

Hill charge: "A shortage of skilled sewing machine operators is developing [in New York]. The leadership of the skilled craft locals of the ILGWU must bear a share of the responsibility."

The truth: There is a shortage of skilled sewing machine operators. Nobody knows this better than the ILGWU. Some employers have either closed shop in New York or threatened to fold up for lack of skilled operators. Hill's charge implies that the ILGWU prejudice is so deep that rather than teach Negroes and Puerto Ricans these advanced skills, the union would prefer to lose the industry and lose its strength at its prime center in New York.

The truth is that as far back as 1938, the ILGWU worked with Max Meyer to set up the Central Needle Trades High School (now the High School of Fashion Industries) to train skilled workers. The school is a huge establishment, advertising its existence in subway car cards pleading for increased enrollment. Its student body numbers about 2,000. Its ethnic composition: 40 percent Puerto Rican and 30 percent Negro.

In addition: The high school runs evening sessions. Here there is open enrollment for any worker in the trade to learn any skill; operator, cutter, patternmaker. Last year, more than 700 ILGWU members attended. Ninety percent were either Negro or Puerto Rican.

In addition, to encourage ILGWU members to upgrade skills, New York locals run special union-sponsored classes—advertised by and recruited by the locals. The high school teaches the class on its premises. Five hundred and thirty-two ILGWU members attended last year. Ninety percent were Negro or Puerto Rican. These classes have been run for years.

(For any reader who may doubt that Hill could so have perverted the truth, I propose that you get the facts by writing either to Michael Katzoff, principal, or Theresa Fanelli, teacher in charge of the evening session, at the High School of Fashion Industries, 225 West 24th Street, New York 11, N.Y. Or better yet, organize a committee and go and look.)

Hill charge: The two Puerto Rican locals are denied Puerto Rican leadership.

The truth: The entire leadership of the Puerto Rican locals—director of organization, business agents, organizers, local presidents, and executive board members—are Puerto Rican. The sole exception: Jerry Schoen, a stateside man with many years of experience who serves as manager. (Schoen was appointed only after Alberto Sanchez, Puerto Rican director of organization, turned down the job as manager to stay with organizing.)

Perhaps more pertinent for those who prefer the "colorblind" approach to this problem is the letter submitted by Hipolito Marcano, president of the Puerto Rican Federation of Labor, to the subcommittee of the House Committee on Education and Labor, on this matter:

"The workers in Puerto Rico never look at the national origin, color, race, religion, or political ideas of their leaders with the only exception of Communist affiliation which is barred by our State federation constitution. A labor leader's worth cannot be measured by his religious beliefs, his origin, or color of his skin but by his service, dedication, and devotion to the cause of the working people whom he represents. We learned that lesson at the turn of the past century, when our labor movement was founded—not by a Puerto Rican—but by a native-born Spaniard, Mr. Santiago Iglesias.

"The workers in the garment industry in Puerto Rico were earning 2 cents an hour in 1940, when President Dubinsky and other 'continentals' representing labor, were appointed as part of the first wage and hour committee to investigate this industry. Today those workers average over $1 an hour and their wages are constantly increasing in addition to very reasonable fringe benefits. A great change has taken place and is going on. Organized labor has done a substantial part to win that battle for the enrichment of our life as a free and democratic community. We don't care about the color, origin, or religion of the leaders who have done that task of constructive leadership. The credit goes to the union and in this particular industry the credit goes to the ILGWU for a job well done and for which we are grateful."

Hill charge: In the locals where there is a major concentration of nonwhite workers, the so-called minimum wages are in fact the maximum wages.

The truth: ILGWU members, with rare exception, work on a piecework system. This means that a rate is set for a given operation and workers are paid for what they produce. The minimum is set so that the slowest worker will, on the set rate, make the minimum; the faster worker makes proportionately more—some twice as much or more. The average wage and the maximum wage in an ILGWU shop on piece work are never the minimum or even near the minimum.

In addition, ILGWU contracts provide for supplementary benefits—medical care, hospitalization, optical care, vacations with pay, holidays with pay, death benefits, retirement benefits, severance payment, etc.—that automatically add 10, 15, or 20 percent to the money wage. This does not exist in similar ways in nonunion shops.

ILGWU contracts provide that the union minimum shall not only be above the Federal minimum but shall automatically rise whenever the legal minimum rises.

ILGWU policy is to set union wages as high as possible without jeopardizing the jobs of unionized shops that must meet nonunionized competition in one of the most fiercely competitive industries in America. To pave the way for higher union wages, the ILGWU has successfully spearheaded repeated campaigns to raise the Federal legal minimum. For an account of the pioneer role of the needle and textile unions in the fight for an improved Federal minimum, see "A Legislative Campaign for a Federal Minimum Wage—1955," by Gus Tyler, published by the Eagleton Foundation, Rutgers University, New Jersey. Also see Dissent, summer 1961, "Marginal Industries; Low Wages, High Risks," by Gus Tyler.

Hill charge: "I cite the Fine Art Pillow & Specialties Co. of 37 West 26th Street in Manhattan as a typical example of conditions. * * * Here, virtually all nonwhite workers, male and female, who are union members are paid $1.15, $1.20 or $1.25 an hour."

The truth: According to a payroll check, 54 of the 104 employees are paid more than $1.25 an hour. These are overwhelmingly Negro and Puerto Rican. Of the top 10 earners—from $1.53 an hour to $3.23 an hour—7 are Negro or Puerto Rican.

The further truth is that Fine Art Pillow is about as typical of ILGWU conditions as Mississippi is typical of America. This is a rubber and plastic shop in a trade where union jurisdiction is contested by dozens of legitimate unions plus dozens of racket unions. Of the thousands of ILGWU shops in New York, Hill chose this one for an on-the-spot check. And, even then, Hill got the facts all wrong.

Hill charge: There is "systematic exclusion of Negro and Puerto Rican members from effective participation in the leadership and policymaking procedures of the union." Hill refers specifically to the fact that the ILGWU constitution sets up rules on caucuses and qualifications for holding top offices in the international union.

The truth: The caucus clause dates back to the 1920's, when the ILGWU was in a battle with the "standing" caucuses of the Communist Party. Whatever the merits of the clause—a good subject for afull set of articles—it certainly is no bar to Negroes, Puerto Ricans, Mexicans, Cubans, Portugese, French and other minorities running for and winning office in the union. Dozens out of these background presently hold both appointed and elected office. If this "clause" is a sign of the "Decay of a Labor Union," then the ILGWU has been decaying ever since it beat the Communists several decades ago and increased its membership tenfold.

Other qualifications provide that to run for president a member must be elected as delegate to the ILGWU convention. Hardly a disqualification. If a member cannot be elected by his own local, he is hardly presidential timber. In any event, this clause applies to all members—regardless of race, creed, or color.

To run for the general executive board (top legislative body of about two dozen elected at the convention) a candidate must have served as a paid officer with the benefit of 3 years' experience. Hardly a disqualification. Virtually every paid officer of the ILGWU has seen 3 years' service, including the dozens of Negroes and Puerto Ricans on staff.

Most important: Every convention of the ILGWU is a constitutional convention. At any convention, a simple majority may remove all these qualifications to elect anyone the delegates want under any qualifications they set up.

The truth is that the ILGWU has made labor history by a most extensive and expensive program for leadership development, unparalleled in the world labor movement, with a conscious concentration on the development of leadership that would reflect the newer ethnic groups in the industry of the union.

In 1938, the ILGWU set up an officer qualification course to prepare candidates for elective union posts. Enrollment was open to all members of 2 years' standing. Eight hundred and thirty-two applied. Of these, 19 were Negro and 8 were Spanish-speaking—a total of 27 in 24 years.

Why so few? The answer is the composition of the union, where 80 percent of the members are female, with little interest in and less time for full-time union jobs. Of the 832, only 106 were women.

Because of the predominantly female composition of the ILGWU, especially among the fewer ethnic groups, the union set up a full-time, full-year training institute in 1950 to reach outside the trade, if necessary to recruit leadership talent. (The only such program in the entire American labor movement.) In the first 11 years of its existence, the institute graduated 30 trainees of Negro or Spanish-speaking origin. (Ninety applied. One out of three was graduated, a higher percentage than for the institute as a whole.)

Some idea of the philosophy of the institute and of the ILGWU can be obtained from a letter written by an ILGWU vice president when one Spanish-speaking graduate left the union staff. The letter was addressed to a Puerto Rican social agency in February 1960:

"No one knows better than you that in the last few years many Spanish-speaking workers, especially Puerto Ricans, have entered our industry and union. To develop staff and leadership from this community of working people, we have a special training institute, a full-year course. We look forward with keen interest to the growth and maturation of such new personnel so that in the coming years they may be able to play a major role in our union.

"To us, C——— represented more than an individual. He represented a trend. His progress, we felt, would be an encouragement for other young men and women with his interests to serve in the labor movement.

"To put it bluntly, we feel that C——'s departure represents a setback to our program of developing Spanish-speaking staff and leadership in our union."

In the report of the general executive board of the union to its 1959 convention, progress was reported. "The call for the development of such leadership in the ranks of the ILGWU, on the basis of merit only, has taken the form of numerous appeals in the Spanish-language press and in Justicia for Spanish-speaking ILGers to enroll in the ILGWU training institute. The results of the recent ILGWU elections indicate that a corps of such leaders is already emerging from the ranks."

The report went further. "President Dubinsky urged that the Puerto Rican government establish a training institute for developing community, civic and labor leadership for the thousands of islanders who are in transition. This would be the greatest preventive to their being exploited by misleaders and charlatans taking advantage of language and initial cultural confusion in the slum environment, as well as in the homeland island itself."

The ILGWU offered to provide on-the-job training on the mainland for these Puerto Rican trainees and pledged to place them on ILGWU staff immediately after graduation.

Without appearing to be superior or self-righteous, may I ask whether there is any other union in the world that can show a comparative record of trying to develop new leadership—with a specific eye on new ethnic groups?

Hill charge: "Workers who take home $49 a week tell each other jokes about the greed of union business agents."

The truth: The ILGWU has one of the tightest systems ever devised by a union to check on the conduct of its officers: an army of accountants with a special corps of accountants to check accountants. In the last 30 years, the union has had occasion to drop some 40 of its officers for improper conduct.

The Hill charge is trial by rumor and humor. It is an anonymous smear: the kind of smear used to characterize races, religions, the NAACP, or the labor movement by reference to some piece of gossip embedded in jokes. No facts. No names. No evidence. Just a report on alleged jokes.

The truth is that, although I knew this anonymous piece of evidence—trial by rumor—was in the Hill "testimony," I was shocked that New Politics did not use the editorial scissors here.

To characterize a union or any body of humans by the anonymous smear—the great mark of McCarthyism, of the antisemite, of the white racist, of the bigot—is hardly "evidence." This is the lynch spirit.

(Unfortunately, this piece is limited to answering charges. For those who would like to know what the ILGWU has done over 62 years to promote intergroup understanding and civil rights—may I suggest a reading of "Equal Opportunity—Union Made," Educational Department, ILGWU, 1710 Broadway, New York City, N.Y.)

A Reply to Gus Tyler: The ILGWU—Fact and Fiction

(By Herbert Hill)

In "The ILGWU Today: The Decay of a Labor Union," which appeared in the summer 1962 issue of New Politics, I charged that: "In the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union in New York City, the Negro and Puerto Rican members are concentrated in the low-paid job classifications and with very little employment mobility." This was my main charge. I further stated that: "There is a direct connection between the permanent condition of semipoverty experienced by these workers and discriminatory racial practices. The factual record discloses that Negro and Puerto Rican members of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union are discriminated against both in terms of wages and other conditions of employment and in their status as members of the union."

These charges were and remain justified. No statement or explanation by officials of the ILGWU or their apologists refutes the major points of my arguments. On the contrary, their defense of the union essentially confirms my criticism of the ILGWU's policies and practices.

The most serious effort made to counter my charges was the reply by Gus Tyler, educational director of the ILGWU, which appeared in the last issue (fall 1962) of New Politics (also distributed in mimeographed form). Much of Tyler's material had previously appeared in a widely circulated document by Harry Fleischman, director of the American Jewish Committee's National Labor Service, entitled "Is the ILGWU Biased?" November 5, 1962. The Jewish labor committee distributed the same material in the form of a memorandum from Emanuel Muravchik, national field director, dated November 16, 1962.

Tyler's technique was to quote me (Hill Charge: * * *) followed by his answer (The Truth: * * *). After almost 12 pages of rapid fire dialog between "Hill charge" and "The Truth" I can readily understand the reader falling under a semihypnotic spell. Tyler, the "Truthsayer," writes with such seemingly inviolable "facts" that one might think he is really giving a point by point refutation of my charges. Aside from the failure to refute my charges, he is not a point by point discussion of my article. A number of the most important specific charges I made are not commented upon at all, others obviously distorted or treated so perfunctorily that he might well have omitted any comment and, most seriously, his "fact" fails completely to come to grips with the basic charges I directed against the ILGWU concerning the source discriminatory practices suffered by nonwhite garment workers in New York City.

At no time did I charge the ILGWU with discriminatory practices emanating from a conscious racist ideology. What I have argued is that the social fact of discrimination is rooted in the ILGWU today because of the interaction of the old union leadership with the changing social composition of the membership and the nature of the industry.

In the first place, there is the sheer weight of numbers of the Negro and Puerto Rican minorities. They comprise nearly one-third of the national membership and more than a half of the membership in the New York area, the heart of the international union's operation. Given the rapidly increasing number of Negroes and Puerto Ricans in the garment industry in New York, they have a unique status within the union which the all-white top leadership clearly sees as a growing threat to its monopoly of control.

A second factor contributing to discriminatory practices relates to the garment industry itself. The industry is made up of many small, highly competitive firms, further threatened by low priced imports. It therefore seeks to draw workers from a large, cheap labor market, one that in New York consists largely of nonwhite workers. This directly encourages discriminatory practices as the unskilled, lowest paying jobs are the only jobs available to Negroes and Puerto Ricans.

The many problems that the ILGWU faces in the industry are very real. To improve the living standards of its members and particularly those who are doubly victimized by a sick industry because of their color would pose a problem to the best of unions. The issue is how to meet the problem: to resist or acquiesce to the employers' demand that the ILGWU maintain a cheap labor market for the garment industry in New York City.

It is clear that some years ago the ILGWU leadership made a fundamental decision to keep the industry in New York City on the basis of maintaining low wages and minimal standards for tens of thousands of unskilled workers; i.e., Negroes and Puerto Ricans. Thus, the union provides itself with a vast dues paying membership which also constitutes the base of its extensive political operations in New York City and State. In this manner the ILGWU has chosen to operate as a stabilizing force in the industry.

The present wage rates of the unskilled and semiskilled garment workers, most of whom are nonwhite, are below the subsistence levels indicated by the 1960 Interim City Workers Family Budget established by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the U.S. Department of Labor. (Data given in my previous article.)

A detailed report of wages in New York City, released by the Bureau of Labor Statistics on June 27, 1962, clearly indicates that New York City has become a low-wage area. One of the major reasons for this development is the wage policies of the apparel unions.

The U.S. Government report found that between 1950 and 1960, wages for the city's apparel workers fell from 2d place among 16 industrial categories to 11th place, and dropped below the national average for all manufacturing.

The tacit collusion between employer and union to maintain a cheap labor market was revealed by the ILGWU's opposition to a bill introduced in the New York City Council in 1962 to establish by law a minimum wage in New York City of $1.50 an hour. The ILGWU representative on the Mayor's Citizens' Commission on the City Economy, E. Howard Molisani, manager of Italian Cloakmakers' Local 48 and a vice president of the ILGWU, originally voted against the commission's report which recommended prompt enactment of a law establishing a $1.50 minimum hourly wage in New York City, but, for the public record, later changed his vote to an abstention.

This is evidently "the philosophy of the ILGWU" to which Tyler repeatedly alludes and which Fleischman and Muravchik defend.

Arnold Witte, general manager of the Commerce and Industry Association of New York City, writing in the October 5, 1962, New York World Telegram and Sun, cited the ILGWU's opposition to the city minimum wage bill. Mr. Witte noted that "the garment workers, the largest union of the largest industry in the city, has refused to indorse this legislation."

On February 12, 1963, a mass demonstration was held in Albany in support of passage of a $1.50 minimum wage law for New York City. Several major trade unions participated, as did the NAACP, the Negro American Labor Council, and many other groups. The ILGWU was conspicuous by its absence.

There is a third factor behind the discrimination suffered by nonwhite garment workers. It pertains to the ingrown quality of the union leadership. Again, I do not charge that the ILGWU leadership is motivated by a deliberate racist ideology. But it is evident that the top all-white leadership has grown contemptuous of the younger, less educated, the less sophisticated—the altogether different—newer members who are overwhelmingly Negro and Puerto Rican.

That many of the older leaders of the ILGWU have nothing in common with their radical past is beside the point; that they have a certain past in common is very much to the point. (Talk about discrimination in his union and David Dubinsky will recount ad nauseam how he was imprisoned under the Czar for his Socialist activities.) The picture which would emerge from any detailed study of the leading personnel is of an old, conservative, ingrown bureaucracy. It has become an elite club which seeks to preserve for itself the leading power positions in the international, the local unions and the best jobs in the shops for those most closely identified with its own history and nostalgia. It passes these desirable, well-paying positions on from father to son, and from father to son-in-law. The "business" is kept within the family.

Prof. Daniel Bell of Columbia University recently commented on this serious problem in an article in the New Leader (Jan. 21, 1963):

"The fact is—and this is the 'bite' in Hill's charges—that the Negroes are underrepresented in the leadership of many of the unions where they form a significant proportion of the membership. In the case of these unions, what the Negroes want is 'recognition' at the level of top leadership and a growing share of the spoils of office. For one thing, the realistic political process in the United States, at least in the northern urban centers, has been one of ethnic groups advancing themselves precisely in this fashion; by organizing on bloc lines, electing their own kind, and using the patronage system to enhance the wealth and status of their group."

Bell concludes by noting that:

"In economic and educational opportunity, the Negro is in a position of inequality, and the Government is bound to help him move ahead. But doesn't the trade union movement have a special obligation to help redress the balance?

Tyler knows that crucial to my argument is my characterization of the ILGWU leadership as being rigidly bureaucratic. Yet, his "discussion" of this documeted charge is so feeble and unresponsive as to be an unwitting admission of its truth.

I sought to establish that the ILGWU leadership, as is the case with virtually every bureaucracy, has tried to legitimize its privileges through constitutional provisions. While these provisions make everything "legal," they also paralyze initiative from below, prevent an influx of new life into the leading policymaking bodies of the organization and transform conventions into tedious rituals. For example, I pointed to the clause in the ILGWU constitution which prohibits a democratic internal life in the organization. Here is what Tyler has to say on the matter:

"The caucus clause dates back to the 1920's, when the ILGWU was in a battle with the 'standing' caucuses of the Communist Party. Whatever the merits of the clause—a good subject for a full set of articles—it certainly is no bar to Negroes, Puerto Ricans, Mexicans, Cubans, Portuguese, French and other minorities running for and winning office in the union." (Emphasis added.)

This will not do. Frankly, I do not know if the clause was justified at the time by the struggle against the Communists. And this might make for a full set of articles by labor historians. But it also makes for a full set of articles by the labor secretary of the NAACP and others on the character and practices of the ILGWU today. While the clause deprives the entire membership of democratic rights today, it takes on the added edge of discrimination against those minorities which are thus deprived, in addition, of their right to organize within the union to press for their special needs and rights.[1]

Other constitutional provisions reduce the number eligible to run for the top offices in the union to a few hundred out of a total of over 400,000. This is bad enough. Worse yet, it reduces the number of Puerto Ricans and Negroes eligible to run for the general executive board to proportionally a very small number (Tyler says, "dozens") and those eligible to run for the offices of president and general secretary to even less. (Tyler doesn't give a number.)

In the same vein he writes of these constitutional restrictions on democratic rights: "At any convention, a simple majority may remove all these qualifications [from the constitution—H.H.] to elect anyone the delegates want [to the general executive board—H.H.] under any qualifications they set up." Getting a "simple majority" at an ILGWU convention is not quite that simple. To do that would require a long, arduous campaign against the solidly entrenched leadership, a campaign which would require far more time than the 3-month preconvention limit on caucuses. And there's the rub. The ILGWU constitution itself, through the extreme limitation and control placed on opposition, is the best, built-in, guarantee that Tyler's "simple majority" will never materialize.

It is as though an assailant caught belaboring a defenseless victim with a club argues that if he is doing wrong, the poor bastard underfoot has the right to take his club away.

It is revealing to see what sections of my article completely escaped Tyler's roving but very selective eye.

Hill charge: "There is not a single Negro or Puerto Rican on the 23 member general executive board."

Tyler answer: Silence.

Hill charge: "* * * not a single Negro or Puerto Rican Vice President of the union * * *"

Tyler answer: Silence.

Hill charge: "There are no Negro or Puerto Rican local managers who are usually handpicked by the Dubinsky controlled administration."

Tyler answer: Silence.

Hill charge: "Dubinsky's practice of requiring a signed undated resignation from all officers of the International union and from members of the general executive board, absolutely guarantees the perpetuation of what really amounts to one-man rule of the ILGWU."

Tyler answer: Silence.

Hill charge: "I cite the basic contract between local 98 and the Manufacturers' Association in effect until August 14, 1963. The contract provides the following minimum wages (p. 7, art. 4(a)):

	Per hour
Floor girls	$1.15
Operators	1.20
Shipping clerks	1.20
Cutters	1.20

In September 1961 the Federal wage was increased to $1.15 an hour. The current minimum for floor girls is $1.25 an hour at the end of 7 months (only 10 cents above the minimum wage required by law) and $1.30 an hour for the other classifications at the end of 9 months.

Tyler answer: Silence.

(Tyler does try to answer some of the other charges made about wage scales. All the worse for his case, as we shall see.)

Hill charge: "In this case of the Haffkine Co. the ILGWU completely organized a group of Negro and Puerto Rican workers employed by a 'sweatshop' employer whose workers engaged in a 2-day ILGWU strike for union recognition. However, these striking workers were turned over to a local of another international union, one well known for signing 'sweetheart agreements' and generally with an unsavory reputation. This was done by Herbert Pokodner, the manager of local 98."

Tyler answer: Silence.

Hill charge: "An analysis of the data provided by the Bureau of Labor Statistics of the U.S. Department of Labor concludes that only 11 percent of the unionized garment workers in New York can realize the basic earnings necessary for the 'modest but adequate' standard of living established by the Bureau for the 1960 interim city worker's family bduget.

Tyler answer: Silence.

Hill charge: "In addition, it must be noted that the very modest figure of 11 percent has been reached by assuming that these workers will be employed uninterruptedly for 52 weeks. However, given the seasonal

[1] Incidentally, what is interesting about Tyler's answer is that it is almost exactly what I predicted he would say. I wrote in my previous article that "Mr. Dubinsky's spokesmen will answer that this is done to prevent Communists from taking over the union." Mr. Tyler performed as expected. Naturally, he did not quote my rebuttal about this anticipated canned reply which was that "one can only compare" such an answer "to the argument that we should suspend the U.S. Constitution and the Bill of Rights because it endangers the country in fighting subversion."

character of the New York City garment industry this is highly unlikely.

Tyler answer: Silence.

Hill charge: "The available data clearly indiactes that the wages of workers in the New York City ladies' garment industry have declined relative to the total manufacturing average."

Tyler answer: Silence.

These are, among several others, omissions of major points in my article that Tyler, Fleischman, and Muravchik make no attempt to answer, although they create the illusion they are "answering Hill item by item."

In his article, Tyler writes:

"Hill charge: 'To prevent the admission of nonwhite persons into that local union (local 10),' the leadership exerts 'rigid control of admission into various training programs * * *' including the 'referral of young persons to the Fashion Institute of Technology High School.'"

If we substitute my words for Tyler's three little dots, the question would then be that the leadership exerts:

"Rigid control of admission into various training programs. Local 10 exclusively decides who shall be referred to on-the-job-training opportunities created as the result of informal arrangement made by the union and employers operating with ILGWU contracts, or into the grading school operated by local 10 in its headquarters, or in the referral of young persons to the Fashion Institute of Technology High School."

Thus, there are three training programs mentioned in my article and Tyler dots his way over the first two: (1) the informal arrangement made between employer and union for on-the-job training, and (2) the grading school operated by local 10 in its headquarters. Why? The answer is clear enough. My charges in these two instances are incontrovertible. Where the union exercises its control, the number of Negroes and Puerto Ricans is so embarrassingly small that Tyler discreetly resorts to his dots. He discusses, instead, only the third form of training, that offered by the New York City Board of Education where the ILGWU, fortunately, does not exercise control—and here I stand corrected—about who is admitted. Tyler then rests his case on the nondiscriminatory policies of the New York City Board of Education and tacitly concedes that he has no case where the union is concerned.

What is more, the figures Tyler gives of the number of Negroes and Puerto Ricans trained by the board of education contradicts any claim that the extremely small number of nonwhite workers in the skilled trades is due to a shortage of skilled Negro and Puerto Rican labor.

The New York Times of August 18, 1962, reporting on the testimony of Moe Falikman, business manager of Cutters' Local 10, before a hearing of the subcommittee of the House Committee on Education and Labor, states that "Mr. Falikman explained that local 10 had no formal training program for cutters and no apprentice system." That led Congressman ROOSEVELT to observe that "with the changing pattern of population in New York it seems to me you would have gone to some lengths" to provide training and jobs for members of racial minorities.

"We are not an employment agency," Mr. Falikman replied.

"But you are," Mr. ROOSEVELT declared. "I'd have greater faith in you if you would face this situation honestly and say, 'Yes, this needs looking into.'"

After consulting with a union attorney, Falikman did agree that he would look into it.

The New York Times of August 25, 1962, in reporting Mr. Dubinsky's appearance before the House subcommittee stated that: "Mr. Dubinsky denied that it was the union's responsibility to upgrade Negroes and Puerto Ricans, as much as we would like to see them go to higher brackets. The union," he said, "is not an employment agency." Other ILGWU officials appearing before the subcommittee insisted that upgrading and promotion "was not the union's responsibility." "We are not an employment agency," they all said.

But in Mr. Dubinsky's testimony reprinted in the October 1 issue of the ILGWU newspaper Justice (p. 10), in reply to a question as to why Negroes and Puerto Ricans do not advance in the union or in the industry, Dubinsky is quoted as saying, "We are doing everything under the sun on this score."

Either the ILGWU is "doing everything under the sun," or "we are not an employment agency, it's not our responsibility." The union cannot have it both ways.

Then there is the following sleight-of-hand. According to Tyler:

Hill Charge: "Local 10 has been found 'guilty' of excluding Ernest Holmes from membership because he was a Negro."

Tyler incorporates this alleged "Hill Charge" in what purports to be an answer to my article in New Politics. Here is what I actually wrote:

"On July 2, 1962, the New York State Commission for Human Rights, which administers the State's fair employment practices statute, found 'probable cause' against local 10 in the case of Ernest Holmes, a Negro who was repeatedly denied membership in local 10 although he worked on the cutting tables of a union shop."

Tyler's dishonest practice consists of using the word "guilty" attributed to me in an unrehearsed television interview but nowhere stated in the article he is presumably answering. In this way, he relieves himself of the responsibility of answering why, after an 8-month investigation, the New York State Commission for Human Rights found "probable cause" (the first stage in a finding of guilt) against local 10 of the ILGWU. On September 14, 1962, Ruperto Ruiz, investigating commissioner, New York State Commission for Human Rights, in a letter to Emil Schlesinger, attorney for local 10, stated that the commission had "repeatedly requested and for a period of 8 months tried to obtain data pertinent to a resolution of the charges of discrimination against the Amalgamated Ladies Garment Cutters Union—Local 10. These efforts were unsuccessful. The failure of representatives of that local to cooperate in the investigation, despite their promises to do so, left me no alternative but to find 'probable cause to credit the allegations to the complaint.'"

Sixteen years ago the ILGWU entered into an agreement with the New York State Commission Against Discrimination (the predecessor to the State Commission For Human Rights) that it would not bar Negroes, Spanish-speaking or other persons from membership in the all-Italian locals. (Elsie Hunter v. Agnes Sullivan Dress Shop, Sept. 4, 1946.) This was an action brought by a Negro member of local 22 who was barred from higher paying jobs controlled by local 89. Today, 16 years later, not a single Negro or Spanish-speaking person holds membership in the two Italian locals which have control of some of the highest paying jobs in the industry and no action has been taken to comply with the State law forbidding such practices.

Yet in the recent statement prepared by Mr. Tyler, the ILGWU asserted that the NAACP charge that locals 48 and 89 discriminate is "comical."

What Mr. Tyler must explain is why, if the NAACP charge is "comical" today, the ILGWU agreed to go along with the comedy 16 years ago.

Tyler makes such a grand production of his comedy; so much joshing. He good humoredly tells us that the reason for all-Italian locals dates back to the days when Italian immigrant unionists who spoke no other language needed their own locals to conduct union business. Being Italian language locals, only those speaking Italian can belong. Not only Puerto Rican and Negroes are excluded (unless, as Tyler wittily thrusts, they are "Italian-speaking Negroes") but all other non-Italian groups are excluded. What could be more fair? And, if all non-Italians are excluded, how can Hill claim that Negroes and Puerto Ricans are thereby specially victimized? The Jewish Labor Committee and the director of the National Labor Service also defend this practice in a similar manner.

I submit that it is not "comical" that the largest local in the ILGWU (Italian Dressmakers' Local 89) and the largest local in the coat and suit industry (Italian Cloakmakers' Local 48) bar Negroes and Spanish-speaking persons from membership. I submit that it is not "comical" that as a result of being barred from membership in local 48 and local 89, Negro and Spanish-speaking persons are further denied access to certain high paying jobs in the two branches of the garment industry of New York City where such jobs are concentrated.

Other national and religious groupings, all of them white, have access to skilled jobs via other locals which are virtually closed to Negroes and Puerto Ricans on the basis of tradition and practice. That is the point. The practical effects of the operation of Italian language locals is to further keep Negroes and Puerto Ricans concentrated in the low paid unskilled classifications with little opportunity for advancement.

While it appears that all are equally unequal where the Italian locals are concerned, some are actually far more unequal than others.

It is obvious that the ILGWU's humorous rationalizations and glib assertions completely fail to answer the charge that these locals discriminate against Negro and Spanish-speaking persons. Indeed their admission of the facts is the proof of the charge. I further submit that the barring of Negroes, Spanish-speaking and other persons from locals 48 and 89 is a violation of the AFL-CIO constitution and a violation of the nondiscrimination pledge which the ILGWU recently signed in the office of the President of the United States. We of the NAACP do not think, moreover, that it is "comical" that the ILGWU subscribes to no-discrimination pledges for public relations purposes when in reality it fails to put an end to such discriminatory practices. Sixteen years have passed since the ILGWU entered into the stipulation agreement with SCAD concerning the Italian locals, but these locals are still "lily-white." Shall this, too, be hailed as "an impressive demonstration of integration"?

Mr. Tyler is not above borrowing a trick or two from management associations which, when pressed by unions for higher wages, place statistic-ridden ads in the New York Times and other newspapers to prove to the world that their employees never had it so good. One such gimmick is to advertise workers' wages without corresponding figures on how many hours of work the payroll represents. Tyler commits the same patent and deliberate fraud.

My report, for example, indicated that push-boys and shipping clerks in the "Jim Crow" auxiliary known as 60A—mainly Negroes and Puerto Ricans—receive extremely low wages.

Tyler "refutes" this charge by arguing that some of these workers earn from $70 to $100 per week. Of course, by working long overtime hours at time-and-a-half wages, by working 60 or 70 hours a week and more, they can earn $80 and $90. But my report, as Tyler knows, describes straight hourly wages, not overtime wages earned at time-and-a-half pay. I am describing 1 week's pay for 1 week's work, that is, a regular week's earnings for the "normal workweek," of 35 hours.

The wages set forth in the section of the union agreements that cover members of 60A are as follows:

The following minimum rates of pay for the normal workweek, as hereinafter defined, shall apply to the following employees:

Group I: Assorters, piece goods workers, push boys, porters, delivery boys, packers, and errand boys. Minimum wages of $46 per normal workweek.

Group II: Shipping clerks, receiving clerks, chargers, order pickers, checkers. Minimum wage of $50 per normal workweek.

The overwhelming majority of members of 60A are employed in the job classifications contained in group I as described above and receive a minimum wage of $46 ($1.31 an hour) for 35 hours, a "normal workweek."

In my article, I cited the pay of workers—almost all Negroes and Puerto Ricans—in a particular unionized shop as an example of an ILGWU substandard negotiated contract. Tyler takes up the "Hill charge" and then proceeds to demolish only himself with "the truth" as follows:

Hill charge: "I cite the Fine Arts Pillow & Specialties Co. of 37 West 26th Street in Manhattan as a typical example of conditions. Here, virtually all nonwhite workers, male and female, who are union members are paid $1.15, $1.20, or $1.25 an hour."

The [Tyler] truth: "According to a payroll check, 54 of the 104 employees are paid more than $1.25 an hour. These are overwhelmingly Negro and Puerto Ricans. Of the top 10 earners—from $1.53 to $3.23 an hour—7 are Negro or Puerto Ricans.

Tyler's truth is that "54 of the 104 employees are paid more than $1.25 an hour." But this means that 50 workers, approximately half the work force, in a unionized shop receive less than $1.25 an hour. That is not all. Tyler boasts that the 10 top earners receive from $1.53 to $3.23 an hour (how many earn that miserable $1.53 or only a few cents more he doesn't say). What this figure further reveals is that at least 45 additional workers receive between $1.25 and $1.53 an hour (how many are just slightly above the $1.25 scale he doesn't say either). Thus, at least 95 out of 104 workers earn from less that $1.25 to $1.53 an hour.

To cover himself in the event that some readers might work out the arithmetic presented by his "truth," Tyler argues that the shop under discussion in any case is "as typical of ILGWU conditions as Mississippi is typical of America." How typical it really is can be seen in the following exhibits of ILGWU-negotiated contracts in New York City where there is the heaviest concentration of Negro and Puerto Rican workers, in some cases as high as 90 percent.

	Progression rates for "unskilled" workers—Time intervals and rates					Contract minimum for "skilled" workers
	1 to 8 weeks	9 to 10 weeks	11 to 13 weeks	14 to 16 weeks
Corset and Brassiere Workers' Union of New York Local 32 (6,632 members):
Operators	1.15	1.20	1.25	1.30		1.36
	1 to 8 weeks	9 to 10 weeks	11 to 12 weeks
Pressers	1.15	1.20	1.25			1.30
Cleaners	1.15	1.20	1.25			1.30
Examiners	1.15	1.20	1.25			1.30
	1 to 8 weeks
Beltmakers' Local 40 (4,504 members):
Machine operators	1.15					1.38
Operators	1.15					1.43
General help	1.15					1.43
Shipper	1.15					1.30
Floor girls	1.15					1.30
	1 to 8 weeks	9 to 10 weeks	13 to 15 weeks			Class R shops	Class S shops
Undergarment and Negligee Workers' Union, Local 62 (16,592 members):
Operators	1.15	1.25	1.30–1.33			1.30	1.33
Ironers	1.15	1.20	1.25–1.25			1.30	1.30
Examiners	1.15	1.20	1.25–1.25			1.30	1.30
Finishers	1.15	1.20	1.25–1.25			1.30	1.30
	1 to 12 weeks
Childrens' Dress, House-Dress and Bathrobe Makers' Union Local 91 (11,943 members):
Operators	1.20					1.41
Ironers	1.20					1.38
Cleaners	1.20					1.35
Finishers	1.20					1.35
	1st month	2 to 6 months	7 to 9 months
Rubberized Novelty and Plastic-Fabric Workers' Union, Local 98 (4,403 members previously cited):
Operators	1.15	1.20	1.25			1.30
Shipping clerks	1.15	1.20	1.25			1.30
Cutters	1.15	1.20	1.25			1.30
Floor girls	1.15	1.20	1.25			1.25
Plastic, Molders and Novelty Workers' Union, Local 132 (5,460 members):
	1st month	2 to 6 months	6 to 9 months
All workers other than molders	1.15	1.20	1.25			1.30
	1st month	2 to 4 months	5 to 7 months	8 to 10 months	11 to 13 months
Molders	1.20	1.25	1.30	1.35	1.40	1.45
Unit 60A section of dress joint board agreement (1,943 members):
Assorters, piece goods workers, pushboys, porters, delivery boys, packers, and errand boys						1.31
Chargers, order pickers, checkers, shipping clerks, receiving clerks						1.43

"As typical of ILGWU conditions as Mississippi is typical of America"? The United States has only one Mississippi. The ILGWU, as the above figures indicate, has a whole flock of them.

It is evident from the data above, that new workers do not even receive the contract minimum for "skilled" workers, but must work a considerable period before they even receive this low wage. Indeed, in the case of local 62, for example, workers must work 8 weeks at the Federal minimum wage and a full 15 weeks before they receive the contract minimum of $1.30 or $1.33 an hour. At the same time, of course, these workers are required, as a condition of employment, to become members of the union after 30 days and pay an initiation fee and dues.

Tyler's explanation for the creation of the "Jim Crow" auxiliary 60A is completely fraudulent. I must repeat some of the facts mentioned in my first article and supply some added information before reviewing Tyler's incredible performance.

60A is a unit composed of "pushboys," packers, piece goods workers, porters and shipping clerks. It has about 2,000 members, of whom more than 90 percent are either Negroes or Spanish-speaking persons. The existence of 60A is, in keeping with the tradition of the "old-line" AFL craft unions, an auxiliary to another local, Dress Pressers' Local 60, with less than 1,300 members.

60A is a new unit in the ILGWU. While the women's garment industry in New York City has had "pushboys," packers, piece goods workers, porters and shipping clerks for as long as the industry existed, the ILGWU did not consider these workers, virtually all Negroes and Puerto Ricans, worthy of union membership until a few years ago, and then only because other unions began organizing activities among these workers. The ILGWU, for the sole purpose of preventing another union from getting a toehold in the garment industry, and not because of the urgent needs of the low-paid, exploited Negro and Puerto Rican workers, then reluctantly organized these workers. Rather than granting them a separate charter, however, the ILGWU made them an auxiliary to Dress Pressers' Local 60.

The NAACP has charged that this was done among other reasons to prevent a Negro or Spanish-speaking person from rising to the position of local union manager.

It should be noted that the collective bargaining agreements negotiated between the Dress Joint Board and the employers' associations covering the members of the Dress Joint Board locals has two sections concerning wages, hours and conditions of employment: one section covers the members of locals 10, 22, 60 and 89, and the other covers the members of 60A. Aside from the question of wages, there are other striking and illuminating differences concerning conditions of employment between the two sections which are described below. Here are two clauses in the collective agreements between the Dress Joint Board and the employers' associations:

Fifteenth: Hours of work (covering members of locals 10, 22, 60, and 89).

A regular week's work shall consist of 35 hours in the first 5 days of the week. Work shall begin at 9 a.m. and end at 5 p.m., with 1 hour interval for lunch. There shall be no more than one shift of workers in any day.

During the season, when the inside shop and each of the contracting shops of the manufacturer or jobber for whom a member of the association is registered or designated as fully supplied with at least a full week's work, and when there are no vacant accommodations in the said shops for additional worker or additional workers cannot be secured, overtime may be worked by all the workers therein except the cutters, provided the member of the association notifies joint council in writing, in advance of the period during which overtime will be worked. In no event shall overtime worked beyond the first 5 days of the week exceed 1 hour per day. All week workers, when working overtime, shall receive pay at the rate of time and one-half. (Collective agreement 1961–1964—United Better Dress Manufacturers' Association, Inc., with International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and Dressmakers Joint Council.)

Compare the above with below, which covers 60A:

Sixty-ninth: The normal workweek, for the purpose of this agreement, shall be deemed to mean a 35-hour week. Each employer shall, in his discretion, be free to fix the hours of the day within which each employee in the unit shall work, but work in excess of 7 hours performed in any 1 day shall be compensated for at the rate of time and one-half. Saturday work shall likewise be compensated at the rate of time and one-half. All overtime shall be performed in the discretion of the employer. (Collective agreement—United Better Dress Manufacturers' Association, Inc., with International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and Dressmakers Joint Council.)

It is clear from the foregoing that members of 60A are considered by the ILGWU as different than, and inferior to, the members of the other locals affiliated to the Dress Joint Board. With respect to members of 60A, unlike the members of the other Dress Joint Board affiliates, the employer has full discretion both as to hours within which they will work and how many hours they will work. It is clear, too, how members of 60A can earn more than $50 per week: many long hours beyond the so-called normal workweek.

How does Tyler discuss the status of those consigned to 60A? In the first place, according to him, their segregated position is for their own good. Tyler writes: "The clerks (in 60A) enjoy all the benefits of being united in industrial fashion with a more highly skilled craft. No student of labor relations has to be told why." I'm afraid that Mr. Tyler takes too much for granted. The supposedly self-evident advantage of the unskilled workers being affiliated to a skilled craft local as argued by Tyler is simply an exercise in fantasy. What, concretely, have been the benefits for the members of 60A getting $46 to $50 for a normal workweek of being affiliated to a craft local with pay scales ranging up to close to $5 an hour (the highest in the industry)?

Then there is Tyler's ludicrous analogy designed to counter my charge that 60A is a Jim Crow affiliate:

Most of its (60A) members (over 90 percent to be more exact—H.H.) are Negro and Puerto Rican, but to call it a "Jim Crow" local for that reason would be the same as calling the Sleeping Car Porters' Union a Jim Crow union because all or most of its members are Negro.

In the first place, 60A is not a local. It is an auxiliary to local 60. Quite a difference there. In the second place, the Sleeping Car Porters' Union would be a Jim Crow organization if it had a parallel construction to that of 60A. If the Sleeping Car Porters' Union were an auxiliary to, say, the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and, if instead of A. Philip Randolph there were the equivalent of a white local manager, selected in reality by the international office of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen to service the needs of the Sleeping Car Porters' local, then the Sleeping Car Porters' local would be a segregated auxiliary just as 60A is a Jim Crow unit.

Then we have Tyler the expert on ethnology:

"Hill's suggestion that a separate local of shipping clerks would elect a Negro manager is both inaccurate and vicious. It is inaccurate because local 60A is mixed with no one ethnic group—Negro, Puerto Ricans, Cubans, Irish, Jewish, or Italian—in a simple majority."

It is Tyler who is inaccurate and vicious. Inaccurate, because I did not say that a separate local would "elect" a Negro manager but that "there would inevitably be a Negro or Puerto Rican manager." While the ILGWU constitution provides for the formal election of local managers they are not really elected. In practice they are selected by the international and confirmed by the local.[2] In the second place, I said "Negro or Puerto Rican," and not just "Negro." Tyler decided to omit the Puerto Ricans in his reference in order to make his sly point that no one ethnic group is in a simple majority in 60A. (To be sure, in a previous quote from Tyler on this matter, the reader can clearly see that he says, "most of its members are Negro and Puerto Rican." Suddenly, in an effort to fudge over the question we are introduced to Cubans, Irish, Jewish, or Italian as though they represent a significant part of the membership of 60A.) Now, it is true that Negroes and Puerto Ricans constitute a separate group. But they are coupled in my discussion and in Mr. Tyler's—except when inconvenient to him—because they are both the victims of economic, political, ethnic, and racial discrimination different in kind and degree from other ethnic groups which comprise less than 10 percent of 60A.

Tyler goes even further:

"There is no reason to believe that the members of Local 60A would elect a manager on a racist rather than unionist basis. The proposal is socially vicious because to create a separate Local 60A just to guarantee the election of a Negro or Puerto Rican manager is to create a jim crow local—separate but equal. ILGWU members prefer integration: craft and color."

Most damaging here (aside from the "elected" managers) is Tyler's sophistry, that pseudo-liberal conception that for Negroes and Puerto Ricans to seek their own leadership is racism in reverse. Of course, I think that Negroes and Puerto Ricans would take special interest and justifiable pride in electing a Negro or Puerto Rican manager or joint board chairman or president of the international union.

I might ask Mr. Tyler whether he uses the same standards in judging political gerrymandering when it is done to deny Negroes representation in Congress. Does he then virtuously declare that it is "socially vicious" to speak of allowing Negroes to have Negro Congressmen? Or does he, good liberal that he is, protest this kind of gerrymandering—another form of "craft and color"—because it specifically denies Negroes their representational rights?

And look at what Mr. Tyler italicizes in the above passage. How vicious it is, he writes "to create a separate Local 60A just to guarantee the election of a Negro or Puerto Rican." However, Negroes and Puerto Ricans are already separate. Who is responsible for this? The NAACP or the ILGWU? They are separated, not as an independent local as are other crafts in the Dress Joint Board, but as an auxiliary of a skilled local. Thus, they are separate and unequal. It is also interesting to note that 60 and 60A have separate executive boards but one manager for both units.

---

[2] The Bureau of Labor Management of the U.S. Department of Labor recently investigated a complaint from an ILGWU member in New Bedford, Mass. The Bureau found improper election practices by the ILGWU and ordered a new election. This case has clear implications for the internal practices of the ILGWU nationally.

The NAACP claims that when the boundary of separation is drawn at the point where autonomy begins, this is evidence that discrimination is a hard fact. As against this affiliated status, local autonomy would, indeed, be a step in the right direction. And not "just to" guarantee the election of a Negro or Puerto Rican, but as a means of better protecting the rights of both groups and offering the enormous educational and training advantage of self-leadership.

Tyler says as against local autonomy for 60A, "ILGWU members prefer integration: craft and color." Bravo. The NAACP looks forward to seeing Negro and Puerto Rican ILGWU members on the general executive board, as local union managers, given a more equitable share of the better-paying jobs and that the union conduct a vigorous union campaign against exploitation.

One final quotation from Tyler on 60A: "a majority of the combined members of local 60 and local 60A are Negro and Puerto Rican. Each member has an equal vote—whether 60 or 60A. If the present manager is not a Negro or Puerto Rican, it merely indicates that the members of this union prefer not to cast a 'racial' vote."

I am obliged for the third time to point out to the reader that whether the manager of Local 60 is or is not a Puerto Rican or a Negro has little to do with normal elections. The manager is actually selected by the general executive board and ritualistically confirmed at a local union meeting. Apart from this little detail what Tyler is suggesting is completely demagogic. Everyone knows that given the situation as I have described it—and as Tyler unwittingly confirms—the "equal vote" that he boasts of is nonexistent because of the lack of involvement of these minorities in the union. Their apathy and the refusal to use their "equal vote" is an indication of the controlled, undemocratic atmosphere in which they are treated with contempt as "things" to be manipulated by an arrogant bureaucracy.

Am I exaggerating when I say that the ILGWU is contemptuous of Negroes and Puerto Ricans? A comparison of the clauses in the same collective agreement concerning discharge of workers, first that covering members of locals 10, 22, 60 and 89, then covering members of 60A, is in order.

THIRTY-EIGHTH: Discharge (of members of locals 10, 22, 60 and 89—H.H.); (a) no member of the association shall discharge a worker, except for misbehavior sufficient to justify a discharge, before a notice in writing is served on joint council of the reason for the intended discharge. In case of a discharge for alleged misbehavior, and it be determined that the worker be reinstated, he is entitled to receive pay for all the time he stayed out; (b) joint council shall investigate the notice of the intended discharge within 48 hours of the receipt of same. If joint council does not consent to the proposed discharge, the question shall be referred to the impartial chairman, whose decision shall be final. Pending such decision the employee shall continue working at full pay (Collective Agreement 1961–64—United Better Dress Manufacturers' Association, Inc., with International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and Dressmakers' Joint Council).

SEVENTY-FOUR: On discharge (of members of 60A—H.H.).

The employer may discharge regular employees for any just and reasonable cause including the following: incompetence, insubordination, dishonesty, intoxication, soldiering on the job, repeated lateness or absence; and assault or attempted assault on the job.

Repeated breach of reasonable rules established by the employer:

In the event that the union questions any discharge as not being for just and reasonable cause, it shall so inform the association within 5 days after the discharge. Representatives of the union and the association shall attempt to settle the grievance by negotiation. If no settlement can be reached, the joint council may invoke the arbitration machinery provided in this agreement. (Collective agreement, 1961–64—United Better Dress Manufacturers' Association, Inc., with International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union and Dressmakers' Joint Council.)

In the discharge of members of locals 10, 22, 60, and 89, the burden is on the employer, not the worker.

In the discharge of a member of 60A, the burden is on the worker. It is significant that specific reasons for which a member of 60A can be discharged are set forth, while with respect to members of locals 10, 22, 60, and 89, they are not.

What do Tyler, Fleischman, and Muravchik have to say about these specifics contained in a contract negotiated by the ILGWU? Are "dishonesty," "intoxication," "soldiering on the job," "assault or attempted assault on the job" the characteristic habits of Negroes and Puerto Ricans? Or do they recognize in this listing the hallmark of the bigot enthusiastically perpetuating the sickening stereotypes of racial and national minorities? If Tyler does not understand this, his stint with the ILGWU has served to corrupt his sensibilities completely. Mr. Tyler and the other apologists for the ILGWU neglect to state that the "integrated" members of 60A are covered by a separate union agreement from that covering members of locals 10, 22, 60, and 89.

Further evidence of discrimination is documented in Tyler's own discussion of the ILGWU's officer qualification course and the union's training institute.

The officer qualification course was set up in 1938 "to prepare candidates for elective office." A total of 832 applied. Of these 832, only "19 were Negro and 8 were Spanish speaking—a total of 27 in 24 years." An annual average of one (and one-eighth).

Tyler then tries to compensate for this failure with the reputed success of the union's training institute. We are told that in 11 years, 30 Negroes and Puerto Ricans were graduated by the institute. An excellent record. Certainly, it is better than the officer qualification course showing. However, far from proving the ILGWU's concern with promoting Negro and Puerto Rican leadership, the greater success of the institute reveals just the opposite when placed side by side with the failure in the officer qualification course. The reason lies in the difference between the two programs which Tyler deliberately tries to gloss over. The failure was in recruiting trainees within the union for officers with the (theoretical) right to participate in formulating and influencing the policies of the union. On the other hand, where the ILGWU achieved some success, in the institute, it has been with individuals who are not necessarily even members of the union, who are to become employees and not officials of the union and who have no voice in determining union policy. Also, the ILGWU must employ some Negro and Spanish-speaking organizers given the changing racial and ethnic composition of the industry.

As an example of discrimination, I mentioned in my article the fact that two locals in Puerto Rico—locals 600 and 601—were placed under the managership of an official from New York, one Jerry Schoen. Here is how Tyler discusses my charge:

Hill charge: "The two Peurto Rican locals are 'denied Puerto Rican leadership.'"

Now, the words are mine, but the period after the quoted phrase belongs to Tyler. What I wrote was: "However, both these locals are denied Puerto Rican leadership as they are managed by one Jerry Schoen, a former business agent for local 62, who was sent from New York City by the international union to manage these two Puerto Rican locals."

By trimming my sentence as he does, Tyler thinks that all he has to do is rattle off a list of Puerto Rican "officials" in these locals, although the point I am making, seen clearly in the omitted words, is that the two locals are denied self-leadership "as they are managed by one Jerry Schoen."

And as Tyler knows, as I know, as anyone who knows anything about the ILGWU knows, it is the manager who wields the power in ILGWU locals. It is Schoen who represents the international in Puerto Rico. His is the real power.

More than a year and a half ago, officers of local 10 claimed, before representatives of the New York State Commission for Human Rights investigating a complaint of racial discrimination, that there were 400 nonwhite members of this local of skilled, higher-paid workers. I offered to withdraw the complaint if this were proven. The figure was then reduced to 300 by the union representatives. Harry Fleischman later said that there are "250 Negro and Spanish-speaking cutters in local 10," ("Let's Be Human," October 1962, Newsletter of the National Labor Service.) In Fleischman's other article "Is the ILGWU Biased?" he refers to "Negro ILGWU member Ernest Holmes" (p. 1, 3d par.). Holmes was never, at any time a member of the ILGWU. This was precisely the charge of his highly publicized complaint, that he was refused admission into local 10 of the ILGWU. This falsehood is typical of Fleischman's frequent distortions.

In Gus Tyler's article we are told that there were 239 Negro and Spanish-speaking workers in local 10—only slightly more than one-half of what the ILGWU originally claimed.

On the basis of these figures, either the ILGWU lied one and a half years ago, or it has dropped nearly 200 Negro and Spanish-speaking people from local 10.

Of the 239 figure in Tyler's article, it would be interesting to know how many are Negro and Puerto Ricans, since his count embraces "Cubans, Panamanians, Colombians, Dominicans, Salvadorians, Mexicans, etc., as well as Puerto Ricans * * *." I, of course, am not discussing "Cubans * * * etc," but Negroes and Puerto Ricans, over 120,000 strong, with problems quite distinct from those presumably located by Tyler in his quest for as large a number as possible. It would also be interesting to know how many Negroes and Puerto Ricans have been brought into local 10 in the past 18 months—i.e., since the NAACP focused national attention on the status of Negroes and Puerto Ricans in the ILGWU.

Tyler says that when Hill claims in a television broadcast "that there are in the vicinity of 50 (Negro) cutters of local 10 in the city," that he "still has no regard for the truth."

However, if one makes a modest deduction for "Cubans * * * etc." from Tyler's strained-for 239 his number of Negroes and Puerto Ricans would no doubt go below 200. Since it is most likely that there are considerably more Puerto Ricans than Negroes in local 10, I suggest that Tyler take out his slide rule and let the reader know how far off my estimated "vicinity of 50 (Negro) cutters" is from his "regard for the truth."

Now, even less than 200 skilled Negro and Puerto Rican workers would not be too bad in a local of 1,000 or 2,000 craft workers. But, if Tyler wants to play the numbers game, why does he hide the most revealing figure, "239 Negroes, Puerto Ricans plus Cubans * * * etc.," out of 7,531 members. Slightly more than 3 percent. This, Tyler tells us, "is an impressive demonstration of integration." This figure that represents integration to Mr. Tyler is not much better than the integration of Negro children in the public schools of North Carolina.

The NAACP finds this impressive evidence of discrimination, especially when over one-half the New York membership of the ILGWU is composed of Negroes and Puerto Ricans.

Tyler tells us that what makes the over 200 figure such an impressive demonstration is that "there is very little turnover of employment; the total number of jobs covered by local 10 has fallen in the last decade." While this might explain a disproportionately fewer number of Negroes and Puerto Ricans, it cannot explain the excessiveness of that disproportion.

Though they tell us that Negroes and Puerto Ricans never had it so good, as in local 10, ILGWU spokesmen usually feel compelled to explain that the union is not responsible for hiring cutters; it is all the employers' fault. This won't do. In the first place, if there is impressive integration no one is really at fault. In the second place, if it is only the employers who discriminate in hiring, it is the responsibility of the union to combat that policy. In the third place, the union does have considerable control in the hiring of cutters.

In the November 1, 1962, issue of Justice, the official ILGWU publication, there is a news story which would seem not only to substantiate the union's placement role, but to boast of it. The article states: "A total of 576 members of local 10 have been placed on permanent jobs during the year since last October, Vice President Moe Falikman, manager of the organization reported at its membership meeting on October 29. This was disclosed by a tabulation based on reports submitted by officers and business agents functioning in the various trades in which cutters are employed."

The report continues with reference to the local's placement activity over a 3-year period and says that placing its members in permanent jobs "is a major continuing activity."

Thus, it is clear beyond doubt, despite the ILGWU's public denials, that local 10 has considerable control in the placement of cutters in all branches of the women's garment industry in New York City.

On the total number of Negroes and Puerto Ricans in all the skilled craft locals, Tyler makes a boast of what is actually a confession of moral bankruptcy. He writes that the number of Spanish-speaking and Negro members "runs into the tens of thousands"[3] and in the next breath he takes pride in his reference to "hundreds of Negroes, Puerto Ricans, plus other Latins, Japanese, etc.," who are in the skilled craft locals.

A further analysis, employing the ILGWU's own figures, discloses the following: out of a total of approximately 14,500 members of Cutters' Local 10, Pressers' Locals 35 and 60, and the Pressers' branches of the two Italian Locals, 48 and 89, there are some 550 Negroes, Puerto Ricans, and Cubans * * * etc. This constitutes about 3.7 percent of the total membership of the locals controlling the highest paying jobs in New York City; 96.3 percent white and 3.7 percent Negroe, Puerto Rican, Cuban * * * etc., cannot be considered "an impressive demonstration of integration." I submit that the ILGWU figures are greatly inflated; 2 percent is closer to the truth.

Why does the NAACP single out the ILGWU? Aren't there unions with far worse records than this one? These questions are usually asked by those who will candidly acknowledge that the charges against Dubinsky's union are justified in large measure, but bridle at concentrating so much fire on a "progressive" union which passes fine resolutions on civil rights, and contributes to worthy causes.

I believe that this approach is unwarranted for the following reasons:

1. The ILGWU is the largest union in the largest manufacturing industry in New York City, the world's largest city. It affects the economic welfare and dignity of hundreds of thousands of Negro and Puerto Rican men, women and children in New York. Is the NAACP supposed to refrain from presenting the truth about this union because it passes good resolutions on integration in Mississippi?

2. The "go soft on Dubinsky" line has the disagreeable connotations of "Uncle Tomism": it is suggested that the liberal and Negro community should be appreciative of small favors and not attack its "benefactors" even if those friends aren't completely perfect. This is of course nonsense and is rejected by responsible and serious elements in the Negro community.

3. It implicitly fails to give credit to the NAACP for its work in combating the anti-Negro practices of blatantly discriminatory unions, North and South. A part of my time for the past 16 years as a staff member of the NAACP has been devoted to exposing and combating the vicious racial practices of the railroad unions, the building trades unions and other labor organizations where discriminatory practices are blatant and to open new job opportunities for Negro workers in the craft jurisdictions. Most of the major breakthroughs in the past decade made by Negro workers in the "old-line" AFL-controlled craft occupations as well as in industrial union jurisdictions are the direct result of NAACP exposure and pressure.

4. Those who say "Hill is really right but why make such a fuss over a 'progressive union' substitute sentimentality for thought, myth for reality. Judging the ILGWU by its current practices and not by its past, the 'progressive' label is a nostalgic hangover." The word suggests militancy, internal democracy and social vision. On none of these counts does the ILGWU qualify.

5. The ILGWU leadership is greatly concerned with presenting a progressive liberal public image, without critically examining the social consequences of its policies and practices. This is perhaps the most dismal factor in the entire situation, their incapacity to admit that anything at all is wrong. But they do care obsessively about their public image. The concern, I believe, increases the possibility that the pressures applied by the NAACP might have salutary effects. I think that as a result of the activity of the NAACP there may be more Negroes and Puerto Ricans in better-paid jobs, that the operational bar against Negroes and Puerto Rican local managers might be raised slightly; Dubinsky will perhaps allow a Negro or Puerto Rican to find his place on the General Board and the ILGWU might feel obliged to do something about the substandard wage levels in the industry which victimizes, primarily, the Negro and Puerto Rican worker. Already one notes perhaps a little less arrogance on the part of ILGWU officials in the daily treatment of Negroes and Puerto Ricans in the shops and within the unions.

I now know that the above will produce anguished cries of "anti-Semite." The epithet has already been hurled at me (and at Paul Jacobs for his article on the ILGWU in Harper's magazine December 1962).[4] The charge is too obscene, too rotten to permit dignified comment.

I anticipated that my analysis of the ILGWU would be met with the fury with which any powerful and entrenched bureaucracy retaliates when challenged. The attacks upon me for telling the truth are characterized by a viciousness and hysteria that tells much about the institution defending itself. Among a variety of other personal attacks the ILGWU leadership has charged publicly and in corridors that I am a Jewish anti-Semite, a kind of McCarthyite, and in the camp of the Birchites.

No less incredible than the anti-Semitic smear was the abortive attempt to discredit me by Evelyn Dubrow, an ILGWU staff member who together with other union representatives went to several Congressmen and other public officials and "explained" that Hill was a Communist stirring up racial strife, an anti-Semite, etc.

If I am incensed at the anti-Semitic smear, the reader will surely understand. I am, after all, a "white Jew" as Tyler so delicately puts it in his New Politics article.

Had I committed a gross injustice in my charges, the Dubinsky leadership's reaction would never take such grotesque forms. That it struck out so wildly, with such malevolence, is evidence that my criticism pierced a bureaucratic shell and pricked what there is of a sense of guilt among those who have led the ILGWU from what it was yesterday to what it has become today.

While Tyler does not make this charge—at least, not in his article—he must accept responsibility for it considering its source. I am not debating Tyler the individual, but Tyler the defense counsel for the ILGWU.

Roy Wilkins, executive secretary of the NAACP, responding to a Jewish Labor Committee attack on the Association, stated in a letter dated Oct. 31, 1962, to Emanual Muravchik as follows:

We assert with the greatest emphasis that nothing, absolutely nothing, in Mr. Hill's recent or more remote statements can be construed as anti-Semitic. This is a grave charge to make. It requires more substantiation that your flip reference in a part of a sentence. The charge is not only against Mr. Hill, but against the NAACP itself. We do not deign to defend ourselves against such a baseless allegation. Its inclusion in the resolution, as well as in the statements to the press by Mr. Zimmerman is unworthy of an organization like the Jewish Labor Committee which, in the very nature of things must be conversant with the seriousness of such a charge and with the evidence required to give it substance. No such evidence has ben submitted in this case beyond the citation of the use by Mr. Hill of one word, "ethnic," out of a total of 4,500 words in his testimony before the House subcommittee. The relevance of his comparison of the ethnic composition of the membership and the leadership of the ILGWU can hardly be questioned in this context.

Wilkins also said: "We reject the proposition that any segment of the labor move-

---

[3] That many of these tens of thousands are "relative newcomers," as he puts it, helps naught, since tens of thousands of the more than 120,000 have been in the industry for many years and are "newcomers" only "relative" to those who have been there for decades.

[4] The Jewish Daily Forward, Dec. 10, 1962. J. Fogel writes that "Two Jewish young men, Hill and Jacobs, spread anti-Semitic poison against the ILGWU and against President Dubinsky." The frequent treatment of these matters in the Jewish Daily Forward is worthy of a separate study. The Forward regards all criticisms of the ILGWU as an act of anti-Semitism and while freely distorting the news, reports these events in a tone of hysteria and self-pity. Headlines in the issue of Aug. 22, 1962—"The Racist Assault on the ILGWU."

ment is sacrosanct in the matter of practices and/or policies which restrict employment opportunities on racial or religious or nationality grounds. We reject the contention that bringing such charges constitutes a move to destroy 'unity' among civil rights groups unless it be admitted that this unity is a precarious thing, perched upon unilateral definition of discrimination by each member group. In such a situation, the 'unity' is of no basic value and its destruction may be regarded as not a calamity, but a blessed clearing of the air.

In this connection, it is well to reiterate a facet of this discussion which appears to have escaped the attention of the various reviewers and resolution writers. It is that Herbert Hill, our labor secretary, has but one duty and that is to serve the interests of the Negro worker through the NAACP. Other groups, including trade unions, have powerful machinery to protect their principal interests. Mr. Hill is employed to maintain antidiscrimination work in the employment field as his top and only priority. He is not for trade unions first and Negros workers second. He has no divided loyalties."

In the years to come the effective work of the NAACP in fighting for a decent, socially conscious labor movement that is sensitive to the needs of the Negro worker will be appreciated. If trade unions in the United States are to be more than just another "business enterprise," more than just organizations that negotiate terms under which labor is bought and sold, then the struggle today for an immediate end to anti-Negro practices within the unions will provide the social basis for defending the labor movement tomorrow.

Herbert Hill is national labor secretary of the NAACP.

TEST BAN CAVE-IN A DISGRACE

(Mr. HOSMER (at the request of Mr. KUNKEL) was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. HOSMER. Mr. Speaker, reported United States-United Kingdom offers to Khrushchev of 30 on-site inspections during a 7-year period to police a test band treaty amount to a craven surrender to the Soviet test band treaty bargaining position.

Premier Khrushchev has offered only "2 or 3 inspections annually," and then only under the most restrictive conditions, actually exempting from inspection any area declared by the Kremlin to be a "military area."

When negotiations began in 1958, 20 inspections annually were demanded. The Kennedy administration dropped demands to "10 to 12," then to 7. Although the presently reported concession averages 4¼ inspections annually, the effective number would actually be Khrushchev's demanded three. This is because inspections could not reasonably be consumed on an annual basis, but must be reserved by at least 25 percent to use if needed during a period of greater suspicion during the last portion of the 7 years.

This cave-in to Soviet demands deserves the most severe censure. It is time that Americans demand that courage be restored in the Nation's leadership. The constant withering of U.S. leaders in the face of Communist threats, demands and truculence can only bring the United States down to a second rate status and earn the world's contempt.

The ridiculous absurdity to this token number of inspections is best grasped when it is realized the Soviet Union spreads across two continents, contains one-sixteenth of the world's land mass and occupies 8½ million square miles. Three inspections could have no more deterrent effect on Soviet cheating than none at all.

It is past time that commonsense and sanity be restored to our side of the Geneva bargaining tables. The danger of Soviet cheating on a test band treaty is real and ever present. Otherwise machinery to deter it would not have been the subject of discussion and negotiation over the past 5 years. To now abandon the very machinery that might prevent such cheating is only another way of trusting the Nation's future security and survival to no more than a Soviet promise not to sieze the opportunity to achieve overwhelming military superiority and thereby satisfy communism's fiery ambition for world domination.

(Mr. ASHBROOK (at the request of Mr. KUNKEL) was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.)

[Mr. ASHBROOK'S remarks will appear hereafter in the Appendix.]

MUSIC FOR YOUNG AMERICANS

(Mr. KYL (at the request of Mr. KUNKEL) was given permission to extend his remarks at this point in the RECORD and include extraneous matter.)

Mr. KYL. Mr. Speaker, 1,100 young people from 24 schools in 13 States, including New York, New Hampshire, Ohio, Rhode Island, Tennessee, and Wisconsin, were present at a concert last night, in the departmental auditorium of the U.S. Department of Labor in the Nation's Capital, which marked the opening of the eighth annual music for young America concerts by the National Symphony Orchestra under its conductor Howard Mitchell.

The American Federation of Musicians, AFL–CIO, chose this occasion to confer a distinguished service award on Mrs. Herbert A. May, one of our country's greatest private patrons of music, whose generosity has made these music programs possible. The award was presented by Herman Kenin, president of the international union, and it read in part:

In grateful appreciation for efforts in behalf of live music and musicians and devotion to the advancement of the cultural arts.

In his presentation, Mr. Kenin said:

In presenting this symbol, I wish to address myself also to the many hundreds of young people and the distinguished citizens here tonight.

Music and all of the performing arts need much the same guidance and help that is so necessary to the maturing years of our young people. You, as one of the foremost patrons of music in our whole society, have provided this influence.

By completely underwriting 5 weeks of free concerts for the past several years Mrs. May has provided an introduction to symphonic music for thousands of young Americans and has provided an extended music season and additional employment for the musicians of the National Symphony Orchestra.

The Secretary of Labor, W. Willard Wirtz, told the young people at last night's opening concert, as provided by the Washington, D.C., Daily News, that he hoped they would "take away a picture of a gracious lady, an extraordinary conductor and one of the finest orchestras in the whole world."

To qualify for admission young visitors to the Nation's Capital must be high school students, and many tickets are made available through the offices of Members of Congress.

The Washington, D.C., Evening Star commented editorially that this music series has the dual purpose of, first, enriching the lives of young people through an introduction to good music; and, second, financially assisting the orchestra members by extending their season.

For many young people these music programs are "the entry into a new and wonderful world," the Star added.

The Washington, D.C., Post editorial says of Mrs. May that she has long been "a generous and imaginative patron of music in this community," and this editorial added that "all of us owe her the warmest thanks."

We do, indeed, owe her our thanks for opening this important vista on our Nation's cultural heritage to so many of our young people, who are the leaders of tomorrow's world.

I include as part of my remarks a newspaper article and editorials which give a fuller account of Music for Young America programs:

[From the Washington (D.C.) Daily News, Apr. 24, 1963]

YOUNG AMERICA MUSIC SEASON OPENS—MRS. MAY GETS A CITATION

(By Milton Berliner)

Boys and girls from 24 schools in 13 States were on hand at the Departmental Auditorium last night for the opening of the eighth annual Music for Young America series by Howard Mitchell and the National Symphony.

"This is something of record," Mr. Mitchell told them just before the orchestra launched into the overture to Rossinni's "The Thieving Magpie."

This was followed by some Bach, Beethoven and Tchaikowsky.

Midway in the program there was a break for the presentation of an American Federation of Musicians award to the sponsor of these series, Mrs. Herbert A. May.

The citation, union's president Herman Kenin said, was "in grateful appreciation for efforts in behalf of live music and musicians and devotion to the advancement of cultural arts."

In the 8 years of underwriting these series of free concerts, Mrs. May has provided a total of 40 weeks' employment for the 95 National Symphony musicians and an introduction to symphonic music for thousands of young Americans.

Labor Secretary W. Willard Wirtz told the audience that he hoped it would "take away a picture of a gracious lady, an extraordinary conductor and one of the finest orchestras in the whole world."

[From the Washington (D.C.) Evening Star, Apr. 24, 1963]

MUSIC AND MRS. MAY

The National Symphony Orchestra is fortunate to have thousands of "angels" who contribute to its welfare. But a very special angel is Mrs. Herbert A. May who for 5 weeks each spring practically owns the orchestra. Graciously, she shares Howard Mitchell and his 95 players with visiting schoolchildren so they may enjoy "Music for Young America." This is the series she began financing 8 years ago with the dual purpose of (1) enriching the lives of young people through an introduction to good music and (2) financially assisting the orchestra members by extending their season.

The opening of this year's series was particularly auspicious. For the American Federation of Music recognized Mrs. May's generosity with a bronze plaque. It was an award well deserved, but no more significant than the audience of bright-faced youngsters from Wautoma, Wis., Suncock, N.H., Whitesboro, Ky., New York City, St. Louis, St. Paul, Mount Vernon, Ohio, and 14 other cities. For many of them it was the entry into a new and wonderful world.

[From the Washington (D.C.) Post, Apr. 23, 1963]

MUSIC PATRON

The National Symphony Orchestra will play the opening concert today of its eighth season of free concerts for schoolchildren visiting Washington. It is altogether fitting that the American Federation of Musicians should have chosen this occasion to confer a Distinguished Service Award on Mrs. Herbert A. May, long a generous and imaginative patron of music in this community. Her generosity affords not only a great boon to the children who attend these concerts but an extended period of employment for the orchestra's musicians as well. As in past years, Mrs. May has completely underwritten the 30 concerts that will be performed between the opening concert and May 24. All of us owe her the warmest thanks.

SPECIAL ORDERS GRANTED

By unanimous consent, permission to address the House, following the legislative program and any special orders heretofore entered, was granted to:

Mr. BRAY (at the request of Mr. KUNKEL), for 30 minutes, on Tuesday, April 30, 1963.

Mr. HALPERN, for 15 minutes, today.

Mr. O'BRIEN of Illinois (at the request of Mr. PUCINSKI), for 20 minutes, today, and to revise and extend his remarks and include extraneous matter.

Mr. RYAN of New York (at the request of Mr. ALBERT), for 15 minutes, tomorrow.

EXTENSION OF REMARKS

By unanimous consent, permission to extend remarks in the Appendix of the RECORD, or to revise and extend remarks, was granted to:

Mr. REUSS in six instances and to include extraneous matter.

Mr. MATTHEWS and to include extraneous matter.

Mr. BURKHALTER and to include extraneous matter.

Mr. THOMPSON of New Jersey in five instances and to include extraneous matter.

Mr. MCCORMACK (at the request of Mr. ALBERT) and to include extraneous matter.

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. KUNKEL) and to include extraneous matter:)

Mr. SCHWENGEL.
Mr. YOUNGER in two instances.
Mr. DAGUE.
Mr. HALL.
Mr. DEROUNIAN in three instances.
Mrs. ST. GEORGE.

Mr. CURTIS in two instances, one of which notwithstanding it will exceed two pages of the RECORD and is estimated by the Public Printer to cost $292.50.

Mr. OLIVER P. BOLTON.
Mr. GUBSER.
Mr. SHORT.
Mr. ROBISON in five instances.
Mr. FINO.
Mr. FINDLEY.
Mr. SAYLOR.
Mr. HOSMER in two instances.
Mr. BECKER in two instances.
Mr. DERWINSKI in three instances.
Mr. SAYLOR.
Mr. BELL.
Mr. CONTE.
Mr. GOODELL.
Mr. GROVER in two instances.
Mr. TOLLEFSON in two instances.
Mr. BOW in five instances.
Mr. WHALLEY.

Mr. STINSON to extend his remarks just prior to vote on Sibal amendment.

(The following Members (at the request of Mr. ALBERT) and to include extraneous matter:)

Mr. DINGELL.
Mr. CELLER.
Mr. MULTER in three instances.
Mr. MURPHY of New York in two instances.
Mr. FLOOD in two instances.
Mr. BURKE.
Mr. JOHNSON of Wisconsin in 10 instances.
Mr. FARBSTEIN in three instances.
Mrs. KELLY.
Mr. DORN.
Mr. COHELAN in six instances.
Mr. JENNINGS.

SENATE BILLS REFERRED

Bills of the Senate of the following titles were taken from the Speaker's table and, under the rule, referred as follows:

S. 2. An act to establish water resources research centers at land-grant colleges and State universities, to stimulate water research at other colleges, universities, and centers of competence, and to promote a more adequate national program of water research; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

S. 1007. An act to guarantee electric consumers in the Pacific Northwest first call on electric energy generated at Federal hydroelectric plants in that region and to guarantee electric consumers in other regions reciprocal priority, and for other purposes; to the Committee on Interior and Insular Affairs.

THE LATE PRESIDENT OF ISRAEL, ITZHAK BEN-ZVI

(Mr. ALBERT asked and was given permission to address the House for 1 minute and to revise and extend his remarks.)

Mr. ALBERT. Mr. Speaker, I take this time to offer, on behalf of the House of Representatives, a resolution expressing the profound sorrow of the House on the death of His Excellency Itzhak Ben-Zvi, President of the State of Israel. In the death of the late President the free world has lost a great champion. The American people have lost a friend. The people of the State of Israel have lost one of their most distinguished statesmen and beloved citizens.

Mr. Speaker, I know that I express the sentiment of all the Members of the House of Representatives and of all the people of this country when I say we have learned with the deepest sorrow of the death of the late President. To his family and loved ones, and to the people of the State of Israel we extend our heartfelt sympathy.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I yield to the distinguished gentleman from New York, former U.S. Ambassador to the State of Israel [Mr. REID].

Mr. REID of New York. Mr. Speaker, I would like to associate myself with the resolution and with the remarks of the distinguished majority leader.

Mr. Speaker, I believe truly that the free world has lost one of its best friends. President Itzhak Ben-Zvi was truly a statesman and a scholar. He believed in close relations between Israel and the United States. He worked nobly in the vineyards of peace. He cared deeply about doing everything possible to establish strong and abiding relationships between Israel and the emerging as well as the older nations of the free world. Above all, let me say this: I had the privilege of knowing the President personally, and I remember him for his humanity, his humility, his simplicity, and for his scholarly statesmanship. He had many friends in this country and his loss will be much felt here and throughout the world.

Mr. Speaker, I remember in 1960 at a diplomatic reception in Jerusalem when the President of Israel talked simply and movingly of peace. I would like here, perhaps as a fitting tribute, to quote a passage of the Bible that was especially meaningful to President Ben-Zvi. He was a scholar who was long interested in Isaiah, and I quote from a passage on peace that was particularly meaningful to him, and a passage that he called to the attention of the diplomatic corps. It is from chapter II of Isaiah, verse 2:

And it shall come to pass in the last days, that the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains, and shall be exalted above the hills; and all nations shall flow unto it.

Verse 4:

And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

Mr. Speaker, it is in this spirit that I remember President Ben-Zvi, who will long be an inspiration to those who were privileged to know him, and I indeed

Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee

6 Raymond Street, N.W., Atlanta 14, Georgia
5 Beekman Street, New York 38, New York

April 27, 1963

Sent to Corporation Directors in the NY Area

The recent explosive situation in Birmingham, makes it emminently clear that the industrial development of the South depends on racial harmony. An example of how racial conflict is harmful is indicated by the failure of business enterprises to invest in Arkansas following the Little Rock crisis.

At a time of international tension, vast unemployment and economic recessions, the growth of industry becomes a vital question to development in any section of the nation.

The growth of such industry is not possible unless individuals responsible for the direction of corporations press for equal rights for all citizens.

It would be financially beneficial and ethically correct for you, and for the Birmingham Community, if you supported a program for equal employment opportunities, for the desegregation of public facilities, for the right to protest, and generally to help ease racial tensions in Birmingham.

Concretely this would mean your company would do the following:

1. Make it known to the City of Birmingham*s authorities you are supporting the Reverand Martin Luther King's Drive for Freedom.

2. Work for equal job opportunities in your corporations and industries in Birmingham.

3. Adhere to the President's fair employment practices recommendations.

Should you have any questions, or wish to discuss this matter further, we would be delighted to hear from you.

Sincerely,

Charles F. McDew
Charles F. McDew
Chairman, Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee

James Farmer
James Farmer
National Director,
Congress of Racial Equality

Rev. Dr. Hilderbrand
Rev. Dr. Hilderbrand
President, New York Branch
National Association for the Advancement of Colored People

US STEEL VIOLATES HUMAN RIGHTS

UNITED STATES STEEL, ST. REGIS PAPER, MARTIN-MARIETTA, LONE STAR CEMENT, UNITED STATES PIPE AND FOUNDRY, REPUBLIC STEEL, HARRISON-WALKER REFACTORIES, NATCO, HUTTIG-SASH AND DOOR, AND UNION CARBIDE CORP. ARE SUPPORTING RACISM IN BIRMINGHAM, ALABAMA THROUGH INACTION.

In the struggle for equality, hundreds have been arrested for trying to claim their rights as American citizens. These powerful companies employ over 35% of the work force of Birmingham. The directors of these companies help control every phase of Birmingham life, whether it is by action or inaction.

WE DEMAND THAT UNITED STATES STEEL AND OTHER CORPORATIONS IN THE BIRMINGHAM AREA:

1. Make known to Birmingham authorities that they support the Reverand Martin Luther King's drive for freedom.

2. Work for equal job opportunities in their corporations and industries in Birmingham.

3. Adhere to the President's Fair Employment Practices Recommendations.

Leading directors of U.S. Steel are: Cleo F. Craig 20 Pine St. N.Y. 5; Henry T. Heald 447 Madison Ave. N.Y. 22; Arthur A. Houghton Jr. 715 5th Ave. N.Y. 22; Alex C. Nagle 399 Park Ave. N.Y. 22; Ender M. Voorhees 14 East 68th St. N.Y. 21; Henry S. Wingate 67 Wall Street N.Y. 5; J.M. Meyer Jr. 140 Broadway N.Y. 15; Chairman Roger M. Blough and President Leslie B. Worthington 71 Broadway N.Y. 6.

PICKET U.S. STEEL WEDNESDAY MAY 1ST
71 BROADWAY
11:30 am UNTIL 1:30 pm

Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee 5 Beekman Street rm 1025
Congress of Racial Equality 38 Park Row
CO 7-5541 CO 7-6270

Look 5-21-63

Labor

During a friendly ride with a neighbor, a juror was offered $10,000 in "easy money." The husband of another juror was promised help in getting a promotion. Here is the startling story of incidents during the James R. Hoffa trial, which caused a judge to denounce

JURY TAMPERING IN TENNESSEE

BY CLARK R. MOLLENHOFF

JAMES C. TIPPENS, a Nashville insurance man, looked worried as he stepped into the office of Federal Judge William E. Miller on Wednesday, October 24, 1962.

The previous evening, Tippens had listened closely as Judge Miller warned him and other prospective jurors to avoid any discussion that might prejudice them either for or against James R. Hoffa, international president of the Teamsters Union. Tippens was a likely choice as a member of the jury that would try Hoffa and another Teamster official on the charge of accepting $242,000 from a Detroit trucking firm in violation of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The prospective jurors had been excused for the day, before the selection of the jury was completed. Within two hours after he left the Federal Building in Nashville, Tippens was approached by a neighbor who offered him a ride. Since Tippens regarded the man as a friend, he did not hesitate to accept. He had no reason to believe that the neighbor had any interest in the outcome of the Hoffa trial. The neighbor said that Tippens could pick up $10,000 easily and that the money would be paid to him in $100 bills. Initially, the man did not directly link this offer of "easy money" with the Hoffa case. Tippens asked him the direct question: "You are referring to [my] being a prospective juror in the case?"

The man acknowledged that the offer was connected with the case, and urged Tippens to accept it. Tippens said firmly that he did not want to discuss the matter.

He worried about the conversation all night and was still shaken as he entered the Judge's chambers shortly before 9 the next morning. He had resolved to tell Judge Miller about it, even if this might bring trouble to his friend.

Calm and stern-faced, Judge Miller questioned Tippens briefly about the $10,000 offer. The Judge assured Tippens he had acted properly in reporting the incident, and instructed him to say nothing about the affair to anyone until he was questioned by the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Immediately, Judge Miller summoned Government and defense lawyers to his chambers and told them of the incident. In 27 years as lawyer and judge, he said, this was the first time he had heard of such a bold attempt to corrupt the jury system. Judge Miller carefully avoided any contention that Hoffa or Hoffa's lawyers knew of the contact with Tippens, but explained that the contact made it necessary to release Tippens from jury service.

Chief Prosecutor James Neal then commented that a number of improper and illegal telephone calls had been made to prospective jurors. He was concerned that many of the most responsible people would be eliminated from the jury panel by this tactic. "I am inclined to suggest at this point that the jury be locked up," Neal said. "I realize how onerous that is on everyone."

Z. T. (Tommy) Osborn, Jr., one of Hoffa's defense lawyers, objected: "It is an awful long time, and if there is any way to avoid it, your honor should avoid it." Osborn said the calls to jurors were probably the work of "crackpots and do-gooders."

Prosecutor Charles Shaffer said he did not like to inject an "acrimonious note" at an early stage in the trial, but added, "I have no way of relating this to the defendant Hoffa, but . . . the Government does know, and it is a public record, that jurors have been approached before [in cases] in which he was on trial."

Defense lawyer William E. Bufalino lodged a sharp protest: "That is not so. . . . I have been in every one of those cases that you have been referring to. I was in the Washington case, the New York cases, and when Bobby Kennedy makes statements [about approaches to jurors] . . . in his book The Enemy Within, [that] does not make it a fact."

The decision on "locking up" the jury was a difficult one. Judge Miller commented that it might mean virtual imprisonment of the jurors and alternates for the six or eight weeks the trial was expected to last. Their radio and television programs would have to be censored, their newspapers clipped of stories dealing with the trial, and communication with their families monitored by representatives of the court.

Judge Miller was gravely concerned over the Tippens incident, but the discussions made it seem that further tampering with the jury was unlikely. It appeared to the Judge that only a fool or someone totally corrupt would attempt to contact the Hoffa jurors in the face of such warnings. The jury would not be locked up, at that time, Judge Miller ruled. He also proposed stiff warnings to the jurors and ordered an immediate FBI

continued

Hoffa was accused of directing a witness through hand signals.

Two simple exercises that can add years to your life...

PUSH the brake | PULL the switch

Just PUSH the brake pedal to check your stop lights. Then PULL the light switch to check upper and lower beam headlamps, parking and rear lights. At home, someone in your family can assist. Or ask where you have your car serviced. They'll be happy to help. Chances are 1 in 6 you'll find a burnout.

In May and June, 60% of all rejects at National Vehicle Safety Check lanes will be due to burned-out lamps. Be sure your car can pass inspection and is ready for summer driving.

If a burnout is found, have it replaced with a dependable G-E lamp. They're available at most dealers and preferred by most drivers. General Electric Company, Miniature Lamp Dept., Nela Park, Cleveland 12, O.

Progress Is Our Most Important Product

GENERAL ELECTRIC

Accent on VALUE

Run away to sea in style!

Here's a craft with which to set a course for adventure! We installed power steering to make Chieftain as easy to handle as a runabout; designed a hull that planes eagerly; and straked it for a softer ride and agility on turns. We built this boat to be lived in. We put in weather-proof wall-to-wall carpeting for cool comfort; blue-and-white cabin trim to delight the eye; and bunks, stove, sink, head, cupboard, and water storage to enable up to four people to live aboard comfortably and conveniently. Write today for your free 1963 Starcraft catalog . . . in color.

Chieftain . . . 21 ft. lapstrake aluminum cruiser

STARCRAFT BOAT COMPANY, Dept. L-5 • Goshen, Indiana

STARCRAFT

AMERICA'S MOST POPULAR BOATS

FBI agents trailed some friends investigation of the Tippens incident.

In the next nine weeks, Judge Miller's patience was tested as he fought to maintain the decorum of a Federal court—and to avoid the atmosphere of a circus. The Tippens affair was only the first of many incidents that punctuated the lengthy trial of the tough and aggressive 49-year-old Teamster boss.

From the beginning of the trial, U. S. Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy and Assistant Attorney General Herbert (Jack) Miller were seriously concerned about the possibility of jury tampering.

Reports of the Senate's McClellan Committee had alerted investigators of Hoffa's "hoodlum empire" to evidence of earlier efforts to use the Teamsters Union millions to corrupt or influence local law-enforcement officials, prosecutors, judges and committees of Congress.

Kennedy sent Walter Sheridan, a special assistant, to Nashville, to take charge of preventive action. Sheridan was installed in an office across the corridor from the eighth-floor court, and was to have all of the FBI agents necessary for proper investigations. But even with the full services of the FBI, there were serious restrictions on what could be done. The Government had to operate with extreme propriety; corrupters were under no such restraint. The FBI could not question jurors to determine if they had been contacted before the trial. Merely questioning a prospective juror could be regarded as prejudicial to the rights of Hoffa. Even FBI questioning of close relatives or associates of jurors might be regarded as contaminating a juror. If the FBI received a report of a suspicious contact with a juror, the juror could not be questioned until the Government was prepared to accept his dismissal.

Under Sheridan's direction, the FBI started a regular surveillance of Hoffa's closest associates. Hoffa's lawyers charged that several hundred FBI agents had flooded the Nashville area and had tapped their telephones. The presence of Government agents at the Andrew Jackson Hotel made it impossible to have frank discussions at dinner while making trial preparations, the lawyers said.

Chief Prosecutor Neal made a formal denial of the charge that telephones were being tapped. The estimate by Hoffa's attorney of the number of FBI agents in Nashville was excessive, but no precise figure was available.

On the night of Saturday, November 17, a group of FBI agents concentrated on the surveillance of two Nashville Teamster officials, Ewing King and George Broda.

FBI Agent Charles Still was posted near King's home when the Nashville Teamster boss got into his 1960 Thunderbird and drove away. Still followed King south to Martin's Restaurant on Murfreesboro Road. At 7:03 p.m., King met Teamster business agent Broda.

Still noted that King opened the rear trunk of the Thunderbird, took out a package and then entered a store building with Broda. When the two Teamsters emerged 15 minutes later, they switched cars. King drove Broda's blue and white 1959 Ford southeast in the direction of the small town of Woodbury. Still followed Broda, who drove King's Thunderbird and returned to his home. There, Still kept watch until 4:20 a.m.

The FBI avoided direct trailing of jurors, but Agents Francis Norwood and Willis S. Turner were on general patrol in Woodbury, the home of one of the jurors. She was Betty Paschal, attractive 35-year-old wife of a Tennessee highway patrolman. Woodbury, a hilly country town more than 50 miles southeast of Nashville, had a population of about 1,600. The FBI needed only a car or two cruising through town or parked at a key point to detect unusual activity, particularly in the early-morning hours.

A strange meeting

It was 1:07 a.m. on November 18 when the agents noticed Broda's Ford parked at the Paschal home. A man in a highway-patrol uniform was standing in the drizzling rain, leaning against the car and talking to the driver. The agents recognized the uniformed patrolman as James Paschal, husband of the juror.

There was little traffic, and the FBI men, not wanting to be conspicuous, drove past the Paschal home. At 1:35 a.m., the agents found that both the 1959 Ford and a highway-patrol car were gone. By 2:12 a.m., the highway-patrol car was back in the Paschal driveway.

Other agents on duty in the area noted that King and Paschal met at a desolate wooded spot known as River Springs, three miles south of Woodbury. Instructions were radioed to Agent Warren L. Walsh to go to the vicinity of Lebanon Pike and Old Lebanon Road and to wait there until he saw Ewing King drive past in the 1959 blue-and-white Ford.

Walsh parked as instructed at 2:20 a.m. and remained there until 4:12 a.m., when the Ford passed him. He caught it in his headlights briefly and identified the driver as King. Walsh followed King to his home at 112 Benson Drive, where still another agent, Harry T. Posey, was parked in a manner that prevented King from parking. Posey got out of his car, walked to King's car and excused himself: "Sir, I will be out of your way in a moment." At the same time, he was assuring himself that the man in the car was King.

Back in Nashville, Walter Sheridan was elated over the night's work, but

of Hoffa

SHOCKED JUDGE

Judge Miller charged that efforts had been made "almost before my eyes to influence this jury improperly."

the Government still needed more pieces of evidence. Some of the pieces did not slip into place until two weeks later.

On December 6, Prosecutors Neal and Shaffer asked for a secret hearing. When the court had been cleared of all spectators, Neal revealed the barest outline of King's contact with the husband of the juror. "These facts create compelling suspicious circumstances indicating an improper approach," Neal said in asking removal of Juror Paschal.

Daniel Maher, one of Hoffa's lawyers, said Neal's revelations were of little consequence. "All that he [Neal] has said is that a juror's home was visited and a person who has been in the courtroom [King] was observed talking to the spouse of the juror."

"What do you think about the head of the Teamsters Union in Nashville swapping cars with someone else and going to the home of a juror?" Judge Miller asked Maher.

"I think it is a circumstance," Maher replied.

"I think it is a shocking state of affairs," Judge Miller snapped.

U. S. Marshal Elmer Disspayne was instructed to bring King and Paschal to the court. King was taken into custody in the courthouse corridor. He entered the court with Disspayne, surveyed the scene momentarily and took the Fifth Amendment on all questions about the early-morning meeting with Paschal.

Prosecutor Shaffer complained that the Nashville Teamster president took the Fifth Amendment after receiving a five-finger sign flashed to him by Hoffa. Defense lawyer Bufalino loudly denied Shaffer's claim. He declared that the Teamster boss only had his hand on his chin as he had frequently during the trial.

"Take your hands down so there won't be any question at all," Judge Miller said to Hoffa.

Oscar (Mud) Pitts, a Teamsters Union member, also took the Fifth Amendment when questioned on reports that he had put King in touch with Paschal.

The last witness was Patrolman Paschal. At first, he denied he had ever talked to King. In later questioning, however, he told the Judge that Mud Pitts, a longtime friend, had told him King wanted to see him.

"I told . . . [Pitts] I would meet him [King] up by what we call River Springs," Paschal said. "He [King] just more or less asked me if I would like to get a promotion on my job, that there had been some boys that know me who drive a truck and we are all friends, and they were interested in helping me get a promotion, and if I was interested in it, he would be glad to help," Paschal said.

"What else was said at this time?" Judge Miller asked.

"Well, I just don't recall every little thing that was said," Paschal answered him.

Paschal insisted he had never discussed the Hoffa case with his wife. In fact, Paschal said he did not mention to his wife the strange circumstances under which he was offered a promotion.

"Did it occur to you that he was trying to reach you and influence you so that you would influence your wife?" Judge Miller asked.

"Nothing was said about it," Pa-

continued

LOOK 5-21-63 TOM EATON

"So the famous canals of Mars are really canals! I wonder if we'll ever know who dug them?"

THEY'RE HANGING UP NEW RECORDS for Money-Saving Motor Protection choose from

THE KENDALL FAMILY

of Fine Motor Oils

See your Kendall dealer. He'll help you select from these four outstanding Kendall Motor Oils the one best formulated for your type of engine, your driving habits and your pocketbook. He'll guarantee you extra protection for the money you spend. Why? Because all Kendall Motor Oils are refined from the choicest Pennsylvania Crude Oil. Result? Your engine will stay younger longer. You'll save through the Economy of Kendall Quality.

KENDALL REFINING COMPANY/BRADFORD, PA.

Lubrication Specialists since 1881

ASK YOUR DEALER FOR KENDALL MOTOR OILS

INSTANT MILDNESS

yours with new formula honey lining in Yello-Bole

Duo-Lined Pipe illustrated; $3.95 with nylon bit

Yello-Bole

Imported briar bowl guaranteed against burn-out for life.

Light it. It's mild. Instantly mild with any tobacco. Because now Yello-Bole is pre-caked with a new formula honey lining. Try new Yello-Bole. You'll like it! In a variety of shapes, $1.95 to $5.

•

Free Booklet shows how to smoke a pipe; styles; shapes, write: YELLO-BOLE PIPES, INC., N. Y. 22, Dept. Y33.
By the makers of KAYWOODIE

Jury was finally "locked up."

trolman Paschal again insisted.

"Wasn't it funny to you that a complete stranger would offer to help you get a promotion?"

"I didn't know," Paschal answered.

After excusing the witness, the Judge said, "I think he [Paschal] discussed it with his wife. I don't think there is any question about it. I don't think he is entitled to credibility on his statement. I think she has, on the facts shown on this record, been tampered with as a member of the jury, and I so find."

Judge Miller ordered that Mrs. Paschal be excused, and also ordered the jurors and alternates "locked up" for the remainder of the trial.

Walter Sheridan was already gathering evidence that indicated some Detroit Teamsters were attempting to contact another juror, a 70-year-old retired railroad mail clerk named Gratin Fields. A wide-ranging investigation brought no proof that Fields had actually been contacted, but the fact that an attempt to reach him had been made seemed beyond question.

Testimony in the case was completed on December 20. If Fields was to be removed, it had to be done immediately. Relying on Judge Miller not to reveal important evidence, Prosecutor Neal asked the jurist for a secret session.

"We hand to the court the Government's motion to strike Juror Number 12," Neal stated. Copies of bulky documents were handed to Judge Miller and Hoffa's lawyers. Then Neal added: "We have submitted to the court certain other documentary evidence enclosed in a sealed envelope, which, because of the confidential nature of its contents, the Government requests . . . be sealed after the court reads and considers it."

Judge Miller read the secret papers and immediately ordered the clerk to reseal them: "It is very evident . . . from reading the sealed documents why they should not be released. It is also very evident from the contents of the documents . . . that there is every reason for this court to believe that an effort has been made, if not actually accomplished, to influence this jury improperly. It is an astounding situation."

Defense lawyer Maher objected to dismissal of Fields. "There is nothing to even suggest a contact of a juror," Maher said.

"I am frankly astonished at the history of attempted jury fixing in this case," Judge Miller said in reply.

Defense lawyer James Haggerty complained that the sealed letter was "a pig in the poke," and contended that it placed the defense in "a ludicrous position."

Judge Miller said. "This is the most astounding, most amazing set of circumstances that I have ever seen. . . . If an appellate court . . . should say that I have done wrong, that I have been in error in excusing these jurors, then they will just have to say it. I don't intend to sit here timidly and see efforts made almost before my very eyes to influence this jury improperly."

The Judge ordered dismissal of Juror Fields before instructing the jury. The jury's deliberations began at 3:02 p.m. on Friday, December 21. Four times, the jury reported that it was "hopelessly deadlocked," and on December 23, Judge Miller gave up and declared a mistrial. It was impossible to learn what influenced the decisions of individual jurors. The vote was 7 to 5 for acquittal.

Although the grueling nine-week trial yielded only an inconclusive hung jury, there were some rather conclusive comments by Judge Miller on the jury-tampering activities that had shocked his sense of ethics.

"I wish to make it very clear that I have no reason to doubt the honesty and integrity of any person called for jury service in this case," Judge Miller said.

Improper contacts were made

Then he gave the first public explanation of the mysterious secret sessions: "At these sessions, evidence was presented to the court indicating illegal and improper attempts were being made by close labor-union associates of the defendant [Hoffa] to contact and influence certain members of the jury.

"From the very outset, while the jury was being selected . . . , there were indications that improper contacts had been made and were being made with prospective members of the jury," Judge Miller said and expressed his view that strong action was needed "to protect the court as an institution of government.

"The right of a defendant in a criminal case to be tried by a jury of his peers is one of the most sacred of our constitutional guarantees," the Judge declared. But, he went on to say, "the system of trial by jury . . . becomes nothing more than a mockery if unscrupulous persons are allowed to subvert it by improper and unlawful means.

"I do not intend that such shameful acts to corrupt our jury system shall go unnoticed by this court," Judge Miller said in quiet fury.

The Judge ordered a Federal grand jury convened to investigate the jury tampering and directed U. S. Attorney Kenneth Harwell to conduct other investigations as needed.

Nashville Teamster boss King was among the Teamsters and Teamster lawyers who flocked around Hoffa to offer congratulations after the trial. Hoffa's supporters regarded the hung jury as a victory, but their enthusiasm was cooled when Judge Miller ordered the broadest possible investigation of tampering.

Obstructing justice and jury tampering are felonies. Conviction on either charge can bring a prison term of up to five years. END mexico

the friendly land...

Guanajuato is for Romance and Colonial Charm. Its narrow, crooked streets are of the 17th century. Houses, palaces, monuments, the very life of the city, evoke memories of three centuries ago. Across overhanging balconies, lovers still embrace. Or, as in other times, they whisper sweet words through the intricate filigree of elaborately wrought iron gates. At Abasolo's adjacent spa, fun in the swimming pools blends with the renowned medicinal qualities of the sulphurous wather. San Miguel Allende, center of art and culture, and Dolores Hidalgo, birthplace of Mexican Independence, are nearby too. Here are only a few of Mexico's countless promises of a happy holiday.

CONSULT YOUR TRAVEL AGENT, OR OUR OFFICES AT:
MEXICAN GOVERNMENT TOURISM DEPARTMENT
PASEO DE LA REFORMA 35, MEXICO CITY

CASTER LOOSE? fix it quick with PLASTIC WOOD®
Handles like putty–hardens like wood!

ASK FOR HASTINGS
PISTON RINGS
OIL FILTERS
CASITE ADDITIVES
Best $ you can spend on your car

COOK-OUT...COOK-IN SIGN OF GOOD COOKING
GRAVY MASTER
Surprise your husband with this new idea

BRUSH GRAVY MASTER on steaks, hamburgers, both sides before cooking either outdoors on charcoal grill or indoors right on your kitchen stove. Compare juiciness, tenderness, taste, and eye appeal with any other method you've ever used.

Research Department
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Bulk Rate
U. S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 154
RALEIGH, N. C.

North Carolina Labor and Industry

Monthly Bulletin of the DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, Frank Crane, Commissioner

Vol. XXX RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, MAY, 1963 No. 5

CHAMPION BRICKLAYER APPRENTICE HONORED AT N. C. TRADE FAIR

CHARLOTTE — The vital role of the craftsman in building the State's expanding industrial economy was emphasized in a special ceremony held here Thursday, May 2, at the North Carolina International Trade Fair.

Governor Terry Sanford presented prizes and trophies to Frank Carpenter, of Norwood, Route 1, North Carolina's "Champion Apprentice Bricklayer of 1962." The Governor also presented an engraved trophy to Liles McSwain, of Albemarle, Route 1, Carpenter's employer, in recognition of McSwain's valuable work as a trainer of bricklayers under the State-sponsored Apprenticeship Training Program.

"This is the first time in history that the bricklaying contest has been won by a Carpenter," quipped Gov. Sanford in presenting the young apprentice a $200 savings bond donated by Brick and Tile Service, Inc., and the trophy given by the Carolinas Branch, Associated General Contractors of America.

Carpenter took top honors in a field of 30 apprentice contestants at the 9th annual apprentice bricklaying contest held at the State Fair in Raleigh last fall.

He was also presented a "Certificate of Merit" from the North Carolina Chapter, American Institute of Architects. The certificate was presented by Arthur C. Jenkins, Jr., of Fayetteville, President of the N. C. Chapter, AIA.

The presentation ceremony was held in front of the N. C. Department of Labor booth in the Charlotte Merchandise Mart. On hand to view the proceedings was State Labor Commissioner Frank Crane, Apprenticeship Director C. L. Beddingfield, five members of the North Carolina State Apprenticeship Council, and about 50 representatives of the State, Federal, and private industry agencies which sponsor the annual bricklaying contest.

APPRENTICESHIP COUNCIL HONORED—J. B. Archer of Raleigh (right), State Director of the U. S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training, presents State Labor Commissioner Frank Crane a "Certificate of Appreciation" from the federal agency honoring the North Carolina State Apprenticeship Council for a quarter-century of outstanding service to the furtherance of apprenticeship training in North Carolina. The certificate was presented at a meeting of the Apprenticeship Council in Charlotte on May 2. As Chairman of the Council, Commissioner Crane received the certificate in behalf of the entire group. Council members present included C. L. Beddingfield, Director of the N. C. Department of Labor's Division of Apprenticeship Training and Secretary of the State Apprenticeship Council; Charles D. Bates, State Director of Trade and Industrial Education and Vice-Chairman of the Council; Employer Representatives Dwight L. Casey of Charlotte and D. W. Randolph of Canton; and Employee Representatives George J. Bumby of Wilmington and W. L. Causey of Greensboro. (See picture of Council on page 4.) (Labor Department Photo.)

LABOR LAW INSPECTIONS

Labor Department inspectors visited 1,361 Tar Heel manufacturing, mercantile and service-industry establishments during April to check for compliance with the Labor Laws and health and safety regulations. The inspections covered a total of 43,064 employees, and included 20 special investigations made in response to employee complaints.

Labor law violations, mostly concerning safety and health requirements, were noted in 599 instances. Compliance with recommendations made during previous inspection visits was noted in 830 instances.

The inspectors also made 105 reinspections during April, held 712 conferences with employers and employees, and investigated eleven serious industrial accidents.

SAFETY AWARDS

Commissioner Frank Crane has presented safety awards to the representatives of nearly 500 firms during the last six weeks, in recognition of their excellent work in accident prevention during the

(Continued on page 4)

NORTH CAROLINA
Labor and Industry
Issued Each Month by the
NORTH CAROLINA DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
P. O. Box 1151
Raleigh, N. C.

Sent Free Upon Request

FRANK CRANE
Commissioner of Labor
ALMON BARBOUR
Editor

Vol. XXX May, 1963 No. 5

TAR HEEL JOBS SET RECORD APRIL LEVEL

Nonagricultural employment set an April record in North Carolina, rising 20,700 above the job total of April, 1962.

The total of 1,259,600 people employed in non-farm jobs last month set new April highs in both manufacturing and non-manufacturing employment.

Factory employment totaling 522,200 last month was up 4,400 from the April, 1962 figure. Non-manufacturing employment totaling 737,400 was 16,300 higher than a year ago.

Average hourly earnings of the 522,200 Tar Heel factory workers stood still at $1.66, showing no change from the March average. Their weekly earnings dropped 50 cents below the March level to an April average of $66.23, due to a 0.3-hour decrease in the factory workweek to 39.9 hours.

Total non-farm employment in the State during April was up 11,200 from the March, 1963 level, due largely to seasonal job gains of 4,400 in retail trade, 3,400 in construction, 1,500 in service industries, and 800 each in chemicals manufacturing and food products industries.

Other April job gains over March included 700 in State and local government, 400 in Federal government, 300 each in stone, clay and glass products and finance, insurance and real estate, and about 100 each in transportation, wholesale trade, communications and public utilities, and the apparel, printing, machinery and lumber industries.

These increases were partly offset by a seasonal drop of 1,100 in tobacco stemmeries, by decreases of 500 in seamless hosiery and 300 in full-fashioned hosiery, 200 in paper and allied products, and 100 each in furniture manufacturing, mining, and public school employment.

APRIL BUILDING UP 10 PER CENT IN 36 TAR HEEL CITIES

Building permits totaling $21,047,824 were issued by public officials in 36 North Carolina cities of more than 10,000 population during April.

The April building total was 10.3 per cent above the $19,087,118 reported by the cities in April, 1962.

Permits totaling $81,121,324 were issued during the first four months of 1963. The four-month total was 7.2 per cent higher than the $75,649,764 in permits reported during the first four months of 1962.

FACTORY EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN CHARLOTTE AND GREENSBORO - HIGH POINT AREAS — APRIL, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month 4	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
CHARLOTTE AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	27.8	28.0	27.8	— 0.7	.....	$ 73.26	$ 74.34	$ 73.04	40.7	41.3	41.5	$1.80	$1.80	$1.76
Food & Kindred Products	4.0	4.1	4.1	— 2.4	— 2.4	69.70	68.17	64.91	41.0	40.1	39.1	1.70	1.70	1.66
Bakery	2.0	2.1	2.1	— 4.8	— 4.8	72.50	71.42	69.13	40.5	39.9	39.5	1.79	1.79	1.75
Textile Mills Products	6.5	6.5	6.4	.....	+ 1.6	64.37	66.52	68.61	41.0	42.1	43.7	1.57	1.58	1.57
Broadwoven Fabrics	2.5	2.5	2.4	.....	+ 4.2	75.43	75.43	76.39	43.1	43.1	43.9	1.75	1.75	1.74
Knitting Mills	2.3	2.4	2.5	— 4.2	— 8.0	59.70	60.85	64.68	39.8	40.3	44.0	1.50	1.51	1.47
Furniture & Fixtures	.8	.9	1.0	—11.1	—20.0	77.66	87.57	84.15	37.7	41.7	42.5	2.06	2.10	1.98
Paper & Allied Products	1.4	1.4	1.3	.....	+ 7.7	77.00	79.85	77.76	41.4	42.7	43.2	1.86	1.87	1.80
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	2.2	2.2	2.2	.....	.....	96.23	94.37	...7...	41.3	40.5	...7...	2.33	2.33	2.18
Chemicals & Allied Products	2.7	2.7	2.5	.....	+ 8.0	71.50	72.21	69.76	43.6	43.5	42.8	1.64	1.66	1.63
Metal Products	2.3	2.3	2.2	.....	+ 4.5	80.78	81.39	78.76	40.8	40.9	40.6	1.98	1.99	1.94
Machinery	3.3	3.2	3.2	+ 3.1	+ 3.1	82.75	82.03	78.63	43.1	43.4	42.5	1.92	1.89	1.85
Other Manufacturing Industries[1]	4.6	4.7	4.9	— 2.1	— 6.1	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
GREENSBORO - HIGH POINT AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	43.4	43.4	43.9	.....	— 1.1	$ 63.81	$ 65.32	$ 65.35	37.1	38.2	38.9	$1.72	$1.71	$1.68
Food & Kindred Products	2.9	2.9	2.8	.....	+ 3.6	70.24	68.37	69.44	43.9	43.0	44.8	1.60	1.59	1.55
Bakery Products	.8	.8	.8	.....	.....	77.74	73.18	71.98	45.2	43.3	43.1	1.72	1.69	1.67
Textile Mill Products	15.8	16.0	16.9	— 1.3	— 6.5	56.00	58.04	58.56	35.0	36.5	37.3	1.60	1.59	1.57
Knitting Mills	6.1	6.3	6.8	— 3.2	—10.3	43.21	50.36	50.32	29.0	33.8	34.7	1.49	1.49	1.45
Apparel	4.0	4.0	3.7	.....	+ 8.1	50.04	54.63	...7...	36.0	38.2	37.5	1.39	1.43	...7...
Lumber & Wood Products (Except Furn.)	1.1	1.1	1.1	.....	.....	56.74	62.18	61.19	39.4	42.3	42.2	1.44	1.47	1.45
Furniture	6.7	6.7	6.7	.....	.....	64.03	65.84	67.80	36.8	38.5	40.6	1.74	1.71	1.67
HH Furniture	5.8	5.8	5.8	.....	.....	66.22	67.38	67.89	37.2	38.5	39.7	1.78	1.75	1.71
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	1.4	1.3	1.3	.....	.....	85.31	83.28	...7...	38.6	38.2	...7...	2.21	2.18	2.18
Chemicals	1.5	1.5	1.4	+ 7.7	+ 7.7	91.64	87.44	82.03	44.7	43.5	42.5	2.05	2.01	1.93
Stone, Clay & Glass Products	.9	.8	.9	.....	+ 7.1	80.37	84.35	54.08	47.0	48.2	32.0	1.71	1.75	1.69
Metal Products	1.9	1.9	1.9	+12.5	.....	71.23	68.06	...7...	40.7	39.8	...7...	1.75	1.71	1.76
Machinery (Except Electrical)	.9	.9	.9	.....	.....	84.77	88.07	...7...	42.6	43.6	46.0	1.99	2.02	...7...
Other Manufacturing Industries[2]	6.3	6.3	6.3	.....	.....

[1] Includes: Apparel; Lumber; Rubber; Leather; Stone, Clay and Glass; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Tobacco; Paper; Rubber; Leather; Electrical Machinery; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[4] Preliminary.
[5] Data Not Available.

EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN NONAGRICULTURAL INDUSTRIES IN NORTH CAROLINA — APRIL, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month[4]	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	One Month	One Year	Current	One Month	One Year	Current	One Month	One Year	Current	One Month	One Year

EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN NONAGRICULTURAL INDUSTRIES IN NORTH CAROLINA — APRIL, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month[4] (thous)	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
ALL NONAGRICULTURAL EMPLOYMENT	1,259.6	1,248.4	1,238.9	+ 0.9	+ 1.7	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Manufacturing	522.2	521.8	517.8	+ 0.1	+ 0.8	$ 66.23	$ 66.73	$ 67.24	39.9	40.2	41.0	$1.66	$1.66	$1.64
Durable Goods	146.3	145.8	144.7	+ 0.3	+ 1.1	68.72	69.39	67.46	41.4	41.8	41.9	1.66	1.66	1.61
Lumber & Timber Basic Products	30.9	30.8	30.4	+ 0.3	+ 1.6	59.64	59.78	57.82	42.0	42.4	41.9	1.42	1.41	1.38
Sawmills & Planing Mills	18.6	18.5	18.1	+ 0.5	+ 2.8	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Millwork, Plywood, etc.	6.1	6.2	6.4	— 1.6	— 4.7	54.54	56.01	57.89	40.7	41.8	43.2	1.34	1.34	1.34
Furniture & Fin. Lumber Products	47.4	47.5	46.7	— 0.2	+ 1.5	64.53	65.16	63.99	41.1	41.5	42.1	1.57	1.57	1.52
Household Furniture	43.1	43.2	42.5	— 0.2	+ 1.4	64.84	65.31	63.84	41.3	41.6	42.0	1.57	1.57	1.52
Stone, Clay and Glass	10.9	10.6	11.1	+ 2.8	— 1.8	70.81	71.81	65.10	42.4	43.0	42.0	1.67	1.67	1.55
Concrete, Brick, etc.	4.1	3.8	3.8	+ 7.9	+ 7.9	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Primary Metals	2.8	2.8	2.7	.....	+ 3.7	84.25	86.94	88.20	40.9	42.0	41.8	2.06	2.07	2.11
Fabricated Metals	9.2	9.2	8.6	.....	+ 7.0	77.36	78.53	78.35	40.5	40.9	41.9	1.91	1.92	1.87
Fab. Structural Metals	3.9	3.9	3.6	.....	+ 8.3	86.05	84.64	82.56	42.6	41.9	43.0	2.02	2.02	1.92
Machinery (Except Electrical)	13.5	13.4	13.3	+ 0.7	+ 1.5	76.11	75.68	75.68	43.0	43.0	44.0	1.77	1.76	1.72
Special Industrial Machinery	6.9	6.9	6.6	.....	+ 4.5	75.58	78.68	...7...	42.7	44.2	...7...	1.77	1.78	1.74
Electrical Machinery	24.2	24.2	24.7	.....	— 2.0	79.60	82.62	80.40	40.0	40.9	40.4	1.99	2.02	1.99
Ord. and Transportation Equipment	3.9	3.9	3.8	.....	+ 2.6	89.95	92.93	89.84	39.8	41.3	41.4	2.26	2.25	2.17
Other Durable Goods[1]	3.5	3.4	3.4	+ 2.9	+ 2.9	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Nondurable Goods	375.9	376.0	373.1	*	+ 0.8	65.24	65.74	67.16	39.3	39.6	40.7	1.66	1.66	1.65
Food & Kindred Products	34.8	34.0	33.4	+ 2.4	+ 4.2	60.98	59.20	59.90	41.2	40.0	41.6	1.48	1.48	1.44
Meat Products	8.4	8.4	7.9	.....	+ 6.3	50.62	49.70	53.16	35.9	35.0	38.8	1.41	1.42	1.37
Meat Packing	2.5	2.5	2.4	.....	+ 4.2	71.28	76.33	74.53	43.2	44.9	44.9	1.65	1.70	1.66
Dairy Products	5.5	5.5	5.5	.....	.....	75.68	73.79	72.84	47.6	47.0	47.3	1.59	1.57	1.54
Grain Mill Products	3.9	3.7	3.7	+ 5.4	+ 5.4	61.05	59.91	62.41	43.3	43.1	44.9	1.41	1.39	1.39
Bakery Products	7.5	7.5	7.4	.....	+ 1.4	71.65	69.70	67.89	41.9	41.0	40.9	1.71	1.70	1.66
Beverage Industries	4.8	4.7	4.5	+ 2.1	+ 6.7	61.21	61.62	58.38	48.2	47.4	46.7	1.27	1.30	1.25
Tobacco	26.4	27.4	26.7	— 3.6	— 1.1	71.83	78.11	83.46	32.8	36.5	39.0	2.19	2.14	2.14
Cigarettes	18.4	18.4	18.6	.....	— 1.1	78.18	84.91	89.89	33.7	36.6	39.6	2.32	2.32	2.27
Stemmeries	6.3	7.4	6.4	—14.9	— 1.6	51.73	59.01	62.70	29.9	36.2	37.1	1.73	1.63	1.69
Textiles	223.5	224.2	225.4	— 0.3	— 0.8	63.68	64.56	65.60	39.8	40.1	41.0	1.60	1.61	1.60
Broadwoven Fabrics	89.8	89.8	89.3	.....	+ 0.6	70.22	70.22	71.90	41.8	41.8	42.8	1.68	1.68	1.68
Broadwoven Cotton	55.7	55.9	56.0	— 0.4	+ 0.5	68.89	67.89	69.22	41.5	40.9	41.7	1.66	1.66	1.66
Broadwoven Fiber & Silk	30.3	30.1	29.7	+ 0.7	+ 2.0	72.68	73.53	75.92	42.5	43.0	44.4	1.71	1.71	1.71
Knitting Mills	66.2	66.9	68.9	— 1.0	— 3.9	56.47	58.56	60.06	36.2	37.3	38.5	1.56	1.57	1.56
Full Fashioned Hosiery	7.9	8.2	8.6	— 3.7	— 8.1	55.13	56.27	61.35	35.8	36.3	40.1	1.54	1.55	1.53
Seamless Hosiery	46.3	46.8	48.8	— 1.1	— 5.1	55.93	58.30	59.88	35.4	36.9	37.9	1.58	1.58	1.58
Dyeing & Finishing Textiles	12.3	12.3	12.3	.....	.....	68.72	68.21	69.06	41.4	40.6	41.6	1.66	1.68	1.66
Yarn Mills	46.7	46.6	46.4	+ 0.2	+ 0.6	60.79	61.05	60.83	40.8	40.7	41.1	1.49	1.50	1.48
Apparel	44.8	44.7	43.1	+ 0.2	+ 3.9	49.31	50.76	50.94	36.8	37.6	38.3	1.34	1.35	1.33
Men's & Boys' Clothing	16.7	16.6	16.4	+ 0.6	+ 1.8	46.57	46.83	48.26	36.1	36.3	37.7	1.29	1.29	1.28
Paper & Allied Products	13.7	13.9	13.9	— 1.4	— 1.4	104.59	102.48	98.87	43.4	42.7	42.8	2.41	2.40	2.31
Pulp & Paperboard Mills	8.7	8.8	9.0	— 1.1	— 3.3	118.37	115.44	110.74	44.5	43.4	43.6	2.66	2.66	2.54
Paperboard Containers	3.6	3.6	3.4	.....	+ 5.9	76.63	78.44	74.21	41.2	41.5	41.0	1.86	1.89	1.81
Printing	10.5	10.4	10.2	+ 1.0	+ 2.9	87.40	88.24	...7...	38.0	38.7	38.5	2.30	2.28	...7...
Newspapers	5.4	5.4	5.2	.....	+ 3.8	98.26	96.26	94.58	36.8	36.6	36.8	2.67	2.63	2.57
Chemicals	17.7	16.9	16.1	+ 4.7	+ 9.9	86.85	82.15	81.32	45.0	41.7	42.8	1.93	1.97	1.90
Plastics & Synthetic Materials	10.0	10.0	9.0	.....	+11.1	95.42	91.88	87.97	42.6	41.2	41.3	2.24	2.23	2.13
Other Nondurable Goods[2]	4.5	4.5	4.3	.....	+ 4.7	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Nonmanufacturing	737.4	726.6	721.1	+ 1.5	+ 2.3	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Mining	2.8	2.9	3.4	— 3.4	—17.6	72.37	66.62	76.48	44.4	41.9	47.5	1.63	1.59	1.61
Non-Metallic Mining	2.8	2.8	2.8	.....	.....	72.54	67.10	74.09	44.5	42.2	47.8	1.63	1.59	1.55
Contract Construction	67.6	64.2	67.4	+ 5.3	+ 0.3	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Transp., Comm., & Pub. Utilities	66.4	66.2	65.1	+ 0.3	+ 2.0	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Transportation (Except RR)	33.4	33.3	32.6	+ 0.3	+ 2.5	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Communications & Pub. Utilities	24.3	24.2	23.6	+ 0.4	+ 3.0	95.65	95.75	94.77	40.7	40.4	40.5	2.35	2.37	2.34
Trade[3]	228.5	224.0	223.7	+ 2.0	+ 2.1	64.39	65.11	62.73	39.5	39.7	39.7	1.63	1.64	1.58
Wholesale	58.4	58.3	57.3	+ 0.2	+ 1.9	84.77	85.40	81.90	42.6	42.7	42.0	1.99	2.00	1.95
Retail[3]	170.1	165.7	166.4	+ 2.7	+ 2.2	56.15	56.60	55.48	38.2	38.5	38.8	1.47	1.47	1.43
Retail General Merchandise	35.8	33.2	34.5	+ 7.8	+ 3.8	42.62	43.62	42.00	33.3	33.3	33.6	1.28	1.31	1.25
Department Stores	15.8	14.6	14.9	+ 8.2	+ 6.0	46.01	46.55	45.45	32.4	32.1	32.7	1.42	1.45	1.39
Limited Price Variety	8.5	7.5	8.5	+13.3	.....	30.69	30.95	29.80	29.8	29.2	29.5	1.03	1.06	1.01
Retail Food Stores	25.4	25.2	24.3	+ 0.8	+ 4.5	51.71	51.44	50.86	33.8	33.4	34.6	1.53	1.54	1.47
Finance, Insurance & Real Estate[6]	48.2	47.9	46.2	+ 0.6	+ 4.3	86.43	86.09	90.01	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Service	137.4	135.9	135.3	+ 1.1	+ 1.6	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Hotels & Rooming Houses	7.4	7.1	7.4	+ 4.2	.....	31.40	31.32	30.53	34.5	34.8	44.9	.91	.90	.68
Personal Services	25.4	25.2	25.3	+ 0.8	+ 0.4	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Laundries & Dry Cleaners	15.3	15.2	15.4	+ 0.7	— 0.6	36.67	35.81	35.33	38.6	37.3	38.4	.95	.96	.92
Government	186.5	185.5	180.0	+ 0.5	+ 3.6	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Federal	38.3	37.9	37.5	+ 1.1	+ 2.1
State & Local Schools	82.7	82.8	79.2	— 0.1	+ 4.4
State & Local Non-Schools	65.5	64.8	63.3	+ 1.1	+ 3.5

[1] Includes: Transportation Equipment, Instruments, and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Leather and Leather Products, Rubber Products, and Petroleum Products.
[3] Excludes: Earnings in Eating and Drinking Places.
[4] Preliminary.
[5] Data Not Available.
[6] Reflects Earnings in Insurance Companies Only.
[7] Not comparable.
* Less than 0.1% change.

APPRENTICESHIP COUNCIL MEETS IN CHARLOTTE

The State Apprenticeship Council met in Charlotte at the Selwyn Hotel on May 2nd.

Shown in photo at left, Council members and guests present at the meeting were:

Front row, from left: Commissioner Frank Crane, Council Chairman; Miguel Ortega of Caracas, Venezuela, Chief of the Division of Industrial Safety and Hygiene, Venezuela Ministry of Labor, who was visiting the N. C. International Trade Fair in Charlotte as Commissioner Crane's guest; and C. L. Beddingfield, Director of the State Labor Department's Division of Apprenticeship Training.

Back row, from left: Charles D. Bates, State Director of Trade and Industrial Education and Vice-Chairman of the Council; D. W. Randolph of Canton and Dwight L. Casey of Charlotte, employer representatives on the Council; and W. L. Causey of Greensboro and George J. Bumby of Wilmington, employee representatives.

Following the Council meeting, the members attended a special ceremony held at the Trade Fair, at which Governor Terry Sanford presented prizes and trophies to Frank Carpenter of Norwood, Route 1, North Carolina's "Champion Apprentice Bricklayer of 1962."

TOTAL EMPLOYMENT IN MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES
(In Thousands of Employees)
Winston-Salem Area

INDUSTRIES	*APRIL, 1963	MARCH, 1963	APRIL, 1962
Total Manufacturing	36.3	36.5	37.2
Food & Kindred Products	1.5	1.4	1.5
Textile Mill Products	9.8	9.9	10.0
Furniture	1.0	1.1	1.0
Metals	1.5	1.5	1.6
All Other Mfg. Inds.[1]	22.5	22.6	23.1

* Preliminary
[1] Includes: Tobacco; Apparel; Lumber; Paper; Printing; Chemicals; Stone, Clay & Glass; Transportation Equipment & Misc. Mfg. Inds.

SAFETY AWARDS

(Continued from page 1)

year 1962.

Special presentation ceremonies were held in Gastonia, Greensboro, Winston-Salem, Burlington, Thomasville, Shelby, Wilson, Concord, High Point, Charlotte and Morganton.

ESTIMATED COST OF CONSTRUCTION AUTHORIZED IN THIRTY-SIX NORTH CAROLINA CITIES

City	April 1963	April 1962	1963 1st 4 Mos.	1962 1st 4 Mos.
Albemarle	$ 35,550	$ 40,400	$ 167,296	$ 216,886
Asheboro	393,650	288,600	508,690	1,294,550
Asheville	488,974	946,961	3,103,809	2,785,235
Burlington	638,310	632,435	1,408,139	1,490,078
Chapel Hill	186,674	225,000	942,377	635,049
Charlotte	3,194,937	2,227,968	16,685,441	15,535,100
Concord	19,208	126,987	400,981	468,617
Durham	847,616	1,083,216	7,352,848	3,515,825
Elizabeth City	41,728	73,700	931,781	207,800
Fayetteville	719,445	1,205,655	3,666,708	2,554,353
Gastonia	825,350	517,600	1,694,850	1,847,000
Goldsboro	457,010	420,900	1,303,890	1,434,875
Greensboro	3,159,869	3,004,363	8,894,050	10,810,494
Greenville	287,900	342,300	2,514,742	1,145,576
Henderson	213,250	170,850	439,625	297,750
Hickory	254,191	108,210	571,031	1,108,719
High Point	1,392,669	375,829	2,722,510	4,199,603
Jacksonville	33,300	626,930	233,200	1,242,930
Kinston	706,326	379,694	1,318,574	1,535,020
Lenoir	53,666	127,746	271,023	686,226
Lexington	147,500	158,411	411,702	421,802
Lumberton	189,700	152,150	571,700	613,494
Monroe	60,000	124,000	178,000	563,400
New Bern	50,240	159,143	367,240	508,657
Raleigh	2,000,946	1,799,474	9,686,447	8,090,503
Reidsville	80,800	86,150	249,700	597,823
Roanoke Rapids	89,026	166,941	588,282	554,089
Rocky Mount	314,145	434,147	1,381,291	1,014,149
Salisbury	153,500	173,400	1,290,920	986,225
Sanford	84,900	15,850	193,900	441,350
Shelby	753,800	189,600	896,200	420,250
Statesville	434,053	218,400	1,310,707	1,099,300
Thomasville	185,045	672,538	1,029,579	965,183
Wilmington	85,879	191,743	864,739	483,779
Wilson	595,805	762,215	1,141,305	1,655,480
Winston-Salem	1,872,862	931,312	5,828,047	4,222,594
Grand Total	$21,047,824	$19,087,118	$81,121,324	$75,649,764

AN EDITORIAL Labor Justice 6/1/63

Investigate This Shameful Spectacle!

THE 2-YEAR ATTEMPT TO SMEAR THE ILGWU with a charge of racial discrimination burst like a bubble on the third day of a public hearing before the New York State Commission for Human Rights.

For 9 months—since July 1, 1962—Local 10 insistently demanded the public hearing to which it was entitled by law. Only at such a hearing could it properly rebut the charge by Ernest Holmes, made on April 4, 1961, that he had been denied membership in the cutters' local because of his color.

The commission continuously delayed holding of such a hearing. But on May 15, 1963 the union finally got its chance.

On that day some 200 Spanish-speaking and Negro members of Local 10 crowded the hearing room, ready to testify in defense of their union. Before any one of them was called and in the midst of the cross-examination of the first of the commission's witnesses by union attorney Emil Schlesinger, the case against Local 10 fell apart.

That first, and only, witness was Holmes himself. In less than one day of cross-questioning he was tied up in knots of contradictions over dates, facts, allegations. With increasing frequency he pleaded inability to remember.

Last February, he turned down aid offered him by Local 10. At that time he asked the commission to withdraw his complaint against the cutters' local. The commission refused.

But on May 17, seeing their case crumble in the public hearing, the commission's lawyers urged Holmes to withdraw and sought a way to save face. When Schlesinger insisted he would continue his examination of Holmes unless all parties, including Holmes, would join in acknowledging the ILGWU was not guilty, the lawyers surrendered.

The joint stipulation they signed withdraws the charges that Holmes was denied membership on account of his color and that Local 10 has a policy of limiting admissions to membership by race.

It recognizes that Holmes was not entitled to membership because he was not—and still is not—a qualified cuttter.

It agrees that "in line with its oft-asserted regular and general policy as adopted by Conventions of the ILGWU from its very inception, against dis-

(Continued on Back Page)

JUSTICE
INTERNATIONAL LADIES' GARMENT WORKERS' UNION
EDITORIAL PAGE

Investigate This Shameful Spectacle!

(Continued from Front Page)

crimination of any person because of race, creed, color or national origin, (Local 10) will, on the same basis as it applies to all other applicants for admission to membership, exercise its good offices in assisting the complainant to become a qualified cutter and to gain admission to membership in the union as and when he becomes a qualified cutter and becomes eligible for membership in the union." (Full text of joint stipulation on Page 11).

* * *

WITH THEIR JOINT WITHDRAWAL of the complaint, Holmes and the commission lawyers declare that Local 10 is not guilty of the charges.

The unavoidable question is: If it took the union attorney one day of cross-questioning to get Holmes to admit he is not yet a cutter and the commission lawyers to agree, why couldn't the commission's investigating commissioner discover this fact—absolutely crucial to the case—in 2 years of probing?

Why, instead, was the shameful charge besmirching the union kept alive while the plea for a public hearing was brushed aside?

How could the commission's experts, investigators, lawyers, specialists and investigation commissioner believe and accept during so many months the allegation by Holmes that without a single day of previous experience in the industry, without a single hour of schooling as a cutter, without ever having seen the inside of a garment shop before August 1, 1960, he was hired that day by Primrose Foundations, Inc. as a spreader and only 3 weeks later became, as Holmes claimed, a qualified cutter?

Was this the result of ignorance or professional incompetence? Who was guilty of instigating and tolerating such irresponsible conduct?

* * *

WAS IT ERNEST HOLMES?

As contradictions piled up around him and his memory faded, Holmes presented a pathetic picture. It became clear that Holmes had been victimized by one who has sought to build a career by besmirching our union and the labor movement and who had drafted the original complaint and guided Holmes 9 months after the first finding of "probable cause"—Holmes filed an entirely new, amended complaint. On the same day—March 29, 1963—Investigating Commissioner Ruiz issued a statement that he had investigated the amended complaint and had found "probable cause" to credit Holmes' charges. On the same day—March 29, 1963—Commission Chairman George H. Fowler ordered a public hearing on the amended complaint to be held May 15, 1963.

By the commission's own rules, when Ruiz issued his decision of "probable cause" on the amended complaint on March 29, 1963 he ceased to exist as investigating commissioner.

However, 2 weeks later, on April 11, 1963, he issued—as Investigating Commissioner—a subpoena to Manager Moe Falikman directing him to produce within a few days voluminous records of Local 10 membership. He stressed that these records—all of which he could have subpoenaed during the previous 2 years but didn't—were essential for his investigation.

What investigation?

Certainly not the investigation that led to the determination of "probable cause" on March 29. Ruiz had certified that he had completed that investigation.

In truth, he had never made it. It was not possible that an amended complaint entirely different from the one filed by Holmes originally on April 4, 1961 could be signed by him on March 29, 1963 and that an investigation of the new complaint could have been made in a few hours in time to enable Chairman Fowler, on the same day, to set May 15 as the date for a public hearing on the amended complaint. What a peculiar combination of acts by individuals charged by the Governor with administering important machinery for rendering justice and fair play!

Local 10 moved promptly in the New York State Supreme Court to quash the subpoena served on Manager Falikman. In granting the union's motion, Judge Thomas A. Aurelio issued a reprimand in which he declared that "the time for investigation has passed as well as perchance the appropriate time for decision."

as Holmes claimed, a qualified cutter?

Was this the result of ignorance or professional incompetence? Who was guilty of instigating and tolerating such irresponsible conduct?

* * *

WAS IT ERNEST HOLMES?

As contradictions piled up around him and his memory faded, Holmes presented a pathetic picture. It became clear that Holmes had been victimized by one who has sought to build a career by besmirching our union and the labor movement and who had drafted the original complaint and guided Holmes through the entire proceeding until the very last moment. Clearly he had also been misled by lawyers with a vested interest in victory rather than truth. Holmes desperately told the three commissioners conducting the hearing that he had many personal problems.

He has. On the day the hearing started one of them was how to sustain his charges against Local 10 while 200 contradictions sat in the same room with him proving the contrary.

* * *

WAS IT THE COMMISSION'S LAWYERS and staff?

The most charitable view of their work is that it was a sloppy portrait of Holmes as a qualified but wronged cutter.

They seemed chronically unable to get the facts straight to the public. When Investigating Commissioner Ruiz, after 15 months of investigating, first found on June 28, 1962, "probable cause" to credit the charge against the ILGWU affiliate, they helped pass this on to the public as a finding of guilty as charged.

They tried it again on May 17, 1963. After withdrawing their complaint they authorized their public relations spokesman to state to the press that the stipulation of withdrawal was not "a finding of guilt or non-guilt."

We challenge anyone to unravel that kind of nonsense.

Either this union was guilty or it was not. If it was, the commission had no right to withdraw the complaint against it, thus dropping the case. By doing so, it acknowledged that the union was not guilty and that the commission had no case.

* * *

WHAT ABOUT that Investigating Commissioner—Ruperto Ruiz? Following is part of his astounding record in this case:

Despite 15 months of "expert" probing, and with the power to subpoena, he was unable to discover that Holmes wasn't even a cutter and that Local 10 had no policy of racial discrimination.

He issued his findings of "probable cause" on June 28, 1962 without observing the fundamental concepts of due process of law. No attempt was made to take sworn statements from Holmes or any of his witnesses, nor was the union given the right to confront them or cross-examine them under oath. It was the procedure of a kangaroo court.

Twice—on June 28, 1962 and again on September 21, 1962—he violated the law by disclosing to the press the terms which he laid down for Local 10 to purge itself of the charges made against it. Despite a warning by the union's attorney in July 1962 that this was a breach of the statute creating the commission and its rules, Ruiz repeated his illegal conduct in September, 1962.

He continuously delayed for 9 months the decision to grant the union a public hearing where it would be given the opportunity to state its side of the case.

On March 29, 1963—2 years after filing the original complaint and Hall Fowler, on the same day, to set May 15 as the date for a public hearing on the amended complaint. What a peculiar combination of acts by individuals charged by the Governor with administering important machinery for rendering justice and fair play!

Local 10 moved promptly in the New York State Supreme Court to quash the subpoena served on Manager Falikman. In granting the union's motion, Judge Thomas A. Aurelio issued a reprimand in which he declared that "the time for investigation has passed as well as perchance the appropriate time for decision."

* * *

WHAT ABOUT THE COMMISSION'S chairman?

Various conferences were held with the commission's chairman in which mutually satisfactory decisions on procedure were made. For reasons only he can provide he subsequently failed to live up to them.

When the union's attorney accused Ruiz of bias and prejudice as evidenced in his illegal disclosure of conciliation efforts and terms, Ruiz judged himself and decided in October 1962 that he wasn't. When the ILGWU lawyer then appealed to Chairman Fowler to remove Ruiz from the case, it took him a leisurely month to refuse to do so with reasons based on his own misreading of the law.

In every twist and turn of negotiated efforts to settle this case Chairman Fowler and his deputies first "cleared" with the one who helped Holmes draft the original complaint.

That individual sat through the 3 days of the public hearing, watching his puppets perform, even briefing Holmes during a recess in the cross-examination. Last summer, as an "expert" for a Congressional subcommittee, this person asserted that the Holmes case was basic to the Congressional investigation of the ILGWU. Later, in a television broadcast, he asserted that Local 10 had been found guilty of racial discrimination and the National Broadcasting Company made public apology for this. By that time, under threat of being himself investigated on a conflict of interest charge, he had quit as the committee's "expert." By that time he had also wrecked the public career of the chairman of that Congressional subcommittee.

* * *

WITH ITS DELAYS, illegal public statements, prejudice, incompetence and procedures contrary to due process of law the state commission made itself a willing tool in a conspiracy seeking to besmirch and discredit the ILGWU and to create, through false accusations, dissension in the ranks of this union of many minorities, a union which with its traditional equal rights and mutual respect has been and still is the pride of the community and of the labor movement.

Fortunately they failed in this as they failed also in their attempt to set back the efforts of the organized labor movement in general and our union in particular to advance the cause of equal rights for all citizens of this nation.

We are grateful that the 3 commissioners who conducted the public hearing —J. Edward Conway, presiding, Francis X. Giaconne and Lloyd L. Hurst— quickly recognized the lack of merit in the complaint and speedily brought this sorry spectacle to an end. However, the manner in which this case was handled warrants an investigation by the Governor or the legislature of New York State into the conduct in this instance of the commission's chairman, investigating commissioner and chief counsel.

MANAGEMENT DEVELOPMENT AND
EMPLOYEE RELATIONS SERVICES
GENERAL ELECTRIC
NEW YORK

Labor Unions

RELATIONS NEWS LETTER
For Circulation Among General Electric Management

June 26, 1963

General Electric's 1963 Negotiations

What About "Intervention"?

GENERAL ELECTRIC's 1963 union negotiations are approaching in the midst of a growing concern about the role of the Federal Government in collective bargaining. The far-flung involvement of the Government in this area has been so thoroughly chronicled in the public press as to need only passing reference here. During the last two years, the Labor Department is reputed to have asserted itself more forcefully in labor disputes than in all the previous 48 years since this Department was established.

Our purpose is not to comment on whether this unusual approach of the Federal Government is good or bad for the state of labor relations in the nation as a whole. We are in agreement with the stated objectives: namely, to see that collective bargaining settlements are kept within economic and contractual bounds that are in the national interest; and to achieve this result as peacefully and speedily as possible.

The quarrel that has arisen around the country involves not the ends but the means.

We do not plan here to speculate as to the best means for protecting the national interest in labor disputes arising in companies and industries so vastly different from ours. Each has its unique set of management and union habits and practices; its own fashion of bargaining, and of communicating with employees and union members; its own standards for determining the equity of an offer or a settlement; its own collective bargaining history; and its own competitive pressures and problems in providing job opportunities.

These factors and others must be taken into account in determining how the national interest can be protected in each case where it may be involved. This helps to account for the disagreement as to whether a set of uniform rules applicable to all can do the job, or whether a more selective approach tailored to each situation would be more equitable and more effective.

The complexities of the problem are reflected in the resulting public debate which is as confusing as it is spirited. Those actively seeking Federal intervention have included both employers and union officials. Similarly, both employers and union officials are numbered among those who roundly denounce it. And spokesmen for the Government itself, while defending their right to "assert the national interest," join ranks with those who publicly deplore the damaging results they foresee in easy access to Federal intervention.

Thus, the disputants in this controversy are not clearly polarized as between employers and unions or as between private bargainers and public intervenors.

And if the lines between the contenders are not neatly drawn, the issue at contention is equally cloudy.

The issue is Federal intervention, but what kind? Where? When? And with what force?

One kind of Federal intervention is provided by law, such as the assistance of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, the application of the "National Emergency" clauses of the Taft-Hartley Act and similar provisions of the Railway Labor Act. From a purely statistical standpoint, most, by far, of the more than 35,000 cases of Federal intervention during the last two years have begun and ended with the services of the Government's regular mediation agencies, according to their annual reports.

However, in a number of widely-publicized cases, the Government has employed a variety of administrative measures of a kind not contemplated by any existing legislation. These include the creation of special agencies, such as the Missile Sites Labor Commission, the appointment of special panels and commissions with both fact-finding authority and the power to make recommendations, and the personal involvement of various individuals in the Administration. A part of the problem of defining the issue of what kind of intervention is that the Government has frankly followed, in the Labor Secretary's words, a policy of "improvisation."*

As to where the Government has intervened, it has interested itself in such highly diverse situations as the aerospace industry, the Metropolitan Opera, and the hot-dog concession at the Washington ballpark.

The timing of intervention follows no discernible pattern. The Government has sometimes waited until a crisis to interpose a novel approach, as in the Southern Pacific Telegraphers' dispute. But in other instances, intervention from Washington apparently has come before negotiations began, as in the Steel situation in 1962 and, again, this year.

As to the force with which intervention is pursued, sometimes the voice of the government comes through loud and clear as in railroads, tugboats and airlines. Sometimes the Government can scarcely be heard, as in the local negotiations in the construction industry all around the country where many of the economic increases have far outstripped the Government's 3% "Guideposts" for non-inflationary settlements. Sometimes the voices of the Government's intervenors totally disregard the Government's "Guideposts," as seen in the East Coast Longshoremen's dispute.

Long Range Impact of Federal Intervention

At this point in time, it is still too early to foretell the long-range impact on collective bargaining of the many and diverse ventures which make up the Government's approach today. As previously noted, Government spokesmen have already identified certain ominous aspects of their approach. We believe there are certain promising ones, too. For example, it will come as no surprise to regular readers of these pages that General Electric favors, in principle, the idea—promulgated by the Government's compensation "Guideposts"—of using the long-term productivity trend of the economy as a primary indicator of the inflationary potential of conspicuous bargaining settlements. Our own analysis leads us to conclude that the 3% figure suggested by the Government should be closer to 2% to provide a sound "non-inflationary" guide. But this is a question involving not the principle of the "Guideposts," but with the technical measurement and the time period selected for them.

The intermixture of good and bad in the Government's approach; the short-range expediency often at odds with—and sometimes overpowering—the stated long-range goals; the blurry dividing lines between the proponents and the opponents; the ill-defined perimeters around what the argument is all about—all of this confusion seems to stem from a groping-in-the-dark, trial-and-error effort to find a new solution to an old problem. This is the problem of collective bargaining commitments to excessive wage increases and burdensome restrictions on management's ability to be efficient. This problem must shoulder a heavy share of the responsibility for the wage-price spiral of the post-war period, for persistent disemployment in some industries and persistent deficits in others, and for the vulnerability of American markets to low-cost competition from abroad. For more than two decades, the national customs and manners in collective bargaining have been less than successful in handling this problem. It is not too surprising, then, that the latest effort is fraught with contradictions and beclouded by confusion.

As this effort is tempered by time and experience and public discussion, we think that much of the current confusion will eventually be cleared up.

But this is not likely to come to pass prior to General Electric bargaining in 1963. Meanwhile, we must address ourselves to our own special problem.

So, however confused the situation may continue to be with respect to other companies and industries, it is our purpose here to clarify the situation so far as it pertains to negotiations on more than 100 union contracts which will be open for bargaining at General Electric later this year.

---

*In a speech last February, Secretary Wirtz spoke feelingly of "the record of the Federal Government's unusual participation in a number of the major disputes." He said: "This is a record with which I profess some familiarity—the familiarity, roughly, an egg has with an egg-beater. It is a record, essentially, of improvisation.

"Settlement of the last round of contract disputes in the airline industry (not yet quite completed) took over two years, and involved the President of the United States, the Secretary of Labor, the Under Secretary of Labor, the National Mediation Board, a Special Presidential Commission, nine Presidential Emergency Boards, and three Boards of Arbitration—a total of 39 public representatives. That this meant part-time employment to 24 members of this Academy [of Arbitrators] will not, I think, commend it to many of you as a wholly satisfactory, or efficient, government procedure.

"In the recent longshore case, the public participants, during its twelve-month course, were the President, the Secretary of Labor, an Assistant Secretary of Labor, the Director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, his Deputy, fifteen FMCS mediators, a Taft-Hartley Board of Inquiry, the Attorney General, the Federal District Court, the Mayors of numerous port cities, a Special Presidential Board which was appointed but never convened, and another Special Board under the chairmanship of a U. S. Senator.

"There were times, in the course of these marathons of maneuver, when the only promise for parties and public participants alike seemed to be the reminder, from the Garden of Proserpine, of Swinburne's consoling thought

'We thank with brief thanksgiving
Whatever gods may be . . .
That even the weariest river
Winds somewhere safe to sea.' "

Moreover, with the need for more growth, fewer unemployed, more incentives to make job-creating investments, and more competitive strength in world markets, there is a great deal of persuasion to the effect that a "non-inflationary" wage guidepost, whatever the proper percentage may be, is behind the times. In a later News Letter we will be discussing these considerations.

Our Approach to Collective Bargaining

More and more, thoughtful observers have noted that the prospects of Federal intervention tend to undermine good faith bargaining. There is a natural tendency for an employer to hold back something he might otherwise offer, and for a union official to press for a demand he might otherwise withdraw, in the expectation that the Federal intervenor will seek concessions from both.

Any such action on the part of General Electric as an employer would be, of course, completely contrary to our "truth in bargaining" approach, wherein after appropriate negotiations we try to make available in our initial bargaining proposals everything that seems to be warranted at the time. Still, we are sometimes asked if the record of intervention over the last two years suggests the prudence of saving something from our offers to the unions for later bargaining with the intervenors—something we could yield up later as a final "concession" to the unions in order to get a settlement.

The answer to this must be a resounding, "No."

- Because it would be the antithesis of bargaining in good faith; it would deceive, first, the union officials, then, the employees and, finally, the intervenor.
- Because once we began to try to fool people, no one could be sure when we were done with our foolishness and really had put everything on the table we believed the facts warranted in the first place.

Will Most Union Officials Seek Intervention?

A popular notion that has been aired in public debates on Federal intervention is that most union officials are inclined to seek it on the assumption that they have nothing to lose and everything to gain in the process.

Our experience with most union officials bargaining with General Electric suggests the contrary. Ever since the Taft-Hartley Law was passed, the offices of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service always have been open to any appeals from the hundreds of union officials with whom we deal in settling the hundred or so negotiations which we conduct periodically. We have had disagreements — sometimes rather heated ones—with some of these union officials but, by and large, they have apparently found it quite satisfactory to work out these problems in their own locations with local management, without the assistance of outsiders. Generally speaking, these union officials get the available pay and benefit increases in place quite promptly for the employees they represent, without delaying the effective dates of these improvements; and without upsetting their members by seeking unwarranted strikes or issuing time-consuming calls for Federal help, in the mistaken belief that we have held something back for just such a "crisis."

Any Exceptions?

Despite the general rule that most union officials who participate in contract negotiations with General Electric management really do seem to prefer the non-intervention route, it must be observed that the rule is also proved by its occasional exceptions.

From time to time one or more top union officials have indeed made it all too clear that they regarded the bargaining table as little more than a springboard for reaching the summit. There, they hope that the final decision would be made by an intervenor who would feel constrained to add something more to the settlement terms in the interests of avoiding conflict. Thrown into a crisis—real or synthetic —an intervenor has little choice but to try somehow to "split the difference" between the parties.

Relying on this completely natural tendency on the part of any professional problem-solver to find middle ground, an intervention-minded union official avoids the narrowing of differences at the bargaining table in hopes that the expected recommendation for a 50-50 split would raise the settlement terms to a point significantly higher than direct negotiations between the two parties might produce.

For the union official who designs his strategy toward final settlement with a third party, there appears to be a routine approach. Experienced observers can usually recognize the onset of this routine by noting early clues.

The Unfolding Intervention Ritual

We, ourselves, have often observed this ritual unfold across the bargaining table, in the headlines and elsewhere.* This ritual follows this general pattern:

- Announce union demands which the Company can grant only:

  —By imperiling its ability to compete;
  —Or by surrendering its managers to compulsive restrictions on their ability to manage responsibly;
  —Or by surrendering its employees to compulsive restrictions on their right to employment.

---

*For instance, in the negotiations of 1950, 1951, 1952, 1954, 1958 and 1960 IUE President James B. Carey not only made his routine call on the Federal Mediation Service for intervention but, in addition, sought whatever additional government help that might be in the offing, including: suggestions to President Truman to name a fact-finding board; complaints with the Federal Trade Commission; resignations from government groups in protest against the issuance of defense contracts to General Electric; charges with the SEC; and requests to presidential candidates to take part in his negotiations or strike efforts.

- Manufacture a "crisis."

  —By charging the Company with "union busting" and "refusing to bargain in good faith" when it does not accede to the unrealistic demands;
  —By calling for strike votes from union members; then claiming the union is being forced against its will to strike;
  —By pleading with other union officials with whom the Company deals to cooperate in the call for "unity."

- Demand intervention.

  —By way of first appealing to the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service;
  —By later calling for the Secretary of Labor or selected Congressmen and Senators;
  —By calling again to Federal agencies that might have anything to do with the Company or the industry, however remote the connection might be.

- Meanwhile, make overtures in the communities and states, canvassing clergymen, town councilmen, mayors, legislators and governors in the hope that somebody somewhere will come forward as an intervenor.

What Might be the "Excuse"?

The usual reason why a union official seeks outside help is the hope that intervenors will somehow cause the employer to offer something more than would otherwise be made available. In our case these union detours have proved fruitless. But this has not kept one or two union officials from testing again and again. Indeed, they have displayed some imagination in the number and nature of the excuses they have invented to lure Government representatives to the bargaining table.

In our case, the thrust of the union calls for intervention usually has centered on alleged deficiencies in our proposals, however generous they may be. We cannot predict what faults might be found in any offer the Company might make this year, but on the basis of past experience we must be prepared for complaints about all three of the basic areas of bargaining, i.e. the economic proposals; management responsibility; employee rights.

1
The Economic Proposals

It is widely recognized that General Electric's total benefit and pay package is already among the leaders in manufacturing industry, in the electrical industry and in the communities in which we operate. Yet estimates based on early union demands, such as those outlined by the IUE at its convention last September, indicate a call for increasing our employment costs by at least 21%, compared with the 3% suggested by the government "Guideposts," and a figure closer to 2% which our own research indicates as a sounder limit for non-inflationary settlements.

With this wide discrepancy, it is easy to see how some union officials could, if they chose, find fault with the economics of any realistic offer.

2
Management Responsibility

This is the first year in many in which we approach our negotiations with an inescapable need to clarify and preserve the responsibility of management to choose the most efficient methods to operate the business.

This need arises from a recent and novel trend in court decisions on the arbitration of disputes arising from a labor contract. The trend is in the direction of making virtually every dispute subject to compulsory arbitration unless the contract specifically states that it is not arbitrable. This is contrary to the bulk of opinion of prior years which held no dispute could go to compulsory arbitration unless it was specifically made arbitrable by the contract.

In the light of this previously prevailing opinion the arbitration clause in our major contracts was considered a model in terms of the ability it afforded management to carry out its responsibilities. Now this ability is contested because the new trend in court decisions is being exploited by a few union officials.

The rising threat of compulsory arbitration on day-to-day grievances is serious. General Electric can be severely handicapped by arbitrators in its struggle to stay competitive, to earn profits, and to provide jobs. We cannot abdicate responsible decisions on such critical matters to outside arbitrators who have no responsibility for their effect on costs, sales, profits and employment.

We are hopeful that we can work out mutually satisfactory arrangements on the arbitration situation with all of the unions involved. We are cautiously optimistic that the pre-negotiation union-management study groups now working on this problem can pave the way for a constructive solution. Basically, nothing more is needed than an affirmation or reaffirmation of the good faith understandings that were reached at the national level in prior negotiations as far back as 1955. But, if this effort is not successful, some union officials could get a new excuse for calling for third party assistance.

3
Employee Rights

General Electric has a long-standing belief in an employee's inherent right of individual free choice with respect to whether he wishes to join or not to join a union. We have upheld this principle in negotiating union contracts covering the less than half of the Company's employees who are represented by unions. Some union officials have a long-standing demand for the Company to compel employees to join unions. Under this demand, an employee would be discharged if he refused. This demand is repeated once more in the lists of demands announced for the coming negotiations. Moreover, it may well be that if compulsory membership is not demanded, the newer "pay dues or get fired" approach of the Agency Shop will be sought instead.

We expect to be bargaining again on compulsory unionism, as we have done so often before. But in view of the many times we have considered this subject in all of its ramifications, it seems doubtful that anything really new will come up this time to persuade us to surrender a principle so important to employees. Thus, in the process of renewing this old demand for compulsion on employees, some union officials may have endowed themselves with still another excuse to complain to Washington or elsewhere.

What Might be the "Crisis"?

Some time later this summer or early fall, some union official may feel that there is nothing more to be gained through normal negotiations. Then, if the old routine is followed, there will be calls for strike votes. In prior years, these votes have often been advertised as being needed primarily to strengthen the hands of the union negotiators. The implication is often left with union members that no strike would actually take place.

Judging from past tactics, an additional assurance may be heard this year. Employees may be told that if the strike votes are actually used, the strike will last only a day or two, because Federal intervention will speedily recommend the "something more" required; or union officials will readily respond to an appeal to "hold off the strike for an outside study."

At the same time, persuasions will probably be offered to top AFL-CIO officials that if just this once they will invest their reputations in joining in this "crisis," Federal intervention will quickly relieve them of any real necessity to call their members out on strike.

We think most union members and most of the top AFL-CIO officials are far too realistic and knowledgeable to be misled by such propositions.

And we think they know General Electric too well to believe, in all seriousness, that we would be so devious as to begin the practice of holding something back in anticipation of an intervenor's visit, or to offer something more just because an intervenor had arrived.

Could we be wrong in the foregoing speculations? We certainly could be.

Quite possibly some union official could go to Washington with strike votes in his hands and the top AFL-CIO officials in his pocket. He could threaten "blood baths" for the communities, as one union official did in 1960. Possibly the idea could be sold that all of this trouble could be averted if the Company would only make one more concession in the economic offer, or would agree to compulsory unionism, or would not be so insistent about protecting management's responsibilities. But we doubt this will happen. This old routine is all too familiar to employees, union officials and Washington.

What Might be the Kind of Intervention?

Union appeals to Washington will doubtless bring the normal, legal and proper response from the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service that has come in the past. We have always found the Federal Mediators to be able and realistic and in no sense displaying a desire to overstep their role as prescribed by Congress in the labor law.

We have sometimes felt that the arrival of the mediators tends to delay prompt settlements, because inevitably it provides a union official with an opportunity to raise false hopes that something more might be coming if his members would support strikes or strike threats just a little bit longer. But obviously this is not the fault of the mediators. They are doing their jobs, as they must under the law; some Federal agencies must operate like well run fire departments which answer all the alarms, even the false ones.

If some union officials follow past practices, they will not stop with the FMCS. They will go above and around this agency in demanding Federal aid. It is not unusual for some union officials to harass the FMCS people for not taking sides as though a federal employee is somehow delinquent if he does not endorse the union demands and cast aspersions on management's proposals. Should this familiar pattern emerge this year, we believe the summons for replacement of FMCS by some other form of intervention will fall on deaf ears, as it should.

On balance there would seem to be virtually no parallel between General Electric's situation and the situations where Federal intervention has multiplied beyond that supplied by the good services of the FMCS.

Intervention to Protect the National Health and Safety?

Unlike many other big companies in the collective bargaining scene, General Electric is not in just one business, but in a whole host of businesses, cataloguing over 200,000 different items and selling in many separate markets. We are not involved in industry-wide bargaining. We neither set nor follow industry-wide patterns. We are probably unique in that no single union bargains for even a majority of our employees. And unlike the unions in many other industries, no single union with whom we bargain is in a position to shut down most of the other businesses competing for our customers.

Although General Electric is a major defense contractor, our government work, like the rest of our production, is widely distributed over many different plants. Some of these plants are unionized and some are not. Where unionized, a number of different unions are involved. Much of our government contracts involve research, development and services which would be unaffected by a strike. Even at those locations which were involved in the unsuccessful three-week strike called by the IUE in 1960, there was no serious delay in meeting any critical defense needs. This is a matter of record.

Intervention to Protect the National Interest in Non-Inflationary Settlements?

As evidenced by the public statements of many Government officials, by the publication of the Government's "Guideposts" for non-inflationary wage settlements, and by the Government's concern about negotiations in basic industries, the Government is convinced that it should assert the national interest in trying to keep collective bargaining settlements within non-inflationary bounds.

General Electric has expressed similar concern for many years. Our communication in the post-war years on this subject has stressed that only the long-term productivity gains of the whole economy are valid for indicating the limits of non-inflationary settlements.

Although we are open-minded to any representations the various union committees might offer to justify a settlement that could go beyond the clear-cut "Guideposts," our own research, as noted earlier, has brought us to the conclusion that the usually noted government figure of 3% is not only too high for a non-inflationary guide, but far too high for companies beset by today's facts of foreign and domestic competition.

Of course, the economic dimensions of our settlements must be negotiated at the bargaining table. But certainly at this point, General Electric does not need Government intervention to persuade us that our settlements this year should be on the non-inflationary side. The rigors of the market place are already persuasive enough. General Electric products are selling today at 1954-1956 prices.

Intervention to Prevent Strikes or to Bring Speedier Settlements?

One of the primary objectives of Federal intervention, as explained by Government spokesmen, is to prevent strikes or to speed settlements when strikes have begun.

We believe that intervention at General Electric would have exactly the opposite effect. Judging from past experience, the one sure thing that will bring on a strike call from some union officials this year is any grounds for an assumption by them—mistaken though they may be—that a crisis will bring Federal intervention beyond that normally provided by the Federal mediators. The converse is also a valid expectation. If these union officials were quite sure that they would not get attention extra to that of the FMCS, it is not likely that they would want to stir up an extra crisis to attract it.

But if a strike did get started, the same principle must apply. Every bit of extra attention that such union officials get in Washington might well add extra days to the length of a strike.

Thus, the chances for a settlement without a strike—or for a faster settlement if a strike were underway—would be enhanced by the extent to which intervention-minded union officials understand that the issues must be resolved at the bargaining table between the two parties immediately responsible for the results.

Suppose Extra Intervention Comes?

We really don't believe that responsible people in Government are likely to give the extra attention a union official would be trying to attract if he were following the old intervention-getting ritual.

But there is always an outside possibility that such performance will not receive the cool audience reaction it deserves.

So, if extra intervention does come—what then?

We have already said that we will not be holding something back for the purpose of later bargaining with an intervenor. Our negotiating decisions are compelled by realistic long-range and short-range considerations applicable to our businesses. Management can neither abdicate, nor can an intervenor properly assume, the responsibility for these decisions. Therefore, the outcome must ultimately be something produced by responsible negotiators through responsible negotiations, with or without intervention.

A second look at the three areas in which some union officials might conjure an "excuse" for intervention reveals that the final results are already being shaped by the industrial realities of the 1960's. The employer and intervenor alike are powerless to alter these realities.

1
The Economic Proposals

There was a time when employers and third party intervenors seemed to enjoy a certain degree of latitude in making extravagant last minute concessions or recommendations to bring a speedy, if costly, settlement. During the lush post-war years, when the whole world was hungry for U.S. goods, compensation increases could be easily recovered in price increases. World-wide shortages, pent-up demand, and the resulting inflation supported this flabby approach to wage and price determination. An umbrella of economic immunity seemed to protect the employer or intervenor who sought peace at any price.

We have all learned to our sorrow how transient this immunity turned out to be.

Excess capacity at home and vigorous competition from abroad have transformed for many industries the expectation of price inflation into the practical certainty of price erosion.

Neither the employer nor the intervenor is a law unto himself. Neither can look to increases in prices to validate his excesses at the bargaining table.

Although there may be still some exceptions to this rule elsewhere, this is certainly not the case with General Electric. With our products selling today at 1954-1956 prices, our average compensation cost per employee has gone up 44%, and price levels of our purchased materials have gone up 10%, since 1955.

And on the cost side of the picture, we have never had the margin of freedom in working out collective bargaining settlements that has been apparently afforded to conspicuous companies in a number of other industries. When an agreement was reached by such a company, it could almost always be assured that it had established a "pattern" for its domestic competitors, which would be thus saddled with similar or comparable increases in costs. We have never had such assurances. In practice, most of our formidable competitors (which number in the hundreds in the electrical industry alone) have paid little or no attention to our settlements and have gone right ahead in making the best deals they can work out to suit their particular situations.

General Electric does not set industry-wide patterns. No third party intervenor can possibly confer on us any such power.

2
Management Responsibility

Just as inflation seemed to permit the employer or the intervenor to be wastefully expensive in pressing for economic settlements, it also appeared to be indulgent about a prodigal abandonment of management responsibilities. After all, both kinds of extravagance simply added up to higher costs which could be passed on to customers in higher prices.

And just as excess capacity, foreign competition, and price erosion make a sounder economic approach imperative, they also command the protection of management ability to choose the most efficient methods for operating the business.

In our own instance, management rights were not lost to the unions in contract negotiations. Instead, they are being exposed by the judges to potential alteration by the arbitrators.

In this manner, the contracts we negotiated in collective bargaining have become, without our agreement, subject to renegotiation through compulsory arbitration.

Since management responsibility involves the constant efforts of management to improve efficiency, the protection of this responsibility is vital to the future of good sales and good profits for the business and good jobs and good paychecks for employees.

With increasing costs for manpower and materials on the one hand, and with price erosion on the other, the freedom to try to be efficient is the last fighting chance for a company's survival in today's competitive world.

Neither the employer, the judge, the arbitrator, nor the Federal intervenor can make the world tolerate any inefficiencies he might leave in his wake.

3
Employee Rights

In an earlier era, now passed, a quick and easy way for an employer or a third party intervenor to work himself out of a collective bargaining dilemma was to propose some form of compulsory unionism. This was apparently a good deal for the employer, on the assumption that compulsory unionism cost him nothing. It was obviously a good deal for union officials, because it assured new dues-money from employees who would be forced to support the union or be discharged from their jobs. It was an equally obvious bad deal for employees but since the bargain was made between the employer and the union officials—and hailed by the intervenor, if there was one—it was convenient to forget that this compulsory arrangement was no bargain at all for employees.

The recent series of negotiations in aerospace confirmed how obsolete this approach has become elsewhere in industry. It was never fashionable in General Electric.

We do not wish to use this space here to belabor again the many reasons for our convictions that compulsory unionism is bad for employees, bad for the country, and bad for the future of the union movement itself. This subject has been discussed at length in many of our publications over many years and was only recently reviewed again rather extensively in this publication. (See "A Report to Management: Compulsory Unionism," Relations News Letter, April 5, 1963.)

We wish only to note once more that the trend is against compulsion. And a free country's legislators have not seen fit to bestow on a third party intervenor the authority to arrest this trend.

and in summary...

A Promise, a Conviction, a Prediction

To those who may be uncertain* about how the Company will approach its negotiations this year and about what will be the probable results, we offer a promise, a conviction and a prediction. We believe they will clarify our own unique situation in the context of current economic trends and industrial relations realities.

A Promise

We promise that we will be both honest and steadfast in our resolve to follow the "truth in bargaining" approach we have pursued for so many years. We will hold nothing back simply because intervention might be expected. We will offer nothing more simply because intervention might come.

A Conviction

We are convinced that if certain union officials find that intervention will be easily available to them, they can be expected to seek it again as in the past. We are equally convinced that the response should be and will be confined to the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service. We do not believe that responsible people in Washington will fall prey to old or new snares to capture extra attention beyond the FMCS.

A Prediction

Our regular readers know that we rarely indulge in predictions, but there is a certain inevitable thrust to the force of our current industrial environment. It has grown far too sophisticated and far too stern to permit excesses at the bargaining table, whether they might arise from normal bargaining, extra intervention, or anything else. In General Electric, intervention can delay a settlement, breed a strike, and prolong a strike already under way. These things, intervention can do. But it cannot change the economic and industrial facts of life with which the Company must struggle. These facts can be denied only at the peril of employment and growth. These facts, the employees and public are growing to understand.

That is why the results of our negotiations, however they turn out, must be those produced by responsible bargaining, with or without intervention.

---

*Any uncertainty about General Electric's situation which might arise from speculating about Federal intervention elsewhere might be quite naturally compounded by a recent Intermediate Report of an NLRB Trial Examiner that the Company did not bargain in good faith in its 1960 negotiations with the IUE. At the time this recommendation was announced, we tried to dispel any confusion arising from that source with the following paragraph in our statement to the press:

"We will vigorously appeal the [Trial Examiner] Leff Report to the Board and to the courts, if necessary, and of course, will conduct this year's negotiations with the same forthright, and we believe proper, approach as in past years' negotiations."

MANAGEMENT DEVELOPMENT AND
EMPLOYEE RELATIONS SERVICES
GENERAL ELECTRIC
570 Lexington Ave., N. Y. 22, N. Y.

EDITOR
NEW SOUTH-S REGNL COUNC
63 AUBURN AVE N E
ATLANTA 3 GA
6P GC

BULK RATE
U. S. POSTAGE
PAID
GARDEN CITY, N. Y.
PERMIT NO. 81

RELATIONS NEWS LETTER—For Circulation Among General Electric Management
(Please send address changes or inquiries to department 2194.)

ERN-221 6/63 (AOO)

PRINTED AND BOUND IN U.S.A.

BETTY KAYE TAYLOR
EDITOR

ADOLPH HELD CHAIRMAN

CHARLES S. ZIMMERMAN
CHAIRMAN, ADVISORY COMMITTEE

LABOR REPORTS

ISSUED IN THE INTERESTS OF ORGANIZED LABOR

25 EAST 78TH STREET • NEW YORK 21 • N. Y. • LE 5-3700

SB

JUNE 1963
VOLUME XXIII No. 178

"We Shall Overcome"

LABOR REPORTS articles may be reprinted with or without credit

IN THIS ISSUE

CARTOON . . . . . Cover

NEWS

LABOR ACROSS NATION AIDS BIRMINGHAM NEGROES 2-3

MISSISSIPPI PAPER IS LIBERAL VOICE 3

FEATURES

SKILLS FOR YOUTH AIM OF NEW COMM. 4

TEST YOUR LABOR I.Q. 5

HOW REAL IS OUR CHILDREN'S WORLD? 6
by Harry Gersh

TEST YOUR LABOR I.Q.

ANSWERS
(Test on Page 5)

1. c) a scab
2. b) A. Philip Randolph
3. a) genocide
4. b) Sweden
5. c) 2½ times

LABOR ACROSS NATION AIDS BIRMINGHAM NEGROES

Washington, D.C.--Labor's reaction to Birmingham came swift and strong when word reached the nation that dogs and fire hoses were that city's answer to the simple request of Negroes for equal rights. Among the first to speak out was the top-ranking Executive Council of the AFL-CIO, which was meeting at the time in St. Louis.

"The racial disturbances in Birmingham," said the Council, "have been shocking by any standard. They should not have happened; they must not continue; they must never occur again anywhere in America."

Pointing out that equal job rights were a key to securing racial justice in the nation, the Council appealed for Congressional action to provide equal employment opportunities for all. Full and equal rights for the Negro, said the Council, "is the only ultimate solution for Birmingham and for those other Birminghams that, under different names, and in varying degrees, are strewn across the length and breadth of this nation."

Meanwhile, in Washington another top labor body, the Executive Board of the Industrial Union Department, AFL-CIO, strongly condemned the tactics of Birmingham's police as being "worthy of Adolph Hitler and his Brown Shirts."

Calling upon President Kennedy to act to uphold the Constitution, the IUD said, "The strength of the federal government must be brought to bear upon the side of those who dare to stand up for their constitutionally guaranteed civil rights."

Backing up the indignant reaction of labor's top echelons to the events in Birmingham were international unions and central labor bodies across the entire nation.

In New York City the Central Labor Council ran a special mass meeting which adopted a resolution declaring, "the American people and the world are shocked by the spectacle of snarling police dogs and high pressure fire hoses to prevent Negro Americans from seeking their democratic rights." An on-the-spot collection taken at the meeting netted over $30,000 to be sent to the civil rights forces in Birmingham.

Minnesota labor moved quickly with wires to President Kennedy by the central labor bodies of St. Paul and Minneapolis. Urging the President to take whatever action is necessary in Birmingham, the twin cities' unions said, "The negotiated settlement must be carried out in a peaceful and orderly manner without bombings or the use of high powered fire hoses and dogs."

In Boston, a large group of local unions co-sponsored a mass rally in Boston Common. Working with labor on the rally were some 30 religious, civic and civil rights organizations.

The International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union responded to the Birmingham events with a $2,000 contribution to the civil rights forces. Along with the donation, which was sent to Rev. Martin Luther King, the ILGWU sent a strongly worded message saluting the struggle for civil rights and condemning the brutal attacks upon the Negro non-violent demonstrators.

The United Automobile Workers dispatched Nelson Jack Edwards, a member of the UAW Executive Board, to Birmingham to confer with Dr. King and to bring him the unqualified support of the Auto Workers. In a message from Birmingham which was published in Solidarity, the UAW newspaper, Edwards stated, "Neither firearms, water cannon, clubs, vicious dogs, or high pressure water hoses will stop this wave of revolt against the inhuman treatment of Negro citizens."

In the midst of the Birmingham events, the National Maritime Union announced its donation of $32,692 to the Ghandi Society for Human Rights, of which Rev. Martin Luther King is Honorary Chairman. The contribution was made "To bolster those in the front ranks of the fight to obtain full constitutional rights for all citizens by non-violent means."

The International Union of Electrical Workers organized a Tag Day to raise funds for the Birmingham campaign among the members of its District 4 in the Middle Atlantic area. In addition to raising funds a number of IUE locals adopted resolutions condemning the use of violence to prevent American citizens from obtaining their legal rights.

In sum, when the Birmingham battle broke, American labor throughout the land spontaneously came forward to take its place beside its allies in the civil rights movement. In many union minds too, there was a remembrance of labor's early battles and the parallels with today's struggle for human rights. In the words of the resolution adopted at the mass rally of the New York City Central Labor Council, "Labor is proud that the civil rights movement has adopted many of its techniques: the sit-down strikes of the thirties have inspired the sit-ins of today. The boycott which is being used so successfully in Birmingham was used by unions for generations. Negotiations to win basic rights is basic to organized labor."

JLC Labor Reports

MISSISSIPPI PAPER IS LIBERAL VOICE

New York--In the heartland of Mississippi a voice of liberalism sounds loud and clear every Saturday. It belongs to the Mississippi Free Press, a unique experiment in Southern interracial, pro-labor journalism. Founded three years ago by Charles Butts, an enterprising and dedicated young newspaperman, the Free Press practices what it preaches. It not only advocates integration, but employs an integrated staff.

The Mississippi Free Press specializes in two kinds of stories. In a state where trade unionism is weak, it gives prominent attention to all the activities of the labor movement. And in an area where Negroes traditionally have been seen but not heard, the Free Press authoritatively covers every effort for racial justice.

An example of the paper's reports on labor is its current series "What is a Labor Union?" Each week, in clear and simple language, it brings to its readers (mostly potential union members) the "why's" and "wherefore's" of trade unionism. It describes the workers' rights under the rules of the National Labor Relations Act; it tells of the benefits unionism has brought workers in other states; it pictures the internal workings of a union. That kind of a series elsewhere would be mere routine. In Mississippi, it's like the clarion call of the Declaration of Independence.

The Free Press' goal for this year is to reach a circulation of 25,000 which will make it the fourth largest paper in the state. To reach that goal it is actively soliciting subscriptions from all over the country at $4.00 a year. But for Mississipians it has a special rate of only $1.00 a year, which represents a big sacrifice for the sharecroppers and underpaid workers who read the paper. Also for every dollar donated to the paper it will give a free one year subscription to a Mississippi worker who would otherwise not be able to afford one. Subscriptions may be sent to The Mississippi Free Press, 1253 Valley Street, Jackson 3, Miss.

JLC Labor Reports

SKILLS FOR YOUTH AIM OF NEW COMM.

A chance for minority youth in this country to get a crack at some of the better paying skilled jobs. That's the purpose of a new government committee that met in Washington recently to begin its work, quietly but resolutely. The committee has a long name - the Department of Labor's Advisory Committee for Equal Opportunity in Apprenticeship and Training - but its aims are quite simple. It is going to help young people all over America, especially the deprived youth who belong to minority groups, to have the chance to gain apprenticeships in skilled trades.

Why a special committee for youth and why the emphasis on minority youngsters? The answer is painfully clear when we look at the unemployment figures. Percentage-wise there are almost three times as many unemployed youth as unemployed adults. And among non-white young people the rate is five times as high. Furthermore, the gap is growing because more and more young people are entering the job market. Specifically, 40 per cent more youth will enter the job market in the sixties than in the fifties.

With this intensely competitive job situation, a young person's chance of getting a job depends almost entirely upon his training. If he has a skill, he's got a fairly good chance; if he hasn't, it's going to be mighty rough. This is especially so as more and more industry becomes automated. For when automation comes in, the unskilled and semi-skilled go out. It's as simple as that.

To begin to tackle the training and apprenticeship part of this problem is the job of the new Advisory Committee. Its chairman is John F. Henning, the U.S. Undersecretary of Labor. It's fifteen members, all of them unpaid, represent minority groups, labor, business and the public.

At its Washington meeting, the committee adopted the following program:

1. It will attempt to determine the number of minority youth participating in present apprenticeship programs.

2. It endorsed the establishment of apprenticeship and training information centers in industrial and metropolitan areas to familiarize junior and senior high school students and youth looking for work with apprenticeship requirements and openings.

3. It will work toward the establishment of state advisory committees in each of the states to encourage labor and management to employ minority apprentices.

4. It will study the advisability of a pre-apprenticeship program to prepare young people for successful application and participation in apprenticeship.

5. It urged action to assure employer compliance with the no-discrimination policy of the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training of the U.S. Department of Labor.

The entire country has an important stake in the success of the Advisory Committee's work. Chronic youth unemployment spells danger in any society, not only for the young people, but equally for their families and for the communities in which they live.

JLC Labor Reports

Dear Editor: TEST YOUR LABOR I.Q. appears as a regular monthly LABOR REPORTS feature. A mat of the masthead is available free upon request.

1. The slang expression "fink" is sometimes used to describe:

   a) a supervisor
   b) a union organizer
   c) a scab

2. Which of the following Negro leaders is a Vice President of the AFL-CIO?

   a) Martin Luther King
   b) A. Philip Randolph
   c) Roy Wilkins

3. The crime of murdering an entire people or nation is called:

   a) genocide
   b) persecution
   c) xenophobia

4. The longest average life span is enjoyed by the people of:

   a) the United States
   b) Sweden
   c) Argentina

5. The unemployment rate among Negro workers is _____ that of white workers.

   a) the same as
   b) 25 per cent higher than
   c) 2½ times

Each correct answer counts two points. Score yourself as follows: 2-4, poor; 6-8, average; 10 superior. (Answers to test on index page.)

HOW REAL IS OUR CHILDREN'S WORLD?

by Harry Gersh

Fairy tales are wonderful for kids - in moderation. But if our kids grow up believing they live in a fairy tale world, they - and their neighbors - are in for trouble.

Social psychologist Otto Klineberg has analysed 15 primers used widely in our public school systems. These are first books, prepared to teach children to read. They are attractive, have excellent print, and colorful illustrations. But the world they describe to children in their formative years is not the real world.

And since children accept what the school and teachers say much more readily than what their parents and experience teach, they may be in for trouble. The fortunate child whose life is fairly close to the shiny lives of the kids in the books is left in his dream world. The child out of a poor or segregated environment may get the idea that he has been singled out for deprivation.

The central characters in these children's books are always white, almost always blond, and generally of Northern European stock. They live in good homes with good furniture and there's never a problem about hand-me-down clothes or buying a new pair of shoes.

The fathers in these books all have fun jobs and the mothers are never distraught. New cars and travel during vacation periods is the normal thing. Poverty or unemployment just doesn't exist.

Some illustrations do show swarthy or dark-skinned people, but the swarthy ones are easily recognized as organ-grinders or peddlers, the dark-skinned ones are inhabitants of distant countries. None of them ever live next door.

And although more than 20 million Americans are Negroes, you would never know it from the primers given our children in public schools.

Dr. Klineberg reports: "One reader has a story called 'A Summer in the South,' in which a boy and his father go 'away down South to see grandmother.' But there are apparently no Negroes even in the South...Either there are no Negroes, or they must not be mentioned."

Reading these books, the white child in the all-white community will never know that some Americans are dark-skinned. The white child in a community which contains Negroes will come to believe that there's something not quite proper about his dark-skinned neighbors. And the Negro child brought up on these books will begin to wonder whether he exists at all.

As is to be expected, most children's books, purporting to describe life, do not mention religion. The fact that most Americans belong to church or synagogue is too touchy for the authors of children's primers. But in the unusual instance when religion is mentioned, it is in terms of "everyone goes to church on Sunday." This makes someone who doesn't go to church seem rather odd to the youngster, and a Jew must appear out of this world. That is, the world of the first books.

CONGRESSIONAL SCOREBOARD

Here is a box score on legislation of particular interest to members of the United Steelworkers of America in the 88th Congress. Use this information in writing your Congressman or Senator. Every bill listed should be passed to help strengthen economic and social conditions in the nation.

BILL	HOUSE	SENATE
Tax Reduction and Reform	Hearings completed
Anderson-King Hospital Insurance Bill, HR-3920, S-880	No action
Federal Aid to Construction of Medical Colleges and Loans to Medical Students, HR-12	Passed, 4/24/63
Federal Aid to Education Omnibus Bill, HR-3000, S-580	Hearings under way	Hearings under way
Youth Employment Opportunities Bill, HR-5131, S-1	Reported out of Committee, 4/8/63 Before Rules Committee	Passed, 4/10/63
Federal Standards for Unemployment Compensation	Presented May 19
Automatic Extension of Unemployment Compensation When Conditions Warrant
Mass Transportation Bill for Aid to Urban Areas, HR-3881, S-6.	Reported out of Committee, 4/9/63 Before Rules Committee	Passed, 4/4/63
Crucial Amendment to Mass Transit Bill to Protect Union Bargaining Rights and Contractual Benefits	Committee provision not adequate. Amendment to be presented on the floor	Morse amendment passed in place of Committee provision, 4/4/63
Extension and Expansion of Civil Rights Commission, HR-5456, S-1117	Hearings under way

Crucial Amendment to Mass Transit Bill to Protect Union Bargaining Rights and Contractual Benefits	Committee provision not adequate. Amendment to be presented on the floor	Morse amendment passed in place of Committee provision, 4/4/63
Extension and Expansion of Civil Rights Commission, HR-5456, S-1117	Hearings under way
Voting Rights: Automatic Appointment of Temporary Voting Referees, HR-5455, S-1283	Hearings under way
Voting Rights: Control of Literacy Test Requirements, HR-5455, S-1283	Hearings under way
Financial and Technical Assistance to Schools Attempting Desegregation, HR-1766, S-772	Hearings under way
Requiring School Districts to File First-Step Plans for Desegregation, HR-1766, S-772	Hearings under way
FEPC Legislation, HR-405, HR-1767, S-773	Hearings under way
Allow Attorney General to File Suits in All Civil Rights Cases, HR-1768, S-1889	Hearings under way
Public Works Appropriation: $480 Million for Needed Approved Community Projects	Passed, 4/10/63	Passed, 5/1/63
Shorter Work Week, HR-355, HR-1680	Hearings scheduled before Holland Committee, 6/4/63
Truth-in-Lending, HR-4070, S-750
Truth-in-Packaging, HR-2382, S-387		Hearings under way
Section 14(b): Repeal Legislation Recognizing State Right-to-Work Laws, HR-5846, S-1341
Migrant Labor: Improve Educational Opportunities and Register Crew Leaders, S-521
Equal Pay Bill, HR-6060, S-1409	Reported out of Committee, 5/8/63	Reported out of Committee, 5/8/63

WHO'S WHO IN THE 88th CONGRESS

This is a list of U.S. senators by states. The initials indicate Democratic and Republican political affiliation.

ALABAMA
Lister Hill (D)
John J. Sparkman (D)

ALASKA
E. L. Bartlett (D)
Ernest Gruening (D)

ARIZONA
Carl Hayden (D)
Barry Goldwater (R)

ARKANSAS
John L. McClellan (D)
J. W. Fulbright (D)

CALIFORNIA
Thomas H. Kuchel (R)
Clair Engle (D)

COLORADO
Gordon Allott (R)
Peter H. Dominick (R)

CONNECTICUT
Thomas J. Dodd (D)
A. A. Ribicoff (D)

DELAWARE
John J. Williams (R)
J. Caleb Boggs (R)

FLORIDA
Spessard L. Holland (D)
George A. Smathers (D)

GEORGIA
Richard B. Russell (D)
H. E. Talmadge (D)

HAWAII
Hiram L. Fong (R)
Daniel K. Inouye (D)

IDAHO
Frank Church (D)
Len B. Jordan (R)

ILLINOIS
Paul H. Douglas (D)
Everett M. Dirksen (R)

MONTANA
Mike Mansfield (D)
Lee Metcalf (D)

NEBRASKA
Roman L. Hruska (R)
Carl T. Curtis (R)

NEVADA
Alan Bible (D)
Howard W. Cannon (D)

NEW HAMPSHIRE
Norris Cotton (R)
T. J. McIntyre (D)

NEW JERSEY
Clifford P. Case (R)
H. A. Williams Jr. (D)

NEW MEXICO
C. P. Anderson (D)
Edwin L. Mechem (R)

NEW YORK
Jacob K. Javits (R)
Kenneth B. Keating (R)

NORTH CAROLINA
Sam J. Ervin Jr. (D)
B. Everett Jordan (D)

NORTH DAKOTA
Milton R. Young (R)
Q. N. Burdick (D)

OHIO
Frank J. Lausche (D)
Stephen M. Young (D)

OKLAHOMA
A. S. M. Monroney (D)
J. H. Edmondson (D)

OREGON
Wayne Morse (D)
Mrs. M. Neuberger (D)

PENNSYLVANIA
Joseph S. Clark (D)
Hugh Scott (R)

ARIZONA
1 John J. Rhodes (R)
2 Morris K. Udall (D)
3 G. F. Senner Jr. (D)

ARKANSAS
1 E. C. Gathings (D)
2 Wilbur D. Mills (D)
3 James W. Trimble (D)
4 Oren Harris (D)

CALIFORNIA
1 Don Clausen (R)
2 H. T. Johnson (D)
3 John E. Moss (D)
4 R. L. Leggett (D)
5 John F. Shelley (D)
6 W. S. Mailliard (R)
7 Jeffery Cohelan (R)
8 G. P. Miller (D)
9 Don Edwards (D)
10 C. S. Gubser (R)
11 J. A. Younger (R)
12 Burt L. Talcott (R)
13 C. M. Teague (R)
14 J. F. Baldwin Jr. (R)
15 John J. McFall (D)
16 B. F. Sisk (D)
17 Cecil R. King (D)
18 Harlan Hagen (D)
19 Chet Holifield (D)
20 H. Allen Smith (R)
21 A. F. Hawkins (D)
22 J. C. Corman (D)
23 Vacant
24 G. P. Lipscomb (R)
25 R. B. Cameron (D)
26 J. Roosevelt (D)
27 E. G. Burkhalter (D)
28 A. Bell (R)
29 G. E. Brown Jr. (D)
30 E. R. Roybal (D)
31 C. H. Wilson (D)
32 Craig Hosmer (R)

HAWAII
AL T. P. Gill (D)
AL S. M. Matsunaga (D)

IDAHO
1 C. I. White Jr. (D)
2 R. R. Harding (D)

ILLINOIS
1 W. L. Dawson (D)
2 Barratt O'Hara (D)
3 W. T. Murphy (D)
4 E. J. Derwinski (R)
5 J. C. Kluczynski (D)
6 T. J. O'Brien (D)
7 R. V. Libonati (D)
8 D. Rostenkowski (D)
9 E. R. Finnegan (D)
10 H. R. Collier (R)
11 R. C. Pucinski (D)
12 R. McClory (R)
13 D. Rumsfeld (R)
14 E. J. Hoffman (R)
15 Mrs. C. T. Reid (R)
16 J. B. Anderson (R)
17 L. C. Arends (R)
18 R. H. Michel (R)
19 R. T. McLoskey (R)
20 Paul Findley (R)
21 K. J. Gray (D)
22 W. L. Springer (R)
23 G. E. Shipley (D)
24 Melvin Price (D)

INDIANA
1 Ray J. Madden (D)
2 C. A. Halleck (R)
3 John Brademas (D)
4 E. Ross Adair (R)
5 J. E. Roush (D)
6 R. L. Roudebush (R)
7 William G. Bray (R)
8 W. K. Denton (D)
3 E. A. Garmatz (D)
4 George H. Fallon (D)
5 R. E. Lankford (D)
6 C. McC. Mathias (R)
7 Samuel N. Friedel (D)

MASSACHUSETTS
1 S. O. Conte (R)
2 E. P. Boland (D)
3 P. J. Philbin (D)
4 H. D. Donohue (D)
5 F. B. Morse (R)
6 W. H. Bates (R)
7 T. H. Macdonald (D)
8 T. P. O'Neill Jr. (D)
9 J. McCormack (D)
10 J. W. Martin Jr. (R)
11 J. A. Burke (D)
12 Hastings Keith (R)

MICHIGAN
AL Neil Staebler (D)
1 L. N. Nedzi (D)
2 George Meader (R)
3 A. E. Johansen (R)
4 E. Hutchinson (R)
5 G. R. Ford (R)
6 C. Chamberlain (R)
7 J. G. O'Hara (D)
8 James Harvey (R)
9 R. P. Griffin (R)
10 E. A. Cederberg (R)
11 Victor A. Knox (R)
12 J. B. Bennett (R)
13 C. C. Diggs (D)
14 H. M. Ryan (D)
15 J. D. Dingell (D)
16 John Lesinski (D)
17 Mrs. M. Griffiths (D)
18 W. Broomfield (R)

MINNESOTA
1 Albert H. Quie (R)
2 Ancher Nelsen (R)
6 Mrs. F. P. Dwyer (R)
7 W. B. Widnall (R)
8 C. S. Joelson (D)
9 F. C. Osmers Jr. (R)
10 P. W. Rodino Jr. (D)
11 J. G. Minish (D)
12 G. Wallhauser (R)
13 C. E. Gallagher (D)
14 D. V. Daniels (D)
15 E. J. Patten (D)

NEW MEXICO
AL J. M. Montoya (D)
AL T. G. Morris (D)

NEW YORK
1 Otis G. Pike (D)
2 J. R. Grover Jr. (R)
3 S. B. Derounian (R)
4 John W. Wydler (R)
5 F. J. Becker (R)
6 S. Halpern (R)
7 J. P. Addabbo (D)
8 B. S. Rosenthal (D)
9 J. J. Delaney (D)
10 E. Celler (D)
11 E. J. Keogh (D)
12 Mrs. E. F. Kelly (D)
13 A. J. Multer (D)
14 J. J. Rooney (D)
15 H. L. Carey (D)
16 J. M. Murphy (D)
17 J. V. Lindsay (R)
18 A. C. Powell (D)
19 L. Farbstein (D)
20 W. F. Ryan (D)
21 J. C. Healey (D)
22 J. H. Gilbert (D)
23 C. A. Buckley (D)
24 Paul A. Fino (R)
25 R. R. Barry (R)
26 O. R. Reid (R)
27 Mrs. St. George (R)
28 J. E. Wharton (R)
29 Leo W. O'Brien (D)
30 C. J. King (R)
31 C. E. Kilburn (R)
32 A. Pirnie (R)
33 H. W. Robison (R)
34 R. W. Riehlman (R)
35 S. S. Stratton (D)
36 F. J. Horton (R)
37 H. C. Ostertag (R)
38 C. E. Goodell (R)
39 J. R. Pillion (R)
40 W. E. Miller (R)
41 T. J. Dulski (D)

NORTH CAROLINA
7 W. H. Milliken (R)
8 W. S. Curtin (R)
9 Paul B. Dague (R)
10 J. M. McDade (R)
11 Daniel J. Flood (D)
12 J. I. Whalley (R)
13 R. S. Schweiker (R)
14 W. S. Moorhead (D)
15 F. E. Walter (D)
16 John C. Kunkel (R)
17 H. T. Schneebeli (R)
18 R. J. Corbett (R)
19 G. A. Goodling (R)
20 E. J. Holland (D)
21 John H. Dent (D)
22 John P. Saylor (R)
23 Leon H. Gavin (R)
24 J. D. Weaver (R)
25 F. M. Clark (D)
26 T. E. Morgan (D)
27 J. G. Fulton (R)

RHODE ISLAND
1 F. J. St. Germain (D)
2 J. E. Fogarty (D)

SOUTH CAROLINA
1 L. M. Rivers (D)
2 A. W. Watson (D)
3 W. J. Bryan Dorn (D)
4 R. T. Ashmore (D)
5 R. W. Hemphill (D)
6 J. L. McMillan (D)

SOUTH DAKOTA
1 Ben Reifer (R)
2 E. Y. Berry (R)

TENNESSEE
1 James H. Quillen (R)
2 Howard H. Baker (R)
3 W. E. Brock (R)
4 Joe L. Evins (D)
5 R. H. Fulton (D)
6 Ross Bass (D)
7 Tom Murray (D)
8 R. A. Everett (D)
9 Clifford Davis (D)

TEXAS
AL Joe R. Pool (D)
1 Wright Patman (D)
2 Jack Brooks (D)
3 L. Beckworth (D)
4 Ray Roberts (D)
5 Bruce Alger (R)
6 Olin E. Teague (D)
7 John Dowdy (D)
8 Albert Thomas (D)

How To Write Them

This list of U. S. senators and representatives is printed to help you in writing your elected representatives in the 88th Congress about needed legislation for full employment, tax cuts, medicare for the aged and other proposals of benefit to you which are supported by the USWA.

We urge you to write often. Your letter will not only be read but it may also influence your representative to sup-

GEORGIA
Richard B. Russell (D)
H. E. Talmadge (D)

HAWAII
Hiram L. Fong (R)
Daniel K. Inouye (D)

IDAHO
Frank Church (D)
Len B. Jordan (R)

ILLINOIS
Paul H. Douglas (D)
Everett M. Dirksen (R)

INDIANA
Vance Hartke (D)
Birch E. Bayh (D)

IOWA
B. B. Hickenlooper (R)
Jack Miller (R)

KANSAS
Frank Carlson (R)
James B. Pearson (R)

KENTUCKY
John S. Cooper (R)
Thruston B. Morton (R)

LOUISIANA
Allen J. Ellender (D)
Russell B. Long (D)

MAINE
Mrs. M. C. Smith (R)
Edmund S. Muskie (D)

MARYLAND
J. Glenn Beall (R)
Daniel B. Brewster (D)

MASSACHUSETTS
Leverett Saltonstall (R)
E. M. Kennedy (D)

MICHIGAN
Pat McNamara (D)
Philip A. Hart (D)

MINNESOTA
H. H. Humphrey (D)
E. J. McCarthy (D)

MISSISSIPPI
James O. Eastland (D)
John Stennis (D)

MISSOURI
Stuart Symington (D)
Edward V. Long (D)

OHIO
Frank J. Lausche (D)
Stephen M. Young (D)

OKLAHOMA
A. S. M. Monroney (D)
J. H. Edmondson (D)

OREGON
Wayne Morse (D)
Mrs. M. Neuberger (D)

PENNSYLVANIA
Joseph S. Clark (D)
Hugh Scott (R)

RHODE ISLAND
John O. Pastore (D)
Claiborne Pell (D)

SOUTH CAROLINA
Olin D. Johnston (D)
Strom Thurmond (D)

SOUTH DAKOTA
Karl E. Mundt (R)
G. S. McGovern (D)

TENNESSEE
Estes Kefauver (D)
Albert Gore (D)

TEXAS
R. W. Yarborough (D)
John G. Tower (R)

UTAH
Wallace F. Bennett (R)
Frank E. Moss (D)

VERMONT
George D. Aiken (R)
Winston L. Prouty (R)

VIRGINIA
Harry F. Byrd (D)
A. Willis Robertson (D)

WASHINGTON
W. G. Magnuson (D)
Henry M. Jackson (D)

WEST VIRGINIA
Jennings Randolph (D)
Robert C. Byrd (D)

WISCONSIN
William Proxmire (D)
Gaylord Nelson (D)

WYOMING
Gale W. McGee (D)
Milward L. Simpson (R)

This is a list of the U.S. representatives. The number of the Congressional district is given in front of the name. AL indicates the congressman serves at large. The initial showing political affiliation follows the name.

ALABAMA
AL G. M. Grant (D)
AL G. W. Andrews (D)
AL K. A. Roberts (D)
AL Albert Rains (D)
AL A. I. Selden Jr. (D)
AL Carl Elliott (D)
AL Robert E. Jones (D)
AL G. Huddleston (D)

ALASKA
AL R. J. Rivers (D)

31 C. H. Wilson (D)
32 Craig Hosmer (R)
33 H. R. Sheppard (D)
34 R. T. Hanna (D)
35 James B. Utt (R)
36 Bob Wilson (R)
37 L. Van Deerlin (D)
38 P. M. Martin (R)

COLORADO
1 Byron G. Rogers (D)
2 D. G. Brotzman (R)
3 J. E. Chenoweth (R)
4 W. N. Aspinall (D)

CONNECTICUT
AL B. F. Grabowski (D)
1 E. Q. Daddario (D)
2 W. L. St. Onge (D)
3 R. N. Giaimo (D)
4 Abner W. Sibal (R)
5 J. S. Monagan (D)

DELAWARE
AL H. McDowell Jr. (D)

FLORIDA
1 R. L. F. Sikes (D)
2 C. E. Bennett (D)
3 Claude Pepper (D)
4 D. B. Fascell (D)
5 A. Herlong Jr. (D)
6 P. G. Rogers (D)
7 J. A. Haley (D)
8 D. R. Matthews (D)
9 Don Fuqua (D)
10 S. M. Gibbons (D)
11 E. J. Gurney (R)
12 W. C. Cramer (R)

GEORGIA
1 G. E. Hagan (D)
2 J. L. Pilcher (D)
3 E. L. Forrester (D)
4 John J. Flynt Jr. (D)
5 C. L. Weltner (D)
6 Carl Vinson (D)
7 John W. Davis (D)
8 J. R. Tuten (D)
9 P. M. Landrum (D)
10 R. Stephens Jr. (D)

7 William G. Bray (R)
8 W. K. Denton (D)
9 Earl Wilson (R)
10 Ralph Harvey (R)
11 Donald C. Bruce (R)

IOWA
1 Fred Schwengel (R)
2 J. E. Bromwell (R)
3 H. R. Gross (R)
4 John Kyl (R)
5 Neal Smith (D)
6 C. B. Hoeven (R)
7 Ben F. Jensen (R)

KANSAS
1 Robert Dole (R)
2 W. H. Avery (R)
3 R. F. Ellsworth (R)
4 Garner E. Shriver (R)
5 Joe Skubitz (R)

KENTUCKY
1 F. A. Stubblefield (D)
2 W. H. Natcher (D)
3 M. G. Snyder (R)
4 Frank Chelf (D)
5 Eugene Siler (R)
6 John C. Watts (D)
7 Carl D. Perkins (D)

LOUISIANA
1 F. Edward Hebert (D)
2 Hale Boggs (D)
3 Edwin E. Willis (D)
4 J. Waggonner Jr. (D)
5 Otto E. Passman (D)
6 J. H. Morrison (D)
7 T. A. Thompson (D)
8 Gillis W. Long (D)

MAINE
1 Stanley R. Tupper (R)
2 C. G. McIntire (R)

MARYLAND
AL C. R. Sickles (D)
1 R. C. B. Morton (R)
2 C. D. Long (D)
3 Clark MacGregor (R)
4 Joseph E. Karth (D)
5 Donald M. Fraser (D)
6 Alec G. Olson (D)
7 Odin Langen (R)
8 John A. Blatnik (D)

MISSISSIPPI
1 T. G. Abernethy (D)
2 J. L. Whitten (D)
3 J. B. Williams (D)
4 Arthur Winstead (D)
5 W. M. Colmer (D)

MISSOURI
1 F. M. Karsten (D)
2 Thomas B. Curtis (R)
3 Mrs. L. Sullivan (D)
4 W. J. Randall (D)
5 Richard Bolling (D)
6 W. R. Hull Jr. (D)
7 Durward G. Hall (R)
8 R. H. Ichord (D)
9 C. Cannon (D)
10 Paul C. Jones (D)

MONTANA
1 Arnold Olsen (D)
2 James F. Battin (R)

NEBRASKA
1 R. F. Beermann (R)
2 G. Cunningham (R)
3 Dave Martin (R)

NEVADA
AL Walter S. Baring (D)

NEW HAMPSHIRE
1 Louis C. Wyman (R)
2 J. C. Cleveland (R)

NEW JERSEY
1 W. T. Cahill (R)
2 Milton W. Glenn (R)
3 J. Auchincloss (R)
4 F. Thompson Jr. (D)
5 P. Frelinghuysen (R)
1 Albert H. Quie (R)
2 Ancher Nelsen (R)

How To Write Them

This list of U. S. senators and representatives is printed to help you in writing your elected representatives in the 88th Congress about needed legislation for full employment, tax cuts, medicare for the aged and other proposals of benefit to you which are supported by the USWA.

We urge you to write often. Your letter will not only be read but it may also influence your representative to support needed legislation. In writing, address each as "Honorable."

Mail for Senators should be sent to: Senate Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.

Your congressman can be reached at: House Office Building, Washington 25, D. C.

Invest a nickel for progress today!

27 Mrs. St. George (R)
28 J. E. Wharton (R)
29 Leo W. O'Brien (D)
30 C. J. King (R)
31 C. E. Kilburn (R)
32 A. Pirnie (R)
33 H. W. Robison (R)
34 R. W. Riehlman (R)
35 S. S. Stratton (D)
36 F. J. Horton (R)
37 H. C. Ostertag (R)
38 C. E. Goodell (R)
39 J. R. Pillion (R)
40 W. E. Miller (R)
41 T. J. Dulski (D)

NORTH CAROLINA
1 H. C. Bonner (D)
2 L. H. Fountain (D)
3 D. Henderson (D)
4 H. D. Cooley (D)
5 Ralph J. Scott (D)
6 H. R. Kornegay (D)
7 Alton Lennon (D)
8 C. R. Jonas (R)
9 J. T. Broyhill (R)
10 B. L. Whitener (D)
11 Roy A. Taylor (D)

NORTH DAKOTA
1 H. C. Nygaard (R)
2 Don L. Short (R)

OHIO
AL Robert Taft Jr. (R)
1 Carl W. Rich (R)
2 D. D. Clancy (R)
3 Paul F. Schenck (R)
4 W. M. McCulloch (R)
5 Delbert L. Latta (R)
6 W. H. Harsha (R)
7 C. J. Brown (R)
8 Jackson E. Betts (R)
9 T. L. Ashley (D)
10 Homer E. Abele (R)
11 C. P. Bolton (R)
12 S. L. Devine (R)
13 C. A. Mosher (R)
14 W. H. Ayres (R)
15 R. T. Secrest (D)
16 Frank T. Bow (R)
17 J. M. Ashbrook (R)
18 Wayne L. Hays (D)
19 M. J. Kirwan (D)
20 M. A. Feighan (D)
21 C. A. Vanik (D)
22 Mrs. F. P. Bolton (R)
23 W. E. Minshall (R)

OKLAHOMA
1 Page Belcher (R)
2 Ed Edmondson (D)
3 Carl Albert (D)
4 Tom Steed (D)
5 John Jarman (D)
6 V. Wickersham (D)

OREGON
1 Walter Norblad (R)
2 Al Ullman (D)
3 Mrs. E. Green (D)
4 R. B. Duncan (D)

PENNSYLVANIA
1 W. A. Barrett (D)
2 R. N. C. Nix (D)
3 J. A. Byrne (D)
4 Herman Toll (D)
5 W. J. Green Jr. (D)
6 G. M. Rhodes (D)
4 Joe L. Evins (D)
5 R. H. Fulton (D)
6 Ross Bass (D)
7 Tom Murray (D)
8 R. A. Everett (D)
9 Clifford Davis (D)

TEXAS
AL Joe R. Pool (D)
1 Wright Patman (D)
2 Jack Brooks (D)
3 L. Beckworth (D)
4 Ray Roberts (D)
5 Bruce Alger (R)
6 Olin E. Teague (D)
7 John Dowdy (D)
8 Albert Thomas (D)
9 C. W. Thompson (D)
10 H. Thornberry (D)
11 W. R. Poage (D)
12 J. C. Wright (D)
13 G. B. Purcell (D)
14 John Young (D)
15 Joe M. Kilgore (D)
16 Ed Foreman (R)
17 Omar Burleson (D)
18 Walter Rogers (D)
19 G. H. Mahon (D)
20 H. B. Gonzalez (D)
21 O. C. Fisher (D)
22 Bob Casey (D)

UTAH
1 L. J. Burton (R)
2 S. P. Lloyd (R)

VERMONT
AL R. T. Stafford (R)

VIRGINIA
1 T. N. Downing (D)
2 P. Hardy Jr. (D)
3 J. V. Gary (D)
4 W. M. Abbitt (D)
5 W. M. Tuck (D)
6 R. H. Poff (R)
7 J. O. Marsh Jr. (D)
8 H. W. Smith (D)
9 W. Pat Jennings (D)
10 Joel T. Broyhill (R)

WASHINGTON
1 Thomas M. Pelly (R)
2 Jack Westland (R)
3 Mrs. J. B. Hansen (D)
4 Mrs. C. May (R)
5 Walt Horan (R)
6 T. C. Tollefson (R)
7 K. W. Stinson (R)

WEST VIRGINIA
1 Arch A. Moore Jr. (R)
2 H. O. Staggers (D)
3 J. M. Slack Jr. (D)
4 Ken Hechler (D)
5 Mrs. E. Kee (D)

WISCONSIN
1 H. Schadeberg (R)
2 R. Kastenmeier (D)
3 V. W. Thomson (R)
4 C. J. Zablocki (D)
5 H. S. Reuss (D)
6 W. K. Van Pelt (R)
7 M. R. Laird (R)
8 John W. Byrnes (R)
9 L. R. Johnson (D)
10 A. E. O'Konski (R)

WYOMING
AL W. H. Harrison (R)

SAVE THIS PAGE FOR FUTURE REFERENCE

The New Republic 7/6/63
Labor

A. Philip Randolph

"The Choice, Mr. President . . ."

by Murray Kempton

It is not Asa Philip Randolph's style to embarrass presidents of the United States in large assemblies; and so, when he came as a vice president of the AFL-CIO to the White House along with 300 other labor leaders, Mr. Randolph's brief comment on the President's televised speech on civil rights two nights before was at once a stately compliment and a measured reminder: "It was a magnificent speech, but it was, unfortunately, made rather late."

When the President had left the room and his audience was moving toward the outer air, a Southern "brother" approached Philip Randolph and asked where he could find someone from the Labor Department. "I got a problem to tell him about," he said. "The colored people are doing all right in my state. It's the white people I'm worried about. They're being discriminated against."

Randolph gravely escorted this stray over to the nearest Labor Department official and went away. He returned to Harlem amused but unsurprised; he is the only figure in the American labor movement who has, for 20 years, been able continually to surprise his country, but nothing surprises him.

His Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters is aged and fading; it never had more than 15,000 members and no more than 5,000 of these are working now. Porters with 30 years of service endlessly deal the brittle old playing cards in their recreation room on 125th Street in New York, awaiting their chance for an odd, infrequent extra run. The porters may strike any day for the 40-hour work week which they alone among the operating railroad crafts have not achieved. They can expect the other unions to support their picket lines; this little group of old men could produce a national railroad strike. Nothing is new about their headquarters except the fresh picket signs.

The porter has always been poor and a menial; segregation created his job; the Pullman Company hired Negroes as porters because Negroes were inexpensive. And for most of the 37 years of their union's history, the porters have taxed themselves for campaigns to destroy segregation on the railroads, but they seem to have been defeated by economic history. Their union has raised their pay scale to a basic $436 a month which has made a porter's job one fit for white men, so fit in fact that occasionally a white youth comes to the Brotherhood in search of a union card; it cannot be given him, because there are not enough jobs for the old members, let alone new ones. There will be no white porters, and there will be no Negro engineers; the rule for employment on the railroads is not opportunity but seniority.

World War II was the best time they have known as workers. They used its rewards to finance Randolph's March-on-Washington movement, whose threat in 1943 won from Franklin D. Roosevelt the executive order which set up the wartime Fair Employment Practices Committee.

The First Freedom Rides into North and South Carolina and Tennessee were planned in Randolph's office in 1946. Bayard Rustin, a veteran of that first adventure into jail, remembers that everyone else had discouraged him until he came to Randolph. "It doesn't matter if you only get 18 people," Randolph said then. "If you go down there, other people will rise and follow." He was looking 17 years ahead as though they were the next day.

Ralph Bunche remembers traveling to Atlanta on the Seaboard line in 1947. South of Washington he went to the diner and was shown a table behind a partition. He looked at it, announced that he had not lived quite long enough yet to accept segregation and went back to his room.

"About half an hour later, my door buzzer buzzed. I opened it and there were two sleeping car porters and a waiter from the dining car with trays neatly covered and they told me that they had decided to bring me this food, because no Negro, in their view, who refused to eat at that Jim Crow table would ever grow hungry on a train where they served. They didn't mention it, but I took it that the food was with the compliments of the company."

The Brotherhood Building on 125th Street was the headquarters of Thomas Patterson, Eastern Supervisor of the Sleeping Car Porters Union, who once traveled to Wilmington, North Carolina, to negotiate with the Atlantic Coast Line. He was ejected from its dining car for refusing to sit at the segregated table. The next morning, Patterson completed his union business with a Coast Line lawyer; that afternoon, he sued the Line for his humiliation on the diner. The railroad settled out of court and removed for all time its Jim Crow partition; Patterson gave his profits to the Brotherhood.

In 1955, Edward D. Nixon, a Pullman porter, summoned the Negro community of Montgomery, Alabama, to boycott its buses. Nixon knew that it would be politic to choose one of the Negro ministers as leader of the boycott. The youngest and a stranger among them was Martin Luther King of the Dexter Street Baptist Church.

"He didn't say much, and I didn't know whether to trust him. But he had the richest church and he could hurt us," Nixon remembered. "So then and there, I nominated him to head our committee. I figured on pushing him out so far that he couldn't run away. And, with that bad guess, we got Moses."

Such is the history which enfolds this old command post set away in a Harlem that has changed hardly at all. Three floors down are the displays of studios that offer tap, ballet and other lessons in how to escape to the great world, and the advertisements of employment offices that offer jobs for maids in New Jersey.

"I Wish You Hadn't Said That"

"What was your class at Harvard, Phil?" Franklin D. Roosevelt asked once, bemused by the massively cultivated tone of a man whose only degree was from Cookman College, a Negro high school in Florida. "Who is Randolph?" a World War II government lawyer asked as he brought in draft after draft of an FEPC order in 1943 only to be told that "Randolph" was not yet satisfied that any of them went far enough.

"I wish you hadn't said that, Mr. Randolph," Harry Truman answered when Randolph told him in 1948 that he would advise every young Negro to refuse to serve in the Army so long as it was segregated. Randolph answered that he was sorry to have to say it; and, when President Truman was restored to calm, he signed the order which integrated the armed forces.

In 1951, William Mills, a Pullman porter, escorted a detachment of American soldiers into his car at Spartansburg, South Carolina. The sergeant was a Negro; most of the men in his command were white. One of the white boys put his head out of the window and asked in the accent of the South, "Sergeant, what time we supposed to get off." The sergeant answered and turned to see William Mills looking at him. "Yes," the sergeant said. "It's true. It's true."

Randolph is 74, thinner than he used to be. Men who have worked with him for 30 years call him "Chief" and treat him like a piece of old china; he tires more than he used to and lies down for a nap in the afternoon, like any country lawyer.

His only vanity is his manners. He has lived all his life in Harlem; he travels to the outside world as the ambassador of a Negro union. He carries a courtesy so old-fashioned that the white men with whom he negotiates are sometimes driven to outsized rages by the shock that anyone so polite could cling so stubbornly to what he believes; it was from such a shock presumably that George Meany breached the customary decorum of an AFL-CIO convention in 1959 by rasping, "Just who elected you, Phil, to represent all the American Negroes?" Randolph, almost alone on the convention floor, had been persisting in his insistence that the AFL-CIO had been derelict in its promises about civil rights.

"Every now and then," says Bayard Rustin, "I think he permits good manners to get in the way and that he even prefers them to sound tactics. Once I complained about that and he answered, 'Bayard, we must with good manners accept everyone. Now is the time for us to learn good manners. We will need them when this is over, because we must show good manners after we have won'."

Yet the Black Muslims trust Randolph more than they do any other Negro leader. When he organized a neighborhood committee on Harlem's economic problems, he invited Malcolm X, the local Muslim prophet, to join. There were objections from the respectable. Randolph replied that when any group of citizens offered a representative, it "would be most improper not to recognize him, even though it will, of course, be most unfortunate if some of the ministers decide they can't go along."

Malcolm X came to his office. Randolph patiently explained how the Negro and the white will have to live together and how wrong he thought the Muslims were not to think so. Then he congratulated the Muslims on their campaign against whiskey and narcotics. "That," he said gravely, "may be the greatest contribution any of us have ever made," and arose to help Malcolm X on with his coat and see him to the door. Malcolm X has said since that all Negro leaders are confused, but that Randolph is less confused than any of them. Last spring the Muslims put a picture of this pacifist on the cover of their weekly journal.

"When Randolph began," says Bayard Rustin, "the Negro leader had the terrible problem of living by his wits. It was very important that there be one man who could not be corrupted. That man was Randolph. Even now, any time you have a plan and don't quite trust yourself, you go to Randolph and, if you are fooling yourself morally, you can trust him to point it out."

Randolph suddenly appears as the only figure who can reconcile the painful personal differences that have fallen upon the Negro protest movement at the height of its sweep and its fashion. We confront one of those occasions familiar in all revolutionary movements when doctrinal differences pass over into personal quarrels. Its moment of revelation came just after the murder of Medgar Evers, Mississippi secretary of the NAACP. Martin Luther King called an NAACP official to suggest that together they proclaim a day of national mourning and self-examination and was told that he was always rushing into cases where he had no place or business.

Different Roads, the Same Direction

The alliance between King and the NAACP has always been uneasy. They have moved by different roads in the same direction, King mainly in the streets, the NAACP in the courts. King's young can seem irresponsible to the NAACP's middle-aged; and the NAACP's middle-aged can seem stodgy to King's young.

Randolph is alone among these leaders because he neither feels hostility for nor excites it in any other of them. He is a pacifist in a native American tradition; before most members of King's non-violent army were born, he was reminding the Negro of Thoreau's prescription to cast the total vote with feet and voice along with the ballot. He has a natural sympathy for King. Still, there are ways in which he is more moderate than the NAACP.While the association has been in open war with the AFL-CIO, Randolph has kept his friends there, offending them only on matters of principle. The porters remain as they have always been, moderate in the particular which involves manners, and radical in the general which involves principle.

Not even a malignant imagination could assign Randolph one side or another in the quarrel between King and the NAACP. King he judges to be not just a modest man but a humble one, which, for him, disposes of the NAACP's complaint. On the other side, he reminds the radical young how important it is to respect the association and Roy Wilkins, its executive secretary. "We must cultivate Roy," he tells them. "The association is the most important of all our organizations." He respects King because he has roused the poor Negro with results more consequential than any leader before him; and he respects the NAACP because it reaches the Negro middle class and can call upon its local chapters for hundreds of thousands of dollars in a real crisis; there is no other resource like this one.

Two months ago, Randolph had announced that he would call 100,000 Negroes to Washington to demonstrate against unemployment in October; it had seemed then just an echo of his 1943 march on Washington and scarcely relevant. Wilkins and King had different concerns and higher priorities, and without them, Randolph seemed reduced to the depleted resources of the porters. But then President Kennedy introduced his civil rights bill; Washington had again become the center and Randolph's march the only certain item on the movement's agenda this summer. Randolph moved his march to August; he and King agreed to widen its scope to cover the civil rights bill. There was suddenly the surprising prospect that Congress would debate these bills with thousands of Negroes standing outside.

Randolph and others were called again to the White House on June 22, just before the President was to leave for Europe. Mr. Kennedy said that he hoped that it wouldn't be necessary for Negroes to come to Washington in great groups while the debate was going on. Philip Randolph answered that he was afraid the choice was no longer whether Negroes came to Washington or not. "The choice, Mr. President, is between a controlled and non-violent demonstration and an uncontrolled and violent one."

Mr. Kennedy answered that a President had many responsibilities and he wanted it made clear that he was not inviting them. Randolph's manners instructed him that Mr. Kennedy was talking for the record.

He returned to plan a march that would be unlimited in aim, and that would remember above all the needs of all the poor and displaced, whatever their color.

"The Negro people are just one other depressed area," he said the other day. "As long as there is unemployment, it's going to hit us. The Negro is in the position of the white hod carrier and the white longshoreman. I should like all the unemployed to come with us. We complain because the building trades have no room for Negroes, but the real trouble now is that these unions are designed for profit through scarcity. If the crafts were open to us, that could not, in the present economy, create more than 40,000 jobs.

"When we have won, there will remain the Negro sharecropper. We shall end, great as this is, with a very sharp disillusionment when the great rallies are over. We had this experience with sitdowns in the '30's. We are basically a working-class group; we will not move unless we move with the rest of the working class."

More than anything else, Philip Randolph said, he would like to bring the displaced miners of Hazard, Kentucky, to Washington with him. He was silent just a moment, contemplating what all this sudden energy could mean, not just to the Negro, but to the whole United States. His secretary came in and reminded him that it was time for his afternoon nap. The Pullman porter, weary and depleted, has raised himself for just this one last effort to redeem his country.

Jean Daniel

Ben Bella's Triumph

In a mere 12 months, the Republic of Algeria has become an important diplomatic capital of the uncommitted world – in part because of its tough, young President who understands revolution

Paris

The Algerian Republic is one year old on July first. It has not paused to rest after its long calvary. This is not a tranquil people. The Algerians have thrown themselves wholeheartedly – with an almost nihilistic frenzy – into an undertaking which for once merits the name, so widely abused in Africa, of a "revolution."

There are many different ways of summing up the past 12 months; they have been at one and the same time chaotic yet concentrated, disordered yet rich, extremely dangerous yet so promising. One way would be to say that the history of the "Democratic People's Republic of Algeria" from July 1, 1962, to July 1, 1963, is the saga of one man's struggle and of his efforts to lay the foundations of his power. That man is Ahmed Ben Bella, 44 years of age, son of peasants, one-time assistant bookkeeper and then noncommissioned officer in the French Army, who spent five of the seven years of the Algerian war in French Government prisons, or rather in residences of that government.

All noted historians, from Plutarch to Carlyle and Saint Simon to Theodore White, have been fascinated with the methods used by famous men to achieve power and keep it. President Ben Bella's technique, alternating between that of a Nietzschean superman and a shrewd peasant, which he has used to hack his way through and to reach the highest peak of honor and responsibility is rather impressive. It would be possible to describe his success by writing a treatise on the most efficient way of profiting by the divisions among one's enemies and the scruples of one's friends. However, as we shall see, Ben Bella is not completely opportunistic or entirely cynical. What, then, is he? The answer is that politics is not a choir-boy's job, nor is revolution a Salvation Army project. Only the Pharisees among us would say otherwise.

In July, 1962, Ben Bella held not a single trump-card in his hand. It is true that he was one of the nine "historical leaders" whose influence was decisive in the November 1, 1954, uprising against France. It is also true that ever since his plane was intercepted by the French in 1956, he has enjoyed great popularity with the non-political Algerian masses and with the Arab world in general. But in the final analysis the powerful frontier army in Algeria did not recognize him as its leader; his title of Vice President of the Provisional Government in Exile was purely honorary; his leadership was contested by a great many maqui leaders, by the Kabyles, by the students, by the intellectuals, in short by the revolutionary movement which before and after the cease-fire and the Evian agreements was preparing to affirm its authority.

Ben Bella had nothing but two absolute convictions. The first was his unshakable belief that he, Ben Bella, was the Chosen One, and that without him the revolution would collapse. The other was his belief, arrived at by observing all the other elements of the revolution from the detachment of his lengthy imprisonment, that none of them could ever enforce mutual agreement and that they were fated to commit a disastrous error which he would turn to his advantage. Ben Bella's very lack of cultural background and of a complex education may have saved him from being torn by an over-sensitive conscience and by inner conflicts. His very deficiencies became the source of his strength, and it is this which intellectuals find hard to grasp.

In one year, Ben Bella has moved through all the various stages of a rising leader. First he got rid of the provisional government and, with the aid of some unexpected alliances and the support of the Army, he set up a Political Bureau. The provisional government had committed the blunder of alienating Colonel Boumedienne, chief of the Armed Forces: Ben Bella immediately entered into an agreement with him which became the mortar cementing his power. The trade unionists were resisting him: he reshuffled their leadership with disconcerting deftness. Within the Political Bureau, which had been his platform and his springboard to power, one of his most intimate friends, Mohammed Khider, was attempting to create a mass party which would control the government and thereby reduce the authority of its chief: Ben Bella discarded him in less time than it had taken Khrushchev to retire Bulganin, and he accomplished this with the same skill shown by de Gaulle against Giraud in 1943 – despite

Labor

Circular 64-7 July 17, 1963

U. S. Department of Labor BUREAU OF APPRENTICESHIP AND TRAINING Washington 25, D. C.	DISTRIBUTION ATH A-F	SUBJECT CODE: 501 Non-discrimination in Apprenticeship and Training Policy

A. Purpose: To inform and direct the staff regarding the implementation and interpretation of the Department's broadened non-discrimination policy.

B. Background and Policy: President Kennedy, in a statement dated June 4, 1963, directed the Secretary of Labor "in the conduct of his duties under the Federal Apprenticeship Act and Executive Order No. 10925 to require that the admission of young workers to apprenticeship programs be on a completely non-discriminatory basis."

The President further directed that "all Federal construction programs be reviewed to prevent any racial discrimination in hiring practices, either directly in the rejection of presently available qualified Negro workers or indirectly by the exclusion of Negro applicants for apprenticeship training." Consequently, Secretary of Labor Wirtz directed the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training that all apprenticeship or apprenticeship and training programs now federally registered must operate on the basis of the following standards:

1. The selection of apprentices on the basisof merit alone, in accordance with objective standards which permit review after full and fair opportunity for application, unless the selections otherwise made would themselves demonstrate that there is equality of opportunity.

2. The taking of whatever steps are necessary, in acting upon application lists developed prior to this time, to offset the effects of previous practices under which discriminatory patterns of employment have resulted.

3. Non-discrimination in all phases of apprenticeship and employment during apprenticeship after selections are made.

Federal registration shall be withdrawn from apprenticeship programs which fail to operate in compliance with these standards.

Interpretation:

1. Standard No. 1. The Bureau encourages program sponsors to adopt a system of apprentice selection based solely on merit "in accordance with objective standards which permit review, after full and fair opportunity for application" on the ground that this kind of system is the one most in accord with a free and democratic society. In connection with this system "objective standards which permit review" does not mean that all programs must have identical standards for selection. It does mean that qualifications must be determined by fair tests, occupationally essential physical requirements or other merit standards and that eligibility must be determined by specific requirements so that questions of discrimination in selection can be promptly adjudicated.

   In order to have provided "full and fair opportunity for application," the sponsor must have disseminated publicly information about the availability of apprenticeship opportunities. In the future, such dissemination of information shall include dissemination to community groups, the local employment service and local schools as well as to other interested agencies.

   Because some program sponsors may be unable or may not wish to adopt a merit system based on objective standards which permit review, an alternative test of demonstrating equality of opportunity has been established. This is the meaning of that part of Standard No. 1 which speaks of the selections themselves demonstrating "equality of opportunity." Under this alternative test, equality of opportunity may be demonstrated in either of two ways:

   a. Where the selections made include a significant number of members of minority groups, or

b. Where the program sponsor has reserved a significant number of apprentice positions for qualified members of racial and ethnic minority groups, has disseminated publicly information about the availability of such positions and made other good faith efforts to recruit qualified persons to fill such positions, and has thereafter held such positions open for a reasonable time. Dissemination of information shall be made as specified earlier in this section.

Application of the alternative test is not intended to lower established program standards of selection in any way but merely to insure equality of opportunity for qualified applicants.

2. Standard No. 2. This Standard provides for the taking of action with regard to lists previously developed to offset the effects of any previous practices under which discriminatory patterns of employment resulted. Where program sponsors now make selections solely on the basis of merit alone, in accordance with objective standards which permit review, after full and fair opportunity for application; or selections in the past have demonstrated equality of opportunity, and the present lists are entirely the product of either of these systems of selection, no action is required with regard to application lists. Where these conditions are not met, application lists developed in the past must be disregarded to the extent necessary to provide opportunities for current selection of qualified members of racial and ethnic minority groups for a significant number of positions under one of the systems.

3. Standard No. 3. This Standard provides that there shall be no discrimination in apprenticeship or employment during apprenticeship after selections have been made. This means that no program shall discriminate on the basis of race, creed, color, national origin or because of sex or physical handicap in any employment or on-the-job training practice, including but not limited to job assignment, promotion, demotion, layoff or termination, rates of pay or other forms of compensation or conditions of work.

4. Selection from Existing Employees. Where apprentices are selected from a restricted pool, e.g., from present employees, the foregoing standards shall apply to admission to the pool as well as to selection for apprenticeship. Present pools shall be regarded as "application lists developed prior to this time" and shall be subject to paragraph C.2. of this section.

D. Program Language Requirements: In addition to operating in accordance with the Standards as stated and interpreted above, each federally registered apprenticeship program which does not now contain a non-discrimination clause in the form now required by Circular 62-5 1/ must, within 60 days after the date of this instruction, include the following provision in its program standards or in the collective bargaining agreement governing the program:

> "To insure that there will be no discrimination on the basis of race, creed, color, national origin, sex or physical handicaps, selection of apprentices under this program shall be made on the basis of merit alone in accordance with objective standards which permit review after full and fair opportunity for application, or in any other manner in which selection itself demonstrates that there is equality of opportunity for training in this program; and this program shall be operated on a completely non-discriminatory basis."

1/ The language now required by Circular 62-5 is as follows:

> "Selection of apprentices under this program shall be made from qualified applicants without regard to race, creed, color, national origin or physical handicaps; women shall not be barred from apprenticeships for which they qualify."

Any federally registered program required to include such provision which shall not have so included it within 60 days of this instruction shall be deregistered.

Effective on the date of this instruction, any program seeking Federal registration or any change or amendment in any past registration shall include the following provision:

> "Selection of apprentices under this program shall be made from qualified applicants on the basis of merit alone and without regard to race, creed, color, national origin, sex or physical handicap in accordance with objective standards which permit review, after full and fair opportunity for application; and this program shall be operated on a completely non-discriminatory basis."

Federal registration shall be withdrawn from apprenticeship programs which fail to operate in compliance with this provision.

E. Cooperation with Other Organizations: The Secretary of Labor has recently communicated with each State Apprenticeship Agency or Council "urging affirmative consideration of these standards (numbers 1 and 2 of section B.) in the discharge of the responsibilities of (your) apprenticeship program." (See Attachment A.) Standard No. 3 was promulgated by the Secretary subsequently and will be brought to the attention of the State authorities as specified in paragraph F. 2.

F. Action to be taken

1. Regional Directors shall take immediate steps to inform all sponsors of federally registered apprenticeship programs of the policy and standards set forth in this instruction. In so doing, sponsors should be informed that it is their responsibility to see that their programs are revised as necessary to bring them into conformity with requirements of Section D. and are in fact operated in accordance with the standards and interpretations set forth in Sections B. and C. of this instruction.

2. With reference to States with State-registered apprenticeship programs, Regional Directors shall:

   a. Meet with the chief labor officers of such State governments to inform them of the third standard promulgated by the Secretary and to urge their prompt acceptance of the three standards;

   b. Forward a report to the Administrator, to arrive no later than August 31, indicating the actions and intentions of each State Agency or Council with respect to the adoption of the Secretary's standards as contained herein.

3. Give general publicity to the Bureau's broadened non-discrimination policy and program and continuing leadership toward acceptance of these policies. Bureau staff should explain and promote these policies in all public speeches and appearances.

4. In those regions not yet staffed with an Industrial Training Advisor, the Regional Director shall select an Apprenticeship and Training Representative whom he considers best qualified for this activity to serve on the regional staff in the capacity of Industrial Training Advisor until such time as recruitment of a specialist may be possible.

5. Recognizing that the policies set forth herein will effect their purpose only if qualified applicants from racial and ethnic minorities are informed with respect to apprenticeship opportunities that will be available under the revised standards, Regional Directors shall make special effort to assure that the organizations most useful in assuring such a supply of candidates (schools, minority group organizations, public employment service, etc.) are informed of the revised program. Regional Directors should lay plans with such groups for the stepped-up information and counseling program that will be needed to obtain qualified minority applicants.

6. A separate BAT instruction is being developed on the detailed program for achieving compliance with the program standards presented herein. In the meantime, in addition to the specific actions listed above, Regional Directors should examine all aspects of the problem of achieving compliance in their regions.

ATTACHMENT A

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

Office of the Secretary

Washington

June 5, 1963

Dear _____"

I am writing to you in your capacity as Director of the _____ Apprenticeship Council.

We share, I am sure, the conviction that the opportunity to work must be based on competence and ability, without regard to a person's race, creed, color, or national origin.

A recent survey has been made by the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity of employment practices on Federal projects in the District of Columbia. This survey shows that in some of the trades there is adherence to the principle of equal employment opportunity. It also shows, however, that patterns of discriminatory employment have developed in other trades. The Department of Labor is now undertaking similar surveys throughout the country pursuant to President Kennedy's request of yesterday that "all Federal construction programs be reviewed to prevent any racial discrimination in hiring practices, either directly in the rejection of presently available qualified Negro workers or indirectly by the exclusion of Negro applicants for apprenticeship training."

The elimination of such discrimination depends, where there are apprenticeship programs involved, on taking steps to assure that significant opportunities are provided for qualified minority group applicants to gain admission to these apprenticeship programs.

Such opportunities may be provided:

1. Where the selections made would not themselves demonstrate equality of opportunity, by the selection of apprentices on the basis of merit alone, in accordance with objective standards which permit review, after full and fair opportunity for application; and

2. By taking whatever steps are necessary, in acting upon application lists developed prior to this time, to offset the effect of previous practices under which discriminatory patterns of employment have resulted.

These standards will be supplied in determining compliance with Government contractors' obligations under Executive Order 10925 to take "affirmative action to ensure" that there is no discrimination in their employment practices -- which is a condition of their performance of Government contracts.

I am also directing the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training to use these standards in determining the eligibility of apprenticeship programs for continued certification under the Federal Apprenticeship Act; and I am proposing the same standards for use by the apprenticeship councils in the District of Columbia and in the various States.

I request and urge your affirmative consideration of these standards in the discharge of the responsibilities of your apprenticeship program. What is involved here is a vital principle of working democracy: that everybody is entitled to a fair and equal chance to make a living.

Yours sincerely,

Secretary of Labor

National Council on

AGRICULTURAL LIFE AND LABOR

Labor

Rec'd 7/31/63

SB

Howard A. Dawson, Chairman
Rev. James L. Vizzard, S.J., 1st Vice-chairman
Fay Bennett, 2nd Vice-chairman
Theodore Norman, 3rd Vice-Chairman
Gertrude Folks Zimand, Secretary-Treasurer
Shirley Sonosky, Assistant Secretary-Treasurer
Elizabeth B. Herring, Executive Secretary
Edith E. Lowry, Consultant

Directors

Daniel S. Bedell
Mary H. Blanshard
Ruth Muskrat Bronson
Robert T. Burnette
Rev. E. Russell Carter
Ethlyn Christensen
Clay L. Cochran
Eli E. Cohen
Lyle Cooper
Vincent De Francis
Rev. Clifford Earle
Rev. Eldon E. Ehrhart
Eleanor French
Rev. Ray Gibbons
Rev. Shirley E. Greene
Rev. Cameron P. Hall
A. J. Hayes
Laurance G. Henderson
Herbert Hill
Robert W. Hudgens
Robert M. Isenberg
Lewis W. Jones
Thomas B. Keehn
Rev. Huber F. Klemme
Leah Lachenbruch
Benson Y. Landis
Rabbi Eugene J. Lipman
Thomas J. Lloyd
Elizabeth Magee
Barbara W. Moffett
Rev. E. W. Mueller
Lowry Nelson
Sarah H. Newman
Frank L. Noakes
Beatrice S. Parsonnet
James G. Patton
Very Rev. Msgr. William J. Quinn
Serafino Romualdi
George Sanchez
Thelma Stevens
Louise Stitt
Rev. John A. Wagner
Rowland Watts
Amber Arthun Warburton
Marian F. Weller

Member Organizations

Alliance for Guidance of Rural Youth
Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butcher Workmen, AFL-CIO
American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations American Friends Service Committee
American Humane Association
Bishops' Committee for Migrant Workers
Bishops' Committee for the Spanish Speaking
Council for Christian Social Action, United Church of Christ
Department of Rural Education, National Education Association
National Council of Churches of Christ in the USA: Division of Home Missions, General Department of United Church Women, Department of the Church and Economic Life
Office of Church and Society, United Presbyterian Church in the USA
Girl Scouts of the USA
Industrial Union Department, AFL-CIO
International Association of Machinists, AFL-CIO
Jewish Agricultural Society
Migrant Children's Fund
National Association for the Advancement of Colored People
National Board of the Young Women's Christian Association
National Catholic Rural Life Conference
National Committee on Employment of Youth of the National Child Labor Committee National Congress of American Indians
National Consumers League
National Council of Jewish Women
National Farmers Union
National Housing Conference
Division of American Missions, National Lutheran Council
National Sharecroppers Fund
Department of the Church in Town and Country, United Church of Christ
Unitarian Fellowship for Social Justice
United Automobile Workers, AFL-CIO
United Packing House Workers, AFL-CIO
United States Section, Joint United States-Mexico Trade Union Committee Woman's Division of Christian Service of the Methodist Church

July 26, 1963

To The Members of the Executive Board of NCALL

Dear Friends:

A big push to revive Public Law 78 (importation of Mexican farm labor) is underway. Almost immediately after the House voted down H. R. 5497, two types of legislation were introduced in the House and in the Senate - a one year extension bill and a three year "phase out" bill. The one year extension is the legislation being pushed now. The bills are H. R. 6719 introduced by Representative Burt L. Talcott, Republican of California and S.1703 introduced by Senator Gordon Allott and Senator Peter Dominick, both Republicans of Colorado.

Recently the Senate Committee on Agriculture reported out S.1703. This bill does not include reforms recommended by the U. S. Department of Labor, namely, provision of adequate housing, paid transportation and workmen's compensation for domestic farm workers. The bill was reported out without holding hearings despite the facts that the House had opposed extension with a good margin; that unemployment has increased in rural areas; and that S.527, the job recruitment bill which provides for recruiting domestic farm workers is pending.

The immediate need is to get letters to all Senators now as S.1703 can be expected to come before the Senate in the near future. We urge you to alert your constituencies as to this emergency so that as many letters as possible will be received by the Senators - even though it is the vacation period. A letter is also going to NCALL general mailing list.

Those of you who attended the special meeting of the Administrative Committee in February will recall the vital discussion on the Extension of Public Law 78 and that in the general discussion there was recognition of transition problems if P. L. 78 were allowed to expire immediately, but also a feeling that the time had come for termination, that drifting had gone on long enough.

1751 N STREET, N.W., WASHINGTON 6, D. C. • NOrth 7-3979

Though in line with NCALL By-Laws no formal action was taken, the point of view generally expressed was that voluntary organizations could help best by calling clearly for termination.

Action in the House will come later. We shall keep you posted.

Very sincerely yours,

Elizabeth B. Herring
Executive Secretary

Edith E. Lowry
Consultant

P.S. It has been suggested that special effort by church groups to contact the following Senators would be helpful: Dirksen - Illinois; Carlson - Kansas; Pearson - Kansas; Curtis - Nebraska; Hruska - Nebraska; Cotton - New Hampshire; Lausche - Ohio; Young - Ohio. Of course, letters from church groups to all Senators are important.

Research Department
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Labor

Bulk Rate
U. S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 154
RALEIGH, N. C.

North Carolina
Labor and Industry

Monthly Bulletin of the DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, Frank Crane, Commissioner

Vol. XXX RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, JULY, 1963 No. 7

1962 State Safety Award Winners

774 PLANTS QUALIFY FOR LABOR DEPARTMENT CERTIFICATE OF SAFETY ACHIEVEMENT

A total of 774 North Carolina industrial establishments have been awarded the Labor Department's Certificate of Safety Achievement in recognition of their outstanding work in preventing disabling injuries on the job during the year 1962.

Commissioner Frank Crane personally presented the awards to representatives of more than 500 of the winning plants in special presentation ceremonies held this past spring in eleven Tar Heel cities. Sponsored locally by Chambers of Commerce, these presentation meetings were attended by well over 1,000 plant officials and guests.

The award-winning plants qualified for the Labor Department safety honors in one of three ways: (1) by having an accident-free record during 1962; (2) by maintaining a lost-time injury rate 75 per cent or more below the State average for their industry; (3) by reducing their lost-time injury frequency rate 40 per cent or more compared with their rate for the previous year.

The following list is the complete roster of award-winning establishments for 1962. Firms honored in special community presentation ceremonies are listed separately under the names of the counties in which the presentations were held. All others are listed alphabetically, according to the number of consecutive years for which they have received the Labor Department award:

First Year Winners

Aberdeen Hosiery Mills, Inc., Aberdeen
Acme-McCrary Corporation
Acme Division, Asheboro
W. R. Adams Construction Co., Hiddenite
Al Hosiery Mill, Hickory
Alexander Motor Co., Inc., Durham
Allen Overall Company, Monroe
Aluminum Company of America
Badin Works, Badin
Arlene Hosiery Mills, Hickory
Asheville Waste Paper Co., Asheville
Austin Knitting Mills, Inc., Albemarle
B & R Frozen Foods, Inc., Wallace
Barger Millwork Company, Statesville
Baxter, Kelly and Faust, Inc., Stoneville
Big Bill Bottling Company, Inc., Reidsville
Blue Ridge Cord Co., Inc., Hendersonville
Broadway Hosiery Mills, Inc., West Asheville
W. A. Brown & Son, Inc., Salisbury
Burlington Industries, Inc.
Franklinton Fabrics, Franklinton
Burlington Industries, Inc.
Henrietta Plant, Henrietta
Burlington Industries, Inc.
St. Pauls Plant, St. Pauls
Cape Hickory Hosiery Mill, Hickory
Caro Craft, Inc., Rocky Mount
Carolina Comfort Furniture, Inc., Hickory
Carolina Power & Light Company, Asheville
R. E. Carpenter & Co., Rutherfordton
Carpenter & Phillips Mica Co., Spruce Pine
Carriker Church Furniture Company, Monroe
Central Carolina Farmers Exchange, Inc.
Livestock Market, Durham
Central Carolina Farmers Exchange, Inc.
Garage, Durham
Central Carolina Farmers Exchange, Inc.
Durham Service Store, Durham
Central Carolina Farmers Exchange, Inc.
Cold Storage Department, Durham
Central Carolina Farmers Exchange, Inc.
Oxford Service Store, Durham
Central Carolina Farmers Exchange, Inc.
Siler City Service Store, Durham
Central Carolina Farmers Exchange, Inc.
Nightwatchmen, Durham
Central Carolina Farmers Exchange, Inc.
Creedmoor Service Store, Durham
Central Carolina Farmers Exchange, Inc.
Hillsboro Service Store, Durham
Central Carolina Farmers Exchange, Inc.
Poultry Department, Durham
Central Carolina Farmers Exchange, Inc.
Feed Mill, Durham
Charmeuse Hosiery Industries, Inc., Asheboro
Chipman LaCrosse Hosiery Mills Co., Inc., East Flat Rock
Chowan Veneer Co., Inc., Edenton
Christian Printing Co., Inc., Durham
Cole Milling Co., Fayetteville
Collins & Aikman Corporation
Plant "E", Ca-Vel
Collins & Aikman Corporation, Siler City
Combo Industries, Inc., Roxboro
Commonwealth Hosiery Mills, Inc., Randleman
The Courier Times, Roxboro
Denny Plywood Co., Inc., Roseboro
Don Juan Manufacturing Corp., Hertford
Durham Coca Cola Bottling Co.
Roxboro Division, Roxboro
Durham Sandwich Co., Durham
E. L. Company, Inc., N. Wilkesboro
Eastern Carolina Feed & Seed Co., Inc., Elizabeth City
Edenton Cotton Mills, Edenton
The electric Storage Battery Company
Missile Battery Division, Raleigh
Erwin Mills, Inc.
Plant No. 2, Erwin
Fayetteville Fabrics, Fayetteville
Fieldcrest Mills, Inc.
Automatic Blanket Mill, Spray
Fieldcrest Mills, Inc.
Bedspread Finishing Mill, Spray
Fieldcrest Mills, Inc.
Bleachery, Spray
Fieldcrest Mills, Inc.
Karastan Spinning Division, Spray
Fieldcrest Mills, Inc.
Sheeting Mill, Spray
Filatex Corporation, Waxhaw
Fleetline Industries, Inc., Garland
Fontana Mills Division
James Lees & Sons Company, Robbinsville
Formica Corporation
Panel & Door Plant, Tarboro
M. M. Fowler, Inc., Durham
Franklin Hosiery Company, Franklin
Gem Dandy, Inc., Madison
Gibbs Underwear Company, Lincolnton
Gilliam Furniture, Inc.
Plant No. 2, Statesville
Greene Brothers Furniture Co., Inc., North Wilkesboro
Georgia-Pacific Corporation
Hallsboro Particle Board Plant, Hallsboro
Georgia-Pacific Corporation
Plymouth Sawmill, Hallsboro
Harriss Conners Chevrolet Co., Inc., Chapel Hill
Henderson FCX Service, Henderson
Hickory Spinners, Inc., Hickory
International Stretch Products
Wilmington Lace Division, Inc., Wilmington
Iredell Finishing Company, Statesville
Jones Distributing Co., Elizabeth City
Kennedy Pottery, Wilkesboro
Kennedy's Wood Products, Co., Inc., Clinton
F. R. King Construction Co., Wilmington
Klopman Mills, Inc.
Asheboro Plant, Asheboro
Klopman Mills, Inc.
Central Falls Plant, Central Falls
Klopman Mills, Inc.
Newton Plant, Newton
L and L Manufacturing, Inc., N. Wilkesboro
Laughlin F. F. Hosiery Mills, Inc., Randleman
Lloyds Lingerie, Inc., Madison
Martin Marietta Corporation
Concrete Products Division, Lilesville

(Continued on page 2)

NORTH CAROLINA

Labor and Industry

Issued Each Month by the
NORTH CAROLINA DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
P. O. Box 1151
Raleigh, N. C.

Sent Free Upon Request

FRANK CRANE
Commissioner of Labor
ALMON BARBOUR Editor

Vol. XXX July, 1963 No. 7

J. M. Mathes Co., Inc., Durham
Model Laundry & Dry Cleaners, Durham
Moffitt Knitting Mills, Inc., Asheboro
Nancy King Textile Co., N. Wilkesboro
Newgard Industries, Inc., Monroe
N. Wilkesboro Coca-Cola Bottling Co., N. Wilkesboro
Old Hickory Motors, Inc., Durham
Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation
Ecusta Paper Operations
Endless Belt Department, Pisgah Forest
Oxford Fabrics Co., Oxford
Parlier Plumbing & Heating Co., Statesville
The Peabody Drug Company, Durham
Phelps Industries, Inc., Skyland
Pifer Industries, Inc., Durham
Pine State Creamery Company
Oxford Plant, Oxford
Press Printing Company, Inc., Albemarle
J. H. Reaben Oil & Supply Co., Inc., Hendersonville
Reeves Brothers, Inc.
Grace Plant, Rutherfordton
Reidsville Coca-Cola Bottling Co., Inc., Reidsville
Rhoney Chair Company, Inc., Hickory
Ricks Laundry & Cleaners, Inc., Edenton
Riegel Paper Corporation
Fairtex Plant, Monroe
Rite-Way Laundry, Durham
Ross Fertilizer Co., Clinton
Rutherford County News, Rutherfordton
A. J. Schneierson & Son, Inc.
Balfour Plant, Randleman
A. J. Schneierson & Son, Inc.
Denton Plant, Randleman
Seabrook Blanching Corporation, Edenton
Sherrill Lumber Co., Statesville
Shrink Stayed Fabrics Corp., N. Wilkesboro
Siler City Manufacturing Company
A Division of Kellwood Company, Siler City
Smith-Prevost Cleaners, Chapel Hill
Smoky Mountain Fiber Company, Murphy
Southern Cotton Storage, Inc., Monroe
Southern Parts & Electric, Inc., Durham
Spruce Pine Mica Company, Inc., Spruce Pine
Spurgeon Hosiery Corporation, Lincolnton
Statesville Narrow Fabrics Co., Inc., Statesville
Sterling Hosiery Mills, Inc., Spindale
J. P. Steevns & Co., Inc.
Carter Plant, Wallace
Talbert and Talbert Lumber Co., Roxboro
Tie Rite Neckwear Co., Inc., Asheboro
Triangle Electric Motor Co., Inc., Durham
Triangle Motors, Inc., Durham
Tru-Pak Products Co., Inc., Rutherfordton
United Brass Works, Inc., Randleman
Union Carbide Consumer Products Co.
Division of Union Carbide Corporation
Asheboro Plant, Asheboro
Van Raalte, Franklin
Van's One Hour Martinizing, Chapel Hill
The Wallace Enterprise, Wallace
Webster Brick Co., Inc.
Draper Plant No. 5, Draper
Wee-Sox Hosiery Mills, Inc., Randleman
Worth Spinning Company, Stony Point
Yale & Towne Mfg. Co., Monroe
Yanceyville Auto Sales, Inc., Yanceyville

Second Year Winners

Acme-McCrary Corporation, Asheboro
Ramseur Division
Amcel Propulsion Company
A Division of Celanese Corporation of America, Asheville
Black Mountain Hosiery Mills, Inc., Black Mountain
Burlington Industries, Inc.
Ballet Hosiery Co., Wadesboro
Cape Fear Terminal, Wilmington
A. G. Carter, Jr., Whiteville
Central Carolina Farmers Exchange, Inc.
Hatchery, Durham
Cheerwine Bottling Company, Salisbury
City Service Laundry, Clinton
Coca-Cola Bottling Co. of Asheville, N. C.
Forest City
Columbia Mfg. Co., Inc., Ramseur
Cook Machine Co., Clinton
County Cleaners, Gatesville
Dillard Paper Company of Wilmington, Inc., Wilmington
Dixie Dry Cleaners and Laundry, Raleigh
Fabrics Industries, Inc., Monroe
General Equipment Company, Raleigh
Kearfott Division—General Precision, Aerospace, Black Mountain
Kellogg Cuthrell, Inc., Manteo
Linen White Products Co., Inc., Clinton
Lions Club Industries for the Blind of W. N. C., Asheville
Lutz Hosiery Co., Inc., Hickory
Larry Milberg & Co., Asheboro
Southern Division
The News Reporter Company, Inc., Whiteville
Pacific Mills
A Division of Burlington Industries, Inc.
Hot Springs Plant, Hot Springs
Roy Panther & Co., Lynn
Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. of Spruce Pine, Inc., Spruce Pine
Pinehurst Textiles, Inc., Asheboro
Leon Register, Inc., Durham
B. C. Remedy Co., Inc., Durham
F. H. Ross & Co., Inc., Raleigh
S & G Concrete Co., Wilmington
S K F Industries, Inc., Asheville
Southeastern Sight and Sound Corporation, Raleigh
Stanfield Mills, Inc., Stanfield
Tire Sales, Co., Wallace
United States Plywood Corporation
Raleigh Branch, Raleigh
W. H. Weatherly Co., Inc., Elizabeth City, N. C.
H. B. Williams Sawmill, Stovall

Third Year Winners

Amerotron Company,
Robbins Plant, Robbins
Asheboro Hosiery Mills, Inc., Asheboro
Carolina Roller & Supply Co., Inc., Lincolnton
Central Carolina Farmers Exchange, Inc.
Main Office, Durham
Central Carolina Farmers Exchange, Inc.
Seed and Farm Supply, Durham
Curlee Machinery Company, Inc., Cary
E. & B. Oil Co. of Wallace, Inc., Wallace
Haywood Electric Membership Corporation, Waynesville
Hoyle Motor Company, Inc., Lincolnton
Liberty Hosiery Mills, Inc.
Knitting Plant, Liberty
Lincolnton Coca-Cola Bottling Co., Lincolnton
Pell Paper Box Company, Inc., Elizabeth City
Rocky Creek Mills, Inc., Turnersburg
Rolling Pin Bakery, Durham
F. S. Royster Guano Co.
Wilmington Plant, Wilmington
Sealtest Foods
Southern Division—Brevard
Sealtest Foods
Southern Division—Bryson City
Southgrand Chevrolet, Inc., Creedmoor
Spruce Pine Hosiery Mill, Inc., Spruce Pine
Sycamore Dairy, Fayetteville
Westinghouse Electric Supply Co., Raleigh

Fourth Year Winners

Ahoskie Meat & Provision Co., Inc., Ahoskie
China Grove Roller Mills, China Grove
J. E. Hanger of North Carolina, Inc., Raleigh
McCracken Oil Company, Inc., Henderson
N. C. Products Corporation
Kinston Plant, Kinston
A. J. Schneierson & Son, Inc.
Siler City, N. C. Plant, Siler City
Sealtest Foods
Southern Division—Asheville
Sides Lumber Co., Inc., Rockwell
Westinghouse Electric Corporation
Meter Division, Raleigh

Fifth Year Winners

Carolina Broom Works, Roxboro
Littleton Sales Company, Inc., Littleton
Oxford Laundry - Cleaners, Oxford
Piedmont Electric Membership Corporation, Hillsboro
Stubbs Veneer Co., Windsor
Variety Wholesalers, Inc., Fuquay Springs
Walker Martin, Inc., Raleigh

Sixth Year Winners

Avalon Hosiery Mill
Knitting Division of Elizabeth City Hosiery Mills, Elizabeth City
E. I. Du Pont de Nemours and Company, Inc.
Kinston Plant, Kinston
J-D Mills, Inc., Henderson
Jarrett's Laundry & Cleaners, Inc., Lincolnton
M. T. Company, Hendersonville
Meridian Motorcycle Company, Fayetteville
W. B. Oliver & Son, Inc., Pine Level
Parham Motor Company, Henderson
Parkdale Hosiery Mill, Catawba
Phillips Petroleum Company
Marine & Other Terminals Div.
Wilmington, Terminal, Wilmington

Seventh Year Winners

Dare County Ice & Storeg Co., Manteo
Lowe's Durham Hardware, Inc., Durham
McNeilli's Cleaners, Red Springs
Rex Cleaners, Elizabeth City
Rickman Mfg. Co., Inc., Salisbury

Eighth Year Winners

Henry V. Dick & Co. of Raleigh, Inc., Raleigh
McCracken Supply Company, Inc., Raleigh
Newton Glove, Inc., Newton

Ninth Year Winners

Richard Grey Hosiery Co., Asheboro
Hickory Handle & Mfg. Co., Conover

Textile Machine Works,
Asheboro Branch, Asheboro
Union Asbestos & Rubber Company
Plant No. 5, Marshville
William Motor Co., Inc., Smithfield

Tenth Year Winners

Smith Novelty Co., Albemarle

Eleventh Year Winners

Acme Cleaners & Shoe Shop, Nashville
Heist-McCain Hosiery Corp., Rockwell
Roseboro Milling Company, Roseboro
A. J. Schneierson & Son, Inc.
Sanford, N. C. Plant, Sanford

Twelfth Year Winners

The Atlantic Refining Company, Wilmington
Goldsboro Ice Delivery Co., Goldsboro
Leach Service Cleaners, Littleton
Snipes-Crowell Lumber Co., Inc., Stoneville
Stream Line Tools, Inc., Conover

Thirteenth Year Winners

Howell Oil Company, Goldsboro
C. D. Jessup and Company, Claremont

Fourteenth Year Winners

Bonk's Dry Cleaners, Asheboro
Conover Cleaners, Conover
Home Oil Company, Louisburg
New York Dry Cleaners, Wilmington
Sunshine Laundry & Cleaners, Wilmington

Fifteenth Year Winners

Mobil Oil Company, Wilmington
Shell Oil Company, Wilmington

Group Presentations-1962

Alamance County Award Winners

First Year Winners

Alamance Laundry & Dry Cleaners, Inc., Burlington
Burlington Hosiery Co.
May Hosiery Finishing Co., Burlington
Burlington Industries, Inc.
Pioneer Plant, Burlington
City Laundry & Cleaners, Inc., Burlington
Cherokee Flooring Corporation
Yard, Burlington
Copland-Fowler Industries, Inc., Burlington
Craftique, Inc., Mebane
Customex Mfg. Co., Inc., Burlington
Dura-Tred Hosiery Mills Co., Inc., Burlington
Elder Hosiery Mills, Inc., Burlington
Elizabeth - Meade Hosiery Mills, Inc., Burlington
Frissell Fabrics Inc., Burlington
Glen Raven Cotton Mills, Inc., Glen Raven
Grace Hosiery Mills, Inc., Burlington
Holt Hosiery Mills, Inc.
Knitting Plant, Burlington
Kale Knitting Mills, Inc., Mebane
Kayser-Roth Hosiery Company, Inc.
Concord Finishing Division, Burlington
Kayser-Roth Hosiery Company, Inc.
Main Office, Burlington
Kayser-Roth Hosiery Company, Inc.
Pittsboro Seamless Knitting Division, Burlington
Lindley Hosiery Finishers, Inc., Burlington
J. M. Mathes Company, Inc., Burlington
Nu-Vogue Hosiery Company
(A Division of Kayser-Roth Company, Inc.), Burlington
Sellers Manufacturing Company, Inc.
Cotton & Blending Dept., Saxapahaw
Sellers Manufacturing Company, Inc.
Dyeing, Winding & Packing, Saxaphaw
Sellers Manufacturing Company, Inc.
Mercerizing Dept., Saxapahaw
Southern Laundry, Inc., Graham
Staley Hosiery Mills, Burlington
Swift Cleaners, Inc., Elon College
Thunderbird Hosiery Mills, Inc., Burlington
Travora Textiles, Inc., Graham
Wrightenberry Hosiery Mills, Graham

Second Year Winners

Acme Feed Mills, Inc., Burlington
Alamance Lumber Co., Inc., Burlington
Annedeen Hosiery Mills, Inc., Burlington
B & L Hosiery Co., Inc., Burlington
Baker-Cammack Hosiery Mills, Inc., Burlington
Burlington Industries, Inc.
Grabur Throwing Company, Graham
Burlington Industries, Inc.
Mayfair Knitting Plant, Burlington
Carolina Paper Box Company, Inc., Burlington
Clearmore Hosiery Co.,
Moore & Massey Hosiery Co., Inc., Burlington
Copeland Converting & Finishing Company, Burlington
Dixie Hosiery Co., Inc., Graham
Ferrell Hosiery Mill, Inc., Graham
Garrison Hosiery Co., Inc., Burlington
Ivey Hosiery Mill, Burlington
Kayser-Roth Hosiery Company, Inc.
Burlington Seamless Knitting Division, Burlington
Lindy Hosiery Co., Inc., Burlington
Old Dominion Box Co., Inc.
Burlington Plant, Burlington
Sellers Manufacturing Company, Inc.
Silk Dept., Saxaphaw
Travora Textiles, Inc.
Finishing Plant, Graham
Walnut Textiles, Inc., Burlington

Third Year Winners

Apparel Manufacturing Corp., Mebane
Burlington Hosiery Co.
Interstate Warehouse, Burlington
Cherokee Flooring Corporation
Bondwood Department, Burlington
Duke Power Company
Burlington District, Burlington
Kayser-Roth Hosiery Company, Inc.
Transportation Division, Burlington
Lemco Knitting Mill, Inc., Burlington
Monarch Hosiery Mills, Inc.
Ladies Seamless Division, Burlington
Pepsi-Cola Bottling Co. of Burlington, Burlington
Sellers Hosiery Mills, Inc., Burlington
Southerland Mills, Inc., Graham

Fourth Year Winners

Childrey Hosiery Mills, Inc., Haw River
Sharpe Hosiery Mills, Inc., Graham
Swink Hosiery Mill, Inc., Haw River

Fifth Year Winners

Kayser-Roth Hosiery Company, Inc.
Hickory Knitting Division, Burlington
Kayser-Roth Hosiery Company, Inc.
Throwing Division, Burlington
Pickett Hosiery Mills, Inc., Burlington

Sixth Year Winners

Alamance Printing Company, Burlington
Boston Cleaners & Laundry, Inc., Burlington
Boston Cleaners & Laundry, Inc., Burlington
Lillien and Lee, Inc., Burlington
Sellers Manufacturing Company, Inc.
Service Dept., Saxaphaw

Seventh Year Winners

Burlington Garment Mfg., Inc., Burlington
Foil Hosiery Mills, Inc.
Graham Hosiery Mills, Inc.

Eighth Year Winners

Apparel, Inc., Mebane
Burlington Industries, Inc.
Waste Department, Burlington
Monarch Processing Co., Inc., Graham
Wilkins Hosiery Mills, Inc., Burlington

Ninth Year Winners

Koury Hosiery Mills, Inc., Burlington
McCuiston Hosiery Mills, Haw River
Major Dye Works, Inc., Burlington
Monarch Hosiery Mills, Inc.
Men's Half Hose Division, Burlington
Puritan Finishing Mills, Inc., Burlington
Rockfish-Mebane Yarn Mills, Inc., Mebane
Webco Mills, Inc., Burlington

Thirteenth Year Winners

Southerland Dyeing & Finishing Mills, Inc., Mebane

Fourteenth Year Winners

Leath Hosiery Mill, Inc., Graham

Sixteenth Year Winners

Western Electric Company, Inc.
North Carolina Works
Burlington Shops, Burlington

Ashe, Burke, Caldwell, McDowell and Watauga County Award Winners

First Year Winners

Alba-Waldensian, Inc.
Pauline Plant, Valdese
Alba-Waldensian, Inc.
Waldensian Division Box Plant, Valdese
Appalachian Flooring Company, West Jefferson
Artcraft Press, Inc., Morganton
Blue Ridge Electric Membership Corporation
Caldwell County Operation, Lenoir
Burke Hosiery Mill, Inc., Hildebran
Burke Lumber Co., Inc., Morganton
J. A. Cline & Sons, Inc., Hildebran
Dixie Container Corporation of North Carolina, Morganton
Dr. Pepper Bottling Company West Jefferson, Inc., West Jefferson
Drexel Knitting Mills, Inc., Drexel
Elizabeth James Mills, Inc., Marion
Fairfield Chair Company
Falls Mfg Co., Granite Falls
Hi-Way Mfg. Co., Inc., Drexel
Hudson Cotton Mills Co., Inc.
Machine Shop, Lenoir
International Resistance Company—Boone Division, Boone
Knox Knitting Company, Inc., Creston
Lenoir Chair Company No. 1, Lenoir
Lenoir Chair Company No. 3, Lenoir
Lenoir Chair Company No. 4, Lenoir
Lenoir News-Topic, Inc., Lenoir
Lenoir Veener Mill, Hildebran
Lindsey Hosiery Mills, Hildebran
McPar Hosiery Mill, Inc., Marion
Martinat Hosiery Mills, Inc., Valdese
Midway Lumber and Supply Company, West Jefferson
Morganton Sheet Metal Co., Morganton
The News Herald, Inc., Morganton
North State Canning Company, Inc., Boone
Oak Flooring Company, Inc., West Jefferson
Old Fort Manufacturing Company, Old Fort
Orton Hosiery Mill, Valdese

Parker Hosiery Mill, Inc., Old Fort
Parker Tie Company, West Jefferson
Peerless Hosiery Company, Inc., West Jefferson
Pitts Lumber, Inc., Glen Alpine
Robinson Hosiery Mill, Valdese
Shadowline, Incorporated, Boone
The Skyland Post, West Jefferson
Valdese Weavers, Inc., Valdese
Vanhorn Hosiery Mill, Hildebran
Watauga Democrat, Boone
West Jefferson Canning Company, West Jefferson
Western Carolina Hatcheries, Inc., Morganton
Wholesale Builders Supply, Inc., Boone

Second Year Winners

Dave Baer Hosiery Mill, Inc.
J. P. Pons Division, Valdese
Cross Cotton Mills Company, Marion
Estes, Morganton
Francis-Louise Fall Fashion Mills, Inc., Valdese
Guy L. Hensley Hosiery Mill, Inc., Marion
Jacquad Mills Co., Morganton
Moore Cotton Mill Co., Inc., Lenoir
Samson Cordage Works, Inc.
Icard Division, Icard

Third Year Winners

The American Thread Company, Marion
Hayes Cotton Mill Co., Inc., Lenoir
Hemlock Manufacturing Company, Inc., Granite Falls
Kraft Foods
Division of National Dairy Products Corp., West Jefferson National Veneer Company, Lenoir

Fourth Year Winners

Eugene Cross & Company, Marion
Marion Manufacturing Co., Marion

Fifth Year Winners

B & K Hosiery Mill, Hickory

Sixth Year Winners

The McDowell News, Marion
United Rayon Knitting Mills
Div. of United Merchants & Mfgrs., Inc., Old Fort

Seventh Year Winners

Kohler and Campbell Inc., Granite Falls

Cabarrus County Award Winners

First Year Winners

The Bake Shop, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 1, Bleachery, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 1, Paint Department, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 1, Yard Force, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant, Sheet Department, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 1, Street Department, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 5, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 8, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 9, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 10, Kannapolis
Golden Crust Bakeries, Inc., Kannapolis
Propst Construction Co., Inc., Concord
Shannon Hosiery Mills, Inc.
Plant 8, Concord
Snyder Printing & Lithographing Company, Concord

(Continued on page 6)

FACTORY EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN CHARLOTTE AND GREENSBORO - HIGH POINT AREAS — JUNE, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month (thous) 4	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
CHARLOTTE AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	27.7	27.8	27.8	— 0.4	— 0.4	$ 76.38	$ 76.26	$ 72.28	42.2	41.9	41.3	$1.81	$1.82	$1.75
Food & Kindred Products	4.1	4.1	4.1	.....	.....	73.96	71.31	65.69	43.0	41.7	40.3	1.72	1.71	1.63
Bakery	2.0	2.0	2.1	.....	— 4.8	78.57	76.02	69.14	42.7	42.0	40.2	1.84	1.81	1.72
Textile Mills Products	6.4	6.4	6.5	.....	— 1.5	67.84	64.94	65.89	42.4	41.1	41.7	1.60	1.58	1.58
Broadwoven Fabrics	2.5	2.5	2.4	.....	+ 4.2	77.43	75.69	78.32	44.5	43.5	44.5	1.74	1.74	1.76
Knitting Mills	2.3	2.3	2.6	.....	—11.5	60.70	57.22	56.36	40.2	38.4	38.6	1.51	1.49	1.46
Furniture & Fixtures	.9	.8	.9	+12.5	.....	86.94	79.13	82.32	41.8	38.6	42.0	2.08	2.05	1.96
Paper & Allied Products	1.4	1.4	1.4	.....	.....	78.91	79.95	78.22	42.2	42.3	43.7	1.87	1.89	1.79
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	2.0	2.1	2.0	— 4.8	.....	93.43	96.05	...7...	40.1	41.4	...7...	2.33	2.32	2.24
Chemicals & Allied Products	2.7	2.7	2.5	.....	+ 8.0	70.47	70.52	72.54	42.2	43.0	44.5	1.67	1.64	1.63
Metal Products	2.4	2.4	2.4	.....	.....	79.77	81.36	77.97	40.7	41.3	40.4	1.96	1.97	1.93
Machinery	3.2	3.3	3.2	— 3.0	.....	91.60	92.86	78.87	45.8	46.2	43.1	2.00	2.01	1.83
Other Manufacturing Industries[1]	4.6	4.6	4.8	.....	— 4.2	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
GREENSBORO - HIGH POINT AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	43.5	43.1	44.4	+ 0.9	— 2.0	$ 67.94	$ 67.42	$ 65.69	39.5	39.2	39.1	$1.72	$1.72	$1.68
Food & Kindred Products	2.9	2.9	2.9	.....	.....	72.70	71.84	73.47	44.6	44.9	46.5	1.63	1.60	1.58
Bakery Products	.8	.8	.8	.....	.....	81.83	77.91	74.42	47.3	46.1	44.3	1.73	1.69	1.68
Textile Mill Products	15.8	15.7	17.0	+ 0.6	— 7.1	61.06	60.16	58.56	38.4	37.6	37.3	1.59	1.60	1.57
Knitting Mills	6.1	6.0	6.8	+ 1.7	—10.3	52.27	50.76	49.76	35.8	34.3	34.8	1.46	1.48	1.43
Apparel	3.9	3.9	3.8	.....	+ 2.6	53.34	52.68	...7...	38.1	37.9	39.2	1.40	1.39	...7...
Lumber & Wood Products (Except Furn.)	1.1	1.1	1.1	.....	.....	65.70	64.08	60.05	43.8	43.3	41.7	1.50	1.48	1.44
Furniture	6.7	6.6	6.7	+ 1.5	.....	67.42	67.77	63.58	39.2	39.4	38.3	1.72	1.72	1.66
HH Furniture	5.8	5.7	5.8	+ 1.8	.....	67.55	68.82	63.07	38.6	39.1	37.1	1.75	1.76	1.70
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	1.5	1.4	1.3	+ 7.1	+15.4	84.20	86.14	...7...	38.8	38.8	...7...	2.17	2.22	2.15
Chemicals	1.4	1.5	1.5	— 6.7	— 6.7	91.08	87.96	81.29	44.0	42.7	41.9	2.07	2.06	1.94
Stone, Clay & Glass Products	.9	.9	.9	.....	.....	88.73	89.58	71.99	50.7	50.9	42.6	1.75	1.76	1.69
Metal Products	2.0	1.9	1.9	+ 5.3	+ 5.3	72.63	73.46	...7...	41.5	41.5	...7...	1.75	1.77	1.76
Machinery (Except Electrical)	.9	.9	.9	.....	.....	88.31	88.51	...7...	44.6	43.6	45.4	1.98	2.03	...7...
Other Manufacturing Industries[2]	6.4	6.3	6.4	+ 1.6	.....	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...

[1] Includes: Apparel; Lumber; Rubber; Leather; Stone, Clay and Glass; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Tobacco; Paper; Rubber; Leather; Electrical Machinery; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[4] Preliminary.
[5] Data Not Available.

EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN NONAGRICULTURAL INDUSTRIES IN NORTH CAROLINA — JUNE, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

TOTAL EMPLOYMENT — PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM HOURS AND EARNINGS — AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS — AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS — AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS

EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN NONAGRICULTURAL INDUSTRIES IN NORTH CAROLINA — JUNE, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month[4] (thous)	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
ALL NONAGRICULTURAL EMPLOYMENT	1,260.3	1,262.8	1,242.9	— 0.2	+ 1.4	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Manufacturing	525.4	521.5	520.3	+ 0.7	+ 1.0	$ 68.64	$ 68.30	$ 67.24	41.1	40.9	41.0	$1.67	$1.67	$1.64
Durable Goods	147.5	146.1	146.6	+ 1.0	+ 0.6	70.64	70.81	67.94	42.3	42.4	42.2	1.67	1.67	1.61
Lumber & Timber Basic Products	31.5	31.2	30.6	+ 1.0	+ 2.9	59.93	60.21	60.06	42.5	42.7	42.9	1.41	1.41	1.40
Sawmills & Planing Mills	18.9	18.7	18.2	+ 1.1	+ 3.8	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Millwork, Plywood, etc.	6.2	6.2	6.4	.....	— 3.1	56.15	55.07	57.62	41.9	41.1	43.0	1.34	1.34	1.34
Furniture & Fin. Lumber Products	47.8	47.3	47.1	+ 1.1	+ 1.5	65.63	65.31	63.84	41.8	41.6	42.0	1.57	1.57	1.52
Household Furniture	43.3	42.9	42.8	+ 0.9	+ 1.2	65.47	65.31	63.12	41.7	41.6	41.8	1.57	1.57	1.51
Stone, Clay and Glass	11.1	11.0	11.1	+ 0.9	.....	74.70	75.88	66.36	44.2	44.9	42.0	1.69	1.69	1.58
Concrete, Brick, etc.	4.1	4.0	3.8	+ 2.5	+ 7.9	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Primary Metals	2.8	2.7	2.8	+ 3.7	.....	82.62	84.65	87.15	40.3	41.7	41.9	2.05	2.03	2.08
Fabricated Metals	9.5	9.3	9.0	+ 2.2	+ 5.6	87.60	87.80	75.85	43.8	43.9	41.0	2.00	2.00	1.85
Fab. Structural Metals	4.2	4.1	3.8	+ 2.4	+10.5	101.18	101.77	80.14	47.5	46.9	42.4	2.13	2.17	1.89
Machinery (Except Electrical)	13.3	13.3	13.8	.....	— 3.6	79.12	78.40	77.40	44.2	43.8	45.0	1.79	1.79	1.72
Special Industrial Machinery	6.7	6.6	6.8	+ 1.5	— 1.5	80.10	77.87	...7...	44.5	43.5	...7...	1.80	1.79	1.72
Electrical Machinery	24.0	23.9	24.9	+ 0.4	— 3.6	83.43	83.23	80.18	41.1	41.0	40.7	2.03	2.03	1.97
Ord. and Transportation Equipment	3.9	3.9	3.8	.....	+ 2.6	91.62	96.50	93.28	40.9	42.7	42.4	2.24	2.26	2.20
Other Durable Goods[1]	3.6	3.5	3.5	+ 2.9	+ 2.9	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Nondurable Goods	377.9	375.4	373.7	+ 0.7	+ 1.1	67.56	67.47	66.99	40.7	40.4	40.6	1.66	1.67	1.65
Food & Kindred Products	36.8	35.0	34.9	+ 5.1	+ 5.4	61.76	62.16	60.34	42.3	42.0	41.9	1.46	1.48	1.44
Meat Products	8.5	8.4	8.2	+ 1.2	+ 3.7	53.82	53.24	52.88	39.0	38.3	38.6	1.38	1.39	1.37
Meat Packing	2.5	2.5	2.4	.....	+ 4.2	67.26	69.60	67.42	42.3	43.5	42.4	1.59	1.60	1.59
Dairy Products	5.6	5.6	5.6	.....	.....	74.10	75.05	74.40	46.9	47.5	48.0	1.58	1.58	1.55
Grain Mill Products	4.0	4.0	3.8	.....	+ 5.3	63.25	61.86	61.38	45.5	44.5	44.8	1.39	1.39	1.37
Bakery Products	7.6	7.5	7.6	+ 1.3	.....	73.36	72.76	67.82	42.9	42.8	41.1	1.71	1.70	1.65
Beverage Industries	5.0	4.9	4.8	+ 2.0	+ 4.2	64.61	62.92	61.72	49.7	48.4	48.6	1.30	1.30	1.27
Tobacco	25.6	25.6	26.4	.....	— 3.0	90.94	90.23	83.55	40.6	40.1	38.5	2.24	2.25	2.17
Cigarettes	18.6	18.3	19.3	+ 1.6	— 3.6	96.59	97.41	87.69	41.1	41.1	38.8	2.35	2.37	2.26
Stemmeries	5.2	5.5	5.4	— 5.5	— 3.7	69.45	66.42	66.20	38.8	36.9	37.4	1.79	1.80	1.77
Textiles	224.8	223.6	227.7	+ 0.5	— 1.3	66.01	65.37	65.44	41.0	40.6	40.9	1.61	1.61	1.60
Broadwoven Fabrics	90.8	90.1	90.0	+ 0.8	+ 0.9	72.07	71.99	71.40	42.9	42.6	42.5	1.68	1.69	1.68
Broadwoven Cotton	56.0	55.8	56.1	+ 0.4	— 0.2	71.06	70.06	68.48	42.3	41.7	41.5	1.68	1.68	1.65
Broadwoven Fiber & Silk	31.0	30.5	30.3	+ 1.6	+ 2.3	74.02	74.80	75.34	43.8	44.0	43.8	1.69	1.70	1.72
Knitting Mills	65.5	65.7	69.9	— 0.3	— 6.3	58.66	58.03	58.83	37.6	37.2	38.2	1.56	1.56	1.54
Full Fashioned Hosiery	7.5	7.6	8.4	— 1.3	—10.7	55.18	56.42	54.60	35.6	36.4	36.4	1.55	1.55	1.50
Seamless Hosiery	45.7	46.0	49.6	— 0.7	+ 7.9	58.56	57.46	59.28	37.3	36.6	38.0	1.57	1.57	1.56
Dyeing & Finishing Textiles	12.4	12.3	12.5	+ 0.8	— 0.8	69.47	70.22	69.47	41.6	41.8	42.1	1.67	1.68	1.65
Yarn Mills	47.5	46.9	46.7	+ 1.3	+ 1.7	63.27	62.67	62.13	41.9	41.5	41.7	1.51	1.51	1.49
Apparel	45.6	45.5	44.0	+ 0.2	+ 3.6	50.01	50.38	50.44	37.6	37.6	38.5	1.33	1.34	1.31
Men's & Boys' Clothing	17.6	17.3	17.1	+ 1.7	+ 2.9	47.23	47.58	47.88	36.9	36.6	38.3	1.28	1.30	1.25
Paper & Allied Products	13.5	13.7	13.9	— 1.5	— 2.9	102.86	103.68	101.29	43.4	43.2	43.1	2.37	2.40	2.35
Pulp & Paperboard Mills	8.5	8.7	8.9	— 2.3	— 4.5	115.98	114.48	113.01	44.1	43.2	43.3	2.63	2.65	2.61
Paperboard Containers	3.6	3.6	3.5	.....	+ 2.9	78.31	83.76	76.32	42.1	43.4	42.4	1.86	1.93	1.80
Printing	10.5	10.4	10.4	+ 1.0	+ 1.0	88.24	89.70	...7...	38.2	39.0	38.7	2.31	2.30	...7...
Newspapers	5.4	5.4	5.3	.....	+ 1.9	98.36	99.32	95.79	36.7	37.2	36.7	2.68	2.67	2.61
Chemicals	16.4	17.0	11.9	— 3.5	+37.8	85.22	83.13	86.50	42.4	42.2	42.4	2.01	1.97	2.04
Plastics & Synthetic Materials	10.1	10.1	6.0	.....	+68.3	95.22	92.82	107.57	42.7	42.0	43.2	2.23	2.21	2.49
Other Nondurable Goods[2]	4.7	4.6	4.5	+ 2.2	+ 4.4	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Nonmanufacturing	734.9	741.3	722.6	— 0.9	+ 1.7	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Mining	2.8	2.8	3.5	.....	—20.0	75.17	78.25	79.38	46.4	48.6	49.0	1.62	1.61	1.62
Non-Metallic Mining	2.8	2.8	3.0	.....	— 6.7	75.17	78.25	78.05	46.4	48.6	49.4	1.62	1.61	1.58
Contract Construction	73.1	69.8	72.5	+ 4.7	+ 0.8	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Transp., Comm., & Pub. Utilities	67.1	66.5	65.6	+ 0.9	+ 2.3	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Transportation (Except RR)	33.6	33.5	32.8	+ 0.3	+ 2.4	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Communications & Pub. Utilities	24.7	24.3	23.9	+ 1.6	+ 3.3	95.99	97.10	96.41	40.5	40.8	41.2	2.37	2.38	2.34
Trade[3]	228.4	227.2	223.9	+ 0.5	+ 2.0	66.17	65.51	64.32	40.1	39.7	40.2	1.65	1.65	1.60
Wholesale	59.1	59.0	57.7	+ 0.2	+ 2.4	84.97	84.74	83.07	42.7	42.8	42.6	1.99	1.98	1.95
Retail[3]	169.3	168.2	166.2	+ 0.7	+ 1.9	58.50	57.75	56.59	39.0	38.5	39.3	1.50	1.50	1.44
Retail General Merchandise	34.6	34.4	34.4	+ 0.6	+ 0.6	45.43	42.84	42.80	33.9	32.7	33.7	1.34	1.31	1.27
Department Stores	15.4	15.3	14.9	+ 0.7	+ 3.4	49.35	46.26	47.00	32.9	31.9	33.1	1.50	1.45	1.42
Limited Price Variety	7.5	7.7	8.2	— 2.6	— 8.5	30.89	29.02	28.70	29.7	27.9	28.7	1.04	1.04	1.00
Retail Food Stores	25.5	25.4	24.4	+ 0.4	+ 4.5	52.94	51.90	51.83	34.6	33.7	35.5	1.53	1.54	1.46
Finance, Insurance & Real Estate[6]	49.2	48.5	47.5	+ 1.4	+ 3.6	87.45	89.09	91.22	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Service	140.0	138.7	137.3	+ 0.9	+ 2.0	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Hotels & Rooming Houses	9.2	8.4	8.8	+ 9.5	+ 4.5	34.10	31.15	32.71	42.1	35.8	41.4	.81	.87	.79
Personal Services	25.6	25.5	25.3	+ 0.4	+ 1.2	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Laundries & Dry Cleaners	15.5	15.4	15.4	+ 0.6	+ 0.6	36.96	36.96	34.94	38.9	38.9	38.4	.95	.95	.91
Government	174.3	187.8	172.3	— 7.2	+ 1.2	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Federal	40.0	38.8	39.9	+ 3.1	+ 0.3
State & Local Schools	66.3	82.6	66.3	—19.7	.....
State & Local Non-Schools	68.0	66.4	66.1	+ 2.4	+ 2.9

[1] Includes: Transportation Equipment, Instruments, and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Leather and Leather Products, Rubber Products, and Petroleum Products.
[3] Excludes: Earnings in Eating and Drinking Places.
[4] Preliminary.
[5] Data Not Available.
[6] Reflects Earnings in Insurance Companies Only.
[7] Not comparable.
* Less than 0.1% change.

Williams Printing Co., Kannapolis
Wiscassett Mills Company
No. 2 Carding & Spinning, Albemarle
Wiscasset Mills Company
Wiscasset Knitting Department, Albemarle
Wiscassett Mills Company
Hoover Hosiery Company, Albemarle
Wright Motor Co., Kannapolis

Second Year Winners

Bill Dove Motor Company, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 1, Cotton Warehouse, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 1, Wash Cloth Dept., Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 2, Carding, Kannapolis,
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 4, Shop & Yard, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 7, Spinning, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 7, Weaving, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 8, Weaving, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 9, Spinning, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 10, Spinning, Kannapolis
Cardell Carter Pontiac - Buick, Inc., Kannapolis
Concord Motors, Inc., Concord
Locust Hosiery Mills, Inc., Mt. Pleasant
E. L. Morrison Lumber Co., Inc., Concord
Mt. Pleasant Milling Co., Mt. Pleasant
Nu Tred Tire Service, Concord
Penn Carol Hosiery Mills, Inc., Mt. Pleasant
Sparks Oldsmobile, Inc., Kannapolis

Third Year Winners

Cannon Mills Company
Plant 9, Carding, Kannapolis

Fourth Year Winners

Brown Manufacturing Co., Spinning, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 6, Finishing (Put up & Sew), Kannapolis
Mt. Pleasant Hosiery Mills, Mt. Pleasant

Fifth Year Winners

Cannon Mills Company
Plant 6, Weaving, Kannapolis

Sixth Year Winners

Brown Manufacturing Co.
Carding, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 1, Set Dept., Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 4, Cloth Room, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 8, Carding & Spinning, Kannapolis
Roberta Manufacturing Co.
Carding & Spinning, Kannapolis
City Pressing Club, Concord
Southern Latex Corporation, Concord

Seventh Year Winners

Cannon Mills Company
Plant 5, Carding, Kannapolis
DeWitt Motor Company, Concord
Sussex Hosiery Co., Concord

Eighth Year Winners

Cannon Mills Company
Plant 6, Beaming, Kannapolis
Sunshine Cleaners — Centerview, Kannapolis

Ninth Year Winners

Cannon Mills Company
Plant 2, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 2, Weaving, Kannapolis

Tenth Year Winners

Cannon Mills Company, Kannapalis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 1, Cutting Dept., Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 1, Dye Dept., Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 1, Sample Dept., Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 1, Sewing Dept., Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 1, Supply Room, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 1, Wrapping & Packing, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 1, Weaving, Cloth & Knitting, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 4, 1 Spin, Kannapolis
Young Cleaners & Dyers, Concord

Eleventh Year Winners

Cannon Mills Company
Plant 6, Maintenance, Kannapolis
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 10, Kannapolis,
Cannon Mills Company
Plant 11, Spinning, Kannapolis

Twelfth Year Winners

Cannon Mills Company
Plant 7, Kannapolis

Cleveland County Award Winners

First Year Winners

Fiber Industries, Inc., Shelby
McBrayer Motors, Inc., Shelby
Shelby One Hour Martinizing Cleaners, Shelby
Star Press, Inc., Shelby
Star Publishing Co., Shelby
Whiteway Cleaners, Shelby
Young Motor Sales, Shelby

Second Year Winners

Cline Motors, Shelby
Lafayette Cleaners, Shelby

Third Year Winners

Fallston Builders Supply Co., Inc., Fallston
Fiber Glass Division
Pittsburgh Plate Glass Company, Shelby
Sadie Cotton Mills Co., Inc., Kings Mountain
Spangler & Sons, Inc., Shelby

Fifth Year Winners

Foote Mineral Co.
Kings Mountain Operations, Kings Mountain

Davidson, Davie County Award Winners

First Year Winners

Bills Hosiery Mill, Denton
Black Lumber Co., Inc., Thomasville
Blackwelder Mfg. Co., Inc., Mocksville
Botany Cottons, Inc.
Jewel Mill Division, Thomasville
Carolina Lingerie Co., Inc., Mocksville
Carolina Propane Gas Service Co., Inc., Lexington
Circle Manufacturing Co., Thomasville
Colony Craft Furniture Co., Inc., Denton
Hoover Chair Co., Lexington
Irving Knitting Mills, Inc., Lexington
Mid-State Tile Company, Lexington
Peerless Mattress Co., Lexington
Piedmont Candy Co., Lexington
Piedmont Garment Co., Inc., Mocksville
Plymouth Hosiery Mills, Thomasville
Siceloff Manufacturing Co., Inc., Lexington
Streetman Novelty Furniture Co., Lexington
Stroupe Mirror Company, Thomasville
Surratt Hosiery Mills, Denton
Thomasville Furniture Industries, Inc.
Plant T, Thomasville
United Furniture Corporation, Lexington
Welco Furniture, Inc., Thomasville
Yarbrough Hosiery Mill, Lexington

Second Year Winners

The Dispatch Publishing Co.
Dixie Furniture Company, Inc., Lexington
Duke Power Company,
Thomasville Branch, Thomasville
Miller Tool & Machine Co., Inc., Welcome

Third Year Winners

Monleigh Garment Co., Inc., Mocksville
G. W. Smith Lumber Co., Lexington

Fourth Year Winners

Erwin Mills, Inc.
Plant No. 3, Cooleemee
Hinkle Milling Co., Thomasville
Thomasville Furniture Industries, Inc.
Main Office, Thomasville

Fifth Year Winners

Thomasville Coca-Cola Bottling Co., Thomasville

Eleventh Year Winners

Thomasville Furniture Industries, Inc.
Plant E, Thomasville

Thirteenth Year Winners

B. & F. Mfg. Co., Inc., Mocksville
Welcome Milling Co., Welcome

Forsyth, Yadkin, Surry, and Stokes County Award Winners

First Year Winners

Atlantic Bitulithic Company, Winston-Salem
Brown & Williamson Tobacco Corporation
Winston-Salem Branch, Winston-Salem
Dixie Concrete Products, Inc., Winston-Salem
The Duplan Corporation
Forsyth Division, Winston-Salem
Goody's Manufacturing Corporation, Winston-Salem
W. E. Graham & Sons Division
Vulcan Materials Company
Central Repair Shop, Winston-Salem
W. E. Graham & Sons Division
Vulcan Materials Company
Elkin Quarry, Winston-Salem
W. E. Graham & Sons Division
Vulcan Materials Company
Enka Quarry, Winston-Salem
W. E. Graham & Sons Division
Vulcan Materials Company
Pilot Mountain Quarry, Winston-Salem
Hanes Hosiery Mills Company, Winston-Salem
Alvis Hole Construction Co., Walnut Cove
Industries For The Blind, Winston-Salem
The Proctor-Silex Corporation
Mount Airy Plant, Mount Airy
R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company
No. 92-2 Processing, Winston-Salem
R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company
Wood Working Shop, Winston-Salem
R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company
Archer Aluminum Division No. 40, Winston-Salem
R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company
Zone Maintenance, Winston-Salem
Hugh G. Strickland, Inc., Winston-Salem
J. A. Vance Co., Winston-Salem

Second Year Winners

W. E. Graham & Sons Division
Vulcan Materials Company
Delivery Department, Winston-Salem
W. E. Graham & Sons Division
Vulcan Materials Company
Greystone Quarry, Winston-Salem
W. E. Graham & Sons Division
Vulcan Materials Company
Piedmont Quarry, Winston-Salem
W. E. Graham & Sons Division
Vulcan Materials Company
Shelton Quarry, Winston-Salem
R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company
Turkish Department, Winston-Salem
R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company
Whitaker Park Cigarette Blending,
Winston-Salem
WSJS Radio and Television,
Winston-Salem

Third Year Winners

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company
No. 9 Metal Can, Winston-Salem

Fourth Year Winners

International Minerals & Chemicals
Corporation, Winston-Salem
R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company
Bonded Warehouse, Winston-Salem
Weaver Fertilizer Co., Winston-Salem

Fifth Year Winners

Isom & Ingram Hosiery Mill, Inc.,
Winston-Salem
R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company
Classing Department, Winston-Salem

Sixth Year Winners

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company
Air Conditioning, Winston-Salem
R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company
Research Department, Winston-Salem
Wil-Ray Builders, Winston-Salem

Seventh Year Winners

Indera Mills Company, Winston-Salem
Western Electric Company, Inc.
North Carolina Works-Winston-Salem,
Winston-Salem

Eighth Year Winners

Boonville Cleaners & Laundry, Boonville
Wachovia Oil Co., Winston-Salem

Ninth Year Winners

Piedmont Engraving Co., Winston-Salem
R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company
No. 256 SPD, Winston-Salem

Tenth Year Winners

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company
No. 60 Processing

Twelfth Year Winners

Superior Cleaners, Winston-Salem

Thirteenth Year Winners

Walnut Cove Hosiery Mill, Walnut Cove

Sixteenth Year Winners

R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company
No. 8 Stemmery, Winston-Salem

Gaston County Award Winners

First Year Winners

Aberfoyle Manufacturing Company
Rex Division
Plant No. 1, Gastonia
American & Efird Mills, Inc.
Adrian Plant, Mount Holly
Belmont Throwing Corporation, Belmont
C & W Roller Shop, Inc., Gastonia
Gastonia Electric Co., Inc., Gastonia
Harden Manufacturing Company, Dallas
Howard Brothers Manufacturing Co.,
Gastonia
Pyramid Mills Co., Inc., Bessemer City
A. M. Smyre Mfg. Co., Gastonia
J. P. Stevens & Co., Inc.,
Ragan Plant, Gastonia
Sunshine Uniform & Linen Service,
Gastonia
Textiles, Incorporated, Gastonia
Wales Manufacturing Company, Inc.,
Gastonia

Second Year Winners

American & Efird Mills, Inc.
Efird Plant No. 1, Mount Holly
Carson's Laundry, Gastonia
Gastonia United Oil Co., Inc., Gastonia
G. G. Walker Motor Co., Inc., Gastonia

Third Year Winners

Gastonia Weaving Co., Gastonia

Fourth Year Winners

Homelite
Division of Textron, Inc., Gastonia Southeastern
Precision Tool & Die, Inc., Gastonia

Sixth Year Winners

Huffman's Laundry & Cleaners, Gastonia
Piedmont Machine Shop, Inc., Gastonia

Seventh Year Winners

Gettys Cleaners, Gastonia

Eleventh Year Winners

American & Efird Mills, Inc.
Main Office, Mount Holly

Sixteenth Year Winners

Firestone Textiles, Gastonia

Greensboro Award Winners

First Year Winners

The American Agricultural Chemical Co.,
Greensboro
Blue Bell, Inc.
Lee Street Plant, Greensboro
Blue Gem Manufacturing Company,
Greensboro
George C. Brown & Company, Inc.,
Greensboro
H. L. Coble Construction Company,
Greensboro
Cone Mills Corp.
Eno Plant, Greensboro
Cone Mills Corp.
Granite Plant, Greensboro
DeSoto Chemical Coatings, Inc.,
Greensboro
Elm Street Weaving Company, Greensboro
Guilford Dairy Co-Operative Association
Thomasville Branch, Greensboro
Guilford Dairy Co-Operative Association
Asheboro Branch, Greensboro
A. J. Hewett, Contractor, Greensboro
McLeod Leather & Belting Co., Inc.,
Greensboro
Mayfair Cafeteria, Inc., Greensboro
Sears, Roebuck and Co., Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Asheboro Quarry, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Burlington Quarry, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Davidson Quarry, Greesnboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Eno Quarry, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Hickory Quarry, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Hicone Quarry, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Lexington Quarry, Greensboro
Vick Manufacturing Division, Greensboro
Richardson-Merrell, Inc.

Second Year Winners

American Oil Company, Guilford
Cone Mills Corp.
Tabardrey Plant, Greensboro
Dixie Belle Textiles, Inc.
Gibsonville Plant, Gibsonville
Piedmont Blouse Co., Inc., Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Crabtree Quarry, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Garysburg Quarry
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Gaston Quarry, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Mebane Quarry, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Salisbury Shop, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Woodleaf Quarry, Greensboro
Thompson-Arthur Paving Co., Greensboro
J. D. Wilkins Company, Greensboro

Third Year Winners

AMP Incorporated
Greensboro Plant, Greensboro
Blue Bell, Inc.
Central Shop, Greensboro
Cameo Hosiery Company, Greensboro
Cone Mills Corp.
Haynes Plant, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Elm City Quarry, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Kings Mountain Quarry, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Reidsville Quarry, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Truck Fleet, Greensboro
Wafco Mills, Inc., Greensboro

Fourth Year Winners

Carolina Loom Reed Co., Inc., Greensboro
Dixie Overall Service, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Belgrade Quarry, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Buchanan Quarry, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Charlotte Quarry, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Goldsboro Quarry, Greensboro
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
Rolesville Quarry, Greensboro

Fifth Year Winners

Lynch Hosiery Mills, Greensboro

Sixth Year Winners

Benbow Reproductions, Inc., Greensboro
Phillips Petroleum Company
Marine & Other Terminals Division
Superior Stone Company Division
Martin Marietta Corporation
McLeansville Quarry, Greensboro

Seventh Year Winners

Carolina Blower Co., Inc., Greensboro
Olin Mathieson Chemical Corp., Greensboro

Eighth Year Winners

American Cleaners, Greensboro
Summit Center Cleaners, Greensboro
Sunset Cleaners & Laundries, Inc., Greensboro

Ninth Year Winners

Cone Mills Corp.
Power Plant, Greensboro

Eleventh Year Winners

Western Electric Company, Inc.
N. C. Works—Greensboro

Thirteenth Year Winners

Boren Clay Products Company, Pleasant Garden

Fourteenth Year Winners

Burlington Industries, Inc.
Sample Weaving Plant, Greensboro

Fifteenth Year Winners

Peerless Cleaners, Greensboro

High Point Award Winners

First Year Winners

Adams-Millis Corporation
Mac Panel Company, High Point
Amos Hosiery Mills, Inc., High Point
The Borden Company
Charlotte Plant, High Point
Crown Hosiery Mills, Inc., High Point
W. A. Davis Milling Company, Inc., High Point
The Englander Company, Inc., High Point
Globe Furniture Company, High Point
Hall Printing Company, High Point
The Lilly Company, High Point
Young's, Inc., High Point

Second Year Winners

Adams-Millis Corporation
Plant Four, High Point
Adams-Millis Corporation
Plant Six, High Point
Anvil Brand, Inc.
Hudson Division, High Point
Burlington Throwing Company, High Point
Tomlinson's of High Point, Inc.
Office, High Point

Third Year Winners

The Borden Company
Asheville Plant, High Point
The Borden Company
Rocky Mount Branch, High Point
Duke Power Company
High Point Branch, High Point
Griffin Upholstery Co., High Point
Heritage Furniture Co.
Quilting-Cushion Division, High Point
White Frames, Inc., High Point

Fourth Year Winners

Henderson & Mooney Mfg. Co., Inc., High Point
Heritage Furniture Co.
Trende' Division, High Point

Fifth Year Winners

Adams-Millis Corporation
Plant Seven, High Point
Deluxe Saw and Tool Company, High Point

Sixth Year Winners

Thomas Furniture Co., High Point

Mecklenburg County Award Winners

First Year Winner

Arts Engraving Co., Inc., Charlotte
Arzberger Engravers, Inc., Charlotte
Atlantic Company, Charlotte
W. A. Buening Co., Inc., Charlotte
Carolina Marble & Granite Works, Inc., Charlotte
Charlotte Development Laboratories of the Celanese Fibers Company, Charlotte
Charlotte Machine Company, Charlotte
Fulbright Laboratories, Inc., Charlotte
Humble Oil & Refining Company
Denton Bulk Plant, Charlotte
Humble Oil & Refining Company
Sylva Bulk Plant, Charlotte
Humble Oil & Refining Company
Hickory Plant, Charlotte
Humble Oil & Refining Company
Rockingham Bulk Plant, Charlotte
Humble Oil & Refining Company
Henderson Bulk Plant, Charlotte
Humble Oil & Refining Company
Fayetteville Terminal, Charlotte
Humble Oil & Refining Company
Durham Bulk Plant, Charlotte
J. A. Jones Construction Company, Charlotte
Pet Milk Company
Dairy Division, Charlotte
Ralston Purina Company, Charlotte
Reeves Bros., Inc.
Curon Div. Cornelius
Republic Steel Corporation,
Culvert Plant, Charlotte
Schachner Leather & Belting Company, Charlotte Standard Chemical Products, Inc., Charlotte
Stately Lady Nitewear, Inc., Charlotte
Western Electric Co., Inc., Charlotte

Second Year Winners

Air Reduction Co., Inc.
Air Reduction Sales Company
Charlotte Oxygen Plant, Charlotte
Arnold, Hoffman & Company, Inc.
Charlotte Plant, Charlotte
Carolina Metal Products Corp., Charlotte
Cherokee Paper Box Company, Inc., Charlotte
Dillard Paper Company of Charlotte, Inc., Charlotte
Humble Oil & Refining Company
Elizabeth City Bulk Plant, Charlotte
Humble Oil & Refining Company
Wilmington Terminal, Charlotte
Martin Marietta Corporation
Sinclair & Valentine Division, Charlotte
Reichhold Chemicals, Inc., Charlotte

Third Year Winners

Johnston Manufacturing Co., Charlotte
Richardson Electrical Equipment Co., Inc., Charlotte

Fourth Year Winners

Humble Oil & Refining Company
Rocky Mount Plant, Charlotte
Humble Oil & Refining Company
Raleigh Bulk Plant, Charlotte
Phillips Petroleum Company
Marine & Other Terminals Division
Charlotte Terminal, Charlotte
Republic Steel Corporation
Warehouse, Charlotte
Virginia-Carolina Chemical Corp., Charlotte
Westinghouse Electric Corporation
Charlotte Apparatus Repair Plant, Charlotte

Fifth Year Winners

Humble Oil & Refining Company
Asheville Bulk Plant, Charlotte
Humble Oil & Refining Company
Burlington Bulk Plant, Charlotte

Sixth Year Winners

Davidson College Laundry, Davidson
Humble Oil & Refining Company
Morehead City Terminal, Charlotte

Seventh Year Winners

Barber Manufacturing Company, Charlotte
Douglas Aircraft Company, Inc.
Charlotte Division, Charlotte
Humble Oil & Refining Company
Washington Bulk Plant, Charlotte

Eighth Year Winners

Criminger Cabinet Shop, Charlotte

Eleventh Year Winners

Dixie Tag & Label Co., Charlotte
Winsor & Jerauld Manufacturing Co.
Southern Division, Charlotte

Twelfth Year Winners

Martin Marietta Corp.
Concrete Pipe Division, Charlotte

Thirteenth Year Winners

R. T. Barbee Company, Inc., Charlotte
The Dowd Press, Inc.

Fourteenth Year Winners

Union Carbide Consumer Products Co., Charlotte

Sixteenth Year Winners

Charlotte Workshop For The Blind, Inc., Charlotte
Linde Company
Div. Union Carbide Corp., Charlotte

Wilson County Award Winners

First Year Winners

Carolina Laundry & Cleaners, Inc., Wilson
James C. Dempsey, Jr., Inc., Wilson
High's, Inc., Wilson
Linstone, Inc., Wilson
Nutrena Mills, Wilson
Ralston Purina Company
Wilson Plant, Wilson
Sealtest Foods
Wilson Plant, Wilson
Service Laundry Co., Inc., Wilson
Stephenson Millwork Co., Inc., Wilson
Tobacco City Motors, Inc., Wilson
Wilson Veneer Co., Inc., Wilson

Second Year Winners

One Hour Cleaners & Laundry, Inc., Wilson
Wilson Broom & Mop Mfg. Co., Inc., Wilson

Third Year Winners

Mello Ice Cream Co., Wilson
Sandifer-Batts Pontiac Company, Wilson
The Wilson Daily Times, Inc., Wilson

Fourth Year Winners

Cargill Incorporated, Wilson
Contentnea Guano Company, Wilson
Samson's Inc., Wilson

Seventh Year Winners

One Hour Cleaners, Wilson

Eleventh Year Winners

Wilson Motor Parts

Labor

FOR RELEASE
ON DELIVERY

TESTIMONY OF ERWIN N. GRISWOLD, COMMISSIONER
U.S. COMMISSION ON CIVIL RIGHTS
BEFORE THE
SUBCOMMITTEE ON EMPLOYMENT AND MANPOWER
OF THE
SENATE COMMITTEE ON LABOR AND PUBLIC WELFARE
ON S. 1937 AND RELATED BILLS
TUESDAY, August 20, 1963

Mr. Chairman and Members of the Subcommittee:

On behalf of the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights, I am pleased to respond to your invitation to present our views on Federal policies which affect racial discrimination in the field of employment.

In connection with its forthcoming statutory report, the Commission has unanimously adopted a recommendation that:

> "Congress enact legislation establishing a right to equal opportunity in employment when that employment is assisted by the Federal Government or affects interstate commerce, with authority to initiate action and to issue appropriate orders vested in a single administrator located in the Department of Labor, and provision for appeal to an independent authority."

Senate Bill 1937 is consistent with and would effectuate the Commission's recommendation. I therefore urge its enactment.

The economic disadvantage of Negroes is a fundamental cause of current social unrest, demonstrations and protests. One week from tomorrow, the National Capital will be the scene of the largest civil rights gathering in our history. Thousands of Negro and white citizens from all parts of the country will come to this city under the banner of "Jobs and Freedom." The focus of the day will be employment opportunities as well as the broad range of civil rights issues now pending before Congress. In the South, demonstrators against segregated public accommodations have listed equal employment opportunity as one of their major goals. In the North, the demonstrations of recent months have highlighted growing dissatisfaction with restricted employment opportunities and the high rate of unemployment among nonwhites. Few of us can honestly believe that we can somehow cure these symptoms without correcting those economic ills, from which, in large measure, they spring.

The persistence of economic injustices, the disparity between white and Negro income levels, and the rising unemployment rate among Negroes now urgently demand of Congress speedy corrective action. In addition, the changing patterns of the job market foretell mounting economic deprivation for Negroes rendered jobless by automation and increasing technological change .

Testimony has already been presented before this Committee substantiating the well-known fact that the Negro "still ranks among the poorest of the poor in the United States and that his economic status relative to whites has not improved for nearly twenty years." Whatever improvements Negroes have achieved in occupational levels and in incomes have tended to result from general shifts in the economy rather than from any significient lessening of the economic disparity between Negroes and whites. It is still a fact that one-third of employed Negroes are service workers, compared to 11 percent of employed whites; and that only 17 percent of employed Negroes have achieved the status of white collar workers, compared to 47 percent for whites. The unemployed rate for nonwhites has remained twice as high as the rate for whites, and among young Negroes has shown a disturbing tendency to increase persistently. Finally, the income of nonwhites has remained at 50 to 60 percent the income of whites, and in fact, since the mid-fifties, the gap has widened.

But even more disturbing to Negroes than this general economic disparity is the discrepancy in earning power between Negroes and whites with the same number of years of schooling or performing the same kind of work. It is disturbing to realize that in his lifetime a Negro college graduate will earn less than the white who did not go beyond the 8th grade. And that even with the same years of schooling, Negro teachers, physicians, clerks, sales workers, bus and truck drivers, and household workers all earn less than their white counterparts.

There is reason for further concern in the fact that the manpower trends predicted for the future indicate that there will be even greater problems in this area unless firm steps are taken to improve the situation. The very areas of employment where Negroes made gains during World War II and thereafter (production jobs) are the areas where employment opportunities appear to be shrinking. At the same time, opportunities are expanding in the categories where Negroes have yet to make significant advances (professionals, managers, clerical and sales workers).

All of us recognize, of course, that the economic disparity between whites and nonwhites is not entirely attributable to employment discrimination. Inequality in education bears its share of responsibility for this current situation, as well as the general erosive effects of segregation which have too often sapped the enthusiasm, interest and aspirations of Negroes in every age group. Nevertheless, the evidence already presented to this Committee substantiates the conclusion that regardless of educational attainment, Negroes continue to be denied equal employment opportunities because of their race and color.

Further substantiation, if any were needed, is provided by the experiences of Negroes in the Armed Forces when contrasted with those in the civilian labor market. The Armed Services, particularly the Army and the Air Force, have demonstrated the improved utilization of Negro manpower which is possible when policies of equal opportunity are followed. A detailed Commission report will soon be released on this subject. I might briefly summarize the major findings here.

While there are many pitfalls in comparing civilian and military occupations, the evidence shows that both Negro enlisted men and officers have attained higher occupational levels than have Negroes dependent upon the civilian employment market. This is so in every clerical, technical and skilled field for which the data permit comparison, including technicians in electronic, drafting, medical and dental fields; aircraft and automotive mechanics; electricians and communications linemen; construction and related craftsmen; and printing craftsmen. The performance of the Army in utilizing Negro manpower is exceptionally outstanding. In nearly all of the occupations studied, the Army's proportion of Negroes was two, three or even four times higher than the proportion of Negroes in the discriminatory environment of the civilian economy.

Negro military personnel have conclusively demonstrated that given equal employment opportunities they have the education, skill and capacity to perform at managerial, scientific and technical levels. Our civilian economy could only be greatly strengthened by a similar effective use of Negro manpower.

Faced as we are with the current racial disparity in the civilian economy and with the projected manpower trends which will intensify the problems of occupational status, unemployment and income for the Negro, establishment of equal employment opportunities becomes imperative. Nothing short of a nationwide affirmative and conscious effort by Government, employers, unions and others - as called for by this bill - will avoid the economic waste and social unrest which await us. No American community can justify its claim to democracy nor long preserve peace and order when one-fourth of Negro youth are unemployed, and when many other Negroes are employed at less than their full capacity.

Senate Bill 1937 embodies a bold and fresh approach to the problem but no more than is necessary to cope with the magnitude of the issues we face. It preserves those features of the State commission approach which have been most effective and incorporates improved features to cope with the current issues on a national level. The question before this Committee is not whether Federal action is needed to promote equal employment opportunity but rather whether the particular form that Federal action takes will be equal to the task.

This bill appropriately emphasizes the positive concept of equal employment opportunity. The current economic and employment status of Negroes is not simply the result of employers refusing to hire qualified Negro job seekers. It is more the result of restrictive practices of labor unions, both as to membership and apprentice training, and of other personnel and manpower systems established by tradition, habit or convenience which by their operation have the effect of excluding Negroes from employment opportunities. The goal is not merely to ensure nondiscriminatory treatment of the Negro applicant when he arrives at the personnel office, but rather to ensure that Negroes as well as whites will know of job vacancies, will be referred by placement agencies and will possess the requisite training to qualify. Nondiscrimination alone will not solve the problem we face if Negroes never learn of jobs, are denied referrals by employment agencies and are barred from training facilities. Equal employment opportunity is properly defined by the statute in terms of the entire employment process.

Since the Act broadens the usual concept of nondiscriminatory employment practices and seeks to encourage a review of basic personnel and manpower systems, the Administrator should be authorized to acquaint persons subject to the Act with these objectives and with methods by which these objectives may be achieved. The bill does not so provide and might well be amended accordingly.

A second significant feature of the bill is the administrative structure proposed. The Commission has recommended, and S. 1937 so provides, that the agency responsible for the administration of the statute be located within the Department of Labor so that the many skills and services of the Department may be effectively utilized to achieve equal employment opportunity. Public employment agencies, apprenticeship training, and manpower development all have a vital role to play in influencing and affecting the personnel systems of our economy. The Department's policy decisions and programs in these areas and the activities of other Bureaus of the Department have a profound impact on equality of opportunity which must be coordinated with the program of the Equal Employment Opportunity Administration. Placing the Administration within the Department of Labor will make this possible.

Furthermore, vesting administration in a single administrator responsible to the Secretary of Labor is an improvement over the sometimes cumbersome multi-headed policy making commissions. The Administrator is properly made responsible for planning, developing, initiating and executing the program necessary to effectuate the purposes of the Act, and he is given the discretion and authority to accomplish this objective. This approach is vital to the success of the agency.

The provision of this bill granting the Administrator authority to decide whether or not to receive an individual complaint is sound. The Administrator must exercise initiative in directing the resources of the agency to those fields and to those problems which careful study and research have indicated are of prime importance. The program and direction of the agency should not be determined by individual complainants. In addition persons subject to the Act should be protected from the harassment of disgruntled and misguided individuals.

Also reliance on the complaints of individuals focuses attention on questions of employer and labor union guilt or innocence. The far more important issue is whether all persons are afforded equality of opportunity. The emphasis of the bill is properly on affirmative action. At the same time, ample opportunity is afforded for the correction of violations, however uncovered, through persuasion and conciliation, thus preserving a feature of State commission procedures which has proven effective.

It is recognized that under the provisions of this bill the Administrator has been granted considerable authority and discretion. This is essential and proper provided adequate review of his actions, orders and decisions is possible. With minor exceptions, the powers of the Administrator are adequately circumscribed by administrative and judicial review procedures. For instance if the Administrator issues any remedial or cease-and-desist order, the person against whom the order is issued has the right of appeal to the Equal Employment Opportunity Board. If the Administrator rejects an individual's complaint, finding no violation of the statute, the complainant may appeal to the Board. No order of the Administrator is enforceable unless it has been reviewed and affirmed by the Board. The Board hears each case de novo, and parties have the right to present evidence and to examine and cross-examine witnesses. The Board may affirm, modify or reverse orders of the Administrator.

The very nature of the Board as an agency independent of the Administrator, separating the prosecuting and judging functions, further ensures the adequacy of the review of the actions of the Administrator. This structure is consistent with the recommendations of the Hoover Commission and with the Administrative Procedures Act, and is properly extended to the sensitive area of equal employment opportunity.

Finally judicial review of the orders of the Board by a court of appeals serves as a final check on both the Administrator and the Board. Under these circumstances the grant of authority to the Administrator will not endanger the rights of persons subject to the Act.

However, there are three areas where the Committee might well want to enlarge the opportunity for appeals to the Board in order to give ample protection to the rights of all parties.

1. Since the Administrator may refuse to receive written complaints from an individual, the complainant should have the right to appeal his decision to the Board. The decision of the Administrator not to investigate a complaint should not be arbitrary, capricious or unreasonable.

2. Only persons "against whom an order is issued" may appeal to the Board (Sec. 6d). Either complainant or respondent should have the right of appeal if dissatisfied with the order of the Administrator. Perhaps the more desirable language "person aggrieved" should be used in this section as is used in section 9a governing the right to judicial review by the court of appeals.

3. Regulations issued by the Administrator should not become effective unless reviewed and approved by the Board.

Two additional suggested changes may be mentioned for consideration by the Committee. Section 16c of the Act refers to the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity. The Commission on Civil Rights has recommended the establishment of the President's Committee by statute. However if this bill were enacted and if the Administrator were authorized to act on behalf of the contracting agencies, there would be no need for the President's Committee and its current activities could then be terminated. The duplication of Federal agencies should not be encouraged.

Also the coverage of this bill, while comprehensive, including employment resulting from Federal contracts would not cover employment resulting from Federal grants. The distinctions between contracts and grants do not appear to warrant the differential treatment.

In conclusion, the solution of the economic and moral issues we face would be advanced by the enactment of S. 1937. The U.S. Commission on Civil Rights supports and recommends such action.

The Federationist
Labor August, 1963

EQUAL

by George Meany

Let me say at the outset that we are happy to present our views on civil rights legislation in an atmosphere of impending action. As I am sure you know, we have appeared many times, before many congressional committees, under far less promising circumstances.

In the course of preparing this testimony, I looked through our files for a sampling of the civil rights statements we have made over the years—not only the congressional testimony but convention resolutions and policy declarations by the AFL-CIO, and earlier, by the AFL and CIO as separate federations.

Those statements are remarkably consistent. They are not only consistent in what they propose; they are also consistent in their sense of urgency.

We have been insisting for a long time that establishing and maintaining full and equal rights for Negro Americans is a matter of "here and now." We have done this in the full knowledge that not all individual units of the trade union movement agree with the policies adopted, without apparent dissent, at trade union conventions.

This has contributed to our sense of urgency. The labor movement has not been the only advocate of civil rights legislation during the last decade; there have been the church groups and, of course, the Negro organizations themselves. But I think it is fair to say that we are the only one, among the civil rights forces, which has openly called for legislation for the correction of shortcomings in its own rank.

On this score our credentials cannot be challenged. It can be truly charged that some segments of the labor movement have ignored the established policies of the AFL, the CIO and the AFL-CIO. We have said so ourselves, before Congress and elsewhere. We have pleaded for legislative help to translate principle into practice. But until very recently, there has been very little disposition on the part of the Congress, or the country as a whole, to provide that help.

Obviously this is no longer the case. And I think all of us must acknowledge that the change has taken place because the Negroes are no longer willing to wait for the white majority, in its own good time, to do what is right. I do not offer a blanket endorsement of every Negro demonstration, every sit-in or every picketline. But it is beyond question that the organized militancy of the Negroes has forced their plight to the active attention of the nation.

Fortunately, there was a quick response. President Kennedy's firm and eloquent address on June 11 stirred the nation's conscience. It has inspired other men of goodwill to speak out. The overwhelming national consensus in support of equal rights is now becoming visible and is asserting itself at last.

We have been glad to note that the President has by no means let the matter rest. He has called to the White House the leaders of many groups, including businessmen, union officials, women, lawyers, Negro spokesmen and the clergy. He has brought together the congressional leaders of both parties. And he has submitted to Congress a program, part of which you are now considering.

As a result, the American people have begun to grasp the fact that civil rights is not a matter for abstract debate but an immediate crisis. This realization has come none too soon. For the proposals I am about to discuss are urgent, not because we say so, but because the course of history demands their enactment.

We are not offering a blueprint for the future—a program that can be mulled over and then set aside or one that can be delayed by endless debate over technicalities. The mulling over has been going on for two decades; indeed, in the broader sense it has been going on for more than a century. What we are discussing here today is a program for the here and now, for this year, for this session of Congress.

In the hope of simplifying the work of the committee, I will offer the AFL-CIO position within the context of the Administration bill, title by title. Where other legislative proposals are also involved, I will discuss them in connection with the corresponding section of the basic bill.

Title I—Voting Rights

This ought to be the least controversial issue before the committee and, therefore, I will deal with it briefly.

Surely there is no possible argument against the proposition that every American citizen, unless he is demonstrably an incompetent, has the right to vote. This has nothing to do with integration as such. It is simply a recognition of basic democratic principles, the principles that are the very foundation of our country.

A citizen who is denied the right to vote is not a citizen at all. And a nation which extends the franchise to some citizens but denies it to others, solely on artificial grounds such as race, is not truly democratic.

Yet this is what happens in many southern communities. The right to vote is denied to Negroes through the use of transparently fraudulent "qualifications" for those seeking to register. The 85th Congress recognized this fact and enacted legislation intended to meet it. Experience has shown that this legislation must be strengthened.

A major device now employed to bar Negroes from the polls is the so-called literacy test. There is not the slightest doubt that such tests have been the pretext under which highly-educated Negroes have been disqualified, while all whites—including the semi-literate—have been duly accepted. This is a matter of record, documented in the Civil Rights Commission report of 1961 and further elaborated in congressional hearings

GEORGE MEANY, President of the AFL-CIO, presented this testimony on pending civil rights bills before the House Judiciary Committee on July 17.

1957, when the advance of economic activities was slowing down, was a major cause of the 1958 recession. The sharp rise in unemployment and the drop in business profits in 1958 produced a record peacetime deficit of $13.1 billion in the government's cash operations in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1959. It would have been wiser to emphasize government efforts to achieve and maintain prosperity in 1957 than to try to produce a budget surplus.

The federal government's economic responsibility is to maintain prosperity—maximum use of manpower, plants and machines. The Employment Act of 1946 declares that "it is the continuing policy and responsibility of the federal government to use all practicable means . . . to promote maximum employment, production and purchasing power."

The most important way by which the government can "promote maximum employment, production and purchasing power" is through its tax and expenditure policies. The federal government adds to sales, production and employment when it puts more money into the economy's spending stream, through expenditures, than it takes out of the spending stream in the form of taxes. This process adds to economic activities—it lifts the demand for goods, services and manpower.

When the federal government takes more money out of the spending stream through taxes than it puts in through expenditures, it dampens down further increases in sales, production and employment. Such a policy has a braking effect on additional increases in economic activities.

The federal government should put more money into the economy's spending stream—to add to sales, production and employment—until the economy approaches full employment and maximum use of plants and machines. When the economy is operating in high gear and unemployment is at a minimum, the federal government should seek a balanced budget or budget surplus to prevent the creation of inflationary shortages.

The concentration of federal policy should be on the state of affairs in the national economy. With high levels of joblessness, the government should continue to place more money into the spending stream than it takes out until the economy approaches full employment and general prosperity.

How would such a policy affect the federal debt? Obviously, if the federal government cuts taxes by $10 billion in 1963 and increases its investment outlays in public works, the federal debt will rise in the next year or two. But sales, production and employment will also increase—family incomes and business profits will rise and the country, as a whole, will be more prosperous. The entire economy will be lifted and the federal government's tax revenues will also increase.

The main issue concerning the federal debt is: how big is the debt in relation to the nation's total production of goods and services. A very large debt—in relation to total national production—means that heavy interest payments will be needed. But America does not face this problem. The total amount of interest payments on the federal debt is less than 2 percent of the total production of goods and services and these interest payments on government bonds and securities are made to American families and businesses.

Most of the federal debt was built up during World War II—part of the price that was paid for the war effort. In 1946, after the end of World War II, the federal debt was 27 percent greater than total national production. Between 1946 and 1962 there was some increase in the debt, but there was a much greater rise in the gross national product. In 1962, the federal debt was down to little more than half of total national output. America was in a much stronger position to carry the federal debt in 1962 than it was in 1946.

Rising national production, with increasing sales and employment, lightened the burden of the federal debt in the postwar years. A growing, full employment economy can continue to maintain a light burden in the future. In 1963, America needs major emphasis on programs and policies to put idle men, plants and machines to work—which will also increase government tax revenues.

When full utilization of manpower and productive capacity is reached, there may be a reason for government investment outlays in public works to level off. But actions to hold down government investments or to reduce government outlays before full employment is attained will cut the chances of ever getting there.

America can afford increased government investment outlays to create jobs, boost sales and improve public services. The nation cannot afford the waste and increasing social danger of rising unemployment and inadequate public services for a growing population.

Rising government investments for improved public services are needed to boost the economy toward full employment and maximum use of the nation's increasing capacity to produce more goods and services more efficiently.

County hospital in Windsor, N. C., enriches the community; similar needs remain unmet across the nation.

RIGHTS here and now!

the following year.

We do not quarrel with the proposition that a voter should be literate. But tests should be reasonable and, above all, should be equally applied. We have long agreed with the standard which was earlier proposed by the President, that the completion of the sixth grade in school is in itself an adequate qualification.

In our view, a given period of formal schooling—and we believe sixth grade serves the purpose—should be decisive rather than presumptive proof of literacy. We are frankly dismayed that this year's Administration proposal, as well as Title IV of the Republican civil rights bill, H. R. 3139, retreats from that position. Both give only a presumption of literacy to those who have completed sixth grade, allowing for rebuttal evidence.

Such a compromise would destroy the purpose of the bill. Interminable challenges would delay indefinitely the registration of qualified Negroes. These challenges would have to be fought out one by one, voter by voter. Because the outcome would be determined by impartial federal courts, the battles might ultimately be won. But "ultimately" is the wrong way to meet an immediate need.

Throughout this testimony, in the hope of expediting congressional action, we have held to the barest minimum our criticisms of the Administration program. But the proposals relating to voting rights are so inadequate, and in some respects so contradictory, that we urge the committee to rewrite them.

Aside from voter qualifications, we commend to your favorable attention a provision in Title I of H. R. 3139. It directs the Bureau of the Census to compile nationwide registration and voting statistics, from January 1, 1960, to date, which would show what proportion of the potential voters in each state actually registered and went to the polls, according to race, color and national origin.

Presumably this information might be used to enforce Section 2 of the Fourteenth Amendment. That would be all to the good; we support Congressman Stratton's bill intended to achieve the same result. In addition, such a survey would elicit much valuable information on registration and voting patterns everywhere in America.

The President, in the bill before you, has outlined enforcement procedures for ensuring the right to vote which are superior to the long and involved remedies now available. We are glad he has recognized the need for prompt handling of complaints by the federal courts and court-appointed referees. We would have preferred authorization of federal registrars in areas where the abuses are flagrant—as we have repeatedly said. But for the time being, at least, we are willing to go along with the President's alternative. The question can be reexamined on the basis of results, just as the work of the 85th Congress is being reexamined now.

It should be noted, in that connection, that voting rights were once widely considered to be the one sure remedy for racial discrimination of every kind. It is now clear that this is not true. The evil of discrimination persists even where voting rights are unimpaired.

I make this point in order to emphasize that the proposals now before Congress, even if adopted in their entirety, are not necessarily final. The fight for truly equal rights must go on until it is finally and totally won.

Title II—Public Accommodations

In contrast to the previous title, this one is, of course, the most explosive. It generates the most heat on both sides. From a long-range point of view, it may not be the most important. But time has run out on long-run solutions, so it must be faced and faced boldly.

It has been charged that this section of the Administration bill would extend the control of the federal government to every store, restaurant, barber shop and beauty parlor in America. It is alleged that this would destroy the sacred American right of freedom of association and would deny to merchants their right to decide with whom they would do business.

There will undoubtedly be much oratory to this effect in the weeks ahead. Yet it seems to me that this is all irrelevant; and some of it is plain nonsense.

When a man goes into a business that invites and depends upon public patronage, he has already given up, voluntarily, a part of his freedom to do as he pleases. He has set up a public place and invited the public to spend money there. By so doing, in nearly all communities, he has also subjected himself to regulations as to fire hazards, other safety and health problems, workmen's compensation, weights and measures, opening and closing hours—a whole range of local, state and federal statutes, all based upon the established principle of protecting the public from dangerous or undesirable practices by those who operate public places.

The President now asks a federal law to make it clear that a public business must in fact be open to the public—all of the public. Surely this is no more an intrusion on the rights of a merchant than any of the other matters I have mentioned.

The merchant still has a full opportunity to protect himself. Certainly he has a right to expect his customers to be able to pay their bills. Certainly he has a right to insist upon orderly conduct and proper dress. He can impose whatever standards he chooses—as long as they are equally applied, without regard to race, creed or national origin. Does he want men to wear jackets and neckties? Does he want to rule out Bermuda shorts or bar women in slacks? Fine; that's up to him—as long as the rules are uniformly enforced on all customers, all members of the public.

Actually, experience in many states and municipalities, and in the facilities controlled by the federal government, has proved that the fears of merchants, and of the segregationist spokesmen, have no factual basis.

As recently as 1946 and 1947, in my own home area, New York City, a Negro could not be sure what sort of reception he would receive in a restaurant or at a lunch counter. He was not likely to be turned away, but there was a good chance that he would be ignored, or badly served, or otherwise made to realize that he was not welcome. And this was in the nation's most cosmopolitan city, known the world over for its diversity of population.

Within a few years all this was forgotten. Oh, I suppose there may be a few establishments in New York where Negro patrons are still regarded with hostility; you can find almost anything in a city of eight million people. But for more than a decade, Negroes have been accepted in eating places—as they had long been accepted in retail stores and other places of public accommodation—on exactly the same basis as whites.

And do you know what has happened detrimental to the interests of the restaurants and lunch counters? Nothing. Absolutely nothing. New York still has some of the finest restaurants in the world—and, I suppose, some of the worst. But they are no better and no worse than they were before.

I have deliberately offered this part of our case in practical terms, rather than as an appeal for fair play, because I am aware that many businessmen in southern states have a dollars-and-cents concern about a public accommodations law. Their whole livelihood may depend upon the prosperity of their establishments. No matter what their personal sentiments may be, they are afraid that Negro patronage will lead to economic disaster.

But we are completely convinced that a uniform federal law, uniformly obeyed, will not impose a burden upon any public establishment. Fears to the contrary have no basis in fact or experience.

Now let me refer briefly to the hardcore segregationists who argue that they simply do not want to do business with Negroes and who defend this position on the ground of "freedom of association" and "freedom of choice" as to those they will accept as customers. With them I have no sympathy.

The Negro ought to be, and in fact is, as much a part of the "public" as anyone else. I repeat, a man who sets up a place of public accommodation has, by that action, voluntarily surrendered one segment of his right of "freedom of association." During business hours, within the framework of whatever uniform and equally-applied rules he may devise, he must "associate" with whatever members of the public choose to patronize his establishment. If he cannot accept this requirement he should stop pretending to run a public place and go into some other occupation.

A man who does not want to "associate" with certain parts of the public should not cater to the public. Subject to reasonable, uniform standards, he has to take the public as it comes. If he discriminates on the basis of race alone, he is in conflict with the public policy of the United States. He has a simple choice—to comply with that policy or go out of business.

In presenting this point on a pragmatic basis, I do not in any way intend to brush aside its moral and human aspects. The rebuffs suffered by Negroes in places of public accommodation have been highlighted in most of the demonstrations in southern cities. For it is true that while a man may be poor, while he may have been denied a fair chance to get an education, while he may live in a shack or a tenement, the open, public and unashamed insult of denial of service—service that is available to others, regardless of their character, as long as they are white—is the last straw.

Here the Negro is told to his face that he is not like other men—no matter what he may be in himself. This is an incredible and intolerable state of affairs in any civilized society and it cannot be allowed to continue.

We urge you to erase this blot from our record as a nation by adopting the Administration's proposals.

Title III—Public Education

Nine years ago the Supreme Court recognized that segregation, in itself, is a barrier to equal education. The AFL-CIO wholeheartedly agrees. Yet segregation in education is still an ugly fact.

The effects are exactly what the court had in mind. For as we move into the area of equal employment opportunity—which I will discuss later—we find innumerable employers who say something like this:

"I don't discriminate, but there are no qualified Negroes available."

At a later time, under the discussion on Title VII, I will discuss those instances in which this is a mere pretext. But it is not always a pretext. Sometimes it is the plain truth.

The most important single reason why it is sometimes true is that Negroes, as a whole, simply do not have equal educational opportunities.

They do not have equal educational opportunities in many parts of the country—north as well as south—because they are consigned to segregated schools.

A few weeks ago, the exercise of federal power made it possible for newsmen to report that there were integrated schools, of some sort and at some level, in every state in the union. We were not impressed.

Yes, this represented progress of a sort. But it was the kind of progress that the Negro community, a tenth of the nation, properly scorns.

The statistics are familiar and have been adequately presented by other witnesses. I will only say that you know, Mr. Chairman, that the public schools in the south have not been desegregated in fact; and that a large measure of segregation, intentional or not, still prevails in the north.

This is indefensible. It flouts the findings of the highest court in the land. It must be corrected by federal legislation.

The President has proposed such legislation. Authorizing the Attorney-General to institute civil action on behalf of the victims of school segregation is an obvious need. Such suits are beyond the financial means of most private individuals. And there are places in this country, shameful though it is, where a Negro could file such a suit only in the face of inevitable economic reprisals and at the real peril of his life.

In this spirit, we have reservations about the requirement that written complaints must be the basis for action by the Attorney-General. It would be more desirable, it seems to us, to empower the Attorney-General to act on his own discretion when the circumstances warrant it. We object even more vigorously to the parallel provisions of H.R. 3139, which would stay the hand of the Attorney-General—and the courts—if a state or school district were making an elaborate pretense of desegregation.

The provisions for technical assistance to desegregating school districts are not new, but their reiteration is welcome. In that connection, I call to your attention, with some pride, a resolution adopted by the AFL Executive Council on May 18, 1954—the day after the Supreme Court's historic decision.

The resolution said, in part:

"The implementation of this decision will involve not only broad social adjustments but a tremendous physical expansion of inadequate school facilities in many states . . . .

"We strongly urge the Administration and Congress to establish a billion-dollar fund for loans and grants to the states in urgent need of help to modernize and democratize their school systems.

"This would be the wisest investment our government could make in the future of our country. It would be an act of good faith on the part of the federal government in the implementation of the Supreme Court's decision and the democratic way of life.

"Finally, it would prevent non-compliance with the Supreme Court's decision by any state which might otherwise plead poverty to excuse its failure to provide the necessary facilities for the integration of its public school system."

Now, nine years later, let us hope that a system of rewards for school systems that are willing to desegregate will, in combination with the Attorney-General's new powers, be adequate to meet the need. Certainly this approach is worth a trial; and the results will be a matter of record after two years, when the Commissioner of Education delivers the report called for in the bill.

Moreover, as we read Title VI, federal aid can be withheld from recalcitrant school districts under other educational measures, even though these laws do not in themselves make integration a requirement.

Another point is implicit here, as in many sections of this testimony.

When we talk about equal opportunity in education, what we mean is an equal opportunity to get a good education. This is not achieved by adding five Negroes, say, to an existing class of 40 whites.

Equal educational opportunities demand adequate educational facilities, regardless of race. Our country needs more and better schools, more and better teachers, more and better thinking about the nature of public education in America. I know this is not within the jurisdiction of your committee, Mr. Chairman, but I hope it will be part of your thinking as you weigh the issue before you.

The same applies to the problem of housing, which is inseparable from that of education.

Segregated housing is one of the most fundamental causes of racial strife. It is the basis for de facto school segregation in the north. It is a source of explosive discontent—and I am understating the matter—in every metropolitan center.

It is certainly not my contention that all Negroes live in slums. There are comfortable, attractive Negro residential areas in almost every major city—well-kept homes, showing every evidence of the pride and care of their owners.

But much of the time, the desirable suburbs are closed off. The Negro is limited to certain, too-narrow neighborhoods, where there simply is not enough good housing or room enough to build it. This is certainly the dilemma that faces the Negro in Washington.

He may have a doctor's degree from Harvard, he may earn $15,000 or $25,000 a year, but he cannot buy a suitable home in Maryland or Virginia. His other qualifications do not matter; all that matters is the color of his skin.

A few moments ago I spoke about segregation in education. Let's face it; the only practical way to get rid of segregated schools is to get rid of segregated neighborhoods. And we can do that when every American can buy any house he wants and can afford. This is the ultimate solution—not to transplant the students, but their parents.

President Kennedy's executive order on housing may have great effect in the future. But because it does not apply to FHA and other loan commitments previously made, it does not help the Negro who is house-hunting right now for a house that is already built.

One reason why it doesn't help is that housing is still in short supply. As in the field of education, to ensure equal access to housing there must be enough housing. And we do not have enough housing, especially for those in the middle and lower-income brackets.

Here again, I am aware that housing in itself is not the direct concern of this committee. But since you are all members of the Congress you are well aware that no single problem can be considered out of the context of the nation's needs.

Even the admirable housing bill enacted by the previous Congress did not cope with the dilemma faced by those who are a little too well off for public housing, but not quite properous enough to afford adequate private housing. At some early date the Congress will have to grapple with this matter.

Titles IV and V—Community Relations Service, Civil Rights Commission

These sections of the Adminsistration bill establish explicit mediation, conciliation and investigatory agencies dealing with civil rights problems. Since mediation—a meeting of the minds—is fundamental to a successful attack on discrimination, and since facts are often elusive, we believe both agencies would be most valuable in assuring compliance with the other titles of the bill.

The 1961 AFL-CIO convention, as a matter of fact, instructed member organizations to originate or join with interracial committees in their own areas. Following the recent meeting of union officers with the President—which I regret to say I was unable to attend because I was in Europe at the time—I wrote to all the state and local central bodies of the AFL-CIO, urging them to implement this policy and to report their actions to me.

We are wholly in favor of federal efforts to encourage interracial dialogue, which Title IV contemplates.

As for the Civil Rights Commission, it has surely earned, by its thorough and diligent work, the right to permanent status. As I said earlier, civil rights is not a temporary problem, subject to a one-shot solution.

Title VI—Federally-assisted Programs

In the words of a distinguished southern spokesman, a member of the other house—a man whose ability I admire, but whose views on this issue I deeply deplore —this is the "genocide law."

He says, in effect, that if federal funds are denied to states which insist upon discrimination and segregation, the states will use what money they have for the benefit of the white population only, leaving the Negroes to shift for themselves.

Or, to put it another way, he implies that the only reason there are any facilities for Negroes in the south is that federal money pays for them.

I do not believe it; and, I am certain, neither does he.

By our principles in the labor movement, many white southerners—including many union members—may be wrong-headed on the race issue. But they are not monsters and they are not fools, either.

In some respects this short section of the Administration bill may be the most effective. It hits where it hurts—in the pocketbook. It makes discrimination an expensive luxury.

There is nothing unfair about this. Those who take the federal government's money are simply required to obey the federal law.

It so happens that the section of the country where segregation and discrimination are most prevalent—the southeastern states—is a section which, year in and year out, is heavily subsidized by the rest of the country.

Let me make it clear that we do not take sectional sides in the labor movement. We know—since the figures are a matter of record—that for the last 30 years, at least, the federal government has spent billions of dollars more in the south than it has taken out in taxes. We know that in many ways, the south has used this subsidy to good advantage. Southern enterprise has been stimulated; the southern standard of living and level of education have come a little closer to the rest of the country.

But it makes no sense for the rest of the country to prop up a few states that cling to discredited, disgraceful and undemocratic practices. It is unfortunate enough that some southern institutions seem to be dedicated to the eternal glorification of a rebellion against the United States; we do not have to pay their bills as well.

In short, we believe this title is just and necessary and it has our unqualified support.

Title VII—Equal Employment Opportunity

The Administration bill is limited to the creation of a commission which would undertake the duties now being performed by the body established by executive order of the President. We have no objection to this but, of course, it is only a beginning.

In his message, the President repeated his endorsement of equal opportunity legislation already pending in Congress. Presumably he referred to H.R. 405, recently approved by the Committee on Education and Labor.

There is, however, an equal employment opportunity section in H.R. 3139 as well. So I hope it will be in order for me to discuss the employment question in the broadest sense. As the spokesman for organized labor, I could hardly do otherwise.

The various aspects of civil rights I have covered up to this point affect the labor movement only to the extent that they affect other Americans.

Moreover, aside from voting rights, these other aspects—important as they are—apply for the most part to Negroes who have good jobs or a reasonable prospect of getting them.

Equal education, for example, has meaning only for those Negro children whose parents can afford to keep them in school or for the young Negroes who can afford to finish out their apprenticeships.

Equal access to housing has meaning only for those who can afford to buy.

Equality in places of public accommodation is relevant only for those with money to spend.

So it seems to us in the AFL-CIO that the vital issue, the chief among equals, if you will, is jobs.

I referred earlier to a hypothetical example of an employer who would hire Negroes if he could find qualified applicants.

But that is only one side of the coin. On the other side you find the trained, qualified Negroes who cannot find a place for their talents. You find the untrained but naturally gifted Negroes who are denied a fair chance to develop their aptitudes. And you find the Negroes who, on the basis of their own observation and experience, simply don't try.

Here again, I will leave the statistics to others. We have recited them often enough. A Negro unemployment rate at least twice that of whites; a pattern of Negro employment concentrated in the lowest-paid and most menial jobs—the figures tell their own story.

It would be easy for me to point the finger at southern industry, where genuinely integrated production forces are almost unknown and let it go at that. It would be easy to say that the problems in northern cities stem to a considerable degree from the emigration of southern Negroes who face a hopeless future in their home areas. All this is true, but it is not the whole truth and the issue is too grave for hair-splitting.

The plain fact is, Mr. Chairman, that Negro workers as a whole, north or south, do not enjoy anything approaching equal employment opportunity.

We ask you now, as we have asked the Congress for many years, for effective, enforceable legislation to correct this glaring injustice, which must be corrected in order to make the other aspects of a civil rights program effective.

We have a selfish reason; in fact, we have two of them.

First, we need the statutory support of the federal government to carry out the unanimously-adopted principles of the AFL-CIO.

Our conventions have repeatedly endorsed a Federal Fair Employment Practices Commission, armed with all necessary powers. Long before merger, the AFL and CIO separately pressed for such legislation. The most recent AFL-CIO convention, in December 1961, while strengthening our own internal civil rights machinery, pleaded again for federal help—help that would apply to the labor movement as well as to employers.

In other words, we need the force of law to carry out our own principles.

Why is this so? Primarily because the labor movement is not what its enemies say it is—a monolithic, dictatorial, centralized body that imposes its will on the helpless dues payers. We operate in a democratic way and we cannot dictate even in a good cause.

So in effect, we need a federal law to help us do what we want to do—mop up those areas of discrimination which still persist in our own ranks.

Second, we want federal legislation because we are tired of being the whipping-boy in this area.

We have never at any time tried to gloss over the shortcomings of unions on the subject of equal opportunity. Yes, some of our members take a wrong-headed view; I have just said so, I have said so before and I repeat it again.

But we in the labor movement publicly deplore these few holdouts against justice. We do our utmost to bring them around to the right side. And at the same time, the employers—who actually do the hiring—escape in many instances with no criticism whatever.

If there has been any widespread outcry from employers who want to hire Negroes, but have been prevented from doing so by a union, it has not reached my ears.

On the other hand, there have been innumerable instances in which a fair employment and promotion policy has been established in a company at the insistence of the union, over the employer's languished protests.

When it comes to legislation, it has been the labor movement that has asked for equal employment opportunity laws, applicable to unions as well as to management while it has been the employers and their associations which, at every level—local, state and federal—have been in bitter opposition.

Yet if you base your opinions on newspaper accounts, you would think that the barriers to Negroes, especially in the crafts, were union barriers, pure and simple.

This is untrue and unfair.

Consequently we take exception to the manner in which Title II of H.R. 3139 proposed to deal with cases of discrimination. The guilty employer simply loses his government contracts. But the guilty union is subject to a whole range of continuing sanctions, including court action and National Labor Relations Board proceedings.

For example, a union that discriminates can be forced to give back pay to the victims. Not so the employer. A union that discriminates anywhere can be denied certification throughout the country—in other words, obliterated. It is not hard to imagine a southern employer, or even a northern one, cooking up a discrimination case as a device for getting rid of a union.

We do not object to strong, effective enforcement powers applied to unions. We do object to a slap-on-the-wrist approach to employers, who are in most cases responsible for job discrimination in the first place.

Moreover, H.R. 3139 merely clothes with statutory power the present jurisdiction of the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity—that is, it would apply only to employers having government contracts or subcontracts. This is true of the Administration bill as well. However, the President's message endorsed, in addition, the broader coverage of H.R. 405. This is clearly preferable and we urge its adoption.

I have spoken about the labor movement's selfish interest in this question. But aside from that, we support enforceable equal opportunity in employment because it is morally right.

Surely every American is entitled to be judged on his own, on the basis of his ability. He ought to have the same rights on the assembly line, in apprenticeship training or anywhere else that he now enjoys on the ball field. We lost the best of Satchel Paige to ghetto baseball; we [illegible] every Willie Mays we can find.

However, [illegible] I have said from time to time in other sections of t[illegible] testimony, equal opportunity is meaningless withou[illegible] full opportunity. We agree that it must be written int[illegible] law. But as I have repeatedly pointed out, the one greatest contribution that could be made toward equal employment opportunities for Negroes would be full employment opportunities for everyone.

A program designed to open up jobs for Negroes at the expe[illegible] of whites is no program at all. What we need is jobs [illegible] all who want and need them.

This is not [illegible] theoretical problem. For instance, one of the unions that has worked most vigorously and most successfully for job integration, all along the line, is the United Auto Workers. Yet in some of the auto plants, successfully integrated 20 years ago, the proportion of Negroes is steadily declining with the drop in employment. Twenty years' seniority is no longer enough to ensure a job in Detroit.

Confronted with this problem—and I am not minimizing it—some Negro spokesmen call for "super-seniority" and superior hiring preference for Negroes.

They say that except for discrimination in the past, Negroes would now have a fair share of the seniority enjoyed by white workers. That is true. But then they say that, as a form of penance, senior white workers should be dismissed to make room for Negroes with less service. And they say that hiring opportunities should not be equal; they should be loaded in such a way as to give Negroes precedence.

Believe me, Mr. Chairman, I understand the feelings that lead to these demands. They stem from a century of frustration. But as a trade unionist, I cannot accept them.

First of all, super-seniority would throw into the street white workers who were in no way responsible for the previous discrimination against Negroes. They would be deprived of their personal livelihood because of a community sin. It is possible, of course, that the axe might fall on a leader of the Ku Klux Klan. It is equally possible that the victim might be the long-abused chairman of the local union's civil rights committee.

It seems to me that our common goal is justice, not vengeance. This is especially true when vengeance would be exacted from those whose only guilt was the color of their skin. We are against that sort of thing for Negroes; we are against it for whites as well.

Second, the demand for special treatment for Negroes, at any level, misses the point. There is not much future in a program for sharing misery. Yes, Negroes have been held back, unfairly and unreasonably; to the extent that unions have been responsible, we accept our share of the blame. But the road ahead must be broad enough for all, not a bottleneck through which we squeeze people of one kind or another, leaving some of every kind looking in from the outside.

In short, the only real remedy is jobs for all.

Third, the safeguards built up by the trade union movement over the years—seniority included—are important to workers of all races. And all workers, of all races, will suffer if they are destroyed. If you destroy seniority in the hope of correcting racial injustice, you destroy it entirely. Those who might reap quick benefits could also be the first losers. Once hired what rights would they have to stay on the job? How and where would they plead if they were fired?

I repeat, I understand both the bitterness and the impatience of Negroes. But in this respect they are not thinking clearly.

In employment, as in all the rest, equal means enough; equal without enough means nothing at all.

These, then, are the elements we believe should be—and must be—incorporated into the law of the land.

Most of them are covered, as I have noted, by the Administration bill.

But as the President also has said, the hour is too late for half measures. The battle for true equality for all Americans has now been joined; let us fight it out all the way.

It would help to clear the air, I think, if all of us recognized that equality can no longer be doled out in small portions. And it would help if the Negro minority realized that the final victory is at hand and can be won—not in the distant future, but now—through the orderly processes of legislation and litigation as prescribed by the Constitution of the United States.

This would be a healthy thing all around and I hope it will come to pass.

Let us therefore move forward, Mr. Chairman, here in this committee, whose heritage is so distinguished; let us move forward in the House and in the Senate; let us demonstrate that a government of law can work; that the Constitution means what it says and that it applies equally to every American.

We in the labor movement hope, with the deepest sincerity, that this will be a truly bipartisan effort. Many times in the past, when the nation has been plunged into crisis the Congress has risen above narrow considerations of political advantage and has provided the wisdom and the statesmanship the occasion demanded.

This is just such a time. While, for purposes of clarity, I have referred to the Administration bill and to the Republican bill, the legislation that finally emerges from your deliberations should be the country's bill. Nothing less will fully serve the national interest.

Current
Aug. 1963

THE FUTURE OF LABOR UNIONS

Whether the trade union movement can maintain its usefulness under the conditions of a changing economy is a question that worries sympathetic observers.

THE THREAT OF OBSOLESCENCE

Mr. Raskin is a member of The New York Times editorial board and its former national labor correspondent, and a contributor to Commentary.

A. H. Raskin

"American unionism, thirty years after the New Deal, is in the grip of two contradictory developments. One of these is a new surge of social and economic inventiveness in adapting collective bargaining to the dizzying requirements of rapid technological change. The other is a conjunction of challenges so inimical in their total effect to the traditional structure of our unions, that they presage nothing less than the eventual disappearance of unions as we know them. The historians of American institutions may record this as a period in which the labor movement was innovating itself into the grave.

"On the face of it, labor has never seemed stronger—nor more likely to stay strong. Total membership, to take the most obvious measure, is as high as it has ever been, maintaining a level of slightly over 18 million in most of the period since World War II. True, membership is not growing; and the increase in the number of civilian workers—now exceeding 70 million—has reduced the unions' percentage of the total labor force. Nevertheless, inroads into union strength made by technological innovation in such fields as mining and manufacturing have thus far been counterbalanced by sufficient expansion in other fields to keep the numerical level from going down.

"The reserves in employe pension and welfare funds are increasing by $5 billion a year, and unions are still showing a high degree of ingenuity in broadening the range of fringe benefits. Thirty thousand workers in the two biggest can companies, for example, are now assured of three months of paid vacation every five years, in addition to their regular annual rest periods. Short-week benefits in auto and steel have put a more dependable floor under weekly earnings. Supplemental unemployment payments have helped bolster yearly earnings. The unions' own treasuries and strike funds are at record levels—a prosperity attested to by the glittering new headquarters that internationals and their locals are putting up in Washington, New York, and every other large city.

"Then, too, there is the notable development of joint labor-management committees meeting all year round to look for solutions to the complicated manpower problems created by all the new technological advances. Such committees now function in industries—steel, automobiles, rubber, electrical manufacturing, meat-packing, construction, coal, and others—where once the idea of cooperative decision-making would have been anathema.

"It is still too early to judge the effectiveness of this kind of experimentation, but certain useful devices have already been hit on for giving workers a stake in increased productivity and thus encouraging them to welcome change, instead of fighting it. The progress-sharing formula developed by the Kaiser Steel Corporation and the United Steelworkers of America is one such device. Through it the union's members at the Kaiser mill in Fontana, California, get a monthly bonus equal to roughly one-third of all the savings in production costs that accrue to the company from automation, economies in materials and supplies, higher individual productivity, or any other factor. The workers also are guaranteed that no one at Fontana will lose his job as a result of the introduction of more efficient machinery; any shrinkage in total manpower needs will be handled through normal attrition—retirements, deaths, and voluntary quittings.

"Finally, to round off the picture of labor's apparent vigor, there is its firmly established cachet. Three times within the last few months, President Kennedy has invited twenty or thirty top unionists to the White House for lunch. Few state dinners are given without several labor leaders and their wives mingling with the ambassadors, Cabinet officers, and other dignitaries. Arthur J. Goldberg, only two-and-a-half years ago special counsel to the AFL-CIO, has already moved from Secretary of Labor to Associate Justice of the Supreme Court. Labor is represented on almost every advisory or administrative body created by the President—whether to evaluate foreign aid, to foster culture, or to operate communications satellites in space. Labor-endorsed candidates hold positions of prominence in Congress, in state capitols, and in city halls across the country.

"For all this, however, labor organization in the United States—at least in its present form—is being hurled inexorably into obsolescence. The nature of work is changing; the frustrations of work are changing; the need for work is changing. Out of these changes comes the ironic likelihood that in a period when unions are turning most of their attention to easing the impact of automation on their members, the labor movement itself may become technology's most spectacular victim. For, despite all its accomplishments and its very solid acceptance as a fact of American life, the present situation, not only of the work force but of foreign and domestic trade and of public attitudes toward strikes and wage policies, is one in which all roads seem to lead downhill for unionism. Whether labor pursues policies that can be called 'responsible,' or ones that are 'irresponsible,' the outlook is pretty much the same: a withering of union strength and influence. The process will be neither swift nor dramatic, but unless the labor movement can arrive at a drastic reassessment of its function, it appears inevitable.

The causes of decline

"The first and simplest problem facing the unions is the erosion of membership resulting from automation and other technological advances in their traditional strongholds—factories, coal mines, and railroads. . . . And though the unions have begun to tap such new sources of membership as civil service employes, teachers, and retail clerks, there is little sign that over the long haul these sources will provide a sufficiently large new influx to balance the loss of manual workers. To make the outlook gloomier, some reasonably informed people are now predicting that in twenty years' time only a handful of workers will be needed to produce all the nation's goods.

"Another significant factor in the diminution of union strength is the decline of the strike as an effective bargaining tool. Such a statement may appear ludicrous in a year that has already witnessed a five-week tie-up of all Atlantic and Gulf ports, a sixteen-week shutdown of the New York newspapers, an even longer press blackout in Cleveland, two Taft-Hartley national emergency injunctions in the aerospace industry, and the still unremoved threat of a nationwide rail stoppage over the size of train crews. But the fact remains that automation is making certain industries totally invulnerable to strikes; certain others have so much surplus capacity that strikes, far from threatening damage, provide a handy opportunity for management to unload burdensome inventories; and still other industries perform services of such crucial public importance that even the White House has felt called upon to characterize strikes against them as 'unacceptable exercises of an undeniable right.'. . .

"For those workers who still tend to regard their unions as a kind of slot machine—into which they deposit their dues and then duly extract regular wage increases—the rewards of membership are not nearly so substantial as they were in the immediate postwar period when wages and prices were spiraling throughout the economy. A serious damper has now been put on wage gains by the combined effects of unemployment, public concern about inflation, and the squeeze on many industries themselves from increased overseas and domestic competition.

"Even before the White House officially established the policy of gearing higher wage and fringe benefits to the basic annual rise of roughly 3 per cent in national productivity, such a standard had officially come to be used in many sectors of the economy as a guide to non-inflationary increases. The initial push came from the General Motors-United Auto Workers contract in 1948, which had been designed to put more science into wage determination. The contract contained two new features—both by now basic elements in all G.M. contracts. One was an annual improvement provision, under which the workers would get an increase based on the over-all expansion in national productivity. The other was a cost-of-living escalator, intended to keep higher prices from swallowing up any of the improvement.

Will computers replace bargainers?

"Neither the G.M. formula nor the Kennedy guidelines that descend from it operate with slide-rule exactness. Yet both substitute a mechanized measurement for the customary interplay of economics, personality, and muscle in collective bargaining. To the extent that these mechanistic standards become institutionalized in the bargaining process, they take most of the excitement and all of the surprise out of it. Inevitably, their long-term application will make the outcome of bargaining so predictable that workers are bound to ask why they need a bargaining committee at all—why a computer could not represent them just as satisfactorily.

"This may become even more true if the kind of progress-sharing plan that has just been developed at Kaiser should be widely accepted. . . . Indeed, the authors of the Kaiser formula acknowledge that it would not work at all if there were no electronic brains to carry out the myriad computations swiftly enough to permit a monthly payoff.

"Actually, however, much of the bargaining process these days is centered on measures to enhance job security, not on how much more money is to go into pay envelopes. It is coming to be understood that the quest for better methods to protect workers from the adverse effects of automation requires more time and far more evenness of mind and temper than negotiators can give it under the club of a strike deadline. That is why it is being ever more widely proposed that unions and employers should designate joint committees to meet at frequent intervals and discuss mutual problems. . . .

"In general, automation presents the kind of problems to the unions that puts them as members of joint committees into an almost impossible position. For either they share in presiding over the outright dismissal of workers, or, if the displacement rate is low enough, their role is to protect the individual worker while the total reservoir of jobs dries up. In either case, the union leader willy-nilly becomes a partner in the liquidation of his own empire. . . .

"So long as the national unemployment rate stays above 5½ per cent, as it has now for more than five years, union members will continue to view every forced curtailment with dread and to bear a grudge against every union leader who agrees to a shakeout plan."

Unions have become "adamant about demanding guarantees that any manpower savings brought about by technological innovation will be effected through normal attrition and not mandatory layoffs. The steel union would not even begin to discuss the progress-sharing formula with Kaiser until it had received such an assurance from the company. . . .

"But arrangements of this kind, consoling as they are for workers already on the job, offer nothing to the huge wave of youngsters now attempting to enter the job market. The man with a job is protected, even if he must be transferred to another job. The youth without a job finds the 'keep out' sign more firmly in place than ever. The young are coming out of school to seek work at a rate that makes it necessary for us to create 25,000 new jobs every week for the next ten years, without any allowance for the jobs being wiped out by technological change or for those needed to sop up the 4 million already idle.

"These young workers have no memories of the depression, of the sit-down strikes or of company goons and yellow-dog contracts. Their image of unions was formed largely by three years of televised testimony before the McClellan Committee on the seamier side of labor-management relations. To this image is now being added a conviction that union seniority systems and attrition programs for dealing with automation are conspiratorial devices foisted on industry by labor organizations, whose sole concern is to guard the vested rights of their own dues-payers.

"There is an equally intense hostility to the unions among many Negroes and other victims of racial or religious discrimination—among those Negroes, for instance, who have never been able to break into either the building or printing trades. Now their demands for equal treatment have not only the encrusted prejudices of fifty years or more to overcome, but the additional resistance of many craft unionists that results from the growing obsolescence of their own particular manual skills.

MORE JOBS THROUGH MORE POLITICS

"All of the above problems—the demise of the strike; increased mechanization of bargaining; increased bureaucratization of the work process itself; automation and unemployment—will require for even their proximate solution a degree of political commitment American labor has never shown. They demand that politics become a principal business of unions, not a haphazard adjunct of their narrowly economic purposes. This is a difficult, perhaps impossible readjustment for a movement that has always prided itself on its abhorrence of ideology. Even in Great Britain, where class lines are more sharply drawn and where the Labor Party has an excellent chance of recapturing power in the next election, the unions are not really the party's dominant element in policy or purpose.

"American unions, which will be more and more compelled to move away from their blue-collar identification if they are to appeal successfully to industry's newcomers, are already conscious of the need for more direct involvement in community affairs; they know they must do more in education, health, recreation, and philanthropy. But they lack conviction and direction. Their programs for securing the public weal are as lackluster, and offered as perfunctorily, as those that the Administration keeps shoveling into the Congressional hoppers: looking forward to all the right things, but with no real expectation that anyone will pay attention. Labor's stock refrain is that it is for everything the President wants in order to stimulate the economy, only that the President's bills do not go far enough.

"When union leaders come to the White House, they are docile guests. I asked one labor participant in a recent presidential luncheon whether any of the unionists had told Mr. Kennedy he was not doing enough about the unemployed. 'Oh, we didn't have to tell him,' was the bland reply. 'He told us. He said the real problem in America was not balancing the fiscal budget but balancing the human budget.' And with that problem tidily wrapped up, everybody went on a personally guided tour of the White House upstairs. They all left confirmed in their opinion that the United States had a great President. . . .

"The democratic countries of Western Europe are a generation ahead of us in government policies for promoting full employment, influencing plant location, and assisting workers in their search for new jobs. Yet even their policies are inadequate for meeting the challenges of our technological revolution.

Support for federal planning

"Clearly, the United States will never move into an era of abundance without a great deal more planning for the effective use of our manpower and material resources. Equally clearly, the disposition in Congress is to fight anything that smacks of planning. Labor's big task, for its own survival and the country's good, is to mobilize grass-roots political sentiment in favor of greater federal responsibility for full production, full distribution, and full employment.

"If workers are to give ungrudging acceptance to the idea that the total welfare requires maximum mechanization, they will want assurance that the country knows what to do with the fruits of this increased efficiency. Such assurance demands an economic general staff representing all elements in the population and administering a program aimed at the balanced and sustained development of high levels of public and private activity. The chances for eradicating poverty and joblessness would be vastly better with such a program than they can possibly be if we continue to rely on the notion that tens of thousands of corporation and individual decisions, each predicated on what is good for the business, will automatically add up to full protection for the national economy.

"Labor has no more urgent job in the Sixties than the focusing of its political energies on the conquest of want, illiteracy, intolerance; the building up of both health and decent housing; the realization of the limitless promise of this scientific Golden Age. And apart from their general social necessity, these undertakings would be vastly more inspiriting, to union membership and leadership alike, than the present ever more routine function in the policing of day-to-day plant grievance and the writing of mechanized contracts.

"Labor thus far has only one basic answer for joblessness, a shorter work week—and this at a time when two-fifths of our own people are classed as living below minimum standards of decency, and want is endemic in most parts of the world. This is a policy of despair. Until we at least make a stab at abundance, we should not settle for a policy of sharing the misery. What is needed from labor is a degree of independent leadership that will give vitality to the concept of direct political action for jobs and an expanding economy." ("The Obsolescent Unions," Commentary, July 1963)

THE LIMITS OF COLLECTIVE BARGAINING

Mr. Jacobs is a former union organizer, now a staff member of the Institute of Industrial Relations at the University of California at Berkeley, and author of Dead Horse and the Featherbird (see Current, October 1962, page 55).

Paul Jacobs

All symptoms point to two fundamental alterations in the system of collective bargaining which has operated successfully since the passage of the Wagner Act in 1935. First, it has proved less and less adequate for the solution of some basic problems now faced by unions and management; and second, an increasing number of workers are, and seem likely to remain, outside the system.

The increasing rate of technological unemployment is a leading example of the inability of union-management collective bargaining to handle a problem, or at least to handle it alone. The government must not merely intervene to settle strikes (the New York newspaper strike, the airline flight engineers strike). It must assume a share, and perhaps a major share, of the cost of retraining displaced workers, for no one can expect either management or the workers themselves to absorb all the costs of moving and retraining.

The permanent Cold War has also imposed new limits on union-management collective bargaining in the growing number of military and aero-space industries: some form of government intervention occurs the moment a serious dispute flares up.

"Fundamental changes in the nature of the work force and in the attitude of workers toward unions have received more recognition outside the unions than inside them, despite their weakening effect on unions and consequently on collective bargaining. . . .

"In retrospect, it is possible to see why the social energy that made unions so attractive in the late Thirties has now disappeared, to the detriment of the bargaining system. World War II and the Cold War converted unions from a militant stance to unquestioning acceptance of the status quo." The reasons for expelling Communist-controlled unions from the CIO were good ones, but an inevitable consequence was to bring all serious political debate inside the CIO to a standstill. The favored position of the unions with liberals and social welfare groups has been lost, partly because of the unions' lack of social vision and their failure to adapt to new circumstances, partly because of their past economic success and a lag in public understanding of the role that unions play in a technological society. Now that the unions' long fight for the right to exist has been won and their fight to establish justice for workers on the job is over for the most part, they have become an integral part of the system of authority needed to operate an industrial plant. But they have found nothing to take the place of their former moral fervor.

"Until recently the right to strike has always been considered an essential part of collective bargaining. Now, public sanction of stoppages is being withdrawn, and the concept of compulsory arbitration seems to be growing as the popular cure-all. . . . [Yet] all the experience in this country indicates that compulsory arbitration succeeds only when the parties to the dispute would be disposed to agree without it. . . . [It] does not resolve disputes; it merely seeks to impose a truce upon the combatants. But either the need for such truces must be understood and accepted, or the state must have the police power to enforce them. A society that forces men to work by use of the police power cannot be called free.

"No sharper illustration of the gaps in public knowledge about unions can be found than in the fondness presently being expressed for compulsory arbitration. If new methods must be developed for maintaining industrial justice, a widening of public knowledge about unions and their functions is essential. . . .

"Some of the most extreme public misconceptions about collective bargaining grow from the natural tendency to think about THE union, as if the 186 international unions and 78,000 locals in the AFL-CIO made up some kind of homogeneous entity." In fact, in all the millions of places where men and women work, the enormous range of occupations, technologies, physical layouts, kinds of people and ways in which their work brings them together or keeps them apart help determine the character of the union, its internal government and its relationship to management. One thing that is common to all unions, however, is the all-importance of its contract with the employer, which involves the preservation—and, when possible, the expansion—of the union's jurisdictional sovereignty.

"Over the years, the necessity to preserve [the contract] has not merely converted radical union leaders into supporters of the Establishment, or simply provided unions and management with mutually satisfactory economic relationships; it has come to take on a life of its own, an existence separate from the parties to it and not dependent upon them. The contract has become an institution itself. It has given rise to a system of informal governance at the plant level under which the rights that the contract originally established have been transmuted in the minds of the workers into natural rights. . . .

Group versus individual rights

"[However,] unions bring rights to the group, not to the person. As a result, union government, from the shop level on up, is forced to reconcile the varying demands and needs of union members vis-à-vis each other as well as group needs vis-à-vis the employer." Many clashes of interest develop. "Day workers quarrel with night workers over what bonus will be paid for the midnight to 8 a.m. shift; skilled workers dispute with semi-skilled men over how much of a differential there shall be between their wages; younger workers argue with older ones about seniority systems."

Sometimes, too, an individual worker acts in a way that both the company and the union officials disapprove of. Or a union may make no attempt to press a worker's grievance or, if forced, may press it in such a half-hearted way that failure is guaranteed. Conversely, union officials may believe, correctly, that a member's rights have been violated, but he may refuse to process his grievance. Who owns the grievance, the union or the worker?

"New but still very shadowy concepts of industrial justice are beginning to emerge from the wreckage of collective bargaining. It is impossible to imagine, for example, that America could ever return to the kind of labor-management relations that existed before the passage of the Wagner Act, when the employer was given all the authority for determining the relations between himself and his workers. The days are also past when the government's role in labor-management relations was merely as a referee. Today, whether union leaders and management spokesmen like it or not, government is entering directly and increasingly into these relations. Both the courts and the legislature have begun to involve themselves deeply in areas that were once considered inviolate.

"Until recently, the courts maintained the traditional attitude toward unions: they were voluntary associations whose internal life was their own affair. They were given the right to dispense justice to their members, free of outside interference. The relationship between the union and its members, formalized in the union constitution, was regarded as a contract, with all of its conditions enforceable by law. Now, however, the courts—and the legislature, too—are maintaining that the exclusive bargaining rights granted to American unions, along with the variety of other membership-enclosing devices, have reduced to polite fictions both the old voluntary association theory and the legal theory that the union constitution is an enforceable contract between member and union.

Due process for members

"One important reason for the change in the legal attitude toward unions is that due process is still in a very primitive stage in most American unions. Sometimes union laws are so vague as to cover almost any offense—in the Carpenters' Union, for example, expulsion is possible for 'an attempt to create dissension among the members'; in many other unions 'conduct unbecoming to a union member' may serve as the sole basis for charges. Frequently the procedures for hearings and trials are lacking in those safeguards against bias and self-interest which are normally found in civil or criminal law. Despite these weaknesses only three unions—the United Auto Workers, the Upholsterers, and the Packinghouse Workers—have established independent boards outside the union to review cases of members against whom either a local or the national organization has taken action. What is worse, no other unions have even shown any signs of pursuing voluntarily the path that these three unions have opened up.

"As a matter of fact, there is not much real evidence that wholesale violations of due process are taking place in unions. Despite the lurid publicity given to the 'thousands' of complaints allegedly received by the McClellan Committee, American union leaders seem easily able to govern their organizations without resorting to suppressive devices on a mass scale or to the establishment of trusteeships. But the potential for punitive action by union leaders against union members exists, for unions still have control over an important part of their members' lives, and in the absence of adequate principles of due process workers must necessarily look outside union administration and collective bargaining for their ultimate protections.

"As the legal attitude is changing about the rights of union members vis-à-vis their leaders, so there is a growing change in the views of workers toward rights in their jobs. Although the right not to be fired arbitrarily, the right to bargain collectively for wages, the right to help determine working conditions, and the basic right to hold a job are derived initially from the terms of the union contract, workers eventually begin to look at these rights as having an existence apart. Every union representative and management official must deal with this phenomenon. 'This job is my job,' the worker maintains as he fights off other workers, the union, the employer, and sometimes even the government whenever an attempt is made to take the job away from him. The airline flight engineer who is replaced by a pilot, the railroad fireman who is taken out of the cab, or the steelworker who loses his job to another union member with more seniority because of an operational merger is fighting not only for a job, for the right to make a living, but for the particular job at which he has been employed.

"No one, no local union president, no international union officer, no company vice-president of personnel, no arbitrator, no government official, no judge, has come up with a solution that satisfies all the conflicting interests in such situations. Here, again, union-management collective bargaining is of little use, for its limited and special nature, its dependence on 'collective' action, prevents it from being a useful tool to assess individual rights. Government, through the law, will be required to assume the burden of developing a theory about job rights. . . .

THE CONDITIONS OF SURVIVAL

"Despite the present breakdown of collective bargaining, industrial justice still depends upon the existence of unions, at least in the immediate future. However, if unions are to survive, they must discard their outmoded methods and attitudes. It is obvious that the organizing techniques they have been using for so long are no longer effective enough. The white-collar and technical employes who provided the margin of defeat for the union shop in the recent elections in aerospace plants are typical workers of the future. For years the AFL-CIO has summarily dismissed the associations that claim the allegiance of these white-collar, technical, and professional workers as 'company unions,' but it is they, not the AFL-CIO, that represent a growing number of workers and appear to be far more responsive to the needs of the new semi-professional employes. Union leaders must study the operations of these organizations.

"Unions also should become a voice for the great mass of unemployed workers. No one has seriously tried to do this this, and unless the unions fill the vacuum a dangerous spokesman may arise who will use the discontent of the unemployed for vicious political purposes. The farm workers are still unorganized, too, and this should also be a task of the unions, despite the great difficulties involved.

"Perhaps unions would have a better chance of taking a significant place in a new bargaining system if the AFL-CIO merger were dissolved. The marriage between these two groups has never been very happy, and whatever advantages it might have had have disappeared. Neither group really wants the alliance any longer, even though they feel unable to free themselves. When the AFL and the CIO were separate entities, each had a special identity, a special behavior as an organization and as an organizer of workers. The federation has no identity; it is as amorphous and characterless as the dull resolutions perfunctorily discussed and apathetically approved at its conventions. With the loss of identity has come a sharp drop in staff morale; one of the few things that engenders some excitement among union officials of both groups is the thought of a split.

"To be sure, improving staff morale, important as that is, is not enough by itself to justify the break. But there are other purposes that a separation might serve. A more sensible consolidation than the present one would be to follow the natural lines of work rather than the present cumbersome groupings of criss-crossing jurisdictions. The building trades have a natural affinity, for example, since carpenters, bricklayers, hodcarriers, and the other construction crafts are together at work. It seems equally foolish for newspaper printers, stereotypers, and engravers to be in separate unions, for they are part of one continuous work process. So, too, the transportation unions and the industrial unions are linked at work. Unions like that of the Machinists, which are both craft and industrial, are more difficult to place into such a framework, but the future development of this union seems to be toward the industrial type. The Teamsters is the only real general union in the United States encompassing all kinds of jurisdiction. No other union seems interested in or capable of following this pattern.

"Even now, the internal organization of the AFL-CIO reflects the natural work grouping in some ways. There is a building trades department, an industrial union section, a metal trades division. More power rests with these separate groups than with the parent federation. The people in them are more comfortable with each other than they are with the men and women whose work is strange to them. But the minimal pact that holds these groups together inhibits them from developing their own organizing and operating style. The fact that the industrial union section of the AFL-CIO is now undertaking its own organizing campaign indicates that some recognition is being given to the need for freeing the potential energies bottled up within the AFL-CIO. An authentic split might be the impetus for a surge of activity in which many unions would participate far more energetically than they do in the lackadaisical atmosphere of the AFL-CIO today. . . .

The threat of permanent unemployment

"The most serious weakness in traditional collective bargaining, however, is its incapacity to deal with the economic conditions that are making unemployment a permanent way of life for millions. . . . The concept that government is there not just to help when economic catastrophe strikes but to avert the catastrophe, whenever possible, before it begins is widely accepted today. More, rather than less, government seems inevitable. . . .

"One development probably will be the replacement of crisis negotiations between unions and management, carried on under the tremendous pressure of contract deadlines, with continuous bargaining under the watchful eyes of public representatives. . . . Some national consensus about both jobs and profits will have to emerge, however, before unions or workers will ever abandon the right to certain strikes.

"The place of unions in the structure of industrial justice will continue to grow smaller unless unions return to the political function that once was primary with them. They will need to design new political tools and new forms of political participation, for it is clear that future union-management relations will depend less and less on sheer economics and more and more on political instruments and political techniques.

"When the potential of unions was being more fully realized, it was not just the legal right to strike that made them unique. So long as their economic function brought dignity to workers . . . , unions rightly commanded the respect of the community and the allegiance of their members. Unions freed workers from worrying about being fired arbitrarily. They provided the means for many workers to hurdle the barrier raised by lack of formal education and to become eminent citizens. They instilled the principles of industrial justice so deeply in the society that no one seriously questions them any longer.

"Now unions must move on from the simple economic level. In Israel, in the Scandinavian countries, in England, and in many other foreign lands unions are an integral part of the political system, not onlookers as they are in America where the simplistic AFL tradition of rewarding friends and punishing enemies in the political arena is still dominant. . . .

"Unions have the potential to be a unique political force: they are the only institutions in society that bind together men who spend an important part of their lives together, sharing the common experience of work. If unions disappear, industrial justice may survive, but their absence will be felt, not just among workers . . . but among all the people of America." (Old Before Its Time: Collective Bargaining at 28. Available through Readers Service)

COURTS INSTEAD OF STRIKES?

A New York Post columnist, writing in Look:

Max Lerner

"The liberal today is caught between his old loyalty to the cause of the unions and a new social realism that makes him ask whether the paralyzing power exerted by a few unions is good for society as a whole. He is driven to ask whether there is not a way out of the whole mess that will protect the rights and the living standards of the workers, but also protect the larger society."

The core of a new working plan could be:

"1) Labor and management set up continuing committees, paid for by both sides, to plan and negotiate all through the year, instead of waiting for the end of a contract.

"2) These committees deal with the core problem of automation by some formula for sharing the cost savings, either the Kaiser Plan or some other.

"3) Both labor and management submit any unsolved problems to an agreed-upon panel of what I should like to call 'labor courts,' rather than arbitrators. I propose labor courts because we need an agency that (in the few cases where the differences will be bitterly disputed) can hear testimony, subpoena records, study the economics of a total industry, develop principles, set precedents, have those precedents studied by the public as a whole and build up a body of public knowledge and opinion that will create a climate in which the courts can carry on their work.

"It will, of course, take years before such continuing committees and labor courts can function smoothly and build up a body of opinion. But the Swedish precedent and the experience of the American garment industries show that it can be done.

"Eventually, decisions of the labor courts would receive the same kind of attention now given to decisions of the U. S. Supreme Court. The labor courts' findings would be studied, criticized and debated in the law schools and the law reviews. This process would lead to the development of the pride of craft that is now found in the whole American judicial system." ("Way Out of Our Strike Dilemma," Look, Apr. 23, 1963)

A retired financier and government consultant:

Bernard Baruch

"What is needed is a Court of Labor-Management Relations which would have jurisdiction to settle strikes when, in the President's judgment, the national interest is jeopardized by their continuation and after the collective bargaining processes and the provisions of the Taft-Hartley Act have been exhausted. This Court, composed of representatives from labor, business and the public, should have the power after hearing evidence from the contesting parties to hand down decisions binding upon both. . . .

"Call it compulsory arbitration or judicial arbitration, we must in the end come to such a procedure." (New York Journal-American, July 10, 1963)

MAKING THE ECONOMY WORK

WHO IS THE FARM PROBLEM?

The author of The Squeeze (see Current, December 1960, page 26, and January 1961, page 39) and The American Oasis: The Land and Its Uses, Dr. Higbee is professor of land utilization at the University of Rhode Island. In a study for the Twentieth Century Fund, he finds that today's farmer is a new man, shaped by forces which did not exist in previous generations. (See also Current, September 1962, page 41.)

Edward Higbee

"American agriculture is beyond the halfway mark in its second major technological revolution. During the first of these upheavals on the rural landscape, between 1850 and 1910, the Indians of the Great Plains were confined to reservations, Negro slavery was abolished, and the total of farms increased from 1.4 million to 6.4 million, most of them owned and operated by a single family. These changes occurred during the revolution of the mule and the horse when animal power on a mass scale was harnessed to a marvelous assortment of tillage implements, and man in the United States was released from the hoe, the sickle, and the fear of hunger. Now agriculture is undergoing a second period of change—the revolution of science, mechanics, and heavy capital investment. While it has not as yet done away with the family farm it has gone a long way toward getting rid of the farm family.

"In 1935 American farm units reached an all-time peak of 6.8 million. Since then there has been a precipitous drop in numbers. By 1961 there were left only 3.7 million. Within another decade or two this figure will very likely be cut back to 1.4 million. Since this was the starting point in 1850, the cycle will then be complete. . . . A hundred years ago, when there were only about 32 million people in the United States, about 65 per cent of them lived on farms. By 1980 probably less than 5 per cent of the people will live and work on the soil. Although most of the land will continue to be devoted to husbandry, the newer ways of rural life will bear little resemblance to those of the past. The culture, even more than the agriculture, of 185 million Americans is in flux.

"In 1800, during the time of the sickle, an average of 56 hours of labor were required to produce an acre of wheat. . . . By 1910, when horse-drawn implements had taken over a substantial part of corn production, 147 man-hours were required to raise 100 bushels. This was quite an improvement over the 344 man-hours needed in the hand-hoe days of 1800, but today a few exceptional farmers in the corn belt raise 100 bushels of corn with less than four hours of labor. . . . Mechanical devices are taking over jobs in fruit and vegetable production where some of the most primitive and degrading conditions for human living in rural America still prevail. While labor efficiency and living standards have improved more rapidly in agricultural areas than in cities in recent years, some of the nation's poorest people are yet to be found in rural districts where social and economic progress took a detour. . . .

"It is the great weight of poverty at the lower levels that makes all

Research Department
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Bulk Rate
U. S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 154
RALEIGH, N. C.

North Carolina Labor and Industry

Monthly Bulletin of the DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, Frank Crane, Commissioner

Vol. XXX RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, AUGUST, 1963 No. 8

SPECIAL WEEK SET TO HONOR OLDER CITIZENS

North Carolina will honor its older citizens during the week of September 15-21, the annual Special Week on Aging.

During this special observance, the health, happiness and welfare of North Carolina's aging citizens will be given special consideration, according to Margaret A. Chears, executive secretary of the Governor's Coordinating Committee on Aging.

North Carolina has more than 300,000 persons 65 years of age and older and this segment of the State's population is increasing rapidly. The total population of the State doubled between 1910 and 1960, while the number of older people increased fourfold during this half-century period. Even more striking is the fact that this age group doubled during the two decades 1940-1960.

Special programs honoring older citizens will be held in many N. C. counties and communities during the week of September 15-21.

INDUSTRIAL LIGHTING SURVEY IS PUBLISHED

"LIGHTING IN NORTH CAROLINA INDUSTRY," a booklet summarizing a special survey conducted by the Industrial Extension Service, School of Engineering, N. C. State of the University of North Carolina at Raleigh, is now available.

Single copies may be obtained free from the Industrial Extension Service. The booklet was compiled by J. R. Ogburn and W. Frank Hodge of the I.E.S. staff in Raleigh.

The booklet summarizes the results of a lighting survey made in 98 Tar Heel manufacturing plants. Specific industries surveyed include textiles, metal working, furniture, food processing, chemicals and plastics, building materials, and battery manufacturing.

Urging wide study and use of the booklet, Commissioner Frank Crane said: "Adequate illumination of work places is one of the main factors in preventing industrial accidents."

5,509 FIRMS CHECKED BY LABOR INSPECTORS

Labor Department inspectors visited 5,509 industrial, mercantile and service-industry establishments during the months of May, June and July. The inspected firms employed 212,333 workers.

The establishments were inspected to determine compliance with the State Labor Laws and the Safety and Health Regulations.

The inspectors made 2,875 recommendations for correction or improvement of working conditions not conducive to employee health and safety. Compliance with similar recommendations made during previous inspections was noted in 2,935 instances.

Other inspection activity during the three months included 1,800 conferences held with employers and workers; 269 reinspections made to insure compliance with the Labor Laws and safety and health regulations; 25 industrial accident investigations; and 98 special investigations made in response to employee complaints.

ESTIMATED COST OF CONSTRUCTION AUTHORIZED IN THIRTY-SIX NORTH CAROLINA CITIES

City	July, 1963	July, 1962	1st 7 Mos. 1963	1st 7 Mos. 1962
Albemarle	$ 28,253	$ 224,517	$ 422,629	$ 631,371
Asheboro	60,890	94,770	1,407,110	1,698,020
Asheville	2,385,193	477,923	6,487,771	4,880,936
Burlington	393,190	1,004,807	2,615,139	3,231,910
Chapel Hill	257,179	700,419	2,245,368	1,768,592
Charlotte	4,251,722	2,308,514	29,478,607	24,317,841
Concord	78,400	388,427	797,083	1,063,563
Durham	881,281	966,380	11,136,438	6,242,205
Elizabeth City	136,645	73,600	1,197,116	660,000
Fayetteville	966,348	1,246,615	6,454,079	5,936,571
Gastonia	491,775	423,750	3,143,825	3,669,650
Goldsboro	243,622	172,700	2,234,558	2,634,307
Greensboro	2,172,839	2,266,607	16,113,854	18,754,917
Greenville	202,230	394,700	3,138,424	2,541,477
Henderson	162,296	50,650	796,921	576,100
Hickory	152,395	256,004	1,265,022	1,770,268
High Point	978,648	350,568	5,716,106	6,311,392
Jacksonville	12,000	48,451	815,300	2,152,156
Kinston	97,075	821,856	1,839,929	4,062,062
Lenoir	74,351	95,010	579,829	848,987
Lexington	72,850	100,460	706,783	1,229,523
Lumberton	139,400	22,000	1,020,650	861,394
Monroe	56,500	13,600	278,100	797,400
New Bern	372,040	134,450	871,060	860,807
Raleigh	2,135,314	3,588,500	14,662,566	16,358,890
Reidsville	77,700	31,300	592,932	785,073
Roanoke Rapids	101,877	139,679	1,011,251	1,114,401
Rocky Mount	359,346	238,069	2,921,853	1,841,030
Salisbury	659,291	161,550	2,428,761	1,560,073
Sanford	128,075	46,200	376,250	636,050
Shelby	190,500	74,950	1,253,760	819,990
Statesville	269,281	369,110	2,071,513	1,855,060
Thomasville	51,380	116,950	1,449,821	1,441,523
Wilmington	1,134,211	589,306	2,434,981	1,201,830
Wilson	140,450	971,241	2,479,125	7,284,958
Winston-Salem	1,221,886	1,837,485	9,384,582	8,368,675
GRAND TOTAL	$21,136,433	$20,923,518	$141,829,096	$140,769,002

NORTH CAROLINA
Labor and Industry
Issued Each Month by the
NORTH CAROLINA DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
P. O. Box 1151
Raleigh, N. C.

Sent Free Upon Request

FRANK CRANE
Commissioner of Labor
ALMON BARBOUR
Editor

Vol. XXX August, 1963 No. 8

NON-FARM EMPLOYMENT SETS JULY RECORD IN STATE DESPITE SEASONAL DECREASE

Nonagricultural employment registered a new high for the month of July in North Carolina, despite a seasonal decline of 4,700 from the June job figure.

July non-farm employment totaling 1,258,800 in the State was 14,700 higher than in July, 1962.

Factory jobs totaling 522,900 were up 400 from a year ago, while non-manufacturing employment groups showed an over-the-year gain of 14,300.

Average hourly earnings of factory workers held firm at $1.67. The factory workweek remained unchanged at 41 hours. Average weekly earnings in manufacturing also held firm at $68.47.

The only significant employment increase from June to July occurred in the construction industry, in which jobs were up 1,500.

Other employment groups showing increases over the month included finance, insurance and real estate—up 400 from the June level, food products, cigarette manufacturing, ordnance and transportation equipment, and communications and public utilities, up 200 each; and lumber, furniture, fabricated metals, machinery, tobacco steemmeries, printing and mining—up 100 each.

These job gains were more than offset by seasonal declines of 2,300 in the textile industry due mostly to summer vacations; 2,200 in public school custodial and maintenance jobs; 800 in federal government, due mostly to seasonal curtailment of agricultural stabilization committee operations; and 100 in State and local government due to adjournment of the General Assembly.

Other decreases included 1,100 in retail trade and 200 in wholesale trade caused by the usual midsummer lull in merchandising; and decreases of 700 in electrical machinery manufacturing, 200 in apparel firms, 200 in chemicals, and 100 in stone, clay and glass products.

CITY BUILDING PERMITS UP 9 PER CENT IN JULY

Building permits totaling $21,136,433 were issued in 36 Tar Heel cities of more than 10,000 population during July.

The July building figure was one per per cent higher than the $20,923,518 total reported for July, 1962.

The cities issued permits totaling $141,829,696 during the first seven months of this year—an increase of 0.7 per cent over the $140,769,002 reported for the same period last year.

FACTORY EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN CHARLOTTE AND GREENSBORO - HIGHT POINT AREAS — JULY, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month (thous) 4	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
CHARLOTTE AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	27.5	27.7	27.4	— 0.7	+ 0.4	$ 75.12	$ 76.62	$ 73.10	41.5	42.1	41.3	$1.81	$1.82	$1.77
Food & Kindred Products	4.1	4.2	4.2	— 2.4	— 2.4	67.40	74.90	70.73	40.6	43.8	42.1	1.66	1.71	1.68
Bakery	2.0	2.1	2.1	— 4.8	— 4.8	70.49	78.57	76.50	39.6	42.7	42.5	1.78	1.84	1.80
Textile Mills Products	6.1	6.4	6.3	— 4.7	— 3.2	66.46	67.52	66.14	41.8	42.2	41.6	1.59	1.60	1.59
Broadwoven Fabrics	2.5	2.5	2.4	.....	+ 4.2	74.91	76.56	78.94	43.3	44.0	44.6	1.73	1.74	1.77
Knitting Mills	2.0	2.3	2.3	—13.0	—13.0	58.82	60.70	56.39	38.7	40.2	38.1	1.52	1.51	1.48
Furniture & Fixtures	.9	.8	.9	+12.5	.....	95.03	87.78	86.05	44.2	42.0	42.6	2.15	2.09	2.02
Paper & Allied Products	1.4	1.4	1.4	.....	.....	83.47	78.91	75.78	43.7	42.2	42.1	1.91	1.87	1.80
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	2.1	2.0	1.9	+ 5.0	+10.5	92.57	94.07	...7...	39.9	40.2	...7...	2.32	2.34	2.26
Chemicals & Allied Products	2.7	2.7	2.5	.....	+ 8.0	67.73	70.47	69.39	40.8	42.2	43.1	1.66	1.67	1.61
Metal Products	2.4	2.4	2.3	.....	+ 4.3	80.75	79.77	77.22	41.2	40.7	39.6	1.96	1.96	1.95
Machinery	3.3	3.2	3.1	+ 3.1	+ 6.5	81.22	91.40	79.12	42.3	45.7	43.0	1.92	2.00	1.84
Other Manufacturing Industries[1]	4.5	4.6	4.8	— 2.2	— 6.3	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
GREENSBORO - HIGH POINT AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	43.6	43.7	44.4	— 0.2	— 1.8	$ 68.63	$ 67.37	$ 65.69	39.9	39.4	39.1	$1.72	$1.71	$1.68
Food & Kindred Products	2.9	2.9	2.9	.....	.....	73.12	73.30	70.04	45.7	46.1	44.9	1.60	1.59	1.56
Bakery Products	.8	.8	.8	.....	.....	80.10	79.81	75.41	46.3	46.4	44.1	1.73	1.72	1.71
Textile Mill Products	15.7	15.8	16.7	— 0.6	— 0.6	62.72	61.12	58.25	39.2	38.2	37.1	1.60	1.60	1.57
Knitting Mills	6.0	6.1	6.7	— 1.6	—10.4	54.68	52.19	52.13	37.2	35.5	36.2	1.47	1.47	1.44
Apparel	3.7	3.9	3.8	— 5.1	— 2.6	54.07	53.34	...7...	38.9	38.1	38.9	1.39	1.40	...7...
Lumber & Wood Products (Except Furn.)	1.2	1.1	1.1	+ 9.1	+ 9.1	64.82	65.11	61.63	43.5	43.7	42.5	1.49	1.49	1.45
Furniture	6.7	6.7	6.8	.....	— 1.5	68.97	67.20	65.34	40.1	39.3	39.6	1.72	1.71	1.65
HH Furniture	5.8	5.8	5.8	.....	.....	68.60	67.73	63.84	39.2	38.7	38.0	1.75	1.75	1.68
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	1.6	1.5	1.5	+ 6.7	+ 6.7	76.13	84.97	...7...	36.6	38.8	...7...	2.08	2.19	2.07
Chemicals	1.5	1.5	1.4	.....	+ 7.1	85.43	82.40	83.38	42.5	41.2	43.2	2.01	2.00	1.93
Stone, Clay & Glass Products	.9	.9	.9	.....	.....	85.49	88.73	77.98	48.3	50.7	45.6	1.77	1.75	1.71
Metal Products	2.1	2.0	2.0	+ 5.0	+ 5.0	75.66	72.80	...7...	41.8	41.6	...7...	1.81	1.75	1.74
Machinery (Except Electrical)	.9	1.0	.9	—10.0	.....	84.00	88.06	...7...	43.3	44.7	40.6	1.94	1.97	...7...
Other Manufacturing Industries[2]	6.4	6.4	6.4	.....	.....	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...

[1] Includes: Apparel; Lumber; Rubber; Leather; Stone, Clay and Glass; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Tobacco; Paper; Rubber; Leather; Electrical Machinery; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[4] Preliminary.
[5] Data Not Available.

EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN NONAGRICULTURAL INDUSTRIES IN NORTH CAROLINA — JULY, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current	One Month	One Year	One	One		One	One		One	One		One	One

FACTORY EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN CHARLOTTE AND GREENSBORO - HIGHT POINT AREAS — JULY, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month (thous) 4	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
CHARLOTTE AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	27.5	27.7	27.4	— 0.7	+ 0.4	$ 75.12	$ 76.62	$ 73.10	41.5	42.1	41.3	$1.81	$1.82	$1.77
Food & Kindred Products	4.1	4.2	4.2	— 2.4	— 2.4	67.40	74.90	70.73	40.6	43.8	42.1	1.66	1.71	1.68
Bakery	2.0	2.1	2.1	— 4.8	— 4.8	70.49	78.57	76.50	39.6	42.7	42.5	1.78	1.84	1.80
Textile Mills Products	6.1	6.4	6.3	— 4.7	— 3.2	66.46	67.52	66.14	41.8	42.2	41.6	1.59	1.60	1.59
Broadwoven Fabrics	2.5	2.5	2.4	.....	+ 4.2	74.91	76.56	78.94	43.3	44.0	44.6	1.73	1.74	1.77
Knitting Mills	2.0	2.3	2.3	—13.0	—13.0	58.82	60.70	56.39	38.7	40.2	38.1	1.52	1.51	1.48
Furniture & Fixtures	.9	.8	.9	+12.5	.....	95.03	87.78	86.05	44.2	42.0	42.6	2.15	2.09	2.02
Paper & Allied Products	1.4	1.4	1.4	.....	.....	83.47	78.91	75.78	43.7	42.2	42.1	1.91	1.87	1.80
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	2.1	2.0	1.9	+ 5.0	+10.5	92.57	94.07	...7...	39.9	40.2	...7...	2.32	2.34	2.26
Chemicals & Allied Products	2.7	2.7	2.5	.....	+ 8.0	67.73	70.47	69.39	40.8	42.2	43.1	1.66	1.67	1.61
Metal Products	2.4	2.4	2.3	.....	+ 4.3	80.75	79.77	77.22	41.2	40.7	39.6	1.96	1.96	1.95
Machinery	3.3	3.2	3.1	+ 3.1	+ 6.5	81.22	91.40	79.12	42.3	45.7	43.0	1.92	2.00	1.84
Other Manufacturing Industries[1]	4.5	4.6	4.8	— 2.2	— 6.3	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
GREENSBORO - HIGH POINT AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	43.6	43.7	44.4	— 0.2	— 1.8	$ 68.63	$ 67.37	$ 65.69	39.9	39.4	39.1	$1.72	$1.71	$1.68
Food & Kindred Products	2.9	2.9	2.9	.....	.....	73.12	73.30	70.04	45.7	46.1	44.9	1.60	1.59	1.56
Bakery Products	.8	.8	.8	.....	.....	80.10	79.81	75.41	46.3	46.4	44.1	1.73	1.72	1.71
Textile Mill Products	15.7	15.8	16.7	— 0.6	— 0.6	62.72	61.12	58.25	39.2	38.2	37.1	1.60	1.60	1.57
Knitting Mills	6.0	6.1	6.7	— 1.6	—10.4	54.68	52.19	52.13	37.2	35.5	36.2	1.47	1.47	1.44
Apparel	3.7	3.9	3.8	— 5.1	— 2.6	54.07	53.34	...7...	38.9	38.1	38.9	1.39	1.40	...7...
Lumber & Wood Products (Except Furn.)	1.2	1.1	1.1	+ 9.1	+ 9.1	64.82	65.11	61.63	43.5	43.7	42.5	1.49	1.49	1.45
Furniture	6.7	6.7	6.8	.....	— 1.5	68.97	67.20	65.34	40.1	39.3	39.6	1.72	1.71	1.65
HH Furniture	5.8	5.8	5.8	.....	.....	68.60	67.73	63.84	39.2	38.7	38.0	1.75	1.75	1.68
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	1.6	1.5	1.5	+ 6.7	+ 6.7	76.13	84.97	...7...	36.6	38.8	...7...	2.08	2.19	2.07
Chemicals	1.5	1.5	1.4	.....	+ 7.1	85.43	82.40	83.38	42.5	41.2	43.2	2.01	2.00	1.93
Stone, Clay & Glass Products	.9	.9	.9	.....	.....	85.49	88.73	77.98	48.3	50.7	45.6	1.77	1.75	1.71
Metal Products	2.1	2.0	2.0	+ 5.0	+ 5.0	75.66	72.80	...7...	41.8	41.6	...7...	1.81	1.75	1.74
Machinery (Except Electrical)	.9	1.0	.9	—10.0	.....	84.00	88.06	...7...	43.3	44.7	40.6	1.94	1.97	...7...
Other Manufacturing Industries[2]	6.4	6.4	6.4	.....	.....	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...

[1] Includes: Apparel; Lumber; Rubber; Leather; Stone, Clay and Glass; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Tobacco; Paper; Rubber; Leather; Electrical Machinery; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[4] Preliminary.
[5] Data Not Available.

EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN NONAGRICULTURAL INDUSTRIES IN NORTH CAROLINA — JULY, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month[4] (thous)	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
ALL NONAGRICULTURAL EMPLOYMENT	1,258.8	1,263.5	1,244.1	— 0.4	+ 1.2	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Manufacturing	522.9	525.0	522.5	— 0.4	+ 0.1	$ 68.47	$ 68.47	$ 66.75	41.0	41.0	40.7	$1.67	$1.67	$1.64
Durable Goods	147.2	147.3	146.3	— 0.1	+ 0.6	69.81	70.31	67.94	41.8	42.1	42.2	1.67	1.67	1.61
Lumber & Timber Basic Products	31.5	31.4	30.5	+ 0.3	+ 3.3	59.64	59.36	60.34	42.3	42.1	43.1	1.41	1.41	1.40
Sawmills & Planing Mills	18.9	18.8	18.1	+ 0.5	+ 4.4	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Millwork, Plywood, etc.	6.2	6.2	6.4	.....	— 3.1	57.89	54.54	58.32	43.2	40.7	43.2	1.34	1.34	1.35
Furniture & Fin. Lumber Products	47.8	47.7	47.3	+ 0.2	+ 1.1	66.14	65.73	63.54	41.6	41.6	41.8	1.59	1.58	1.52
Household Furniture	43.3	43.3	42.9	.....	+ 0.9	65.51	65.57	63.08	41.2	41.5	41.5	1.59	1.58	1.52
Stone, Clay and Glass	11.0	11.1	11.1	— 0.9	— 0.9	74.29	74.70	68.64	43.7	44.2	42.9	1.70	1.69	1.60
Concrete, Brick, etc.	4.1	4.1	3.9	.....	+ 5.1	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Primary Metals	2.8	2.8	2.8	.....	.....	85.08	81.81	85.69	41.5	40.3	41.0	2.05	2.03	2.09
Fabricated Metals	9.6	9.5	8.9	+ 1.1	+ 7.9	84.74	87.20	77.19	42.8	43.6	41.5	1.98	2.00	1.86
Fab. Structural Metals	4.3	4.2	3.8	+ 2.4	+13.2	94.02	100.28	82.70	45.2	47.3	43.3	2.08	2.12	1.91
Machinery (Except Electrical)	13.4	13.3	13.9	+ 0.8	— 3.6	75.93	78.94	75.07	42.9	44.1	43.9	1.77	1.79	1.71
Special Industrial Machinery	6.7	6.7	6.8	.....	— 1.5	75.29	80.10	...7...	42.3	44.5	...7...	1.78	1.80	1.72
Electrical Machinery	23.3	24.0	24.9	— 2.9	— 6.4	81.00	83.43	78.99	39.9	41.1	40.3	2.03	2.03	1.96
Ord. and Transportation Equipment	4.1	3.9	3.9	+ 5.1	+ 5.1	89.28	91.62	95.44	40.4	40.9	42.8	2.21	2.24	2.23
Other Durable Goods[1]	3.7	3.6	3.0	+ 2.8	+23.3	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Nondurable Goods	375.7	377.7	376.2	— 0.5	— 0.1	68.14	67.80	66.33	40.8	40.6	40.2	1.67	1.67	1.65
Food & Kindred Products	36.6	36.4	35.5	+ 0.5	+ 3.1	62.46	62.20	60.32	42.2	42.6	41.6	1.48	1.46	1.45
Meat Products	8.5	8.5	8.3	.....	+ 2.4	56.56	54.51	52.50	40.4	39.5	38.6	1.40	1.38	1.36
Meat Packing	2.5	2.5	2.4	.....	+ 4.2	72.32	68.26	68.69	45.2	43.2	43.2	1.60	1.58	1.59
Dairy Products	5.6	5.6	5.7	.....	— 1.8	74.10	74.10	74.56	46.9	46.9	48.1	1.58	1.58	1.55
Grain Mill Products	3.9	4.0	3.8	— 2.5	+ 2.6	65.49	63.70	64.26	45.8	45.5	45.9	1.43	1.40	1.40
Bakery Products	7.7	7.6	7.6	+ 1.3	+ 1.3	71.40	73.36	72.76	42.0	42.9	42.8	1.70	1.71	1.70
Beverage Industries	5.2	5.1	4.9	+ 2.0	+ 6.1	66.46	67.45	65.27	49.6	51.1	50.6	1.34	1.32	1.29
Tobacco	25.9	25.5	27.5	+ 1.6	— 5.8	88.65	90.94	81.53	39.4	40.6	38.1	2.25	2.24	2.14
Cigarettes	18.8	18.6	19.5	+ 1.1	— 3.6	94.71	96.59	86.69	40.3	41.1	38.7	2.35	2.35	2.24
Stemmeries	5.3	5.2	6.4	+ 1.9	—17.2	66.61	69.63	63.72	36.4	38.9	35.8	1.83	1.79	1.78
Textiles	222.5	224.8	225.2	— 1.0	— 1.2	66.08	66.01	64.40	41.3	41.0	40.5	1.60	1.61	1.59
Broadwoven Fabrics	90.1	90.7	89.8	— 0.7	+ 0.3	70.14	71.74	69.81	42.0	42.7	41.8	1.67	1.68	1.67
Broadwoven Cotton	56.1	56.0	56.1	+ 0.2	.....	68.39	70.39	67.32	41.2	41.9	40.8	1.66	1.68	1.65
Broadwoven Fiber & Silk	30.3	31.0	30.0	— 2.3	+ 1.0	72.84	74.02	73.27	43.1	43.8	43.1	1.69	1.69	1.70
Knitting Mills	65.1	65.6	68.6	— 0.8	— 5.1	59.35	58.97	58.83	37.8	37.8	38.2	1.57	1.56	1.54
Full Fashioned Hosiery	7.2	7.5	8.2	— 4.0	—12.2	57.90	55.18	55.57	37.6	35.6	36.8	1.54	1.55	1.51
Seamless Hosiery	45.6	45.8	48.4	— 0.4	— 5.8	58.62	59.03	59.12	37.1	37.6	37.9	1.58	1.57	1.56
Dyeing & Finishing Textiles	12.2	12.4	12.4	— 1.6	— 1.6	66.97	70.90	68.15	40.1	42.2	41.3	1.67	1.68	1.65
Yarn Mills	46.4	47.4	45.9	— 2.1	+ 1.1	62.51	63.12	61.09	41.4	41.8	41.0	1.51	1.51	1.49
Apparel	45.5	45.7	43.9	— 0.4	+ 3.6	50.12	49.34	49.78	37.4	37.1	38.0	1.34	1.33	1.31
Men's & Boys' Clothing	17.6	17.6	17.0	.....	+ 3.5	47.34	46.18	47.75	36.7	35.8	37.6	1.29	1.29	1.27
Paper & Allied Products	13.6	13.6	14.0	.....	— 2.9	107.89	103.49	103.17	44.4	43.3	43.9	2.43	2.39	2.35
Pulp & Paperboard Mills	8.5	8.5	8.9	.....	— 4.5	122.93	116.77	115.44	45.7	43.9	44.4	2.69	2.66	2.60
Paperboard Containers	3.5	3.6	3.6	— 2.8	— 2.8	77.38	78.31	78.84	41.6	42.1	43.8	1.86	1.86	1.80
Printing	10.6	10.5	10.6	+ 1.0	.....	86.56	88.55	...7...	37.8	38.5	38.4	2.29	2.30	...7...
Newspapers	5.4	5.4	5.4	.....	.....	97.99	98.89	94.43	36.7	36.9	36.6	2.67	2.68	2.58
Chemicals	16.3	16.5	14.9	— 1.2	+ 9.4	86.92	85.22	85.04	42.4	42.4	42.1	2.05	2.01	2.02
Plastics & Synthetic Materials	10.5	10.1	9.3	+ 4.0	+12.9	95.89	95.22	92.62	43.0	42.7	42.1	2.23	2.23	2.20
Other Nondurable Goods[2]	4.7	4.7	4.6	.....	+ 2.2	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Nonmanufacturing	735.9	738.5	721.6	— 0.4	+ 2.0	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Mining	2.9	2.8	3.5	+ 3.6	—17.1	74.68	74.70	82.48	46.1	46.4	50.6	1.62	1.61	1.63
Non-Metallic Mining	2.9	2.8	2.9	+ 3.6	.....	74.68	74.70	81.89	46.1	46.4	51.5	1.62	1.61	1.59
Contract Construction	74.6	73.1	73.6	+ 2.1	+ 1.4	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Transp., Comm., & Pub. Utilities	67.3	67.5	64.8	— 0.3	+ 3.9	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Transportation (Except RR)	33.6	34.0	31.9	— 1.2	+ 5.3	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Communications & Pub. Utilities	24.9	24.7	24.1	+ 0.8	+ 3.3	97.99	95.58	96.64	41.0	40.5	41.3	2.39	2.36	2.34
Trade[3]	227.1	228.4	223.2	— 0.6	+ 1.7	66.33	66.00	64.96	40.2	40.0	40.6	1.65	1.65	1.60
Wholesale	58.9	59.1	57.8	— 0.3	+ 1.9	85.37	84.58	83.85	42.9	42.5	43.0	1.99	1.99	1.95
Retail[3]	168.2	169.3	165.4	— 0.6	+ 1.7	58.65	58.35	57.42	39.1	38.9	39.6	1.50	1.50	1.45
Retail General Merchandise	34.5	34.6	33.9	— 0.3	+ 1.8	44.95	45.50	43.31	33.8	33.7	34.1	1.33	1.35	1.27
Department Stores	15.2	15.5	14.6	— 1.9	+ 4.1	49.47	49.70	47.66	33.2	32.7	33.1	1.49	1.52	1.44
Limited Price Variety	7.5	7.4	8.0	+ 1.4	— 6.3	31.29	31.19	30.50	29.8	29.7	29.9	1.05	1.05	1.02
Retail Food Stores	25.0	25.5	24.4	— 2.0	+ 2.5	53.20	52.59	52.85	35.0	34.6	36.7	1.52	1.52	1.44
Finance, Insurance & Real Estate[6]	49.6	49.2	47.7	+ 0.8	+ 4.0	89.95	88.36	88.85	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Service	140.0	140.0	137.6	.....	+ 1.7	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Hotels & Rooming Houses	9.0	9.2	9.0	— 2.2	.....	34.78	33.05	33.73	41.9	40.8	42.7	.83	.81	.79
Personal Services	25.6	25.6	25.3	.....	+ 1.2	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Laundries & Dry Cleaners	15.5	15.5	15.4	.....	+ 0.6	36.20	36.86	35.88	38.1	38.8	39.0	.95	.95	.92
Government	174.4	177.5	171.2	— 1.7	+ 1.9	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Federal	39.3	40.1	39.0	— 2.0	+ 0.8
State & Local Schools	67.4	69.6	66.1	— 3.2	+ 2.0
State & Local Non-Schools	67.7	67.8	66.1	— 0.1	+ 2.4

[1] Includes: Transportation Equipment, Instruments, and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Leather and Leather Products, Rubber Products, and Petroleum Products.
[3] Excludes: Earnings in Eating and Drinking Places.
[4] Preliminary.
[5] Data Not Available.
[6] Reflects Earnings in Insurance Companies Only.
[7] Not comparable.
* Less than 0.1% change.

ESTIMATED COST OF CONSTRUCTION AUTHORIZED IN THIRTY-SIX NORTH CAROLINA CITIES

City	May, 1963	May, 1962	1st 5 Mos. 1963	1st 5 Mos. 1962
Albemarle	$ 189,500	$ 131,318	$ 356,796	$ 348,204
Asheboro	780,450	164,200	1,289,140	1,458,750
Asheville	596,881	428,703	3,700,690	3,213,938
Burlington	478,644	492,945	1,886,783	1,983,023
Chapel Hill	715,550	257,550	1,657,927	892,599
Charlotte	4,316,224	3,952,382	21,001,665	19,487,482
Concord	105,200	103,311	506,181	571,928
Durham	1,015,180	997,280	8,368,028	4,513,105
Elizabeth City	91,575	38,300	1,023,356	246,100
Fayetteville	1,131,730	1,355,176	4,798,438	3,909,529
Gastonia	710,800	575,150	2,405,650	2,422,150
Goldsboro	375,595	435,550	1,679,485	1,870,425
Greensboro	2,737,111	2,676,613	11,631,161	13,487,107
Greenville	306,356	433,400	2,821,098	1,578,976
Henderson	101,500	115,350	541,125	413,100
Hickory	339,821	251,695	910,852	1,360,414
High Point	750,751	921,941	3,473,261	5,121,544
Jacksonville	437,900	241,500	671,100	1,484,430
Kinston	231,450	1,477,509	1,550,024	3,012,529
Lenoir	118,520	36,926	389,543	723,152
Lexington	115,731	551,599	527,433	973,401
Lumberton	171,350	73,400	743,050	686,894
Monroe	10,000	55,000	188,000	618,400
New Bern	98,850	83,250	466,090	591,907
Raleigh	1,317,056	2,395,178	11,003,503	10,485,681
Reidsville	243,232	70,950	492,932	668,773
Roanoke Rapids	145,035	268,781	733,317	822,870
Rocky Mount	211,214	279,823	1,592,505	1,293,972
Salisbury	209,200	274,183	1,500,120	1,260,408
Sanford	14,675	82,400	208,575	523,750
Shelby	64,760	231,790	960,960	652,040
Statesville	220,300	165,650	1,531,007	1,264,950
Thomasville	297,900	312,585	1,327,479	1,277,768
Wilmington	239,280	53,480	1,104,019	537,259
Wilson	336,520	648,829	1,477,825	2,304,309
Winston-Salem	1,129,693	841,354	6,957,740	5,063,948
Grand Total	$20,355,534	$21,475,051	$101,476,858	$97,124,815

ESTIMATED COST OF CONSTRUCTION AUTHORIZED IN THIRTY-SIX NORTH CAROLINA CITIES

City	June, 1963	June, 1962	1st 6 Mos. 1963	1st 6 Mos. 1962
Albemarle	$ 37,580	$ 58,650	$ 394,376	$ 406,854
Asheboro	57,080	144,500	1,346,220	1,603,250
Asheville	401,888	1,189,075	4,102,578	4,403,013
Burlington	335,166	244,080	2,221,949	2,227,103
Chapel Hill	330,262	175,574	1,988,189	1,068,173
Charlotte	4,225,220	2,521,845	25,226,885	22,009,327
Concord	212,502	103,208	718,683	675,136
Durham	1,887,129	762,720	10,255,157	5,275,825
Elizabeth City	37,115	340,300	1,060,471	586,400
Fayetteville	689,293	780,427	5,487,731	4,689,956
Gastonia	246,400	823,750	2,652,050	3,245,900
Goldsboro	311,451	591,182	1,990,936	2,461,607
Greensboro	2,309,854	3,001,203	13,941,015	16,488,310
Greenville	115,096	567,801	2,936,194	2,146,777
Henderson	93,500	112,350	634,625	525,450
Hickory	201,775	153,850	1,112,627	1,514,264
High Point	1,264,197	839,280	4,737,458	5,960,824
Jacksonville	132,200	619,275	803,300	2,103,705
Kinston	192,830	227,677	1,742,854	3,240,206
Lenoir	115,935	30,825	505,478	753,977
Lexington	106,500	155,662	633,933	1,129,063
Lumberton	138,200	152,500	881,250	839,394
Monroe	33,600	43,000	221,600	661,400
New Bern	32,930	134,450	499,020	726,357
Raleigh	1,523,749	2,284,709	12,527,252	12,770,390
Reidsville	22,300	85,000	515,232	753,773
Roanoke Rapids	176,057	151,852	909,374	974,722
Rocky Mount	970,002	308,989	2,562,507	1,602,961
Salisbury	269,350	138,115	1,769,470	1,398,523
Sanford	39,600	66,100	248,175	589,850
Shelby	102,300	93,000	1,063,260	745,040
Statesville	271,225	221,000	1,802,232	1,485,950
Thomasville	70,962	46,805	1,398,441	1,324,573
Wilmington	196,751	75,265	1,300,770	612,524
Wilson	860,850	4,009,408	2,338,675	6,313,717
Winston-Salem	1,204,956	1,467,242	8,162,696	6,531,190
Grand Total	$19,215,805	$22,720,669	$120,692,663	$119,845,484

Labor

I.U.D. Bulletin

published by the

INDUSTRIAL UNION DEPARTMENT, AFL-CIO

815 SIXTEENTH STREET, N. W. WASHINGTON, D. C. 20006 • Telephone EXecutive 3-5581

Volume 8, No. 8 August 1963

Jobs, Rights and the Economy

Analysis of the latest jobless figures offers little cause for comfort. Clearly, the U. S. economy is failing to provide enough jobs for a fast growing labor force. The implications are especially disturbing in the face of today's just demands for equality of opportunity.

The 5.6 percent jobless rate hides the fact that one Negro worker in ten and one white worker in twenty is without a paycheck. It disguises a jobless rate of 16 percent for young white workers and 33 percent for Negro youth.

Unemployment—white or Negro—is inexcusable. It means misery for the white worker and his family and hoplessness for the Negro. It means social dynamite in our cities as patterns of juvenile delinquency become strengthened by enforced youth idleness.

For the Negro worker without a job or forced to work at a subsistence wage, the right to equal accommodations has little meaning. Nor can such a worker be expected to cheer if he learns that a law has been passed which guarantees him equal right to nonexistent employment. A strong civil rights law complete with fair employment practices is urgently needed. But a full employment economy must be achieved to give such a law full meaning.

With full employment, many of the tensions of American life will subside. Joblessness cruelly puts the Negro workers into a devisive competition with the white worker which harms both and which makes civil rights progress more difficult.

Recent economic developments, therefore, are cause for apprehension. They indicate that the economy—after its spring pickup—is leveling off.

Walter E. Heller, chairman of the President's Council of Economic Advisors, has termed the economy's present pace "moderate." He has stated that present growth won't "eat into our unemployment problem."

Mr. Heller could turn out to be an optimist. With present rates of productivity, a merely moderate growth rate could mean higher unemployment. If the economy falters even slightly, jobless rates could shoot upward sharply.

Latest statistical evidence gives small cause for optimism. Most of the leading economic indicators are pointing downward. While there is nothing infallible about these indicators, the general outlook seems to show that the revitalized boom of a few months back is again on the wane.

The Labor Department has confirmed AFL-CIO contentions that the private sector of the economy is not creating a significant number of new jobs. Yet, it is here that productivity has shot upward most rapidly. Moderate growth in this sector has become an invitation to job displacement.

Still Last Hired

Ignoring reality, the Federal Reserve Board has chosen this moment to bolster interest rates. Its action is an invitation to new recession. It has acted in the name of the balance of payments and the gold outflow. It is asking the American worker—especially the Negro—to balance America's payments imbalance with continued or added joblessness.

More jobs are needed because there can be no lasting prosperity without them. More jobs are needed because the American Negro cannot be expected to sit still while he is condemned increasingly to payless paydays. More jobs are needed because we invite explosion with today's lack of opportunity for new workers.

Business has had its fast tax write offs and tax credit but has failed to produce the necessary jobs. Business has had record profits during the past year, but the jobs have not been forthcoming.

The time has come for a people-oriented tax cut of significant magnitude. The time has come for public sector programs sufficient to the needs of the people. The warning signals again are flying. Especially now, protracted economic levelling off or more recession will be intolerable.

The Job Lag

A recent Labor Dep't study should be of great concern to the nation. This study shows that job growth in the private sector of industry is lagging badly.

Between 1957 and 1962, about 2.4 million new nonfarm jobs were added in the United States. That's a total gain of only about half a million a year —far less than the increase in the labor force.

More startling is the revelation that fewer than a million of these new jobs were added in the private sector. The big growth came in local and state governments which had to provide more teachers, police, sanitation forces, and the like to meet the demands of a growing population.

But government cannot be depended upon forever to provide jobs in a private enterprise economy. Sooner or later the need for more taxpayers in the private economy will limit job opportunities in the public sector.

Labor Sec. Wirtz has attributed the lag in private jobs to a slow growth rate. This is part of the story. The fact is, however, that last year the real increase in goods and services was six percent. Yet joblessness was as great at the end of the year as at the start. Higher GNP alone apparently is no longer the answer. Part of the answer lies in the quality of growth—the kinds of goods and services produced.

By now, this nation should have drawn a clear lesson from the advance of automation and electronics. New techniques are all too obviously wiping out more jobs than they create. While the impact is most dramatic in goods-producing industry and on the farm, it has already become noticeable in white collar and the services.

Part of the answer must lie in greater leisure—earlier retirement, longer vacations, and shorter hours. This is the true significance of the new breakthroughs in steel and aluminum.

Rauh Appointed

Joseph L. Rauh, Jr., Washington counsel of the United Auto Workers since 1951, has been named general counsel of the union. Harold Cranefield, formerly general counsel, had requested to be relieved of his duties and will continue as legal consultant. Rauh has represented the UAW in the Federal courts, before federal agencies and before Congressional Committees.

Vicious Attacks Upon NLRB Stepped Up in Dixie Press

Although it is simply carrying out the law's intent without favor, the National Labor Relations Board is being subjected to increasing attack. To hear these attacks, it would be thought that the Board invariably favors labor. Such is far from the case.

The Board's action in the case of the United Furniture Workers Local 270 and the Ft. Smith (Ark.) Chair Co. would indicate that the Board is strictly legal in its interpretations.

Local 270 went on strike against the Ft. Smith Co. with whom it had held a contract for many years. The strike was over wages and working conditions. The company refused to bargain and fired all 206 workers although strikes to enforce bargaining are a protected activity.

A trial examiner found the company guilty of unfair labor practices and ordered reinstatement. The finding was overturned by the two-to-one decision of a Board panel consisting of Chmn. McCulloch, Leedom, and Brown. McCulloch and Leedom voted to uphold the company.

At issue in the situation was a technicality. The Taft-Hartley law requires the filing of advance notice of a strike with the Federal Mediation Service and the state department of labor. So far as could be determined, the union filed no such notice. The strike, therefore, was found to be unlawful.

Vicious editorials attacking the NLRB are appearing with monotonous regularity in the Southern press and elsewhere. Most of these are canned aditorials that distort and rely upon half-truth.

Attacks from Dixiecrat Strom Thurmond and Rep. Phil Landrum (D., Ga.), co-authors of Landrum-Griffin, have been played up in the South. These attacks allege NLRB interference with free speech because an examiner recommended that an election conducted in an atmosphere of fear induced by pro-employer community leaders be set aside.

Rep. James G. O'Hara (D., Mich.), Rep. Frank Thompson (D., N. J.) and Rep. Roman Pucinski (D., Ill.) recently took the House floor in an eloquent 60-minute defense of the NLRB. Although they replied effectively to Rep. Landrum, Southern papers failed to mention the rebuttal.

Sen. Thurmond, Rep. Landrum and Rep. Robert Griffin (R., Mich.), are trying to strip the Board of its right to process unfair labor practice charges. Answering this demand, Rep. Pucinski noted that it has been an old favorite of the NAM and the U. S. Chamber of Commerce.

Pucinski noted that some two years ago he headed a subcommittee that looked into Board procedure and found needless delays in processing charges. He pointed out that these delays have been largely eliminated. He said that if the 14,000 unfair labor practice charges filed in fiscal 1962 had to go to the courts as proposed by the board's opponents, delays would be interminable.

IUD BULLETIN

Published Monthly by the

INDUSTRIAL UNION DEPARTMENT, AFL-CIO

Executive Officers

WALTER P. REUTHER, President
JAMES B. CAREY, Secretary-Treasurer

Jacob Clayman
Administrative Director

Nicholas Zonarich
Organizational Director

Vice-Presidents

I. W. Abel
J. A. Beirne
George Burdon
Joseph Curran
Karl Feller
Max Greenberg
A. F. Hartung
Albert J. Hayes
Ralph Helstein
O. A. Knight
Walter L. Mitchell
Paul L. Phillips
William Pollock
Frank Rosenblum
Louis Stulberg
Arnold Zander

Director of Publications and Public Relations: Oscar Jager

Labor Blasts Higher Interest

Federal Reserve Board action in lifting the discount rate from three to 3.5 percent has been termed "incredible" by IUD and Auto Worker Pres. Walter P. Reuther.

The discount rate is the price banks pay for money. Interest rates are scaled upward from this rate. The action will mean higher interest costs to small business, those who buy on installment plans and eventually to home buyers.

The FRB action was also hit by AFL-CIO Pres. Meany who termed it "outrageous" and urged an immediate "meaningful" tax cut to offset the "ill-considered" action.

Reuther noted that the higher discount rate "will inevitably have an adverse effect upon economic activity."

"It is difficult to understand," he said, "the reasoning which holds that the domestic economy must be braked in the name of the balance of payments. There are less painful ways to halt the outflow of U. S. capital and to slow down the pace of foreign borrowing in the United States."

Reuther stressed that America needs least of all a monetary policy of a deflationary nature. He called current policies "an invitation to new recession" and pointed out that recent studies have indicated doubt about the ability to stem the gold outflow with higher interest rates.

The Administration and the FRB have been trying to keep domestic capital home and to attract foreign capital by "operation nudge." This has involved driving up so-called "short-term" interest rates and holding down "long-term" rates.

Short-term rates are those paid on Treasury bills and other government and private obligations that must be paid back in 90 days, or within some othed relatively short period. Idle money is usually invested in this kind of obligation. "Operation nudge" is supposed to keep these funds home.

It is possible to raise short-term rates within limits without affecting long terms. But, as recent experience has shown, constant forcing up of short terms generally means higher interest rates all around.

The Treasury began to pay three percent on its short-term obligations to keep "hot money" from going abroad. Banks were able to borrow from the reserve at three percent. They bought higher interest Treasury notes and bills and made a profit on turnover. The FRB then raised the discount rate.

Holding the Standard High

All was not harmony within the FRB over the higher rate. J. T. Robertson, a member of the seven-man governing board, voted against the hike and made his views public. Robertson said that the action was uncalled for in view of "our high level of unemployment."

The action was defended by FRB Chmn. William McChesney Martin who, as always, seemed to feel that high interest does not have any major impact on jobs.

The U. S. currently pays out more to the world than she takes in, although her trade balance—excess of exports over imports—is the highest in the world. The problem arises from the need to pay for troops abroad, tourism, foreign military aid, U. S. direct investments abroad and foreign borrowing in the U. S. The U. S. —or any other nation—can't play international banker on the basis of the world's present gold production, unless other means are taken to protect its currency.

The best answer is a booming economy which would draw capital like a lodestone because of the ability to make money. Barring this, a nation can legitimately defend its currency by other means. Most nations tax borrowing by foreigners and place limitations upon the ability of domestic capital to go abroad.

A better answer is a new currency arrangement. A halting step has been taken in this direction with the establishment of the International Monetary Fund. Experts like Robert Triffin of Yale have urged a kind of international federal reserve to do the world's banking so that there would not be runs on national currencies.

President Kennedy took limited steps in these directions in his recent call to Congress. He called for an interest equalization tax on the sale of foreign securities in the United States. Later, however, Canada, which accounts for more than half of all foreign securities, was exempted on new issues.

The President also is planning cuts of $900 million in U. S. spending abroad. He has asked authority to borrow $500 million in foreign currency from the International Monetary Fund. This latter step will permit the U. S. to repay limited claims in foreign currency rather than in gold. The IMF step is movement toward world currency reform.

Labor's view that higher interest rates are no answer was bolstered by a recent study of the conservative Brookings Institution of Washington, D. C. The study found a need for new world currency arrangements because there simply isn't enough gold to finance growing world transactions. It also reported that policies now followed to close the U. S. payments gap will create deflation in the free world. It opposed deflationary higher interest at home.

Meanwhile, Nat Goldfinger, AFL-CIO research director, said in a radio news conference that the current balance of payments deficit of $3.2 billion out of a total output of $580 billion should not be cause for panic. He charged that the FRB is currently "banker dominated."

Citizens Moving In School Dispute

New York City's Public Education Association, a citizens' group, is moving to keep the schools open in September.

PEA is calling together the 33 organizations represented in its coordinating committee to find means of averting a strike by the United Federation of Teachers.

The organization wants to suggest a plan to settle the outstanding dispute which has seen city and state officials turn their backs on salary increases and other improvements.

Dr. Frederick McLaughlin, PEA director, said his organization has no intention to act as mediator or to enter negotiations. He indicated that a plan might be suggested to both the Board of Education and the Teachers.

Dr. McLaughlin talked about support among his groups for a $10 million to $15 million package for better salaries and school conditions. He has indicated that between $5 million and $6 million would go for salaries now.

The UFT had originally sought $56 million but has since cut this in half to $28 million. The school board has rejected all increases and proposed a two-year contract with unspecified increases next year. The union has rejected this proposal. Dr. McLaughlin has said that community groups would "take up the cudgels" and press for funds for salaries and improvements.

Charles Cogan, UFT president, has predicted that 30,000 of the city's 40,000 teachers will go on strike on Sept. 9, when the schools open, unless there is a settlement. He has pointed out that the teachers were bound by a no-strike pledge only for the duration of their contract which expired last June 30.

Cogan recently sent a wire to the Board of Education urging a stepped up pace of negotiations. The Board has taken the position that it has no funds for school salaries or improvements. Appeals to Mayor Robert Wagner and Gov. Nelson Rockefeller have been fruitless. Earlier, UFT had indicated where additional funds could be found.

High Growth Rate

Government figures show that Gross National Product last year was $555 billion, a rise of seven percent over 1961. After allowing for higher prices, growth was six percent. Despite this growth rate, unemployment averaged about 5.5 percent.

STRIKE CONTINUES. Shown here are members of the International Woodworkers Union and the Lumber and Sawmill Workers, a unit of the Carpenters, as they picketed a plant of U. S. Plywood in the Northwest. Some 16,000 workers were locked out by four other firms after 4,000 struck against U. S. Plywood and St. Regis Paper.

Unions Win First Contract In West Coast Timber Strike

The West Coast lumber strike is solid and the two unions concerned—the Int'l Woodworkers of America and the Lumber and Sawmill Workers—have dented employer ranks.

The strike was originally directed against U. S. Plywood and the St. Regis Paper Co. Four other major producers—Weyerhaeuser, Rayonier, Int'l Paper and Crown Zellerbach—retaliated by locking out their employees. Altogether, 4,000 workers went on strike and another 16,000 workers were locked out. The unions have filed unfair labor practice charges against the employers who locked out their workers.

The two unions agreed a year ago to forgo wage increases when the firms pleaded poverty, only to find later that they were making excellent profits. This year when the companies again refused to grant improved wages and working conditions, the unions struck the two firms after contracts had terminated.

The strike has since spread to plants of the Georgia-Pacific Co. which has gone along with the newly formed employer association of the big six companies. So far, Georgia-Pacific has refused to budge despite the closing down of its plants.

The strike is beginning to pinch the big companies, who now find one large firm with a new contract. First to settle was Simpson Timber which employs 5,000 workers.

Simpson has settled for a 33.5 cent an hour package in a new three-year contract. The union has called this "the wedge to get settlements with other employers."

The Big Six group recently was reported to have offered a 26-cent package but both sides were still far apart as this was written. The unions have asked a 35-cent package, including wages, better travel time, and a joint study committee on automation.

Negotiations were reported about to begin with the Timber Operators Council representing some 200 employers with 60,000 union workers. One other big firm—Boise-Cascade—is also operating. These firms now are producing in a tight supply situation. While a spokesman for the Timber Council said the Simpson settlement didn't represent a pattern, it was known that the view wasn't unanimous with Council members.

Federal mediators are conducting separate talks with the two unions involved and the struck timber companies in Portland, but an early settlement was considered unlikely.

Meanwhile in a separate development, two other unions signed a new one-year contract with a group of 49 West Coast pulp and paper mill operators. Signing the new pact for 20,000 members were the Int'l Brotherhood of Pulp, Sulphite and Paper Mill Workers and the United Papermakers and Paperworkers. The pact was reported to have been approved in a referendum vote of the affected groups of workers.

Power Struggle

The power structure in the Senate was dented slightly last month with a setback for Dixiecrat Sen. A. Willis Robertson (D., Va.), chairman of the Banking and Currency Committee.

Robertson was overruled by a seven-to-six committee majority that crossed party lines. The amount of money involved was a piddling $4,700, but the setback was a jolt to the Senate establishment.

The issue was out-of-town hearings for the "truth-in-lending" bill, sponsored by Sen. Paul Douglas (D., Ill.). The measure is supported by consumers, labor, and even some banks. It is vigorously opposed by credit sellers and high-interest money lenders. These groups want to shut off publicity on the high costs of consumer credit and to defeat the bill. Out-of-Washington hearings would center attention on the need for action.

The bill is the brainchild of Sen. Douglas, who heads a subcommittee with jurisdiction over the bill. In 1962, the Senator asked Robertson to authorize out-of-town hearings. The Virginian said in writing that he could not authorize such hearings but that if the Subcommittee voted for them he would sign the necessary vouchers.

Early this year, Sen. Douglas' subcommittee voted for the hearings. Sen. Robertson refused to authorize the expenditures. Sen Douglas then offered to take out a second mortgage on his house to raise the money. Robertson replied by calling the subcommittee vote invalid because it took place after 12 noon on a day when the Senate was in session.

Finally, a full committee meeting was convened. Supporting Douglas were the following Senators: Clark (Pa.), Proxmire (Wisc.), Williams (N. J.), Muskie (Me.), Neuberger (Ore.), McIntyre (N. H.), Democrats, and Javits, Republican. Opposed were Sparkman (Ala.) and Long (Mo.), Democrats, and Bennett (Utah), Tower (Tex.), Simpson (Wyo.), Dominick (Colo.), Republicans.

Gets State Post

Terrell R. Sheffield, member of Local 276 of the United Automobile Workers, has been named Security Labor Representative of the Texas Employment Commission. He is one of four labor representatives whose job is to educate both workers and employers on the State's employment program.

IMPROVED TRAINING. CWA Pres. Joseph A. Beirne is shown as he testified before a House Labor subcommittee in support of a broadened Manpower Development and Training Act. Shown with Beirne is Sylvia Gottlieb, his assistant and CWA research director.

Significant Overtime Cited As Cause of Unemployment

America is faced with a "picture of significant unemployment" on the one hand and "substantial overtime in many key industries" on the other, Joseph A. Beirne, president, Communications Workers of America, told the House Select Committee on Labor in recent manpower testimony.

Beirne registered his union's support for improved training allowances, easing of eligibility requirements for training, relocation allowances equal to those in the Trade Expansion Act, better commuting travel allowances and elimination of local and state limitations on job availability for trainees.

Beirne reported that in his industry, the average workweek for 560,000 employees was 39.9 hours. The average, however, hid a 37.5 hour week for telephone operators and a 44.1-hour week for plant craftsmen. Each group approximated 30 percent of the total work force.

Interestingly, Beirne said, the plant group was the only one to experience layoffs in 1962 and is the only one "in which the hiring of new employees is and has been at a standstill in many parts of the country."

"CWA estimates that if no overtime had been worked in the telephone industry in 1962 in the male plant group, employment would have been available for approximately 17,250 young male employees," Beirne said.

He estimated that with a 35-hour workweek for all employees, 75,000 jobs would have been opened up. He charged that Bell is trying to lengthen the workweek for clerical employees and that the company is seeking to go to a seven-day week, 24 hours daily, in its new automatic billing and other computer operations.

He said that these machines are ending the myth that clerical workers' jobs are closely related to management. He added that if the problem can't be solved at the bargaining table, it may be necessary for the union to come to Congress for relief. He said that while CWA supports a stronger training bill, so far such activity has made "no appreciable dent" in unemployment.

Beirne urged action to restrict overtime by requiring two-and-one-half to triple time pay for hours in excess of seven in any day and pointed to a resolution to that effect adopted by his convention. He also urged formation of a Bureau of Automation in the Labor Dep't.

In earlier testimony, IUE Pres. and IUD Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey urged tax cuts, federal spending and public works to make more job opportunities. Without these, he said, "the effect of retraining will give us better trained unemployed workers." He supported amendments to improve eligibility for training, provide literacy courses where needed, postpone the date required for 50-50 state matching funds, and improve relocation allowances.

Labor Fights for Rights Law

Organized labor put its full support behind the President's civil rights bill last month, urging Congress to go even further. At the same time, labor took steps to accelerate its own campaign against discrimination.

Labor's support for the President's bill was registered in testimony of AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany and IUD and Auto Worker Pres. Walter P. Reuther.

Labor also joined with the leadership Conference on Civil Rights in urging that a Fair Employment Practices Commission provision be included in the omnibus civil rights bill. Among spokesmen who urged this upon Rep. Emanuel Celler (D., N. Y.) were Andrew J. Biemiller, AFL-CIO legislative director, and Jack Conway, executive assistant to the IUD president.

Speaking for the Leadership Conference after meeting with the House Judiciary chairman, Clarence Mitchell of the National Ass'n for the Advancement of Colored People said that the group had been assured that Celler would "entertain a motion" in committee to add an FEPC provision.

In the Senate, meanwhile, the Judiciary Committee, headed by Dixiecrat James Eastland (D., Miss.) is moving at a snail's pace in its hearings on sections of the bill dealing with voting rights and school desegregation. Sen. Kenneth Keating (R., N. Y.) accused the committee of engaging in a filibuster. For five straight days, the committee required Atty. Gen. Robert Kennedy to appear before it to answer badgering questions.

"We have been insisting for a long time that establishing and maintaining full and equal rights for Negro Americans is a matter of 'here and now.' We have done this in the full knowledge that not all individual units of the trade union movement agree with the policies adopted, without apparent dissent, at trade union conventions," AFL-CIO Pres. Meany said in his House testimony.

Meany urged Congress action to help the trade union movement "translate principle into practice." He declared that the time for action has come and said that there now is an "overwhelming national consensus in support of equal rights."

Testifying later, IUD and UAW Pres. Reuther said that the President's bill (H. R. 7152) is a "vital and necessary beginning" toward a federal civil rights code "that will guarantee all Americans equality in law and equality in fact."

Reuther urged that the measure be strengthened and said that if the bill is weakened "one scintilla" the committee will have failed the nation.

RIGHTS MARCH. John Swainson, former governor of Michigan, Walter P. Reuther, and the Rev. Martin Luther King were among the front line leaders of Detroit's recent mammoth civil rights parade which brought out 100,000 marchers in the biggest demonstration of its kind yet held in the U. S.

Reuther described the Administration bill as a "moderate and restrained" proposal. He asserted that a Fair Employment Practices Commission, federal voting registrars, and a requirement that all school districts commence to desegregate "here and now" are in order.

"Can anyone seriously argue," he asked, "that Congress has the power to regulate the color of the margarine that goes on the restaurant table but not the color of the citizen who sits at that table?"

He said a Negro seeking service at a small lunch counter can be just as hungry as one who seeks service at a Howard Johnson restaurant. He answered the Mrs. Murphy rooming house argument by pointing out that the "right to choose roomers in one's own residence is one thing but this right of privacy has no applicability in a small commercial hotel, a small restaurant, a bowling alley or a barber shop."

Reuther urged that Title III of the bill, which would authorize the Attorney General to institute civil action for school desegregation upon receipt of a complaint, be approved as a first step. He pointed out that in 1960, both parties pleged action along these lines with the Democrats calling for full desegregation by 1963. He pointed out that only 0.3 of one percent of deep south Negro children are in desegregated classes.

He urged a penalty for discriminatory practices, pointing out that the law regulates the way people drive cars and that he saw no reason that there can't be legislation "that regulates this basic human problem."

When it comes to auto traffic, he noted: "We have a fellow on a motorcycle with a blue uniform. When you go through a red light, he gives you a $10 ticket and it's that $10 that accelerates the educational process."

In accelerating labor's own drive, AFL-CIO Pres. Meany announced a five-man committee to step up its antidiscrimination drive. Meany said that the committee's first task will be to mount a campaign in 30 to 40 major cities to "wipe out discrimination where it exists—on the jobs, in the schools, in the voting booths, in the housing developments, stores, theaters, or recreation areas."

Meany will chair the special five-man committee. Other members named are: AFL-CIO Sec.-Treas. William F. Schnitzler; IUD Pres. Walter P. Reuther; Building Trades Pres. C. J. Haggerty; Sleeping Car Porters Pres. A. Philip Randolph.

Meany notified President Kennedy that the committee is ready to work with his Administration in wiping out discriminatory practices. He also announced that staffs of international unions will be recruited and assigned to the committee and that directors of key AFL-CIO staff committees will work closely with it.

In his letter to Pres. Kennedy, Meany reiterated labor's full support of civil rights legislation before Congress, including legislation for equal employment opportunity.

Labor Gives Full Backing To Fair Job Practices Law

Full backing for fair employment practices legislation was registered by AFL-CIO spokesmen last month.

Support came in testimony before a Senate Labor subcommittee conducting hearings on bills introduced by Sens. Humphrey (D., Minn.), Clark (D., Pa.) and Case (R., N. J.). Urging a strong fair employment practices act were AFL-CIO Pres. George Meany and Steelworker Pres. David J. McDonald.

Meany said that it is time for the nation to "stop talking" and to act because the "atmosphere today is different."

While reiterating his support for strong civil rights action in other areas, Meany stressed that "true equality of opportunity cannot come about for our deprived minorities without equality of access to employment."

Meany urged action by the Congress and the Administration to "create jobs and qualify people to fill them." He said that without jobs for all, jobs for Negroes cannot be had "no matter how fair our employment practices."

The AFL-CIO head stressed that the trade union movement knows that it has civil rights problems within its own ranks. He added that although progress has been made, the AFL-CIO has only limited powers and manpower for policing its 60,000 locals.

"Ours is not a monolithic organization. It is a confederation of unions. The only sanction which we can use against a union is to expel it from our organization. And if we expel a union we have done nothing to eliminate its discriminatory practices," he said.

He pointed out that the only federal power to eliminate job discrimination in private industry lies in government contract work and that the only enforcement power is contract cancellation. He called for a broad federal statute which will reach employers regardless of their status as government contractors.

The AFL-CIO president noted that employers in the service industries sometimes complain that they will suffer loss of patronage if they employ Negroes. He said this argument would lose validity if a law is applied equally to all.

Meany urged that any law permit the administering agency to issue complaints and make inspections. He pointed out that the Fair Labor Standards Act has been enforceable because of the inspection feature. He also pointed out that any program to open up jobs for Negroes at the expense of whites "is no program at all."

"I do not believe such perference is justified. No individual white worker should be penalized for past practices in which he may have had no voice. Furthermore, these demands reject equality of opportunity; they would merely replace one kind of discrimination with another," he added.

McDonald said that the United Steelworkers "wholeheartedly endorses and urges this Committee and the Congress to adopt legislation which would prohibit discrimination in employment."

The Steelworker president expressed strong opposition to a proposal by Sen. Barry Goldwater (R., Ariz.) which would deprive unions of services of the National Labor Board if they discriminate. He said that he had no fears for the USWA but that attacks on discrimination "must be made on an across-the-board basis, not directed to unions alone or, for that matter, only to employment in which a union is involved."

As reported elsewhere, labor has joined with the civil rights leadership in urging the consolidation of fair employment practices in the omnibus civil rights bill before the House Judiciary Committee.

A separate bill has been voted out of the House Labor Committee but is being blocked in the Rules Committee. The measure would establish a five-man commission empowered to issue orders banning discrimination in jobs.

Rep. James Roosevelt (D., Calif.) sponsor of the House FEP bill was scheduled to ask consolidation in an appearance before the House Judiciary Committee.

It is considered important to get the measures combined because of the Rules Committee blockade. To get any measure out of rules will probably involve the little-used "calender Wednesday" procedure which permits the chairman of the affected committee to call out a bill if he can get a clear calender. It would be virtually impossible to use this procedure twice.

Stoppages Decline

There were fewer work stoppages in the first half of 1963 than during any comparable period since the end of World War II. Labor Dep't figures show that there were 1,880 stoppages involving 540,000 workers and that 138 stoppages involving 108,000 workers carried over from 1962. Idleness accounted for only 0.16 percent of estimated worktime.

RIGHTS RALLY. This civil rights rally was held recently in New York by the Fur and Leather Department of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters.

Big Vacation Gain Won in Aluminum

The United Steelworkers of America has reached agreement with five major aluminum producers on revised contracts providing 10 weeks' vacation with 13 weeks' pay every five years.

Unlike the contract in steel, all employees eligible for vacations — those with more than one year's service—will receive this treatment. In the pioneering steel contracts, employees with 15 years or more of service received a total of 13 weeks' vacation every five years.

The new contract covers some 30,000 blue collar workers employed by Aluminum Co. of America, Kaiser Aluminum, Reynolds Metals, Olin Mathieson, and Ormet Corp.

The revised contracts also provide for an extension of 10 months to June 1, 1965, in the basic pacts which were due to expire at the end of next July.

Contracts between the big five and the Aluminum Workers Int'l Union had not been worked out at press time. AWIU represents about the same number of workers in the industry as does the USWA. A new contract between Alcoa and the United Auto Workers for 5,000 workers was also in the process of negotiation.

The new USWA pacts also provide improved insurance and sick and accident benefits. They were negotiated without formal reopening of contracts.

The new contract terms have been hailed by the United Steelworkers as a "significant" step toward greater job security and employment opportunity.

CIVIL RIGHTS TESTIMONY. This was the scene as IUD and UAW Pres. Walter P. Reuther appeared before the House Judiciary Committee to urge passage of the President's Civil Rights bill. Identified (L-R): Jack Conway, assistant to the IUD president; Joe Rauh, UAW general counsel; Reuther.

Congress Establishment Blocks Legislative Action

A liberal Republican has taken off on Congress inaction and termed the present session "the biggest and longest-running slow motion show to hit Washington in years."

Making the charge was Sen. Jacob Javits (R., N. Y.). Javits tried to lay the responsibility at the doorstep of the Administration and his claims were hit as a "political message" by Sen. Mike Mansfield (D., Mont.), majority leader.

The fact is that Congress has been engaging in a slow motion show. The fact also is that the GOP leadership has teamed up with conservative Democrats to make certain that the pace remains exasperatingly slow. Congress has done virtually nothing on a bipartisan basis during the current seven-month long session.

Behind Congressional inaction lies the "establishment" which uses seniority prerogatives and every trick permitted by the rules of the Senate and House to stall action. Heading the establishment are powerful committee chairmen, the minority leadership, and the men who control appropriations.

A bipartisan group headed by Sens. Clark (D. Pa.) and Case (R., N. J.) set out earlier this year to modernize archaic Senate rules. Some 30 Senators lined up with the bipartisan move. While hearings on a resolution were promised by the Senate Rules Committee, headed by Sen. Carl Hayden (D., Ariz.), the attempt so far has gotten nowhere.

In the House, the powerful Rules Committee says what can reach the floor and what can't. The Committee was enlarged at the start of the Kennedy Administration to give greater weight to its bills, but Rep. Howard Smith (D., Va.), has remained chairman. Smith has managed to sit on almost every essential bill. A bipartisan attempt to modernize the rules has passed almost unnoticed because Smith has been able to prevent it from getting off the ground.

Sen. Clark recently took the Senate floor to recite a tale of legislative woe. He reported that of 102 Administration recommendations, only four have been enacted into law. Over 70 percent haven't even reached the Senate calender, Clark noted.

"I do not believe it is telling secrets out of school to say that in many cases the chairmen of the relevant committees do not intend to take action on the President's program because the President's recommendations are not in line with the views of the Senate establishment," Clark said.

Many key committees are headed by Southerners who are using a "sit down" on all issues to prevent civil rights legislation.

Clark urged four changes in the rules: permit Committees to meet while the Senate is in session; a rule of germaneness, requiring speakers to stick to the issue; cloture—end to filibustering—by majority vote of the Senate; immediate consideration by the Senate Rules Committee of proposals to modernize the Senate. His talk fell on deaf ears.

ABC Makes New Organizing Gain

Seven hundred new union members have been gained as the result of a successful organizing campaign by the American Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union at the bakery plants of the Cushman Baking Co. in Lynn, Mass., and Portland, Maine.

The initial victory took place at the Cushman plant in Lynn, Mass., when the ABC won a National Labor Relations Board election on July 11, receiving 172 votes against 150 cast for "no union." This was a run-off election due to the inconclusive results of balloting which took place on June 20 and in which the Teamsters' Union participated. The Teamsters were eliminated from the run-off on July 11 because they placed last in the first vote.

Twelve days later, on July 23, the bakery employees at the Cushman Bakery plant in Portland voted for the ABC 166 to 95. There are about the same number of workers in the Portland unit as in the Lynn plant.

Despite the expected opposition by the company, the workers' interest in trade unionism, sparked by effective work of ABC supporters inside both plants, carried the organizing effort to its successful conclusion.

Committee OK's More ARA Funds

The House Banking and Currency Committee has revived hope for a stronger area redevelopment program by voting out a truncated version of an added authorization measure that has already passed the Senate.

The Senate approved $455 million more for ARA which has used up most of the funds granted in its original appropriation. As approved by the House Banking Committee, $100 million has been trimmed from the proposed appropriation. The Committee version would also prohibit ARA from financing hotels and motels in depressed areas.

The expanded ARA program was originally defeated in the House by a 209-204 vote. Passage in the Senate gave the measure new life. Charges that a deal has been made to get Dixie backing for the bill in return for Northern support for a $250 million cotton export subsidy bill have been denied.

VICTORY TALK. The United Papermakers and Paperworkers regained bargaining rights at the 2,300-worker Oxford Paper Co., Rumford, Me., by defeating UMW Dist. 50 by a vote of 1,055 to 725. Drive was part of a coordinated effort involving UPP, IUD, and the AFL-CIO. Identified: Nello Ricardi, AFL-CIO; Glenn Hawthorne, UPP; Donald O'Leary, president UPP Local 900; Frank Wiseman, UPP representative assigned to the IUD New England drive; Warren Olsen, UAW representative assigned to IUD.

Members Paid Profit Share But Contract Fight Goes on

Payment of $500,000 in profit sharing has marked another gain in the battle of the United Steelworkers to require the Production Plating Co. of Lebanon, Ohio, to honor its union contract.

Profit share payments were made to 160 members of Local 4779 USWA as part of management's obligation under a two-year contract with the Production Plating Div. of Huyler Co. of New York, former owner of the firm. The contract runs until August of 1964, but Milton Keiner, president of Triton Corp., the purchaser of the plant, has refused to honor it.

Profit shares run to $5,000 in some cases. Fifty-four union members still awaiting recall to their jobs were among those receiving checks.

Al Whitehouse, Director USWA Dist. 25, expressed satisfaction with payout but stressed that the battle to restore the union contract and job rights will go on without letup.

The fight at Production Plating began last December when Keiner purchased the plant. The new owner said that he would close the plant and move to Indianapolis rather than deal with the "irresponsible" union. He then refused to recognize a "successor" clause in the contract.

The United Steelworkers had contract relations with Keiner's predecessor for 12 years without a strike. During that period, it was necessary to process only seven grievances to the arbitration stage.

Keiner closed the plant for two weeks and sent discharge notices to all workers. He then reopened the plant, rehiring on a selective basis which discriminated against active unionists. He then informed the workers that "this plant can and will be run without a union."

The union obtained a temporary injunction prohibiting the hiring of replacements. When this was vacated, the union struck the plant and filed unfair labor practice charges. Enlisting the support of the local Chamber of Commerce, Keiner turned Lebanon into a miniature police state.

On March 22, the NLRB issued a six-page complaint charging that Keiner had violated the "successor" clause of the contract and the rights of its employees to self-organization. In a rare action, the NLRB general counsel went into federal court in Cincinnati. The court issued a temporary restrainer prohibiting Keiner from closing, threatening to close, refusing to hire USWA members, or threatening workers with job loss for joining the union.

Local 4779 suspended its strike when the employer made a commitment not to hire replacements. Huyler, the former owner, agreed to honor its profit sharing obligations. Hearings on union charges have since been completed by a trial examiner but an intermediate report has not yet been issued.

Race Bars Banned In Apprenticeship

Certification of apprenticeship programs which discriminate will be denied by the federal government. Without certification, those in such programs will be ineligible for jobs on federal contract work.

New regulations were made public by Labor Sec. Wirtz, who pointed out that they are designed to insure equality of opportunity within the nation's apprenticeship programs. Wirtz promulgated the regulations in response to a recent Presidential directive requiring "the admission of young workers to apprenticeship programs to be on a completely nondiscriminatory basis."

The Labor Dep't certifies programs through its Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training. Programs certified henceforth must meet these criteria:

- Apprentices must be selected on an equal opportunity basis determined by fair tests, physical requirements, and other merit standards. A "significant number of minority group workers within a program will be viewed as proof of fairness.
- Where previously developed lists of applicants for apprenticeships are not in harmony with the first standard, they must be disregarded to the "extent necessary" to provide equal opportunity.
- After selection has been made, it must be shown that a program does not discriminate in employment to which it is related—job assignments, pay rates, promotion, demotion, layoffs, or other conditions.
- Where apprentices are selected from a given pool, as in selection from employees of a firm, admission to the pool and selection for apprenticeship must be on a nondiscriminatory basis.

The President's recent order on apprenticeship also directed review of federal construction programs to prevent racial discrimination in hiring by rejection of presently qualified Negro workers or indirectly by exclusion from apprenticeship training.

Living Costs Jump

The Consumer Price Index jumped 0.4 percent in June to a new record high. Prices advanced for most goods and services, with substantial increases for food, tobacco and used cars. Prices were 1.2 percent over June of last year chiefly because of higher food, housing and medical care costs.

WARM GREETING. Chmn. Elmer Holland (D., Pa.), had a warm greeting for IUE Pres. James B. Carey when the latter appeared before Holland's Labor subcommittee to testify on behalf of a strengthened Manpower Development and Training Act.

Atomic Measure Fought by Labor

A bill to permit the Atomic Energy Commission to turn over fissionable materials to private ownership is being fought by the AFL-CIO.

The law now permits only the government, through the AEC, to manufacture and own fissionable materials. AEC can and does lease such materials out to private industry but its use is subject to federal supervision.

AEC has been most generous with its contractors. It has waived fees in many cases on the grounds that free use is essential to development of the peaceful atom.

Proposals for private ownership of atomic materials are being advanced in the name of free competition, private enterprise and broader participation in applying atomic fuels to peaceful uses.

The federal government has spent billions of taxpayer money to develop atomic energy. With private ownership, control will pass out of government hands.

AFL-CIO Leg. Dir. Andrew J. Biemiller told the Joint Atomic Energy Commission, now conducting hearings, that surrender of federal ownership would result in benefit to big business monopoly at the expense of the community. He also stressed that the AFL-CIO is much concerned with the impact the measure could have on health and safety regulations.

"There is a strong and dangerous possibility," Biemiller said, "that authorization for private ownership of special nuclear materials will bring about a situation with a few multi-purpose companies like Westinghouse and General Electric in control of fabrication and manufacturing and with a handful of private utilities in control of the fuel market."

Protections in Steel Pact Consistent With Art. XXI

The "Experimental Agreement" included in the modified Steelworkers' contracts with the steel industry adds to job protection for union members but in no way infringes upon rights guaranteed by Article XXI of the AFL-CIO Constitution to other unions.

This has been made clear by USWA Pres. David J. McDonald who said as new agreements were concluded that USWA remained fully conscious of its obligations under Section XXI throughout the negotiations.

The "Experimental Agreement" spells out limitations upon contracting out of work, upon supervisors doing work falling within the bargaining unit, and upon scheduling of overtime while workers are on lay off.

Article XXI of the AFL-CIO Constitution provides for the settlement of internal disputes among affiliated unions. It deals with the question of "contracting out" in Section 3 which declares that each affiliate must "respect the established work relationship of every other affiliate." It prohibits agreement or collusion or the exercise of economic pressure to disrupt an established work relationship except with the consent of the union party to that relationship.

The "Experimental Agreement" runs from Aug. 1 of this year through Dec. 31 of next year. It agrees that the companies and union have existing rights and provides for certain supplemental "protections for bargaining unit employees or affirms existing management rights" in the area of contracting out.

Actually, the "Experimental Agreement" confirms past practices in line with the requirements of Article XXI.

It prohibits the contracting out for performance within the plant of production, service, day-to-day maintenance or repair work which has been performed regularly by bargaining unit employees. This could be changed only by mutual consent.

This means that the employees of an outside contractor could not come into a plant and perform work now done by USWA members. It would not bar the employer from sending out work which has been traditionally done by contractors outside the plant.

The agreement specifically provides for the maintenance of the existing status where some of the production, service, day-to-day maintenance and repair now is performed within the plant by bargaining unit employees and some by outside contractors.

It provides that where production, service, day-to-day maintenance and repair work within the plant have been performed by employees of outside contractors, such work may continue to be contracted out.

Other maintenance and repair work performed within the plant and the installation and reconstruction of equipment and productive facilities may not be contracted out unless the company can demonstrate that such a course is more reasonable than performance by bargaining unit employees. This could require the affected company to go to arbitration to prove that added contracting out of plant major maintenance or repair is the more feasible course and that it is not acting arbitrarily.

On the other hand, the agreement specifically provides that: "New construction including major installation, major replacement and major reconstruction of equipment and productive facilities at any plant may be contracted out." Sole limitation upon this provision is recognition by the parties of rights and obligations in effect at a plant prior to the new agreement.

The agreement also calls for the establishment of labor-management committees at each plant to resolve problems arising in connection with the operation of contracting out provisions. This committee may discuss all current problems in this area. Union members of the committee must be given notice of any significant items of work to be performed within a plant by an outside contractor's employees.

Jenkins Named To Labor Board

Howard Jenkins, Jr., a Republican, has been named by President Kennedy as a member of the National Labor Relations Board, replacing Philip Ray Rodgers whose term expired late this month.

Jenkins, a Colorado lawyer, is the first Negro ever appointed to the NLRB. He has been assistant commissioner of the Bureau of Labor-Management Reports.

The new NLRB appointee is the son of a letter carrier. He won his law degree from the University of Denver and did graduate work at New York University Law School. He served as a chief enforcement officer in the Rocky Mountain region for the War Labor Board and later taught at Howard University Law School.

Test Ban Viewed as Small Step

Despite opposition from the far right and some of the nation's military leadership, the Senate is expected to agree to a limited nuclear test-ban treaty. Hearings will probably go on for some time and debate will be sharp but the necessary two-thirds majority is expected to vote for a treaty.

A test ban by itself will not reduce levels of armaments or end the cold war. It will leave the big power blocs still armed to the teeth. But the ban will probably ease East-West tensions and could be the first halting step toward disarmament.

The world at large seems highly gratified by the new treaty. It should mean, at the least, that the air man breathes and the ocean waters upon which he depends will not be further contaminated by atomic fallout.

Executive officers of the Int'l Union of Electrical Workers have expressed the view that the treaty is a "first step" in "lifting the threat of global devastation and the annihilation of mankind." In a recent statement, they acclaimed the treaty as promising hope for disarmament and the achievement of enduring peace.

While the treaty will not limit the building of conventional and atomic weapons, it will probably halt the further development of superbombs and at least slow down the search for the will-o-the-wisp "absolute" weapon—the anti-missile missile.

This was indicated by Glenn T. Seaborg, chairman of the Atomic Energy Commission, who recently talked of the "coming freeze" in atomic weaponry.

In urging the test ban, Khrushchev called for the freezing of East-West arms budgets and, if possible, their reduction. Khrushchev has compelling internal reasons for arms reduction. The new Soviet middle classes are demanding more and better consumer goods. The chronic USSR farm crisis can be solved only by diverting capital from arms to the farms. These considerations—plus Soviet bloc strains and the challenge of Red China—may explain the present Soviet willingness to negotiate.

While total disarmament will probably remain a dream, arms reduction within a framework of national security is possible for both sides. And if arms are causing problems for the Soviet economy, they are also causing serious distortions in the U. S. economy. Failure to achieve and maintain an effective test ban will be an invitation to arms escalation, renewal of testing and possible annihilation.

'Whew!'

It will also mean an even more crushing burden of taxation and increasing denial of civilian sector needs for Americans.

Over the past decade, America has spent half-a-trillion on defense. Three years ago, the arms budget came to $46 billion. This year, at least $54 billion will be spent.

It was not for nothing that former President Eisenhower warned of the military-industrial complex. Total defense procurement alone this year will be more than $28 billion, an increase of more than $6 billion since the start of this decade.

About 100 giant companies get the bulk of defense contracts. Almost nine-tenths are let without competitive bidding. Because of such relationships, strong alliances have been built between the military and industry.

Defense creates jobs but it also distorts growth and increasing evidence indicates that it now is causing regional joblessness. Military spending is a poor economic reed upon which to lean since it means using resources and manpower for nonproductive purposes.

Defense contracts have become a way of redistributing national income. California gets most spending on a per-capita basis and Washington State, Utah and Colorado are not far behind. Kentucky, on the other hand, gets back almost nothing for its tax dollars.

"We are aware," Defense Sec. Robert McNamara has said, "that the award of new defense contracts and the establishment of new defense facilities in a particular area can make the difference between prosperity and depression."

Marquis Childs, nationally known columnist, has pointed out that defense is creating two Americas. There are, he said, areas like West Virginia with an eroded industrial base and the new thriving industrial areas created by defense. Even the industrial Midwest, he said, is "feeling the pull of industry" away to the big missile bases.

Defense accounts for an ever-increasing share of the federal budget which has remained about a sixth of gross national product over the last decade. The budget rose from $64 billion in 1955 to $89 billion last year but defense accounted for $16 billion of the $25 billion increase. There seems no doubt that defense spending is causing starvation of essential civilian public sector outlays.

America now spends about 11 percent of her national income on domestic and foreign military needs. This is twice as much as in West Germany or France. Japan has spent relatively little on defense. Growth has been far greater in these nations than at home. Without spending to maintain troops abroad, America would have no balance of payments problem.

Defense determines the kind of research and development we how have. R&D spending is rising at an astronomical rate, but two-thirds is federal money and much of the rest supplements direct government outlays. Government now determines the nature of research and $13.5 billion in federal funds this year will go into defense-related and space research.

Defense gets first call on our engineers. While there are 160,000 more engineers and scientists than in 1955, all but 30,000 have gone into federally supported projects. J. H. Holloman, assistant Commerce secretary, has warned that we are "robbing Peter to pay Paul" in this area.

Hubert Humphrey, majority Senate whip, has pointed out that 85 percent of every German research dollar is private and that as a result Germany is developing modern plant and new products. England, he noted, spends three-quarters of her research dollars on government military and related projects and has the slowest growth rate in industrial Europe.

"What is happening to our civilian economy, as we plow more and more of our scientific personnel, our brains, into the military and into space and into atomic energy for military purposes?" he asked.

Prof. Kenneth Boulding of Michigan State University is an authority on the economics of disarmament. He has stated that with proper planning disarmament will lead "to a much better state of the world than we now have."

Settlement Comes In Long Oil Strike

The year-long strike of the Oil, Chemical and Atomic Workers Local 4-367 against Dutch Shell at Pasadena, Tex., has come to a close.

Settlement came after a 27-hour bargaining session. Terms had not been announced as the IUD Bulletin went to press. Settlement was announced in Houston, Tex., by William E. Simkin, chief of the U.S. Conciliation Service.

The OCAW strike was a shining example of union solidarity. Throughout the year, not a single person within the bargaining unit who went on strike crossed the picket line. Only 48 bargaining unit workers failed to heed the strike call. The firm sought to continue operations with white collar, engineering and supervisory personnel.

Strikers received $20 weekly in strike benefits, and the union had distributed $1.5 million in benefits by last April.

The strike was the first in 10 years and came only after steady deterioration of working conditions. Shell was not satisfied with ever-rising productivity gains which has seen the bargaining unit shrink from 2800 to 2200 without reduction of output. Contract terms were subject to membership ratification and a vote was in progress at press time.

Student-Labor Conference Set

A joint IUD-Washington Student Conference Committee conference on Aug. 10, will look at the relationship of "American Students and American Unions."

The meeting is expected to bring together about 150 representative students now employed in intern programs by Congressmen, government agencies, unions and other organizations. About 10,000 students are employed in Washington in summer intern programs.

The conference will hear IUD Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey speak on "Civil Rights and the Labor Movement." Jack Conway, administrative ass't to IUD Pres. Reuther, will speak on "Automation, Employment and Jobs." Arnold Zander, president of the State, County and Municipal Employees, will speak on "Disarmament, Peace and the American Labor Movement." Luncheon speaker will be Rep. Robert W. Kastenmier (D., Wisc.), who will discuss "Students and the Unfinished Business of America."

SWEDISH EXPERTS. This panel of Swedes testified recently before a Senate Manpower Subcommittee headed by Sen. Joseph Clark (D., Pa.), on how management, labor, and government work together for full employment. Identified (L-R): Arne Geiger, president of the Swedish Confederation of Trade Unions; Berthil Kugelberg, head of the employers federation, and Ernst Michanek, Swedish labor undersecretary.

Survey Refutes AMA Claims On Voluntary Health Plans

A recent report of the University of Michigan's Survey Research Center has knocked into a cocked hat American Medical Ass'n claims that voluntary insurance plans are taking care of medical needs.

The Center has reported that more Americans are going more deeply into debt because of high medical costs. It found that 40 percent of families had larger medical bills last year than the year before, and that older people, especially, are becoming medical debtors.

While seven in ten Americans had medical coverage of some kind, almost half of those with big bills had no insurance or found themselves without coverage for their ailments. A fourth of all families owed for doctor, dentist, or hospital bills. This did not include debt to finance companies incurred for this purpose. Last year's average medical debt was $175, a jump of $60 over 1957.

Medical expenses were somewhat above average in families with heads over 65 years of age. More than half of families with children under six had heavy medical expenses.

Nearly a third of those with big bills had no medical insurance and another 16 percent had insurance that covered nothing on their bills. Over half those over 65 had no medical or hospital insurance. About 1.8 million families had bills over $1,000 not covered by insurance. Most with large debt paid partly out of current income; a tenth borrowed; a fourth used savings. Old folks especially used savings reserves.

The Survey Center's findings bear out contentions of the National Council of Senior Citizens which reported recently that the new, much-advertised old age health policies are "deceptive, inadequate and much too costly for older people."

The Council has reported that it expects the House Ways & Means Committee to hold hearings on the current old-age hospital care bill proposed by the Administration. This bill would provide several options, one of which would permit up to 45 days of hospital care for retirees without any cost. It would also cover all retired persons over 65, whether under Social Security or otherwise.

The Council has urged a letter-writing campaign without delay. It stressed that letters to Congressmen are required to counter massive AMA pressure.

The Survey Center's study also refuted the AMA contention that Kerr-Mills programs are taking care of old age medical needs. As of last June 30, only half the states had programs and five of the states accounted for nearly nine-tenths of all payments. In some states, the program is clearly being used as a substitute for former medical relief programs.

High Profits Reported

A recent Wall Street Journal roundup shows that profits of the big corporations reached a record rate during the second quarter. On the basis of reports of 498 companies, net income after taxes was running at $3,304,968,000 annually, up 15.9 percent over the same quarter of last year.

Union Organizers Beaten As Local Police Stand By

For the second time in less than three months, union organizers seeking to leaflet the Hartwell, Ga., plant of the Monroe Shock Absorber Co. were subjected to mob violence.

Last July 18, six union officials were harassed, beaten, and forced to leave town by a mob that surged out of the plant, obviously with the blessing of the company. Local police refused protection although they and the mayor had been notified of the handbilling.

Victims of the mob action were: Pat Greathouse, UAW vice-president; John Chupka, Textile Worker secretary-treasurer; Nick Zonarich, IUD organizational director; Jim Pierce, IUD Carolinas coordinator; Joe Mooney, assistant to Greathouse; Ken Young, then Zonarich's assistant.

None of the six union officials was seriously injured but all were slugged repeatedly while local cops watched with partisan interest. Chupka was thrown to the ground and beaten with a stick.

The story began last April when seven organizers from the IUD's Carolinas campaign were threatened at knife point. The IUD had been requested by the UAW to handbill the plant because its Carolina operation is headquartered nearby. Auto Workers now represents the workers at the main plant of the company at Monroe, Mich., and is seeking to organize a third plant at Cozad, Neb.

This time, law enforcement officers—including the Georgia Highway Patrol—had been requested to provide protection. Instead, the city police gave comfort to the mob. The Georgia Highway Patrol was nowhere in sight, although Gov. Carl Sanders, on July 15, had promised to safeguard the legal right of the union organizers to handbill on public property.

In the April attempt to handbill, the organizers had been stripped of their leaflets, threatened with knives and crowbars, and warned to "clear out or be killed." The second effort was made to determine whether police protection against company-inspired mobs would be provided.

Notified of the scheduled second effort, the mayor of Hartwell bluntly warned the UAW not to send organizers into town. On July 17, the nearest Georgia Highway patrol post was informed that the distribution would take place next day. A patrol lieutenant told organizers that he had been instructed to provide protection.

The following morning, the local sheriff was informed of the pending distribution. The sheriff and a patrol captain seemed entirely unconcerned.

As the organizers approached the plant, a "lookout" ran into the building and immediately thereafter the mob emerged, climbed into company trucks and made for the union men. Greathouse—who wore a UAW tee shirt—was first target. Leaflets were seized and burned and organizers were slugged. The assailants admitted that they were on company time and shouted that they wanted no "NAACP'ers" or "Communists" around.

When the union men sought to stand their ground, they were pushed and kicked uphill toward waiting local cops who made no move to provide legal protection. When Greathouse called for the arrest of two of the mob, he was informed that the watchers "didn't see a thing." When organizers reached their car, they found all tires slashed. They finally escaped the area in an "emergency" car waiting in Hartwell after the mob forced the one gas station willing to sell new tires to drop the idea.

After more than four hours, the organizers eluded the mob and left the state. They were forced to send a tow truck across the South Carolina line to rescue their disabled car.

The facts have been provided and depositions given to the Federal Bureau of Investigation, which now is gathering additional information.

The end is not yet in Hartwell. IUD and UAW officials are planning a new test with a sufficient number of Georgia union men on hand.

Digest Discontinued

Because of staff changes and greater emphasis on organizing and bargaining activity, the IUD Digest has been discontinued.

The quarterly first appeared in early 1956 and terminated publication with the winter 1963 issue. The magazine carried feature articles on national and labor issues. It had been designed both for information and to provide speech material.

While the magazine has been discontinued, other publications of the Department will continue to appear. This will include continuation of the Department's extensive pamphlet program.

NEW BOARD MEMBER. Howard Jenkins Jr. has been named by President Kennedy to replace Philip Ray Rodgers whose term as a member of the National Labor Relations Board has expired. The new member, a Republican, is the first Negro ever appointed to the Labor Board.

Bracero Program Pushed in Senate

Sen. Harrison Williams (D., N.J.) has called for a "determined" effort and strong public support to prevent approval in the Senate of a bill which would extend Public Law 78 for another year.

PL 78 authorizes the importation of Mexican Bracero labor which is used to undercut the wages of U.S. farm workers on the big factory farms. After a series of maneuvers, the Senate Agricultural Committee has approved an extension offered by Colorado Republican Sens. Allott and Dominick.

The Mexican labor program was passed as a Korean War measure over a decade ago and has been extended four times. Despite better enforcement, come 200,000 Braceros were imported last year.

The Bracero program extension was defeated in the House by a vote of 174 to 158. The big growers are now pushing for Senate approval as a means of getting the program extended.

In hearings before a Senate Migratory Labor Subcommittee headed by Sen. Williams, Labor Undersec. John Henning called extension "unthinkable" unless benefits now going to Braceros are also extended to U. S. nationals. Henning termed PL 78 a "bad law."

If the extension of the law is defeated in the Senate, the Bracero program will die on December 31. Sen. Williams has pointed out that the Agricultural Committee did not even hold hearings on S. 1703, the Allott-Dominick extension.

Pressures of Radical Right Rocking Republican Politics

The Republican Party is being rocked by pressures from a radical right now driving hard to capture control and nominate Barry Goldwater for President next year.

Goldwater's hopes were set back somewhat at the recent Governor's Conference in Miami where he was the subject of a blast from New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller.

Rockefeller hit hard at the radical right. He declared that the GOP was bound for oblivion if it accepted domination from "the vociferous and well-drilled elements" on the right who are "boring within the party."

"They have no concern with and offer no solution for the problems of chronic unemployment, of education and training, of housing, of racial injustice and strife, and all the other problems which must have answers if our democratic ideals are to be translated into living reality," the GOP hopeful charged.

Goldwater's friends have denied that he is a member of the radical right, but the Arizona Senator has done nothing to cut ties from the extremist wing. Goldwater has denied that he is a segregationist but his states' rights stand allies him closely with the nation's racists whether he likes it or not.

Rockefeller is seeking to make a comeback and offset his loss of popularity due to his divorce and remarriage. GOP Governors at Miami however were reported doubtful that he could overcome these political handicaps. They gave Goldwater a six-to-one lead. Popular polls show that Goldwater has slipped slightly, but give him a commanding lead over Rockefeller.

Neither Michigan GOP Gov. George Romney nor Pennsylvania Gov. William Scranton emerged from the Miami political brawl with added popularity. The latter wasn't even present and the former emerged as the only politician to correct a press conference statement with a press release.

The more sober-sided Eastern wing of the GOP now seems to be frantically searching for a way to stop Goldwater. This may yet become Rockefeller's role. Richard Nixon, now abroad, has called upon the GOP to fight radical right encroachment. Nixon, once again, is being mentioned as a hopeful. Sen. Thruston Morton (R., Ky.), a dark horse, seems to be courting the far right. He recently accepted an award from far right Americans for Constitutional Action which interlocks with the John Birch society.

Goldwater, while accepting far right support, seeks to become identified as "Mr. Conservative." He has already declared that he will oppose a nuclear test ban treaty. He has stated that he would let the Cubans take back Cuba, and that he would supply lots of U. S. aid to that end. He is committed to withdrawal of U. S. recognition of the Soviet Union and, if consistent, would put America on a new collision course.

Goldwater has stated that the income tax is evil but feels that it can't be repealed. He would cut federal spending and revise the tax code to "encourage" investment. He would push "right to work" laws, break up national unions as we know them, and forbid all union political activity. Whether or not he is a son of the Birchers, Goldwater obviously stands as a symbol of their hopes.

The Arizona Senator hasn't declared himself on the states' rights amendments being pushed by the extremists but these are not inconsistent with his stated views. They would let the states bypass Congress in amending the Constitution, create a super-court of state supreme court justices able to override the U. S. Supreme Court and nullify its apportionment decision. Thirteen states have approved the Constitutional amending procedure, 15 have approved the apportionment amendment and five the Court proposal. Altogether, 18 states have acted favorably on one or more of the far right proposals.

The aim of the states' rights movement with which Goldwater is identified is, in the words of Amherst Prof. Henry Steele Commager, to form a "less perfect union." This is the issue rocking the GOP now, and may be the central issue of the 1964 Presidential Campaign if the far right prevails.

Cream Skimmed

The "cream-of-the-crop"—those most easily retrained—have so far gone through the programs established by the Manpower Retraining and Development Act, Clint Fair, AFL-CIO legislative representative, told reporters in a recent radio interview. Fair said that the program must be "fortified" through the addition of training to improve basic educational levels. He also urged "overhauling" and upgrading of the nation's vocational education system.

MILLION DOLLAR INCOMES. The number of persons with incomes of a million or more has increased to the highest level since the end of the palmy twenties. Some 398 persons had average incomes of $2 million last year.

Million Dollar Incomes Increase

Those confiscatory upper bracket taxes notwithstanding, the rich grow richer. That conclusion inevitably follows from an examination of the latest statistics of the Internal Revenue Service.

The figures show that 398 super-millionaires reported incomes in excess of a million dollars in 1961. This was the greatest number since the year of the Great Crash, in 1929, when 513 taxpayers achieved such distinction.

Tax avoidance has become much more sophisticated since 1929. Much of upper bracket holdings are now invested in such things as state and municipal bonds which offer tax-free income. The use of tax losses to offset taxable gains has become almost a science. Seventeen persons with incomes of more than a million paid no taxes at all.

The U.S. tax structure dealt mercifully with the super-millionaire last year. The average income of the 398 was $2 million. After-tax income was $1.2 million.

The 398 super-millionaires are not to be confused with the ordinary garden variety millionaire. It is estimated that there are some 100,000 of latter merely "worth" a million or more.

The incomes of those at the top of the heap comes only in minor degree from salaries. Most comes from profits on the sale of stock and real estate, from dividends and interest, and from rents and royalties. Profits on stock and property sales are taxable at the "capital gains" rate which is much lower than that on earned income.

YOUTH RALLY. This meeting of youth, sponsored by the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions, drew 4,000 workers from 70 nations to a camp outside Vienna on the Hungarian border. Shown is the United Auto Worker delegation.

Commission on Automation To Be Named by President

President Kennedy has announced that he will appoint a commission on automation to make an intensive study of its impact and recommend needed legislation. The commission is to report by the end of next year.

The announcement was contained in a message dealing with the current rails dispute. Sen. Jacob Javits (R., N. Y.) said shortly thereafter that he and three liberal Democrats would introduce a resolution authorizing a commission to strengthen the Administration's hand.

"We cannot," said the President, "stop progress." He added that it is the country's responsibility that "this public blessing" does not become a "public curse" to displaced workers.

As the President announced his panel, reports showed that investment in new plant and equipment is being stepped up considerably. The advance was attributed to the faster tax write-offs and the investment credit granted to business last year.

Business now is moving hard to make new depreciation rules permanent. The rules may again be modified by the Treasury after July 1 of next year. Industrialists are complaining that only about 55 percent of their plant and equipment was included under new fast write-off regulations.

For their own reasons—largely because they wanted to show higher profit—some large and small industry hasn't taken advantage of the new rules. Business wants changes which would provide added incentives so that these firms would take advantage of the regulations and bolster the case for still faster write-offs. While faster write-offs add to corporate cash, they also tend to write profits down because the latter become available after depreciation reserves are set aside. It's a matter of how books are kept. Business, apparently, wants both huge reserves and higher profits.

Recent figures show that industry has benefited to the tune of $2.3 billion on the tax credit and faster write-offs. Both actions were intended to stimulate new plant investment. Whether they can do so permanently in the face of economic slack is debatable, but there is no doubt that so far they have stimulated plant modernization and automation more than expansion of output.

The new plant boom was supposed to bite into unemployment but joblessness, if anything, is greater than last year. Job opportunities for new workers are disappearing. The impact of automation now is being felt even among the most highly skilled.

The recent convention of the American Newspaper Guild illustrated the problem. The Guild stated that its "overriding concern" in meeting the problem of automation must be the jobs of its members. It took the position that "no workers should lose their jobs as the result of the introduction of new techniques in our industry." It will seek this protection through job security clauses in new contracts. It heard John Diebold, automation expert, describe new data processing machines of the near future that will be able to transmit whole newspapers over wire to other machines which will reproduce them.

Meeting to View Rightist Assault

A major conference on the three constitutional amendments being pushed by the radical right is being sponsored by the IUD. The conference will take place on Friday, Sept. 6, 1963, at the Mayflower Hotel in Washington.

The conference is expected to bring together about 200 delegates from labor, church, civil liberties, civil rights and education groups.

Archibold Cox, Solicitor General of the United States, will speak on the amendment intended to create a Court of the Union, made up of state supreme court chief justices who could override the U. S. Supreme Court. An amendment that would by-pass Congress in amending the Constitution will also be discussed by the Solicitor General.

Charles S. Rhyne, Chairman of the Institute of Municipal Law Officers and past president of the American Bar Association, will examine the impact of a proposed amendment to end federal judiciary authority over legislative apportionment. Sen. Paul Douglas (D., Ill.) will be the luncheon speaker.

Afternoon sessions will involve a panel discussion on combatting these amendments which have had full or partial approval in 18 legislatures. IUD Admn. Dir. Jacob Clayman will chair the opening session and IUD Sec.-Treas. James B. Carey has been invited to chair the luncheon.

IUE Starts Talks For GE Contract

Talks between the International Union of Electrical Workers and General Electric were scheduled to start on August 5, ten days early, IUE Pres. James B. Carey has announced.

As talks were about to begin, both parties expressed hope of an early settlement. IUE represents about 70,000 of the firms 130,000 hourly rated workers and is pattern setter for the company's workers.

Carey set Sept. 1 as the target for a settlement as long ago as last April. The present contract expires on Sept. 29. Joint union-management subcommittees have held 28 meetings since last May, exploring solutions to problems affecting GE employees.

IUE has urged "creative bargaining unshackled by rigid positions." The union has urged bargaining based upon the facts and a "recognition of the public interest."

Cement Workers Make New Gains

Settlements with major employers have been announced by Felix Jones, President, United Cement, Lime and Gypsum Workers International Union.

The settlements, subject to local union ratification, were reached following intensive negotiations with Ideal Cement, Lone Star Cement, Marquette Cement Manufacturing, and Alpha Portland. Similar settlements with other producers are expected for the more than 85 cement locals still in negotiations.

The new two-year pacts provide significant improvements including:

- Wage increases of seven cents per hour each year.
- Restrictions upon overtime work during periods of curtailed plant operation.
- A fourth week of vacation after 20 years instead of 25 years of service as previously provided.
- An equal rights employment clause.
- Payment by the company of the full costs of group insurance for employees and dependents, plus an improved program.
- Improved sick benefits.
- Improved pensions.

The old contracts expired on May 1, but bargaining continued with the old agreements in effect.

"The possibility of a general strike was evident just prior to settlements," the union said.

Kenneth Young Takes IUE Post

Kenneth Young, formerly IUD assistant director of publications and public relations and more recently assistant to the IUD organizational director, has resigned his post in the Department to become publicity director for the International Union of Electrical Workers.

Young assumed his new post on August 5. He will be responsible for the activites of the IUE's publicity department.

The new IUE publicity director came to the IUD from the Insurance Workers in early 1957. He served as assistant director of publications and public relations until early this year. He has played an active part in getting IUD's current coordinated organizing drives under way.

Young is a graduate of Antioch College and has been in the labor movement since he graduated in the immediate postwar period. He is 36 years of age, married, and has three children.

MOB VIOLENCE. This was the scene at the Hartwell, Ga., plant of the Monroe Shock Absorber Co., Hartwell, Ga., just before the approaching mob began to beat up union officials. Photo was taken by TWUA staff member Jim Blackwell who was forced to retreat to his car when spotted by the mob (See Story, P. 13).

Federal Employees Union Affiliates With Department

Affiliation of the American Federation of Government Employees to the Industrial Union Department, AFL-CIO, was announced last month by Dep't Pres. Walter P. Reuther.

"We are most gratified by the affiliation of the AFGE to the Department and look forward to the opportunities it offers to both parties. We pledge our fullest support to AFGE and its members in the effort to win improved status for federal employees," Reuther said.

The IUD president pointed out that because of President Kennedy's executive order regarding recognition and bargaining rights, there now exists "an exceptional opportunity" in AFGE's jurisdiction. He pledged full Department assistance in helping the union to take advantage of its new opportunities. He added:

"The IUD pledges material assistance to AFGE in its organizing program. It offers full support and technical assistance in bargaining and legislative work.

"The AFGE is the first union of federal employees to affiliate with the Department, and the IUD's third union of government employees. Already affiliated are the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees and the American Federation of Teachers.

"The IUD looks forward to a long and fruitful association and extends an enthusiastic welcome to AFGE Pres. John Griner and his associates."

AFGE recently won exclusive bargaining rights for 8,600 employees of the Social Security Administration headquarters in Baltimore, Md. The vote was 3,899 for AFGE Lodge 1923 and 1,346 against.

The election was won after an intensive drive which saw desk-to-desk distribution of union literature and personal contacts with all nonmembers. The vote for the union was more than twice as great as its previous membership. The election was one of the biggest held among white collar employees in a single establishment.

AFGE also won rights for 144 professional employees who voted in a separate election to be included in the over-all bargaining unit. Certification has been held up because of technical problems of timing. The decision, however, will not affect certification for the broad unit.

AFGE has also won bargaining rights for Social Security Payments Center employees in Kansas City, Chicago, New York, and Philadelphia.

With the affiliation of the Government Employees, the IUD now has 59 affiliates. These unions are affiliated for more than six million members.

New Training Hailed

USWA Pres. David J. McDonald has hailed a new 12 week college residential program of union education as a "giant step forward." The program, to be run by USWA and the University of Indiana, was conceived by Dist. 30 Dir. James Robb and Educational Dir. Emory Bacon. It will stress local union leadership development and liberal arts. It is being financed by a grant of $85,000 from the Ford Foundation, USWA District 30 and the international union.

Labor

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
WAGE AND HOUR AND PUBLIC CONTRACTS DIVISIONS
WASHINGTON 25, D. C.

OFFICE OF THE ADMINISTRATOR

Dear Mr. Employer:

The amendments to the Fair Labor Standards Act which became effective September 3, 1961, extended the coverage of the Act to additional employees and put into effect the first of several gradual steps toward the establishment of a minimum wage of $1.25 an hour and a 40-hour maximum workweek for all within its coverage. The purpose of this communication is to call your attention to the wage and hours and child-labor requirements of this law which become effective September 3, 1963.

Employees now subject to the $1.15 minimum wage must be paid not less than $1.25 an hour beginning September 3, 1963, with a 40-hour maximum workweek and overtime compensation at not less than one and one-half times the employee's regular rate of pay for all hours worked over 40 in any workweek. For those now subject to a minimum wage of $1.00 an hour, there will be no change at this time in the minimum rate which must be paid, but, beginning September 3, 1963, such employees become subject to a 44-hour maximum workweek and must be paid not less than one and one-half times their regular rates of pay for all hours worked over 44 in any workweek.

Inside this folder is the official poster which must be displayed on and after September 3, 1963. This poster supersedes the one issued in 1961. Examine it carefully to assure that you are in compliance with the new requirements of the law.

You are urged to contact representatives of the Divisions at the nearest Wage-Hour office for information as to how the law applies to individual businesses or to particular employees, thereby avoiding unintentional violations and attendant back-wage liabilities.

Sincerely yours,

Clarence T. Lundquist

Administrator

Enclosure

SOME, BUT NOT ALL, ARE WARY OF NEGRO RIGHTS FIGHT

Southern labor leaders play it safe

By Michael Munk

JUST AS THE LIBERAL wing of the Democratic Party justifies its caution on racial issues by pointing to its embarrassing Southern wing, so has the AFL-CIO leadership often asserted that it can do little to enforce integration among its Southern affiliates. But little has appeared in the national press about the views of Southern labor leaders and their relation to the civil rights movement. On Sept. 10, however, the New York listener-supported FM station WBAI, in a series of interviews conducted by Dale Minor, shed light on this crucial question. This article is based on interviews Minor gathered during July and August in Alabama and Mississippi.

The Rev. Edward Gardner of the Birmingham movement's negotiating team revealed that local union leaders had refused invitations to discussions on large-scale hiring and upgrading of Negro workers. "It's hard to get these men to the meetings because they seem to fear that they'll be put on the spot. The employers tell us that union contracts tie their hands—that it's up to the unions to decide who is hired. I don't know whether this is true or not, because the union leaders don't tell us the other side."

And the Rev. James Bevel of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference believes that "like most established institutions, Southern unions want to play it safe. A lot of officials are afraid of what they think would be antagonizing Southern white workers. No real effort has been made for a joint effort between unions and the civil rights movement."

SOME WON'T TALK: The position of Southern union leaders ranged from outright refusal to discuss any racial matters (United Steel Workers secretary R. E. Farr in Birmingham) to unqualified support for the movement (Mine, Mill and Smelter Workers regional director M. C. Anderson, also of Birmingham). In the middle were the state and local AFL-CIO council representing, according to Minor, the "more highly paid skills and trades and largely white memberships." Their position was outlined by Barney Weeks, president of the Alabama Labor Council AFL-CIO and "one of Birmingham's leading liberals."

Weeks denied that unions control hiring, and pointed out that Alabama's "right to work" law (similar laws exist in most Southern states) outlaws the union shop and thereby the requirement that workers must be union members before being hired. "It's up to us to organize the workers after they're hired," Weeks said. He also declared all contracts that had contained discriminatory hiring and promotion provisions have been "renegotiated in line with national AFL-CIO policy."

Asked whether Alabama unions had been active in civil rights demonstrations, Weeks said, "No, we haven't been in the forefront, but some of us have been active behind the scenes." He attributed the lack of leadership to intimidation by racists, who have thrown bottles on his lawn and harassed him with telephone calls: "The Klan, the White Citizens Councils and the John Birch Society put tremendous pressure on anyone who speaks out, which means that people who are liberal, whether in the Committee of 100 of the Chamber of Commerce, in the PTA or in labor organizations, must attempt to work behind the scenes to be effective."

Herblock in the Washington Post
"What's the matter? We don't say 'niggers' up here."

Weeks himself is a member of Birmingham's bi-racial committee, and helps administer the 12-year-old Southern Labor School organized by COPE councils of the 13 Southern states. He said that "since the Supreme Court's desegregation decision," the school's programs, directed to local and state officers, have emphasized civil rights. The school is conducted across the state line at the Mountain View Hotel in Gatlinburg, Tenn., according to Weeks, because integrated facilities are not available in Alabama. The civil rights sessions, he said, stress how discrimination keeps both Negro and white workers down by playing one race off against the other.

EMPLOYERS' ROLE: A white labor leader who would not disclose his name spoke of a dilemma faced by liberals. "As private citizens, the union leadership is much more liberal on race questions than most employers. The disgusting thing about all this is that while we have been working for years to educate our membership, the employers—the same ones who made the hiring agreement with Birmingham Negroes—have been fighting us all the way. They use the race issue to fight union organization. They go into these sessions with civil right leaders and agree to hire and upgrade Negroes and then go right out afterward and tell white workers not to join unions because it will mean Negroes will get their jobs."

Daniel Powell, COPE director for Area 5 (Mid-Deep South) said both white and Negro workers have, of course, the "same common interests," but pointed out that since the end of the Civil War, the "ruling class" has skillfully used racism to divide the workers. He cited the Populist movement of the late 19th Century as finally breaking up on this issue and declared that "as long as this tactic is successful, the demagogues will remain in power."

All over the South, Powell said, "congressmen who vote against legislation that would benefit workers use the racial issue at election time to distract voters from their record in opposition to their interests . . . It's all based on fear."

Powell cited several examples—including George Smathers' 1950 defeat of Sen. Claude Pepper in Florida—of campaigns that illustrate how anti-labor Southern congressmen get elected. When union organizers appear in the Black Belt, he said, photos showing Northern labor leaders sitting with Negroes are distributed to white workers, and other photos showing local racist labor leaders at KKK rallies are shown to Negro workers. The politicians tell whites that their labor is worth more than that of Negroes, and that unions will force their wages down to the Negroes' level. Powell noted that in Alabama the sales tax was passed over union opposition when proponents reprinted an announcement of union support for a civil rights group, and argued that a sales tax is the only tax Negroes pay.

LACK OF JOBS: Weeks and Donald Stafford, president of the Birmingham Central Labor Council, said the basic obstacle to job equality was the lack of jobs generally. Unemployment in Alabama's Etowah and Walker counties is about 17%. Jefferson county (Birmingham) had 20,000 persons, or 8.2% of the labor force, out of work.

Faced by such heavy unemployment, they explained, "white workers are apprehensive when civil rights are mentioned." They said "it would be unfair to ask white workers to quit jobs or for laid-off whites to wait until Negroes are hired," to meet civil rights leaders' demands. Since years and years of discrimination have resulted in almost all seniority going to whites, unemployment means long lines of white workers, many with years of seniority, waiting for call-backs or looking for new jobs. The only solution, they agreed, "is jobs for all." Stafford was critical of the Kennedy Administration's retraining program, two of whose three projects in Birmingham involved training workers in skills already in surplus supply.

R. E. Farr of the USW declared, "Unemployment among steelworkers is our number one problem." His union is about 70% white and maintains segregated facilities in its union halls. Farr, like most other AFL-CIO and Teamster leaders in the Deep South, refused to discuss racial questions. He did, however, note that the unemployment rate among Birmingham steelworkers is now between "25% and 30%" and that his union's membership has fallen from 28,000 in 1959 to 21,000 today. He said automation was reducing "the number of workers every day while more steel is being produced."

NO POSITION: O. J. Reynolds, business agent for the Hod Carriers and Common Laborers local in Birmingham, is in another position. As a white, he runs a 1,400-member union that is three-fourths Negro. His comment on civil rights: "The union doesn't care one way or the other, it's an individual thing."

Claude Ramsey, president of the Mississippi Labor Council in Jackson, was more concerned with bringing industry to the state than with job equality. He did acknowledge, however, that racial tension hampers industrialization and said he was convinced that ultimately, the "Southern way of life" would yield before industrial development.

He was severely critical, as were other Southern labor leaders, of state government development programs that advertize cheap, non-union labor as a lure to runaway plants. Not only are these minimum wage plants no solution to the problem, he said, but they hurt the chances for progress. When established in a town, they tend to discourage other plants from coming to the area and dipping into their labor supply. They move from site to site as tax advantages and anti-union local ordinances expire, he said.

IN RIGHTS FIGHT: M. C. Anderson of Mine-Mill put the rights problem in sharp focus. As director of a 4,000-member union district in Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi, whose membership is 80% to 100% Negro, he declared that "Mine-Mill cooperates in every possible way, both financially and morally, with the civil rights movement." Asbury Howard, Mine-Mill international vice president, is president of the Bessemer Voters League and the Jefferson County League, which are spearheads of the Negro voter registration drive in the area.

Guardian photo by Robert Joyce
NEGROES SEEK A BREAK ON JOBS
But whites, too, are out of work

Anderson recalled that throughout its history Mine-Mill had always fought for equal employment and promotion rights for Negroes and that after Mine-Mill's expulsion from the CIO in the late 1940s on "communist" charges, the USW had raided its Southern locals with the whispering campaign that white workers should join "a white man's union." As Anderson put it: "They won, too," and replaced non-discriminatory contracts with so-called "lines of promotion" that froze workers in lines designed to keep Negro workers at the bottom of the pay and job scale. At first, Anderson said, employers used to hire Negroes in the mines simply to keep all-white unions from organizing them. When national unions established Jim-Crow locals for Negro workers, employers then used the tactic of telling whites Negroes would run their union, and warning Negroes that whites would control the union's leadership.

A CONTRADICTION: The final question put to Powell by Minor was: "Under present conditions of unemployment, is it correct to say that Southern white workers find a real contradiction between the movement for job equality and their own economic self-interest?" Powell replied that this was only partly true. Actually, he said, low wages and employment at the bottom of the scale mean low top wages too.

Powell foresaw a big boost to the South's economy from increased purchasing power for Negroes. On the other hand, he acknowledged that the general lack of jobs creates competition for jobs, and that this is how "many white workers see Negro demands." He also observed that he found Negro workers more eager than whites to join unions. "They understand the need for them more because they've been exploited more." Powell concluded that there was no protection for the white workers in keeping Negroes down, and said that more and more of his members were realizing that "If you keep a man in the ditch, you've got to get down there with him yourself."

NEW YORK

OCTOBER 4
is GUARDIAN EVENING with the world-famous

OBRATSOV RUSSIAN PUPPET THEATER
Appearing in New York for the first time in a program entitled:
"An Unusual Concert"
"By all odds, the finest puppet theater in the world . . ."
—JOHN GUNTHER
"Witty, stylish, enormously expert . . ." — JOHN MARTIN, N.Y. TIMES
Call OR 3-3800 for reservations NOW!

LABOR WEEK®

HOW JOBS, WAGES ARE SHIFTING

Now you can see exactly how your State rates with others in the growth, or loss, of jobs in factories.

Biggest gains show up in the South and West. Many Northern and Midwestern States have been losing ground.

Hourly-pay scales for factory workers have been rising all across U. S. Details of what's been happening are shown here.

Americans have been vaguely aware for many years that jobs are more plentiful, and wages higher, in some areas of the country than in others.

For the first time, it is possible to show where changes have taken place in the last 10 years, State by State, as some old established industries have moved to new locations and new industries have been developed.

This is what has been happening to factory employment and wages, as given in detail in the chart on this page:

- The West has made the sharpest gains in jobs, partly as a result of the expanding aircraft, defense and space industries. The increase in 10 years was 35 per cent, amounting to more than a half million jobs.
- Wages tend to be higher in the West and Midwest, but have risen all across the U. S.
- The South has been gaining rapidly in the number of industrial jobs, and pay scales have been rising, too. Yet hourly-pay rates in the South remain below those in other areas.
- The Northeast has shown the greatest decline in the number of factory jobs, declining by 8.1 per cent, from nearly 6 million factory jobs in 1952 to 5.5 million.
- The Midwest has declined almost as much as the Northeast. The decline

(continued on next page)

TRENDS IN JOBS AND PAY—STATE BY STATE

	FACTORY EMPLOYMENT, 1962	PERCENTAGE CHANGE SINCE 1952	AVERAGE HOURLY WAGE, 1962	PERCENTAGE INCREASE SINCE 1952
Alabama	239,400	UP 5.7%	$2.06	57.3%
Arizona	54,600	UP 86.3%	$2.57	46.0%
Arkansas	112,500	UP 36.9%	$1.66	45.6%
California	1,386,800	UP 39.4%	$2.79	49.3%
Colorado	93,200	UP 32.4%	$2.61	60.1%
Connecticut	417,600	DOWN 4.4%	$2.46	47.3%
Delaware	55,400	DOWN 6.0%	$2.41	50.6%
Florida	221,900	UP 83.7%	$1.99	57.9%
Georgia	347,000	UP 11.6%	$1.77	47.5%
Idaho	31,600	UP 32.2%	$2.34	30.0%
Illinois	1,203,900	DOWN 5.3%	$2.60	48.6%
Indiana	599,500	DOWN 4.2%	$2.65	48.9%
Iowa	174,300	UP 0.1%	$2.53	56.2%
Kansas	117,200	DOWN 15.4%	$2.52	50.0%
Kentucky	172,400	UP 14.6%	$2.27	51.3%
Louisiana	139,200	DOWN 10.3%	$2.29	62.4%
Maine	104,900	DOWN 9.9%	$1.89	40.0%
Maryland	258,100	DOWN 1.9%	$2.40	54.8%
Massachusetts	685,100	DOWN 6.5%	$2.24	42.7%
Michigan	939,100	DOWN 14.4%	$2.91	47.0%
Minnesota	238,400	UP 8.6%	$2.52	51.8%
Mississippi	127,500	UP 33.8%	$1.64	50.5%
Missouri	386,300	DOWN 2.1%	$2.38	50.6%
Montana	22,000	UP 22.2%	$2.58	38.7%
Nebraska	68,400	UP 9.8%	$2.20	50.7%
Nevada	6,000	UP 36.4%	$3.02	55.7%
New Hampshire	88,700	UP 8.0%	$1.88	36.2%
New Jersey	809,300	DOWN 2.8%	$2.51	45.1%
New Mexico	17,000	UP 57.4%	$2.20	43.8%
New York	1,848,600	DOWN 9.6%	$2.44	43.5%
North Carolina	527,700	UP 21.3%	$1.64	36.7%
North Dakota	6,400	DOWN 3.0%	$2.14	37.2%*
Ohio	1,212,500	DOWN 10.5%	$2.76	50.8%
Oklahoma	90,400	UP 12.7%	$2.19	40.4%
Oregon	141,400	DOWN 4.7%	$2.64	28.8%
Pennsylvania	1,399,600	DOWN 10.2%	$2.41	46.1%
Rhode Island	118,600	DOWN 18.8%	$2.02	36.5%
South Carolina	259,500	UP 17.2%	$1.68	40.0%
South Dakota	13,800	UP 11.3%	$2.17	52.8%
Tennessee	328,700	UP 18.2%	$1.93	44.0%
Texas	501,100	UP 18.1%	$2.32	47.8%
Utah	53,500	UP 66.1%	$2.66	61.2%
Vermont	35,600	DOWN 9.4%	$1.96	41.0%
Virginia	291,300	UP 15.9%	$1.91	43.6%
Washington	232,000	UP 18.1%	$2.81	42.6%
West Virginia	122,700	DOWN 10.0%	$2.55	53.6%
Wisconsin	455,400	DOWN 3.9%	$2.51	47.6%
Wyoming	7,400	UP 12.1%	$2.61	38.1%

Note: Comparable data unavailable on Alaska and Hawaii.
*Six-year gain, 1956-62. Ten-year comparison not available.

Basic data: U. S. Dept. of Labor

the gift of gab

Plenty to gab about—this transistorized MICROCORDER 300 from Webcor . . . the acknowledged quality portable tape recorder. Only 4.3 pounds, with batteries, tapes and reels, it delivers uncompromising performance in office, home, and in-between. Its tapes can even be played back with remarkable fidelity on standard size recorders—thanks to a capstan drive, which assures constant speeds at 1⅞ and 3¾ ips. Push button operated, it plays a full hour per reel. Complete with stop-start remote control microphone, recording level meter, battery life indicator, tape counter, safety interlock button, and carrying strap. Compact enough to fit in your briefcase. Put yourself at the head of your gift list; then decide who else deserves one.

WEBCOR
Fifty years of sound leadership

Webcor Inc., Chicago tape recorders, phonographs, radios, components, Dormeyer appliances

[continued from preceding page]

. . . Northeast, Midwest still the big industrial areas in 10 years was 7.1 per cent, or 400,000 jobs in manufacturing industries.

These changes are all pointed up in a new 633-page study by the Labor Department of changes in wage rates and job trends across the country.

Changing industrial patterns. New manufacturing industries, an analysis of the study shows, are being developed in many parts of the nation. Factory jobs are being created where few existed before, in States formerly considered to be mainly agricultural and rural.

In the Southern States, for example, the number of jobs in manufacturing increased by 15 per cent in 10 years, to more than 3.8 million. Hourly-pay rates for factory workers in the South rose, at the same time, by 43.4 per cent, to an average of $1.95 an hour.

An analysis by the Economic Unit of "U. S. News & World Report" of the official report suggested that some of the changing industrial patterns resulted from movement of plants from older industrial areas to the South and West.

New plants. Companies have opened new plants in the South and West, in some instances, instead of expanding facilities in original locations.

It is noted, too, that the loss of factory jobs shows up most graphically in States where labor unions have their largest membership. Some States, especially in the South, have held out the promise of "friendly" labor as an attraction to companies to move to or build new factories in those States.

Pay scales in the West have risen 46.3 per cent to $2.75 an hour, highest level for any area of the nation.

Gains in the Northeast in the past 10 years have amounted to 44.8 per cent, with wages reaching $2.39 an hour. The Midwest has had an increase of 48.6 per cent, to $2.63 an hour.

Range: $1.64 to $3.02. The figures on wages show Nevada at the top, with an hourly-pay scale of $3.02. Michigan was in second place, with a wage rate of $2.91 an hour.

Lowest average wages were shown for Mississippi and North Carolina, each at $1.64 an hour.

In rate of expansion of factory jobs, Arizona set the fastest pace, with a gain of 86.3 per cent in 10 years. Florida was second, with 83.7 per cent.

Although factory jobs have been declining in the Northeast and Midwest, these are still the more highly industrialized areas, as measured by number of jobs in manufacturing industries.

Research Department
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Bulk Rate
U. S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 154
RALEIGH, N. C.

North Carolina Labor and Industry

Monthly Bulletin of the DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, Frank Crane, Commissioner

Vol. XXX RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, SEPTEMBER, 1963 No. 9

GUY WATSON RETIRES

W. GUY WATSON

W. Guy Watson, Supervisor of industrial safety and labor regulations inspections for the Department of Labor for the past 17 years and a Labor Department employee for 28 years, retired from active service on August 30th.

Watson was first employed by the Department as a Factory Inspector on Sept. 1, 1935. At that time, the Department of Labor numbered 27 people, of whom more than half were in the inspection division.

Guy and Mrs. Watson plan to continue living at their home at 5231 Hillsboro Road, Raleigh.

Commissioner Frank Crane was high in praise of the outstanding contribution made by Guy during his more than a quarter-century of service in the Department of Labor and to the employers and employees of North Carolina.

"Guy has been an untiring worker in promoting the health and safety of North Carolina employees and the improvement of working conditions in industry throughout the entire State," Commissioner Crane said. "He will be missed by all of his associates, fellow workers and friends in the Department of Labor."

Labor Department inspectors visited 2,052 Tar Heel industrial, mercantile and service establishments employing 73,800 workers during August. They made 37 complaint investigations, 95 reinspections, investigated four serious accidents, and held 629 conferences with employers and employees. They made recommendations for improvement of health, safety and working conditions in 1,200 instances and noted more than a thousand compliances with similar previous recommendations.

NORTH CAROLINA RANKS 13th IN NATION IN NUMBER OF NONFARM WORKERS

North Carolina, with over 1.2 million workers in 1962, ranks 13th among the states of the Nation in nonfarm employment, according to Brunswick A. Bagdon, Regional Director of the U. S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics in the South. New York leads all states with 6.3 million workers, but has shown a slower rate of employment growth than most other states in recent years.

Between 1939 and 1962, nonagricultural employment in North Carolina increased by 100.9 percent—exceeded by thirteen states, most in the South and West. Arizona led with a 280.3 percent increase, followed by Nevada (255.7 percent), and Florida (254.1 percent). The national average increase was 80.7 percent.

Employment in all major nonfarm industries in North Carolina advanced during the 1939-62 period, but the distribution of workers shifted. Following national trends, goods producing industries (construction, mining, and manufacturing) declined in relative importance as a source of jobs; while service industries (trade; transportation, communications, and public utilities; finance, insurance and real estate; miscellaneous service; and government) gained. The goods producing industries, which provided 56.0 percent of all nonfarm jobs in 1939, accounted for only 47.9 percent in 1962. The share of jobs in the service industries rose from 44.0 percent in 1939 to 52.1 percent in 1962.

Earnings of North Carolina factory production workers have trended steadily upward over the past 12 years. Gross average weekly earnings amounted to $43.34 in 1950, but by 1962 had increased 54 percent to $66.91. Of the twelve southern states, Texas had the highest average in 1962—$96.05—almost equal to the national average of $96.56. There was considerable variation in earnings among the states, primarily reflecting differences in industry composition. Texas, for example, has a concentration of workers in high skill industries such as chemicals, petroleum refining, primary metals, machinery, and transportation equipment; while in North Carolina a large percentage of workers is employed in the lower paying textile industry.

These trends and comparisons are drawn from a new Bureau of Labor Statistics' report of employment and earnings. It includes, in addition to data for each state, information for 146 major areas, including Charlotte, Greensboro - High Point, and Winston-Salem.

The report shows that, in Charlotte, nonagricultural employment grew from 84.6 thousand in 1954 to 112.7 thousand in 1962—an increase of nearly 33.2 percent. During the 8-year period, manufacturing employment increased from 22.1 to 27.1 thousand, and gross average weekly earnings of factory production workers advanced from $52.66 to $73.46.

From 1954 to 1962, manufacturing employment in the Greensboro-High Point area increased from 38.4 to 44.1 thousand, and in Winston-Salem from 32.5 to 38.7 thousand. During the same period, gross average weekly earnings of factory production workers in the Greensboro-High Point area rose from $47.73 to $65.35.

Among major areas, Flint, Michigan, reported the highest average weekly earnings in 1962 ($135.38) — followed

(Continued on page 4)

VETERAN INSPECTOR DIES

GEORGE W. KING

Labor Department employees were saddened last month by news of the death on August 31 of George W. King of Asheville, veteran Industrial Safety Inspector in the Western District.

King had been employed by the Department of Labor for 26 years prior to his retirement from active service on June 30, 1963. He came with the Department originally in July, 1937.

As Industrial Safety Inspector, George helped to carry the message of accident prevention and better working conditions to many hundreds of industrial plants throughout Western North Carolina.

NORTH CAROLINA

Labor and Industry

Issued Each Month by the
NORTH CAROLINA DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
P. O. Box 1151
Raleigh, N. C.

Sent Free Upon Request

FRANK CRANE
Commissioner of Labor
ALMON BARBOUR Editor

Vol. XXX September, 1963 No. 9

NON-FARM EMPLOYMENT SETS AUGUST RECORD

Nonagricultural employment climbed to a new high in North Carolina for the month of August.

Mostly seasonal job gains totaling 22,200 in August brought the State's total non-farm employment up to 1,283,000. This was 18,700 higher than in August, 1962.

Factory employment totaling 543,400 in August was up 19,800 from July and was 2,300 higher than a year ago. Non-manufacturing jobs totaling 739,600 were up 2,400 from July and were 16,400 higher than a year ago.

An influx of 14,200 seasonal tobacco stemmery workers, most of whom were employed at the Federal minimum wage of $1.15 an hour which prevailed in August (the minimum advanced to $1.25 on Sept. 3) caused average hourly earnings in all the State's manufacturing to drop four cents last month—from $1.67 in July to $1.63 in August.

However, the over-all factory workweek was up by 0.5 hours to an August average of 41.3 hours. Weekly earnings in manufacturing averaged $67.32.

Textile mill employment was up 3,900 over the July level as all divisions of the industry reported better business and general employment gains. The same was true of apparel manufacturing, which reported August job gains of 1,100. Other increases included 600 in electrical machinery, 400 in chemicals and 300 in furniture.

Principal gains over the July job levels in non-manufacturing industries included increases of 1,400 in retail trade, 300 in construction, and 200 each in the transportation and service industries.

AUGUST BUILDING PERMITS TOTAL $24,312,304 IN 36 TAR HEEL CITIES

Building permits totaling $24,312,304 were issued by public officials in 36 North Carolina cities of more than 10,000 population during August.

The August building total was 14.8 per cent higher than the $21,185,910 reported by the same cities for August, 1962.

The cities reported a total of $166,141,400 in permits during the first eight months of this year—a 2.6 per cent increase over the $161,954,912 reported for the same period in 1962.

FACTORY EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN CHARLOTTE AND GREENSBORO - HIGH POINT AREAS — AUGUST, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT: Current Month (thous) 4	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM: One Month Ago	One Year Ago	HOURS AND EARNINGS: AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS: Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS: Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS: Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
CHARLOTTE AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	27.8	27.4	27.9	+ 1.5	— 0.4	$ 76.20	$ 75.12	$ 74.16	42.1	41.5	41.9	$1.81	$1.81	$1.77
Food & Kindred Products	4.1	4.1	4.2	....	— 2.4	71.06	70.39	67.64	42.3	41.9	40.5	1.68	1.68	1.67
Bakery	2.0	2.0	2.1	....	— 4.8	71.86	72.04	72.98	39.7	39.8	41.0	1.81	1.81	1.78
Textile Mills Products	6.3	6.1	6.5	+ 3.3	— 3.1	66.04	66.78	67.82	41.8	42.0	43.2	1.58	1.59	1.57
Broadwoven Fabrics	2.4	2.5	2.4	— 4.0	....	74.22	75.77	78.58	42.9	43.8	44.9	1.73	1.73	1.75
Knitting Mills	2.2	2.0	2.5	+10.0	—12.0	58.56	58.82	61.89	39.3	38.7	42.1	1.49	1.52	1.47
Furniture & Fixtures	.9	.9	1.0	....	—10.0	95.26	95.03	79.00	43.3	44.2	40.1	2.20	2.15	1.97
Paper & Allied Products	1.4	1.4	1.4	....	....	83.22	83.47	79.66	43.8	43.7	44.5	1.90	1.91	1.79
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	2.1	2.1	1.9	....	....	94.94	93.13	...7	40.4	39.8	...7	2.35	2.34	2.27
Chemicals & Allied Products	2.8	2.7	2.5	+ 3.7	+10.5	68.88	67.73	71.78	42.0	40.8	43.5	1.64	1.66	1.65
Metal Products	2.3	2.4	2.3	— 4.2	+12.0	84.02	80.36	80.54	41.8	41.0	41.3	2.01	1.96	1.95
Machinery	3.3	3.3	3.2	....	....	84.11	81.22	80.35	44.5	42.3	43.2	1.89	1.92	1.86
Other Manufacturing Industries[1]	4.6	4.4	4.9	+ 4.5	+ 3.1	...5	...5	...5	...5	...5	...5	...5	...5	...5
					— 6.1
GREENSBORO - HIGH POINT AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	44.0	43.5	44.6	+ 1.1	— 1.3	68.28	67.37	65.69	39.7	39.4	39.1	1.72	1.71	1.68
Food & Kindred Products	3.0	2.9	2.9	+ 3.4	+ 3.4	71.52	73.09	70.20	44.7	45.4	45.0	1.60	1.61	1.56
Bakery Products	.8	.8	.8	....	....	75.68	77.85	79.80	44.0	45.0	45.6	1.72	1.73	1.75
Textile Mill Products	15.9	15.7	16.9	+ 1.3	— 5.9	59.72	60.26	57.25	37.8	37.9	36.7	1.58	1.59	1.56
Knitting Mills	6.2	6.0	6.8	+ 3.3	— 8.8	54.91	55.20	52.42	37.1	37.3	36.4	1.48	1.48	1.44
Apparel	3.8	3.7	3.8	+ 2.7	....	56.82	54.85	...7	40.3	38.9	38.7	1.41	1.41	...7
Lumber & Wood Products (Except Furn.)	1.2	1.2	1.1	....	+ 9.1	63.79	64.82	64.53	43.1	43.5	43.9	1.48	1.49	1.47
Furniture	6.8	6.7	6.8	+ 1.5	....	70.82	68.63	67.13	40.7	39.9	40.2	1.74	1.72	1.67
HH Furniture	5.9	5.8	5.9	+ 1.7	....	71.20	68.60	66.47	40.0	39.2	39.1	1.78	1.75	1.70
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	1.5	1.6	1.4	— 6.3	+ 7.1	83.37	76.13	...7	39.7	36.6	...7	2.10	2.08	2.09
Chemicals	1.5	1.5	1.4	....	+ 7.1	83.40	85.43	85.34	41.7	42.5	43.1	2.00	2.01	1.98
Stone, Clay & Glass Products	.9	.9	.9	....	....	83.42	85.89	81.46	47.4	48.8	48.2	1.76	1.76	1.69
Metal Products	2.1	2.0	2.1	+ 5.0	....	75.72	75.66	...7	42.3	41.8	...7	1.79	1.81	1.70
Machinery (Except Electrical)	.9	.9	.9	....	....	86.68	84.00	...7	42.7	43.3	41.6	2.03	1.94	...7
Other Manufacturing Industries[2]	6.4	6.4	6.4	....	....	...5	...5	...5	...5	...5	...5	...5	...5	...5

[1] Includes: Apparel; Lumber; Rubber; Leather; Stone, Clay and Glass; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Tobacco; Paper; Rubber; Leather; Electrical Machinery; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[4] Preliminary.
[5] Data Not Available.

EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN NONAGRICULTURAY INDUSTRIES IN NORTH CAROLINA — AUGUST, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT: Current Month[4]	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM: One Month Ago	One Year Ago	HOURS AND EARNINGS: AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS: Current Month	One Month	One Year	AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS: Current Month	One Month	One Year	AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS: Current Month	One Month	One Year

FACTORY EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN CHARLOTTE AND GREENSBORO - HIGH POINT AREAS — AUGUST, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month (thous) 4	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
CHARLOTTE AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	27.8	27.4	27.9	+ 1.5	— 0.4	$ 76.20	$ 75.12	$ 74.16	42.1	41.5	41.9	$1.81	$1.81	$1.77
Food & Kindred Products	4.1	4.1	4.2	.....	— 2.4	71.06	70.39	67.64	42.3	41.9	40.5	1.68	1.68	1.67
Bakery	2.0	2.0	2.1	.....	— 4.8	71.86	72.04	72.98	39.7	39.8	41.0	1.81	1.81	1.78
Textile Mills Products	6.3	6.1	6.5	+ 3.3	— 3.1	66.04	66.78	67.82	41.8	42.0	43.2	1.58	1.59	1.57
Broadwoven Fabrics	2.4	2.5	2.4	— 4.0	.....	74.22	75.77	78.58	42.9	43.8	44.9	1.73	1.73	1.75
Knitting Mills	2.2	2.0	2.5	+10.0	—12.0	58.56	58.82	61.89	39.3	38.7	42.1	1.49	1.52	1.47
Furniture & Fixtures	.9	.9	1.0	.....	—10.0	95.26	95.03	79.00	43.3	44.2	40.1	2.20	2.15	1.97
Paper & Allied Products	1.4	1.4	1.4	.....	.....	83.22	83.47	79.66	43.8	43.7	44.5	1.90	1.91	1.79
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	2.1	2.1	1.9	.....	+10.5	94.94	93.13	...7...	40.4	39.8	...7...	2.35	2.34	2.27
Chemicals & Allied Products	2.8	2.7	2.5	+ 3.7	+12.0	68.88	67.73	71.78	42.0	40.8	43.5	1.64	1.66	1.65
Metal Products	2.3	2.4	2.3	— 4.2	.....	84.02	80.36	80.54	41.8	41.0	41.3	2.01	1.96	1.95
Machinery	3.3	3.3	3.2	.....	+ 3.1	84.11	81.22	80.35	44.5	42.3	43.2	1.89	1.92	1.86
Other Manufacturing Industries[1]	4.6	4.4	4.9	+ 4.5	— 6.1	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
GREENSBORO - HIGH POINT AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	44.0	43.5	44.6	+ 1.1	— 1.3	68.28	67.37	65.69	39.7	39.4	39.1	1.72	1.71	1.68
Food & Kindred Products	3.0	2.9	2.9	+ 3.4	+ 3.4	71.52	73.09	70.20	44.7	45.4	45.0	1.60	1.61	1.56
Bakery Products	.8	.8	.8	.....	.....	75.68	77.85	79.80	44.0	45.0	45.6	1.72	1.73	1.75
Textile Mill Products	15.9	15.7	16.9	+ 1.3	— 5.9	59.72	60.26	57.25	37.8	37.9	36.7	1.58	1.59	1.56
Knitting Mills	6.2	6.0	6.8	+ 3.3	— 8.8	54.91	55.20	52.42	37.1	37.3	36.4	1.48	1.48	1.44
Apparel	3.8	3.7	3.8	+ 2.7	.....	56.82	54.85	...7...	40.3	38.9	38.7	1.41	1.41	...7...
Lumber & Wood Products (Except Furn.)	1.2	1.2	1.1	.....	+ 9.1	63.79	64.82	64.53	43.1	43.5	43.9	1.48	1.49	1.47
Furniture	6.8	6.7	6.8	+ 1.5	.....	70.82	68.63	67.13	40.7	39.9	40.2	1.74	1.72	1.67
HH Furniture	5.9	5.8	5.9	+ 1.7	.....	71.20	68.60	66.47	40.0	39.2	39.1	1.78	1.75	1.70
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	1.5	1.6	1.4	— 6.3	+ 7.1	83.37	76.13	...7...	39.7	36.6	...7...	2.10	2.08	2.09
Chemicals	1.5	1.5	1.4	.....	+ 7.1	83.40	85.43	85.34	41.7	42.5	43.1	2.00	2.01	1.98
Stone, Clay & Glass Products	.9	.9	.9	.....	.....	83.42	85.89	81.46	47.4	48.8	48.2	1.76	1.76	1.69
Metal Products	2.1	2.0	2.1	+ 5.0	.....	75.72	75.66	...7...	42.3	41.8	...7...	1.79	1.81	1.70
Machinery (Except Electrical)	.9	.9	.9	.....	.....	86.68	84.00	...7...	42.7	43.3	41.6	2.03	1.94	...7...
Other Manufacturing Industries[2]	6.4	6.4	6.4	.....	.....	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...

[1] Includes: Apparel; Lumber; Rubber; Leather; Stone, Clay and Glass; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Tobacco; Paper; Rubber; Leather; Electrical Machinery; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[4] Preliminary.
[5] Data Not Available.

EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN NONAGRICULTURAY INDUSTRIES IN NORTH CAROLINA — AUGUST, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month[4] (thous)	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
ALL NONAGRICULTURAL EMPLOYMENT	1,283.0	1,260.8	1,264.3	+ 1.8	+ 1.5	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Manufacturing	543.4	523.6	541.1	+ 3.8	+ 0.4	$ 67.32	$ 68.14	$ 66.67	41.3	40.8	40.9	$1.63	$1.67	$1.63
Durable Goods	148.2	147.1	147.7	+ 0.7	+ 0.3	72.42	70.14	69.01	42.6	42.0	42.6	1.70	1.67	1.62
Lumber & Timber Basic Products	31.3	31.4	30.7	— 0.3	+ 2.0	60.63	60.21	60.20	42.7	42.4	43.0	1.42	1.42	1.40
Sawmills & Planing Mills	18.8	18.7	18.3	+ 0.5	+ 2.7	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Millwork, Plywood, etc.	6.2	6.2	6.4	.....	— 3.1	58.05	57.62	57.89	43.0	43.0	43.2	1.35	1.34	1.34
Furniture & Fin. Lumber Products	48.0	47.7	47.6	+ 0.6	+ 0.8	69.60	66.46	65.48	42.7	41.8	42.8	1.63	1.59	1.53
Household Furniture	43.5	43.3	43.3	+ 0.5	+ 0.5	69.28	65.83	64.60	42.5	41.4	42.5	1.63	1.59	1.52
Stone, Clay and Glass	11.1	11.0	11.2	+ 0.9	— 0.9	73.78	74.63	69.92	43.4	43.9	43.7	1.70	1.70	1.60
Concrete, Brick, etc.	4.1	4.1	4.1	.....	.....	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Primary Metals	2.8	2.8	2.8	.....	.....	86.31	85.08	85.49	41.9	41.5	41.3	2.06	2.05	2.07
Fabricated Metals	9.7	9.6	9.0	+ 1.0	+ 7.8	86.40	85.57	79.34	43.2	43.0	42.2	2.00	1.99	1.88
Fab. Structural Metals	4.4	4.3	3.8	+ 2.3	+15.8	94.53	93.81	81.41	44.8	45.1	42.4	2.11	2.08	1.92
Machinery (Except Electrical)	13.6	13.4	14.0	+ 1.5	— 2.9	80.15	77.33	76.71	43.8	43.2	44.6	1.83	1.79	1.72
Special Industrial Machinery	6.8	6.7	6.9	+ 1.5	— 1.4	78.40	76.18	...7...	43.8	42.8	...7...	1.79	1.78	1.72
Electrical Machinery	24.1	23.5	25.0	+ 2.6	— 3.6	83.83	81.81	79.76	41.5	40.5	40.9	2.02	2.02	1.95
Ord. and Transportation Equipment	3.9	4.0	3.9	— 2.5	.....	92.74	90.35	96.83	41.4	40.7	42.1	2.24	2.22	2.30
Other Durable Goods[1]	3.7	3.7	3.5	.....	+ 5.7	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Nondurable Goods	395.2	376.5	393.4	+ 5.0	+ 0.5	65.69	67.30	66.09	40.8	40.3	40.3	1.61	1.67	1.64
Food & Kindred Products	36.5	37.1	35.6	— 1.6	+ 2.5	62.01	62.60	58.20	41.9	42.3	40.7	1.48	1.48	1.43
Meat Products	8.5	8.5	8.5	.....	.....	54.37	56.56	48.87	39.4	40.4	36.2	1.38	1.40	1.35
Meat Packing	2.5	2.5	2.5	.....	.....	69.08	72.32	68.14	44.0	45.2	43.4	1.57	1.60	1.57
Dairy Products	5.6	5.6	5.7	.....	— 1.8	75.05	73.94	74.10	47.5	46.8	47.5	1.58	1.58	1.56
Grain Mill Products	4.0	3.9	3.8	+ 2.6	+ 5.3	62.48	66.82	61.92	44.0	46.4	45.2	1.42	1.44	1.37
Bakery Products	7.7	7.7	7.7	.....	.....	71.82	71.57	70.98	42.0	42.1	42.0	1.71	1.70	1.69
Beverage Industries	5.2	5.2	4.9	.....	+ 6.1	70.47	66.10	63.12	52.2	49.7	49.7	1.35	1.33	1.27
Tobacco	39.7	25.9	40.9	+53.3	— 2.9	76.89	88.26	70.49	40.9	39.4	37.9	1.88	2.24	1.86
Cigarettes	18.5	18.8	19.2	— 1.6	— 3.6	97.53	94.71	87.14	41.5	40.3	38.9	2.35	2.35	2.24
Stemmeries	19.5	5.3	20.0	+267.9	— 2.5	56.70	66.61	52.99	40.5	36.4	36.8	1.40	1.83	1.44
Textiles	226.5	222.6	227.8	+ 1.8	— 0.6	66.01	65.21	65.28	41.0	40.5	40.8	1.61	1.61	1.60
Broadwoven Fabrics	91.3	90.1	90.1	+ 1.3	+ 1.3	72.67	70.22	71.23	43.0	41.8	42.4	1.69	1.68	1.68
Broadwoven Cotton	56.4	56.0	56.1	+ 0.7	+ 0.5	71.83	68.30	68.56	42.5	40.9	41.3	1.69	1.67	1.66
Broadwoven Fiber & Silk	31.1	30.3	30.3	+ 2.6	+ 2.6	74.80	73.44	75.24	44.0	43.2	44.0	1.70	1.70	1.71
Knitting Mills	66.2	65.2	69.8	+ 1.5	— 5.2	60.45	59.44	59.29	38.5	38.1	38.5	1.57	1.56	1.54
Full Fashioned Hosiery	7.2	7.2	8.4	.....	—14.3	57.53	57.90	57.83	37.6	37.6	38.3	1.53	1.54	1.51
Seamless Hosiery	46.9	45.7	49.5	+ 2.6	— 5.3	59.88	59.03	59.59	37.9	37.6	38.2	1.58	1.57	1.56
Dyeing & Finishing Textiles	12.4	12.2	12.3	+ 1.6	+ 0.8	66.33	66.57	65.60	40.2	40.1	40.0	1.65	1.66	1.64
Yarn Mills	47.9	46.4	47.0	+ 3.2	+ 1.9	61.76	62.36	61.24	40.9	41.3	41.1	1.51	1.51	1.49
Apparel	46.7	45.6	44.6	+ 2.4	+ 4.7	51.72	50.12	50.95	38.6	37.4	38.6	1.34	1.34	1.32
Men's & Boys' Clothing	17.7	17.6	17.2	+ 0.6	+ 2.9	48.36	47.45	48.01	37.2	36.5	37.8	1.30	1.30	1.27
Paper & Allied Products	13.7	13.6	14.0	+ 0.7	— 2.1	107.89	108.14	101.79	44.4	44.5	43.5	2.43	2.43	2.34
Pulp & Paperboard Mills	8.6	8.6	8.9	.....	— 3.4	118.26	121.86	112.41	43.8	45.3	43.4	2.70	2.69	2.59
Paperboard Containers	3.6	3.5	3.7	+ 2.9	— 2.7	89.24	79.24	78.99	46.0	42.6	43.4	1.94	1.86	1.82
Printing	10.7	10.7	10.5	.....	+ 1.9	87.71	86.64	...7...	38.3	38.0	38.8	2.29	2.28	...7...
Newspapers	5.5	5.4	5.4	+ 1.9	+ 1.9	98.69	97.62	96.57	37.1	36.7	37.0	2.66	2.66	2.61
Chemicals	16.7	16.3	15.3	+ 2.5	+ 9.2	84.23	86.92	85.48	41.7	42.4	41.9	2.02	2.05	2.04
Plastics & Synthetic Materials	10.7	10.5	9.7	+ 1.9	+10.3	92.40	95.89	92.20	42.0	43.0	42.1	2.20	2.23	2.19
Other Nondurable Goods[2]	4.7	4.7	4.7	.....	.....	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Nonmanufacturing	739.6	737.2	723.2	+ 0.3	+ 2.3	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Mining	2.8	2.9	3.4	— 3.4	—17.6	75.19	74.68	83.95	46.7	46.1	51.5	1.61	1.62	1.63
Non-Metallic Mining	2.8	2.9	2.9	— 3.4	— 3.4	75.19	74.68	83.32	46.7	46.1	52.4	1.61	1.62	1.59
Contract Construction	74.9	74.6	73.7	+ 0.4	+ 1.6	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Transp., Comm., & Pub. Utilities	67.7	67.4	65.0	+ 0.4	+ 4.2	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Transportation (Except RR)	33.9	33.7	32.2	+ 0.6	+ 5.3	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Communications & Pub. Utilities	25.0	24.9	24.0	+ 0.4	+ 4.2	97.51	97.58	95.58	40.8	41.0	41.2	2.39	2.38	2.32
Trade[3]	229.7	227.8	225.2	+ 0.8	+ 2.0	66.33	65.76	64.64	40.2	40.1	40.4	1.65	1.64	1.60
Wholesale	59.7	59.2	58.1	+ 0.8	+ 2.8	85.17	84.94	84.05	42.8	42.9	43.1	1.99	1.98	1.95
Retail[3]	170.0	168.6	167.1	+ 0.8	+ 1.7	58.65	58.11	56.74	39.1	39.0	39.4	1.50	1.49	1.44
Retail General Merchandise	35.7	34.5	35.2	+ 3.5	+ 1.4	44.88	45.29	43.34	34.0	33.8	34.4	1.32	1.34	1.26
Department Stores	15.6	15.2	15.1	+ 2.6	+ 3.3	48.54	49.20	47.14	32.8	32.8	33.2	1.48	1.50	1.42
Limited Price Variety	8.1	7.5	8.4	+ 8.0	— 3.6	33.50	31.71	31.21	31.9	30.2	30.6	1.05	1.05	1.02
Retail Food Stores	25.3	25.4	24.3	— 0.4	+ 4.1	53.55	53.00	50.83	35.0	35.1	35.3	1.53	1.51	1.44
Finance, Insurance & Real Estate[6]	49.5	49.5	47.8	.....	+ 3.6	90.99	89.61	87.59	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Service	140.4	140.2	137.9	+ 0.1	+ 1.8	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Hotels & Rooming Houses	9.3	9.3	9.0	.....	+ 3.3	34.69	35.03	34.43	42.3	42.2	42.5	.82	.83	.81
Personal Services	25.6	25.6	25.3	.....	+ 1.2	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Laundries & Dry Cleaners	15.4	15.5	15.3	— 0.6	+ 0.7	35.90	36.10	34.49	38.6	38.0	37.9	.93	.95	.91
Government	174.6	174.8	170.2	— 0.1	+ 2.6	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Federal	38.6	39.3	37.7	— 1.8	+ 2.4
State & Local Schools	68.2	67.5	66.3	+ 1.0	+ 2.9
State & Local Non-Schools	67.8	68.0	66.2	— 0.3	+ 2.4

[1] Includes: Transportation Equipment, Instruments, and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Leather and Leather Products, Rubber Products, and Petroleum Products.
[3] Excludes: Earnings in Eating and Drinking Places.
[4] Preliminary.
[5] Data Not Available.
[6] Reflects Earnings in Insurance Companies Only.
[7] Not comparable.
[8] Less than 0.1% change.

TOTAL EMPLOYMENT IN MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES

(In Thousands of Employees)

Winston-Salem Area

INDUSTRY	*AUGUST, 1963	JULY, 1963	AUGUST, 1962
Total Manufacturing	37.3	36.7	40.2
Food & Kindred Products	1.5	1.5	1.6
Textile Mill Products	9.5	9.6	10.0
Furniture	1.1	1.1	1.0
Metals	1.6	1.6	1.5
All Other Mfg. Inds.[1]	23.6	22.9	26.1

INDUSTRY	JULY, 1963	JUNE, 1963	JULY, 1962
Total Manufacturing	36.6	35.9	38.4
Food & Kindred Products	1.5	1.5	1.5
Textile Mill Products	9.6	9.3	9.7
Furniture	1.1	1.1	1.0
Metals	1.6	1.5	1.5
All Other Mfg. Inds.[1]	22.8	22.5	24.7

INDUSTRY	*JUNE, 1963	MAY, 1963	JUNE, 1962
Total Manufacturing	35.9	36.0	37.6
Food & Kindred Products	1.5	1.5	1.5
Textile Mill Products	9.3	9.7	10.0
Furniture	1.1	1.0	1.0
Metals	1.6	1.6	1.5
All Other Mfg. Inds.[1]	22.4	22.2	23.6

* Preliminary

[1] Includes: Tobacco; Apparel; Lumber; Paper; Printing; Chemicals; Stone, Clay & Glass; Transportation Equipment & Misc. Mfg. Inds.

N. C. RANKS 13TH IN NATION

(Continued from page 1)

closely by Kenosha, Wisconsin ($132.02), and Detroit ($130.24). All three areas are centers of auto manufacturing, and the high weekly earnings reflect the long workweek that characterized the industry during the year. At the lower end of the earnings scale were Fall River, Massachusetts ($64.33), and Greenville, South Carolina ($65.50)—areas of predominant textile and apparel employment. Southern areas for which highest earnings were reported in 1962 were Birmingham ($106.13), Houston ($113.10), and Baton Rouge ($123.90).

These facts, and many others, are brought out in 670-page report, Employment and Earnings Statistics for States and Areas, 1939-62. The bulletin brings together, for the first time, all of the annual averages for employment, hours, and earnings in states and metropolitan areas, prepared by state agencies cooperating with the Bureau of Labor Statistics. The volume is available at $3.50 a copy from the Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor, Suite 540, 1371 Peachtree Street, N.E., Atlanta, Georgia, 30309. Monthly data are published currently by the state agencies and information for each state and area is summarized in another BLS publication, Employment and Earnings.

ESTIMATED COST OF CONSTRUCTION AUTHORIZED IN THIRTY-SIX NORTH CAROLINA CITIES

City	August, 1963	August, 1962	1st 8 Mos. 1963	1st 8 Mos. 1962
Albemarle	$ 42,725	$ 94,050	$ 465,354	$ 725,421
Asheboro	85,849	45,550	1,492,959	1,743,570
Asheville	1,691,543	483,014	8,179,314	5,363,950
Burlington	434,705	580,755	3,049,844	3,812,665
Chapel Hill	913,616	127,253	3,158,984	1,895,845
Charlotte	5,071,233	5,096,846	34,549,840	29,414,687
Concord	178,351	65,500	975,434	1,129,063
Durham	1,271,325	464,636	12,407,763	6,706,841
Elizabeth City	45,765	58,500	1,242,881	718,500
Fayetteville	518,665	514,885	6,972,744	6,451,456
Gastonia	1,476,450	330,450	4,620,275	4,000,100
Goldsboro	371,475	410,943	2,606,033	3,045,250
Greensboro	3,126,293	4,731,389	19,240,147	23,486,306
Greenville	224,415	357,090	3,362,839	2,898,567
Henderson	162,350	119,577	959,271	695,677
Hickory	161,800	90,054	1,426,822	1,860,322
High Point	401,717	637,913	6,117,823	6,949,305
Jacksonville	310,775	152,513	841,565	2,369,156
Kinston	310,755	152,513	2,150,704	4,214,575
Lenoir	164,298	103,851	744,127	952,838
Lexington	144,150	554,218	850,933	1,783,741
Lumberton	125,500	97,100	1,146,150	958,494
Monroe	154,700	76,500	432,800	873,900
New Bern	38,225	39,686	909,285	900,493
Raleigh	1,795,764	1,005,431	16,458,330	17,364,321
Reidsville	59,500	158,879	652,432	943,952
Roanoke Rapids	81,836	230,350	1,093,087	1,344,751
Rocky Mount	290,224	209,872	3,212,077	2,050,902
Salisbury	221,897	667,600	2,650,658	2,227,673
Sanford	67,200	37,700	443,450	673,750
Shelby	207,780	371,750	1,461,540	1,191,740
Statesville	199,145	268,500	2,270,658	2,123,560
Thomasville	257,928	138,515	1,707,749	1,580,038
Wilmington	353,170	110,435	2,788,151	1,312,265
Wilson	277,000	1,659,460	2,756,125	8,944,418
Winston-Salem	3,358,670	878,145	12,743,252	9,246,820
Grand Total	$24,312,304	$21,185,910	$166,141,400	$161,954,912

NEWS

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

W. Willard Wirtz, Secretary

USDL--5960

For Release Sunday Editions
October 20, 1963

Address by

Arthur A. Chapin
Special Assistant to the Secretary of Labor
before the
Eight-State Regional Conference of Jack and Jill Inc., Sheraton Motel, Philadelphia, Pennsylvania
Saturday, October 19, 1963
8:00 P.M.

* *

Thank you very much for this triple treat that you have given me by inviting me to be your banquet speaker. I say triple treat because: First, it's a great honor and challenge to me, as it should be to any man, to be guest speaker for any woman's organization--and even more so because this is "our" Jack & Jill Conference. (At this point may I add that I'm very happy to see so many of our fathers. It's always nice to know that one is not alone. Thank you, fathers, for your moral support).

Secondly, this is a rare privilege you have given me also because I, too, am a Jack and Jill father of four children. And, as you have heard, Philadelphia is also my birthplace. So, here I am with the rare privilege of being back home and speaking before such a wonderful, beautiful, and illustrious group of ladies.

Thirdly, this is a very great pleasure for me since I notice that the birthdate of your national organization is June 1, 1946, and four months later of that same year on October 19, my wife and I were married. So, I consider it a great pleasure that we are able to celebrate our wedding anniversary with such an appropriate group as mothers and fathers of Jack and Jil.

The theme of your Conference "New Frontiers in Youth Development" is a very timely one, and one of great importance to me. In my new job as Special Assistant to the Secretary of Labor for Manpower, I have had a great deal of contact with youth and the problems they face in this decade. I will discuss with you some of the steps your Government is taking to improve and more fully utilize the nation's manpower.

As we see the picture, the importance of an education for today's youth cannot be overly stated, particularly for Negro boys and girls. For one out of every three Negro youths with only an eighth grade education is unemployed, compared with one out of six for the high-school graduate and one out of eight for those with one or more years of college; and less than one out of 22 Negroes over 24 years of age with one or more years of college is unemployed. The more education a young Negro gets, the nearer his income approaches that of his white counterpart. The Negro elementary school graduate, compared with the white elementary school graduate gets only 68% of the white's income. This increases to 71% for the Negro high school graduate and to 85% for the college graduate. Therefore, the youth who has not completed grade school will earn $100,000 less in his life time than the high-school graduate; the high-school graduate will earn $140,000 less than the college graduate. So, we can see that education does pay off-- and it is worth the strugle and sacrifice that each of you wil make and are making to educate your youngsters, as well as the youngsters whom you may, in the future, provide scholarships for.

Jack and Jill is the nucleus of a marvelous opportunity for helping some less fortunate youth to further his education.

The President of the United States said in an address to the nation, "The Negro baby born in America today, regardless of the section or State in which he is born, has about one-half as much chance of completing high school as a white baby born in the same place on the same day--one third as much chance of completing college--one-third as much chance of becoming a professional man--twice as much chance of becoming unemployed--about one-seventh as much chance of earning $10,000 per year--a life expectancy which is seven years less--and the prospects of earning only half as much."

We have been victimized by racial prejudice. And, it would appear to me, that the time has come when the opponents of decency and right must recognize the inevitable change. In this Emancipation year, we stand at the dawn of a new day--on a new path toward full citizenship and personal dignity. At the beginning of our great Nation, Americans assumed a mortgage on their freedom, but after almost two centuries we are in the throes of bankruptcy because we are behind in our payments to the United States Constitution. So, we face a paradox that all of us in this room have had some experience with. That paradox is the reluctance to accept the Negro in employment on the one hand--and giving him an inferior education on the other, and now demanding that he be fully prepared at a time when many employers are embarrassed that they have practiced unequal opportunities.

We are being faced now with the fact that we must be ready because the walls of discrimination in so many areas have crumbled completely. Our task now is to see to it that our youths are fully prepared so that the old familiar excuse of an employer "I would, but I can't find a qualified individual" will no longer prevail.

The total number of nonwhites in the civilian work force is 8 million, which represents 11% of the total work force. There are in this work force today 600,000 men and women who have been out of work for more than 26 weeks. More than one out of every four in this group of "long-term unemployed" is nonwhite.

Although the Negro has made rapid improvements in his fundamental living standards and in every phase of his daily life, and made it faster than most other groups in the same short span of 100 years, we still find too large a segment of the Negro population deprived economically and socially. This deprivation of so large a segment of the population has had an adverse effect upon this nation.

The Government is ready and will be increasingly ready to employ Negroes for managerial positions, but this means that those employed will have to have equal training and demonstrate equal capacities. It means an increasingly tough position in the under-graduate school years for student and teacher alike. It means greater stress in the home, in school, and in the community must be placed on help young people in greater numbers achieve academic status.

The Department of Labor has made substantial progress in the recognition of Negroes in the important administrative positions in its various departments. We can point with pride to Mr. George L-P Weaver, who is known to many of you here, and who is the Assistant Secretary of International Affairs and represents the United States Government in International Labor Organizations. The Federal Regional Director of the United States Employment Service in the New York, New Jersey region, which is the largest manpower area in the United States and includes the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands is also a Negro.

Today in Washington and throughout the Federal service, any job, every job, is open to a Negro, Protestant, Catholic, or Jew if he or she can qualify.

These are indeed new frontiers for our young people. However, even though there have been new developments, I do not wish it to appear that all is perfect in Washington or in any Federal region. The millennium is not with us, but we are progressing. In the coming year 20,000 college graduates will be needed to staff the needs of the Federal Government. This figure is based upon the needs of the Government in terms of its programs and in terms of the rise in skill requirements that are called for in programs of increasing technical and professional content.

These career positions are available to those who wish to compete in the Federal personnel system. They range across the entire occupational and professional spectrum. About one- half of these career positions will be filled through the channeling device of the Federal Service Entrance Examination. There will be positions in administration, economics,psychology, fiscal matters, and personnel administration in a broad variety of operating programs such as social security, internal revenue and other programs that are essential to our national security and welfare.

In order to help the Negro meet these needs the Secretary of Labor has conducted a series of occupational conferences, held on Negro college campuses. The first of these was held at Howard University; the second at Atlanta University; the third at Fisk,and the last at Texas Southern. Attending these conferences were the presidents, deans, and other officials of every Negro college in the United States. The prime topic of discussion during these conferences was the problem of motivation and preparation of minority groups for employment in the newly emerging employment opportunities.

You, too, as community leaders and, more importantly, as mothers, must give greater attention to the necessity of motivating youngsters to obtain educational training so as to develop their skills to the highest potential. Your Government, under the Manpower Act of 1962, has recognized the need for trained workers and is presently offering opportunities in all sections of the country.

Although the road ahead of us is long and the task seems overwhelming, we have much to be proud of. Real progress is being, and has been made.

Between 1900 and 1950, Negroes enrolled in Negro colleges increased over 28 times. Negroes receiving B.A or B.S. degrees increased 84 times in the same period compared to 16 times for whites. In a 1961 survey of college seniors, 96% of Negroes as compared with 76% of whites planned to go to graduate or professional school.

Another interesting fact about Negroes that is not generally known, is that about one-quarter of a million are today attending colleges and universities, about 100,000 of whom are in the South and the District of Columbia.

And, Negro enrollment in higher education is higher than total enrollment in Great Britain or Italy, and nearly as high as in West Germany or France, even though the Negro population in America is less than half the total population of any of these nations.

The high financial cost of certain types of professional education such as medicine, is a serious obstacle to Negro youth. 34% of Negro youth, compared with 12% of white, report financial handicaps as barring the way to graduate and professional schools.

Part of our time and efforts, yes, and part of your time and efforts, must therefore be set aside to get special funds for the less fortunate and the more deserving youth who is so eager to obtain his post graduate education. A push up the ladder of success is always helpful.

The capacity of our Negro students is well illustrated by the selection of a Negro, Mr. Julius Chambers, to the distinguished post of Editor-in-Chief of the University of North Carolina LAW REVIEW -- the highest honor that a law school student can receive.

For the first time in history, three outstanding medical schools with southern traditions--John Hopkins, Duke, and Emory--last month admitted Negroes on a competitive basis. Each of them had won a National Medical Fellowship. Thus, another barrier down--another new frontier conquered.

If any of you believed that because of the historical 1954 decision that "racial segregation in public schools was unconstitutional"-- if you believed this ruling would eliminate Negro colleges, let me assure you it did not. On the contrary, an interesting and significant development is the interest of the white student in attending colleges which were formerly all Negro. For example, Lincoln University in Missouri reports more than 500 white students, and West Virginia State College is now evenly split between Negro and white.

We are the products of the same evolution as the white man. Our difficulties arise from our different environment. We are forced into the ghetto; our background has been rural and in a part of the country where education has been low. But every year we become more urban and there are greater opportunities for achieving high cultural and intellectual standards.

The President's Executive Order on Fair Housing is another step in the direction of obliterating this injustice. The college class, the theatre, the lecture, the library, the excellent programs on educational TV stations--all are our right to enjoy--but, a right without using it is an empty right.

Basic to the Government's program is the principle that improvements of equal opportunity for all minorities is fundamental to the elimination of other inequities that exist within our society. To accomplish this the President set forth a basic policy in Executive Order 10925, issued on March 6, 1961. The President said, "It is the plain and positive objective of the United States Government to promote and insure equal employment opportunity for all qualified persons without regard to race, creed, color or national origin, employed or seeking employment with the Federal Government."

Yes, I repeat--the walls of segregation and discrimination are crumbling. New frontiers are opening up every day where they never existed before. The Negro youth of today has a much better chance of educational advancement and attaining goals that were thought impossible by even his parents a few years ago.

I submit that Americans in every one of our fifty States, are richer today because of the advancements the Negro has won. And, our society is more mature for what has been learned in granting him, all too slowly, his freedom. But, yet the task ahead poses significant challenges.

As we embark upon the second century following the Emancipation, we observe that there are more forces working for the realization of civil rights for all Americans than ever before in history. Much of the credit for this progress must go to the Negro himself, because he has demonstrated a remarkable capacity to work with his white neighbors for their common benefit, in addition to the ability to rise from slavery and become an educated contributor to society.

We must always remember that democracy is never static. It is a constantly moving force that challenges us to reach new and higher levels of achievement each day. There are many ways to meet the challenge of leadership in interracial matters. But, I suggest quite simply that we begin anew in our own hearts and minds to strive to treat every man as an individual and never judge anyone in terms of generalizations. Let us become more thoroughly aware of the very patterns of prejudice that yet exist on our jobs, in public accommodations, in churches, in our neighborhoods and Nation, and resolve to use our every influence to eradicate them.

Making this choice will become easy if all of us realize that as spiritual inheritors of all civilization's past, we are not only the trustees of its glorious present, but we are the architects for its boundless future.

I believe that most Americans are dedicated to the fundamental principle that the common welfare is served best when all Americans can earn their living, establish their homes, and live without fear of racial or religicus discrimination.

As parents, our job is also well defined--we must help today's youngster in every way--we must advise, give, and share of our own experiences. This is not always easy, for youth today knows where it wants to go.

The opportunity is here for the youth of today. With all the forces at work today in favor of youth, I can think of no better advice than this poem by a great American--a great Negro American--Dr. George Washington Carver:

"Figure it out for yourself, my lad,
You've all that the greatest of men have had,
Two arms, two hands, two legs, two eyes,
And a brain to use if you would be wise,
With this equipment they all began.

"So start for the top and say "I can."
Look them over, the wise and the great,
They take their food from a common plate
And similar knives and forks they use,
With similar laces they tie their shoes,
The world considers them brave and smart,
But you've all they had when they made this start.

"You can triumph and come to skill,
You can be great if you only will.
You're well equipped for what fight you choose;
You have arms and legs and brain to use,
And the man who has risen great deeds to do
Began his life with no more than you."

--0--

NEWS

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

W. Willard Wirtz, Secretary

Research
Labor

USDL--5962

FOR RELEASE: Sunday Editions
October 20, 1963

LABOR SECRETARY SETS APPRENTICESHIP ANTI-DISCRIMINATION STANDARDS AND COMPLIANCE PROCEDURES

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz today issued proposed standards and compliance procedures to insure equality of opportunity within the Nation's apprenticeship system.

The compliance procedures implement standards, originally issued last July, which provide that Federal certification will be withheld from any apprenticeship program that does not meet the following criteria:

1. Selection of apprentices on the basis of qualification alone, unless the selections otherwise made would themselves demonstrate that there is equality of opportunity.

2. Action to remove the effects of previous practices under which discriminatory patterns of employment may have resulted.

3. Non-discrimination in all phases of apprenticeship and employment during apprenticeship after selections are made.

To achieve compliance with these standards, the Secretary has set forth procedures for carrying out a review at the local, regional and national levels of existing programs; and procedures for processing complaints from individuals alleging discrimination. He also directed full Federal-State cooperation in States which have Apprenticeship Committees and agencies responsible for enforcement of Fair Employment Practices Acts.

The Labor Department's Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training is charged with the responsibility of insuring compliance with the new standards. In doing so, it will notify all sponsoring groups (joint labor-management committees, etc.) of the new regulations and what they entail. The Bureau will seek, first, to achieve voluntary compliance, and will encourage the creation of private procedures by the sponsoring groups to accomplish this.

The Department's standards were issued as a result of a statement by President Kennedy, directing the Secretary of Labor "to require that the admission of young workers to apprenticeship programs be on a completely non-discriminatory basis."

The new standards and compliance procedures will appear this week in the Federal Register. Interested persons may submit written statements of data, views or arguments in regard to any or all of the policies contained in the Secretary's document within 15 days after publication in the Register. Submissions should be directed to the Secretary of Labor, United States Department of Labor, Constitution Avenue and Fourteenth Street, N. W., Washington 25, D. C.

# # # #

(S-64-964)

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF LABOR
WASHINGTON, D. C.
/ 29 CFR SUBTITLE A /
NON-DISCRIMINATION IN APPRENTICESHIP AND TRAINING

This document sets forth the substance of rules regarding nondiscrimination in apprenticeship which the Secretary of Labor proposes to issue pursuant to the authority granted him in the 29 U.S.C. § 50 and 5 U.S.C § 22.

A. Background and Policy: President Kennedy, in a statement dated June 4, 1963, directed the Secretary of Labor "in the conduct of his duties under the Federal Apprenticeship Act (29 U.S.C. § § 50-50b) and Executive Order No. 10925 (26 F.R.1977) to require that the admission of young workers to apprenticeship programs be on a completely non-discriminatory basis." The President further directed that "all Federal construction programs be reviewed to prevent any racial discrimination in hiring practices, either directly in the rejection of presently available qualified Negro workers or indirectly by the exclusion of Negro applicants for apprenticeship training."

Pursuant to these instructions, the Secretary of Labor directed the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training to insure that all apprenticeship or apprenticeship and training programs now federally registered operate on the basis of the following standards:

1. The selection of apprentices on the basis of qualifications alone, in accordance with objective standards which permit review after full and fair opportunity for application, unless the selections otherwise made would themselves demonstrate that there is equality of opportunity.
2. The taking of whatever steps are necessary, in acting upon application lists developed prior to this time, to remove the effects of previous practices under which discriminatory patterns of employment may have resulted.
3. Non-discrimination in all phases of apprenticeship and employment during apprenticeship after selections are made.

Discrimination based on race, creed, color, or national origin has no place in American life today, particularly in the programs by which young people acquire the skills that determine their future employment prospects. Full equality of opportunity for all is a goal toward which both labor and management have pledged their efforts and which warrants the full cooperation of labor, management and the community.

B. General Directions: This document sets forth procedures to be used in implementing the program set forth by the President and the Secretary.

The Bureau's primary job, in this context, is to encourage and assist program sponsors and the community in achieving equality of opportunity, voluntarily and by their own efforts, through the adoption and implementation of the equal opportunity standards for apprenticeship set forth above. This encouragement and assistance is to be undertaken constructively and in a manner reflecting the historic advisory and counseling services of the Bureau. If there should be apprenticeship programs in which equal opportunity cannot be obtained voluntarily through the various processes outlined in this document, procedures are set forth below for the withholding or withdrawal of governmental recognition from such apprenticeship programs.

C. Promotion of Equal Opportunity: Regional Directors shall take immediate steps to inform all sponsors of federally registered apprenticeship programs of the policy, standards and requirements set forth in this document and to promote the voluntary acceptance by sponsors of the standards. Regional Directors shall insure that general publicity is given to the Bureau's non-discrimination policy and program and that Bureau field personnel give continuing leadership toward acceptance of these policies. Recognizing that the policies set forth herein will effect their purpose only if qualified applicants from racial and ethnic minorities are informed with respect to apprenticeship opportunities that will be available under the revised standards, Regional Directors shall make special effort to guarantee that the organizations most useful in assuring such a supply of candidates (schools, public employment service, minority group organizations, etc.) are informed of the revised program. Regional Directors should lay plans with such groups for the stepped-up information and counseling program that will be needed to obtain qualified minority group applicants.

D. Program Reviews: Regional Directors shall initiate a systematic review of existing federally registered programs, inform program sponsors of the equal opportunity standards, encourage their adoption, and take appropriate action regarding programs which do not adopt and operate in accordance with the standards. Each program review shall involve the following steps:

1. Notification to the program sponsor of the equal opportunity standards and the taking of all appropriate action to urge their voluntary acceptance.
2. Maintenance of a file on the program review which shall accompany the report forwarded regarding the review.
3. Determination of racial and ethnic composition of the program. Where the composition of the program demonstrates that there is equality of opportunity no further review will be made. A file shall be maintained regarding such programs, which will contain the information which indicates that equal employment opportunity is being provided. This file shall be forwarded through supervisory channels to the Administrator of the Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training for review.

4. Use of the following checklist:

a. The Formal Program Language Requirement. Does the program contain a formal non-discrimination clause consistent with the equal opportunity standards set forth in Section A of this document? (Programs already containing the language required by Circular 62-5 are not required to adopt new written provisions. See Section H.)

b. Selection of Apprentices.

(1) Selection on the basis of qualifications alone.

(a) Does the program select apprentices on the basis of qualifications alone in accordance with objective standards which permit review after full and fair opportunity for application (See Section G.1 below) and

(b) Is the application list composed entirely of applicants selected and ranked solely on the basis of qualifications alone in accordance with objective standards that permit review after full and fair opportunity for application? (See Sections G.1d and G.2 below.)

(2) Alternative Selection Plan. If the program does not qualify under section (1) above, has the program adopted an alternative equal opportunity plan for selecting apprentices which is consistent with the Standards for apprenticeship set forth in Section A and which is acceptable to the Administrator? Does the program operate in accordance with such plan? Field representatives should submit through channels to the Administrator for approval alternate selection plans which appear to be consistent with the equal opportunity standards set forth in Section A. A copy of the approved plan should be included in the case file.

c. Program Operation. Is there any discrimination in apprenticeship or employment during apprenticeship, including but not limited to job assignment, promotion, demotion, layoff, or termination, rates of pay or other forms of compensation or conditions of work? (See Section G.3 below.)

5. Where the program has not adopted or is not operating in accordance with the equal opportunity standards, the field representative shall notify the program sponsor (even in group programs where it is an individual employer who is deficient) and indicate possible methods of providing equal opportunity in accordance with this document. For a reasonable time, not to exceed 30 days from the time the sponsor is notified of the lack of equal opportunity, the field representative shall make every reasonable effort to encourage corrective action, recording the facts and information in the case report. This effort to obtain corrective action shall include an opportunity for any body designated by the program sponsor or industry group for reviewing complaints of discrimination to resolve the issue.

6. At the close of the review for programs found to be in conformity, or at the close of the time allowed for voluntary corrective action for programs found not to be in conformity, the field representative shall forward the case file through supervisory channels to the Regional Director for review.

7. The Regional Director shall review findings of conformity or achievement of corrective action on a spot check basis in sufficient proportion to assure himself that Bureau equal opportunity policy is being properly carried out. Where upon review the Regional Director does not concur in the finding of the field representative, he may order further investigation or such other action as may be necessary and appropriate.

8. Upon receipt of any finding of nonconformity by a Field Representative, the Regional Director shall notify the program sponsor that such a finding has been made and that the program will be deregistered unless the finding is set aside or appropriate corrective action taken. The sponsor shall have 15 days within which to file a written request for a hearing with the Regional Director.

a. If the program sponsor does not request a hearing within 15 days, the Regional Director shall review the case.

(1) Where upon review the Regional Director concurs in the finding of noncompliance and failure to achieve satisfactory corrective action, he shall so notify the program sponsor and the complainant, if any, and shall forward the case file to the Administrator, stating his concurrence and his recommendations, if any.

(2) Where upon review, the Regional Director does not concur in the finding of the field representative, he may order further investigation or such other action as may be necessary and appropriate.

b. If the program sponsor within 15 days files a written request, the sponsor shall be accorded a hearing before a hearing officer designated by the Regional Director. The hearing shall be informally conducted. Every party shall have the right to counsel and a fair opportunity to present its case or defense, including a right of cross-examination. The hearing officer shall prepare a decision on the basis of the record before him, setting forth findings and conclusions on the question of non-compliance and recommendations, if any. This decision shall be final as to any complainant with respect to whom it is adverse. Copies of the decision shall be furnished to the program sponsor, and the complainant, if any. Exception to the decision may be filed by the program sponsor with the Administrator within 15 days. If exceptions are filed and if there is a complainant, a copy of the exception filed shall be furnished to him and he shall be given 15 days in which to file a reply with the Administrator. A copy of such reply shall be furnished to the program sponsor.

9. Upon receipt of the Regional Director's concurrence in the finding of the field representative or of a decision of a hearing officer that a program is not in conformity, the Administrator will so inform any private organization designated by the industry in question to assist in achieving equal opportunity and shall allow the organization a reasonable time normally not to exceed 20 days to achieve voluntary corrective action.

10. Following the receipt of exceptions and replies to be filed or for the action provided for in subsection 9 above, the Administrator shall render a final decision in writing based on the file or the record as the case may be. If the decision is that the program is in nonconformity and that satisfactory action to achieve conformity has not been taken, the program shall be deregistered. The Administrator shall notify the Regional Director, the Program sponsor, the complainant, if any, and any private organizations of the type described in subsection 9 of his decision.

    In each case in which deregistration is ordered the Administrator will make public notice of the order and will notify the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity and the Solicitor of Labor who will notify contracting agencies.

11. If in the judgment of the Administrator a particular situation warrants and requires special processing and expedited determination, he shall take the steps necessary to permit such determination; provided, that no person or or party affected by such determination shall be prejudiced by such special processing.

12. Priorities. Until such time as all larger programs shall have been reviewed, field representatives shall not review programs with a total of 5 or less apprentices in training except in connection with the processing of complaints. Review should also be deferred of programs which have been examined under the complaint procedure provided for in section E below and which have been found by the Bureau to provide equal opportunity or which have taken necessary action to provide such opportunity.

E. Complaint Processing. Complaints may be filed with the Bureau or any field representative by any applicant or apprentice who feels that he has been discriminated against on the basis of race, creed, color, or national origin with regard to apprenticeship or that the equal opportunity standards have not been followed in his case. The complaint shall be in writing and shall be signed by the complainant. It must include the name, address, and telephone number of the person allegedly discriminated against, the program sponsor involved and a brief description of the circumstances of the alleged discrimination.

Complaints received by the Bureau Headquarters Office will be transmitted to the field for processing.

It is Bureau policy to encourage local program sponsors to establish, either individually or in an industry group, fair, speedy and effective procedures for reviewing complaints of discrimination. The desirability of establishing such review procedures should be brought to the attention of all program sponsors as soon as possible.

Regional Directors shall institute procedures to insure that upon receipt of any complaint field representatives shall:

1. Prepare and maintain a complete case file for each complaint received. It shall contain the original complaint, reports of investigations and visits, and correspondence with the employer, the program sponsor, and others regarding all phases of the case in chronological order, including recommendations made and final disposition of the case. This file shall be forwarded to the Regional Director for review upon local disposition of each complaint. A separate local office correspondence and reports file shall be maintained for essential internal records and correspondence regarding each case.

2. When the program sponsor or industry group has designated a body for reviewing complaints of discrimination, the Bureau field representative, upon receiving a complaint shall after establishing a case file direct the complainant to file his complaint with the representative of the review body. He shall give the complainant the name and address of this representative.
3. No later than 60 days following the filing of a complaint with the review body by the complainant the field representative shall obtain reports from the complainant and the review body of the disposition of the complaint. If the complaint has been satisfactorily adjusted and there is no other indication of failure to apply equal opportunity standards, the case shall be closed and the parties appropriately informed.
4. When a complaint has not been resolved through local review procedures within 60 days, where no local review procedure exists or where despite satisfactory resolution of the complaint there is evidence that the equal opportunity practices of the program are not in accordance with these rules, the field representative shall notify the program sponsor of the complaint or such evidence, solicit a response from the sponsor and conduct whatever other investigation is necessary to determine the facts, including where necessary, interrogation of the complainant, the employer and other involved persons. The pertinent facts should be recorded.

5. Where the program is not operating in accordance with the equal opportunity standards, the field representative shall notify the program sponsor (even in group programs where it is an individual employer who is deficient) and indicate possible methods of providing equal opportunity in accordance with this document. For a reasonable time, not to exceed 15 days from the time the sponsor is notified of the lack of equal opportunity, the field representative shall make every reasonable effort to encourage corrective action, recording the facts and information in the case report.

6. From this point on, compaints shall be processed procedurally in the same manner as program reviews (see section D. 6-11).

F. Reinstatement of Program Registration: Any program deregistered pursuant to this document may be reinstated upon presentation of adequate evidence to the Administrator that the program has established and is operating under a selection system based on qualifications alone and is in compliance with the equal opportunity standard set forth in section A (3).

G. Interpretations:

1. Selection on the Basis of Qualifications. The Bureau encourages program sponsors to adopt a system of apprentice selection based solely on qualifications "in accordance with objective standards which permit review, after full and fair opportunity for application" on the ground that this kind of system is the one most in accord with a free and democratic society.

   a. "Objective standards which permit review" does not mean that all programs must have identical standards for selection. It does mean that qualifications and eligibility must be determined by specific requirements so that questions of discrimination in selection can be promptly adjudicated. These requirements must be established and disseminated publicly prior to selection.

b. Selection "on the basis of qualifications alone" means that apprentices are chosen from those applicants meeting the minimum qualifications for the trade or craft solely on the basis of their qualifications compared to those of other applicants. Examples of standards by which comparative qualifications may be determined are fair aptitude tests, high school diploma, age requirements, occupationally essential physical requirements, fair interviews, high school grades and previous work experience. Under this test, both actual selection for and entry into apprenticeship must be on the basis of comparative qualifications alone.

It is not enough for a program to establish a lengthy list on the basis of minimum qualifications standards and then select apprentices from the list on a basis other than comparative qualifications such as on the basis of time of application. Where the number of applicants meeting the qualification requirement is greater than the number of job openings, "qualifications alone" means (1) that the applicants are ranked on the basis of criteria which measure comparative qualifications (e.g., fair aptitude tests, etc.) and are selected on the basis of the rankings, or (2) that without ranking each individual, criteria which measure comparative qualifications are used to identify the "best qualified" in a total number not in excess of the total number of apprentice openings and selections for employment from within the "best qualified" group are made through any non-discriminatory system.

c. To "permit review" adequate records must be kept of the selection process. These must include a brief summary of each interview and the conclusions on each of the specific factors, e.g., motivation, ambition, willingness to accept direction, which are part of the total judgment.

d. "After full and fair opportunity for application" means that the program sponsor has, prior to the time of selection and in the future at least once annually, allowed a substantial period of time for new applicants to apply for apprenticeship, has publicly disseminated information about the availability of apprenticeship opportunities and has ranked the new applicants thus received along with previous applicants on the basis of their comparative qualifications. In the future, such information shall be posted at the normal place of application for apprenticeship and disseminated to the local employment service and the local schools.

The information so disseminated must describe the qualification standards and selection procedures, and specify the anticipated number of openings, the method and place of making application, the dates within which applications will be accepted. It should indicate the approximate date at which the results of the selection process will be made known to all the applicants.

2. Necessary Action on Prior Application Lists. Where program sponsors have or adopt a selection system based on qualifications as specified in section G. 1 the Standard stated in Section A. 2 does not require any action with regard to "application lists developed prior to this time" beyond that required by section G. 1. Where program sponsors do not have a selection system based on qualifications, the Standard stated in section A. 2 requires that "application lists developed prior to this time" be opened to the extent necessary to provide current opportunities for selection of qualified members of racial and ethnic minority groups.

3. Nondiscriminatory Operation: There must be no discrimination in apprenticeship or employment during apprenticeship after selections have been made, including but not limited to job assignment, promotion, layoff or termination, rates of pay or other forms of compensation or conditions of work. All apprentices employed shall be subject to the same job performance requirements.

4. Selection from Existing Employees: Where apprentices are selected from a restricted pool, e.g., from present employees, admissions to the pool as well as selection for apprenticeship shall after the effective date of this document be on a nondiscriminatory basis. Selections from the pool may be made on the basis of seniority of employment.

H. Program Language Requirements: Each federally registered apprenticeship program which does not now contain a nondiscrimination clause in the form required by Circular 62-5 3/must contain a formal nondiscrimination clause consistent with the equal opportunity standards set forth in section A of this document. The Bureau suggests the following language as appropriate for adoption by program sponsors desiring to select apprentices on the basis of qualifications alone:

3/ The language now required by Circular 62-5 is as follows: "Selection of apprentices under this program shall be made from qualified applicants without regard to race, creed, color, national origin or physical handicaps; women shall not be barred from apprenticeships for which they qualify.

> "Selection of apprentices under the program shall be made from qualified applicants on the basis of qualifications alone and without regard to race, creed, color, national origin, sex or physical handicaps in accordance with objective standards which permit review, after full and fair opportunity for application; and this program shall be operated on a completely non-discriminatory basis."

Irrespective of the form of the formal nondiscrimination clause adopted, all federally registered apprenticeship programs are required to operate in accordance with the equal opportunity standards as stated and interpreted above and all Bureau correspondence regarding program language requirements shall so indicate.

I. New Programs: Any program seeking Federal registration hereafter must select apprentices on the basis of qualifications alone in accordance with objective standards which permit review after full and fair opportunity for application and must adopt a nondiscrimination clause in the form suggested in section H or its equivalent. In addition to the language requirement, the submission to the Bureau must include a concise statement of the selection procedure and of the selection standards which the program sponsor proposes to apply.

J. Bureau and State Agency Cooperation:

(a). Regional Directors shall encourage State Apprenticeship Council (SAC) States to accept the equal opportunity standards for apprenticeship and to adopt effective procedures to implement the Standards including program reviews, the processing of complaints, deregistration of noncomplying programs, and consultation and cooperation with private organizations designated by the industry in question to assist in achieving equal opportunity in apprenticeship. Regional Directors shall submit nondiscrimination programs developed by states to the Administrator for determination as to consistency with the equal opportunity Standards. Where state programs are determined to be consistent with the equal opportunity Standards, Regional Directors shall work out with SAC states a division of responsibilities between Federal and state personnel for carrying out the procedures adopted to implement the policy. This division should generally be based on present assignments for the servicing of apprenticeship program accounts.

(b). In SAC states which adopt a nondiscrimination program consistent with the equal opportunity standards, BAT field representatives shall file their reports with BAT State Supervisors. Where the state supervisor concurs in any finding of non-compliance and failure to take corrective action, he shall forward the file to the State agency with a recommendation for deregistration. He shall at the same time notify the Regional Director who will notify the Administrator.

(c). Regional Directors shall request that SAC state agencies notify them of any state deregistration. Regional Directors shall then notify the Administrator who will in turn notify the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity and the Solicitor of Labor. The Solicitor of Labor will notify contracting agencies.

(d). Regional Directors shall consult with state officials regarding methods of cooperation with state fair employment practices commissions and shall report the results of such consultations to the Administrator. Interested persons may submit written statements of data, views, or arguments in regard to any or all of the policies or procedures contained in this proposal within 15 days after this document is published in the Federal Register. Submissions should be directed to the Secretary of Labor, United States Department of Labor, Constitution Avenue and Fourteenth Street N.W., Washington 25, D. C.

Signed at Washington, D. C., this 18th day of October, 1963.

W. Willard Wirtz
Secretary of Labor

NEWS

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

W. Willard Wirtz, Secretary

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR 1913 50 1963 YEARS OF PROGRESS THE DIGNITY OF LABOR IN A FREE SOCIETY

WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST

Week of October 21, 1963

IN THIS ISSUE:

Dean Harding B. Young of Atlanta University on Puerto Rican Industry Committee

Negro College Officials Assist Labor Department Seminars

Directories of Labor Organizations Cover the World

Hearings Scheduled on Foreign Agricultural Workers in Florida

Emancipation Proclamation Commemoration Booklet Still Available

President's Commission on Status of Women Submits Report

Assistant Secretary George L-P Weaver Lauds Worker Participation in Alliance for Progress Program

Quote by the Under Secretary of Labor John F. Henning

Dean Harding B. Young of Atlanta University on Puerto Rican Industry Committee

Harding B. Young, Dean of the School of Business, Atlanta University, has been named by Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz to three review committees to consider in October, minimum wage rates in Puerto Rican industries producing knitwear and linens.

These committees which convene in Santurce, P.R., are authorized under Fair Labor Standards amendments of 1961 and represent employers, employees, and the public including residents of Puerto Rico and the continental United States. They may recommend the minimum rate or rates to be paid employees in specific industries in lieu of the rate resulting from statutory increase provided by the amendments.

(MORE)

Earlier appointees to Puerto Rican Industry Review Committees include Thomas M. Jenkins, Dean of College of Law, Florida A&M University; and James M. Nabrit, Jr., President of Howard University. Mr. Jenkins served in September 1963, at hearings concerned with the sugar, hosiery, and rubber products industries. Mr. Nabrit served in June 1963, on the committee concerned with the tobacco industry.

* * * * *

Negro College Officials Assist Labor Department Seminars

Four additional Negro educators from Negro Colleges have offered assistance as resource leaders at the Labor Department's one-day Regional Practices Seminars on Employment Opportunities for Minority Groups.

Dr. William H. Hale, President of Langston University, Langston, Okla., will serve in Denver on October 22; Dr. Lewis M. Jackson, Dean of Men at Central State College in Wilberforce, Ohio, will serve on October 17 in Cleveland; and Dr. Charles M. Hoard, Dean of Students at Lincoln University in Jefferson City, Mo., will serve in Chicago on October 18 and Kansas City, Mo., on October 28.

These seminars are intended to assist Labor Department field staffs in working with unions, industry groups, individual companies, the Negro communities and other organizations in order to gain acceptance of policies relating to equal employment opportunities. Previous seminars have been addressed by Dr. Samuel M. Nabrit, President of Texas Southern University; Dr. Carl Hill, President of Kentucky State College; Mr. Anthony Rachal, Jr., Director of Placement and Recruitment at Xavier University; and Mr. J. Percy Bond, Director of Admissions and Placement, Morgan State College. Mr. Rachal who served in Dallas will also assist at Seattle on October 23 and 24.

(MORE)

* * * * *

Directories of Labor Organizations Cover the World

Labor Department Directories of Labor Organizations now cover Africa, Europe, and the Western Hemisphere. Newest revised and expanded edition is for Asia and Australasia, listing 2,100 major labor organizations with membership of 41 million. Prepared by the Department's Bureau of International Affairs (Assistant Secretary of Labor George L-P Weaver) this newest edition in two volumes sells for $7, at the U.S. Government Printing Office.

* * * * *

Hearing Scheduled on Employment of Foreign Agricultural Workers in Florida

Secretary of Labor W. Williard Wirtz has announced that a public hearing will be held in Miami, November 5, to consider the possible "adverse effect" of the employment of foreign agricultural workers on the wages and working conditions of domestic farmworkers in Florida. It had been previously determined that the employment of foreign agricultural workers at a rate of less than 95¢ an hour would adversely affect wages and working conditions of domestic workers.

* * * * *

Emancipation Proclamation Celebration Booklet Still Available

"America is for Everybody," the Department of Labor's booklet published earlier this year in commemoration of the Emancipation Proclamation is still available.

The illustrated booklet has a statement by President John F. Kennedy, a preface by Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson and a foreword by Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz. It also has a reproduction of the Emancipation Proclamation signed by President Abraham Lincoln.

(MORE)

The economic status of the Negro in 1863 and in 1963 is presented in text and table, as is the status of the Negro in the labor market. The work concludes in effect, as is stated by the President: "The task is not finished. Much remains to be done to eradicate the vestiges of discrimination and segregation, to make equal rights a reality for all of our people, to fulfill finally the promises of the Declaration of Independence."

The booklet is for sale by the Superintendent of Documents, U.S. Government Printing Office, Washington 25, D.C., at 30¢ per copy. A limited number of copies are available upon request in the office of Arthur A. Chapin, Manpower Minority Group Specialist, Main Labor Building, Washington 25, D.C.

* * * * *

President's Commission on Status of Women Submits Report

The President's Commission on the Status of Women, established by Executive Order in December 1961, under the chairmanship of the late Eleanor Roosevelt, has submitted its 22-month "action-program" report to the President on the anniversary of Mrs. Roosevelt's death.

The report, including among its 24 signers Miss Dorothy Height, President, National Council of Negro Women, Inc., asks further executive action by the President and questions the constitutionality of many State laws which discriminate against women.

The Commission considered all women but was "particularly mindful" of the circumstances of certain women, including those who are members of minority groups, for whom many of its recommendations have added significance.

(MORE)

Its recommendations express special concern for women in whose families "the unbroken cycle of deprivation and retardation repeats itself from generation to generation."

In employment, the Commission enlisted the aid of the U.S. Civil Service Commission and the U.S. Employment Security Service in removing some apparent discriminations because of sex in job referrals and promotional policies. In recommends an executive order on the Federal level to bring the matter to the attention of private employers.

The report itself, an 86-page two-color book with 21 charts--"American Women" sells for $1.25 at the U.S. Government Printing Office.

* * * * *

Assistant Secretary Weaver Says Worker Participation in Alliance Necessary

Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs George L-P Weaver, commenting that the workers themselves have rarely been consulted in Alliance for Progress planning, stated further: "One of the primary objectives of the United States at the Bogota meeting was to drive home the need for worker participation. I can tell you that no subject raised at the conference was more strongly and unanimously endorsed. We can consider this a significant breakthrough for the trade unionists and working people of Latin America. It has been signed into reality in the Declaration of Cundinamarca by representatives of each of the 19 nations meeting at Bogota."

The Alliance for Progress program was established to provide technical and financial cooperation among the American Republics to improve and strengthen democratic institutions through self-help, and comprehensive and well conceived national programs for economic and social development.

* * * * *

(MORE)

"It will profit the Negro little if he wins his constitutional right to vote in every town, county, and state in the union if his economic status perforce disinterests him in the governmental processes. Desegregated and expanded educational opportunities cannot of themselves guarantee the Negro a meaningful role in our society. Fair housing laws and fair housing practices will not provide him with a decent home in which to raise his family if his income is insufficient to maintain one."

--John F. Henning, Under Secretary of Labor

* * * * *

SBV

Labor

#63-248

FROM THE OFFICE OF
SENATOR HARRISON A. WILLIAMS, JR.
352 SENATE OFFICE BUILDING
WASHINGTON, D.C.
CApitol 4-3121, ext. 4744

FOR THURSDAY P.M.,
OCTOBER 24, 1963 RELEASE

WILLIAMS INTRODUCES NEW BILL TO PROVIDE FAST TAX WRITE-OFF FOR CONSTRUCTION OF FARM WORKER HOUSING

A tax benefit to farmers and others building farm labor housing would be provided under legislation introduced today by Senator Harrison A. Williams, Jr. (D., N.J.), chairman of the Senate Subcommittee on Migratory Labor.

Rapid amortization of the construction costs, over a period of five years, is the form of the benefit. Under present tax law, such construction costs must be depreciated over 25, 30, or 40 years--whatever may be the entire useful life of the housing facility.

In addition to new construction, remodeling or alterations to improve existing farm labor housing could qualify for the special tax deduction.

Senator Williams, on introducing the bill, stressed two points. First, Williams said, the farmer is in the burdensome and nearly unique position of having to provide large numbers of seasonal, short-term employees with housing, which then may stand vacant for large portions of the year. Second, he described the bad housing conditions that many farm workers are faced with at present. Williams quoted examples of labor camps lacking water supplies, refuse disposal facilities, and window screens. "The fact that the migratory worker may, at some future time, become obsolete is no reason to countenance the housing conditions he is sometimes faced with now," Williams said.

Williams pointed out that the principle of federal assistance for farm housing is well established. Another Williams bill (S. 981) which would expand the direct financial aid for farm housing available under the Housing Act of 1949 was the subject of Senate hearings last week. "But the gravity of the farm labor housing situation is such," Williams said,

"that we should give the most serious consideration to every means at our disposal for correcting it."

To qualify for the special tax deduction under the new bill, the owner of newly constructed farm housing would obtain a certificate from the Secretary of Agriculture covering these three points:

1. that the housing has been constructed to provide decent, safe, and sanitary housing for agricultural workers;

2. if the housing is to be rented, rather than being furnished to farm workers rent-free, that the rentals will be reasonable in view of the occupants' probable incomes and earning capacities; and

3. that during the 5-year amortization period, the housing will be made available primarily for occupancy by domestic agricultural workers and will be maintained in accordance with applicable minimum standards on safety and sanitation.

#

NEWS

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

W. Willard Wirtz, Secretary

WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST

VJ
S BV
JT

Week of October 28, 1963

IN THIS ISSUE:

Apprenticeship Anti-Discrimination Standards Set by Secretary of Labor

Negro Union Leader of Chicago Among New Labor Mediator Selectees

Vincent J. Browne of Howard University to Assist Department Seminars

Decent Housing for Farmworkers Urged by Under Secretary of Labor

Arthur Chapin, Secretary's Special Assistant, Addresses Jack & Jill, Inc.

Quote, Education and Employment--Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy

Apprenticeship Anti-Discrimination Standards Set by Secretary of Labor

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz has issued proposed standards and compliance procedures to insure equality of opportunity within the Nation's apprenticeship system.

The compliance procedures implement standards, originally issued last July, which provide that Federal certification will be withheld from any apprenticeship program that does not meet the following criteria:

1. Selection of apprentices on the basis of qualification alone, unless the selections otherwise made would themselves demonstrate that there is equality of opportunity.

2. Action to remove the effects of previous practices under which discriminatory patterns of employment may have resulted.

3. Nondiscrimination in all phases of apprenticeship and employment during apprenticeship after selections are made.

(MORE)

To achieve compliance with these standards, the Secretary has set forth procedures for carrying out a review at the local, regional, and national levels of existing programs; and procedures for processing complaints from individuals alleging discrimination. He also directed full Federal-State cooperation in States which have apprenticeship committees and agencies responsible for enforcement of Fair Employment Practices Acts.

The Labor Department's Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training is charged with the responsibility of insuring compliance with the new standards. In doing so, it will notify all sponsoring groups (joint labor-management committees, etc.) of the new regulations and what they entail. The Bureau will seek, first, to achieve voluntary compliance, and will encourage the creation of private procedures by the sponsoring groups to accomplish this.

The Department's standards were issued as a result of a statement by President Kennedy, directing the Secretary of Labor "to require that the admission of young workers to apprenticeship programs be on a completely nondiscriminatory basis."

* * * * *

Negro Union Leaders of Chicago Among New Labor Mediator Selectees

The Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service announces the selection of nine new mediators, to work on the nationwide staff to help settle labor-management disputes.

Among these is Richard D. Williams of Chicago. Mr. Williams, a machinist was employed by the Maremont Automotive Products Co. of Harvey, Ill., from 1951 to March 1963, when he became International Representative of UAW (United Auto Workers), stationed in Chicago. He has studied union leadership for two years at the University of Chicago, is 37, married, and makes his home at Markham, Ill.

(MORE)

* * * * *

Vincent J. Browne of Howard University Assists Labor Department Seminars

Vincent J. Browne, Administrative Assistant to the President of Howard University, has joined the Negro educators assisting the Labor Department's One-Day Regional Seminars on Employment Opportunities for Minority Groups. Mr. Browne will serve as a resource leader in the Chambersburg, Pa. region.

These Seminars, which are being addressed by Negro college presidents and executive staff members, are intended to assist Labor Department field staffs in working with unions, industry, and organizations as well as with Negro communities to gain acceptance of equal employment opportunity policies.

* * * * *

Decent Housing for Farmworkers Urged by Under Secretary of Labor

Under Secretary of Labor John F. Henning, testifying before the Senate Committee on Banking and Currency, in support of S. 981 (Housing for Domestic Farm Labor), stated:

"A decent place to live is the keystone to improvement in the well-being of agricultural workers and their families. It is important to growers as well as to the workers themselves. It can make the difference between having a responsible, efficient, and dependable labor force and one which, because of high turnover or labor shortage, can result in loss of crops. The workers themselves consider bad housing and the inability to obtain adequate sanitary facilities as one of the greatest drawbacks to their employment.

"Inadequate housing has long been recognized as one of the principal problems of farmworkers.

(MORE)

"Our domestic farmworkers are perhaps the most economically deprived group in the Nation's work force. Many of them have little education and are not prepared to adapt to a changing labor market. Their employment at best is subject to many variables, including weather and crop conditions.

"The jobs they must compete for are low-paid as well as uncertain. Total annual earnings from farm wage work in 1961 averaged $881 in cash wages for those workers who did 25 days or more of such work in the year. Inclusion of earnings from nonfarm work would raise the overall average annual earnings in 1961 to $1,054.

"Among farmworkers generally, migrants receive the lowest pay. Their situation with regard to housing is particularly acute."

* * * * *

Arthur Chapin, Secretary's Special Assistant, Addresses Jack & Jill, Inc.

Arthur A. Chapin, Special Assistant to the Secretary of Labor and Manpower Minority Group Specialist, addressed the Eight-State Regional Conference of Jack & Jill, Inc., in Philadelphia, telling the organization of mothers dedicated to the present and future welfare of children:

"We face a paradox that all of us in this room have had some experience with. That paradox is the reluctance to accept the Negro in employment on the one hand--and giving him an inferior education on the other, and now demanding that he be fully prepared at a time when many employers are embarrassed that they have practiced unequal opportunities.

"Our task, now that the walls of discrimination in so many areas have crumbled completely, is to see to it that our youths are fully prepared so that the old familiar excuse of an employer 'I would, but I can't find a qualified individual' will no longer prevail.

(MORE)

"The importance of an education for today's youth cannot be overly stated, particularly for Negro boys and girls. For one out of every three Negro youths with only an eighth grade education is unemployed, compared with one out of six for the high school graduate and one out of eight for those with one or more years of college; and less than one out of 22 Negroes over 24 years of age with one or more years of college is unemployed. The more education a young Negro gets, the nearer his income approaches that of his white counterpart. The Negro elementary school graduate, compared with the white elementary school graduate gets only 68 percent of the white's income. This increases to 71 percent for the Negro high school graduate and to 85 percent for the college graduate. Therefore, the youth who has not completed grade school will earn $100,000 less in his life time than the high school graduate; the high school graduate will earn $140,000 less than the college graduate. So, we can see that education does pay off--and it is worth the struggle and sacrifice that each of you will make and are making to educate your youngsters, as well as the youngsters whom you may, in the future, provide scholarships for.

"An interesting fact about Negroes that is not generally known is that about one-quarter of a million are today attending colleges and universities, about 100,000 of whom are in the South and the District of Columbia.

"And, Negro enrollment in higher education is higher than total enrollment in Great Britain or Italy, and nearly as high as in West Germany or France, even though the Negro population in America is less than half the total population of any of these nations.

"The high financial cost of certain types of professional education such as medicine, is a serious obstacle to Negro youth. Thirty-four percent of Negro youth, compared with 12 percent of white, report financial handicaps as barring the way to graduate and professional schools.

(MORE)

* * * * *

Quote: Education and Employment--Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy

"No less than one-third of all our young people do not graduate from high school at all. These are the millions of school 'dropouts,' whose plight has come to form a nationwide problem of critical proportions.

"When no adequate remedial schooling is provided for these children--and none is available in many communities--they often find themselves not only unemployed but virtually unemployable, for they lack any marketable skill in a society where the need for unskilled labor is rapidly shrinking under the advance of automation."

--Attorney General Robert F. Kennedy
Address to B'nai B'rith, October 13, 1963

* * * * *

Research Department
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Bulk Rate
U. S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 154
RALEIGH, N. C.

North Carolina Labor and Industry

Monthly Bulletin of the DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, Frank Crane, Commissioner

Vol. XXX RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, OCTOBER, 1963 No. 10

NON-FARM EMPLOYMENT RISES TO ALL-TIME HIGH OF 1,302,000 IN SEPT.

Nonagricultural employment climbed to an all-time high in North Carolina during September.

A total of 1,302,000 Tar Heels were at work in non-farm jobs in September. This was 18,300 higher than the August job total and 15,700 higher than in September, 1962.

Factory employment, totaling 551,200 in the State during September, was up 7,400 from the August level but was 1,800 below the 553,000 total of September, 1962.

Nonmanufacturing jobs, totaling 750,800 in September, were up 10,900 from August and were 17,500 higher than in September, 1962.

Seasonal job gains totaling 27,200 were responsible for the big September employment increase. These included 15,300 in public schools, 9,100 in tobacco stemmeries, 1,500 in retail trade, 1,000 in transportation, 200 in the lumber industry, and 100 in finance, insurance and real estate.

These increases were partly offset by seasonal and other job decreases totaling 8,800 in thirteen employment groups. September job declines included 3,300 in construction, 1,700 in service industries, 1,200 in State and local government, 600 in federal government, 500 in textiles, 400 in food products, 200 each in cigarettes, apparel, printing, and stone, clay and glass products, and 100 each in mining, wholesale trade and chemicals.

Employment levels held firm during September in furniture, primary metals, fabricated metals, machinery, electrical machinery, ordnance and transportation equipment, pulp and paper products, and communications and public utilities. Employment in these groups showed no change from August levels.

Average hourly earnings of the State's 551,200 factory workers advanced two cents to a September average of $1.68, due almost entirely to the influence upon low-wage industries of the 10-cent hike in the Federal Wage and Hour Law. The federal minimum increased from $1.15 an hour to $1.25 an hour on September 3rd.

A September drop of 0.4 hours in the factory workweek brought working hours down to an average of 40.9. Average weekly earnings of factory workers increased 15 cents to $68.71 in spite of the decreased working hours, due to the increased Federal minimum wage.

APPRENTICE BRICKLAYING CHAMP HONORED—Stephen Thomas Alston, Jr. (center), of Route 1, Warrenton, North Carolina's "Champion Apprentice Bricklayer of 1963," displays gold trowel presented him by State Labor Commissioner Frank Crane (left) after Alston took top honors in the 10th annual statewide Apprentice Bricklaying Contest at the State Fair in Raleigh on October 18. Joseph L. Richardson (right), Warrenton masonry contractor, is the bricklaying champ's employer.

Alston, 19, bested 32 other bricklayer apprentices from all over the State in the all-day contest. He has been in training under the State-sponsored Apprenticeship Program for less than one year, and competed in the contest against several apprentices who had been in training for nearly two years.

Second place runner-up in the contest was Tommy Ray Stewart, of Route 1, Catawba, employed by the Group Apprenticeship Committee for the Construction Trades, Catawba County. Third place winner was Charles C. Kerns, of Route 7, Burlington, employed by Richard A. Robertson, Burlington masonry contractor.

Alston will receive a $200 savings bond prize and both he and Richardson will be awarded engraved trophies at a special presentation ceremony in Charlotte on Nov. 5 sponsored by the Piedmont Construction Apprentice Council. Stewart will receive a $100 bond prize and Kerns a $50 bond. Alston also will be awarded a Certificate of Merit from the N. C. Chapter, American Institute of Architects.

In addition to his on-the-job apprenticeship training with Richardson, the 1963 bricklaying champion receives related technical training in classes conducted by W. E. Exum at Hawkins High School in Warrenton.

The contest was judged by a panel of six judges, including E. L. Layton of Charlotte, President of the Carolinas Branch, Associated General Contractors of America; C. C. McGinnis of Charlotte, Vice-President of McDevitt and Street Company; J. D. Green, Sr., of Raleigh, masonry contractor; Carl Moser of Hickory, masonry contractor; Ed Denbo of Durham, of the firm of Crain and Denbo; and Chadwick N. Heath of Columbia, S. C., executive secretary of Clay Products Service, Inc.

NORTH CAROLINA
Labor and Industry
Issued Each Month by the
NORTH CAROLINA DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
P. O. Box 1151
Raleigh, N. C.

Sent Free Upon Request

FRANK CRANE
Commissioner of Labor
ALMON BARBOUR
Editor

Vol. XXX October, 1963 No. 10

AWARD OF MERIT—Commissioner Frank Crane (right) recently was honored by presentation of the Secretary of Labor's "Award of Merit". Shown as he accepted the award from Federal Wage-Hour Administrator Clarence T. Lundquist, Commissioner Crane was commended "in recognition of his significant and outstanding contribution toward furthering the work of the Department of Labor, 'to foster, promote and develop the welfare of the wage earners of the United States.'" The award was signed July 23 by Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz.

MORE THAN HALF OF ALL TAR HEEL APPRENTICES IN CONSTRUCTION TRADES

Construction trades are the favorites of 58 per cent of all apprentices in training under North Carolina's State-sponsored apprenticeship training program.

Among the total of 2,766 apprentices in active training on June 30, 1963, 1,598 were training to become skilled workmen in the various construction trades.

The 1,598 apprentices training in 23 construction trades on June 30 were distributed as follows:

Electrician 602, carpenter 213, sheet metal worker 166, plumber 163, bricklayer 123, steamfitter 67, asbestos worker 58, heating and air conditioning mechanic 38, pipe fitter 37, plumber and steamfitter 29, floor layer 27, floor covering and acoustical mechanic 16, plasterer 10, lather 9, construction equipment operator 9, glazier 8, painter and paperhanger 7, structural iron worker 6, painter 3, cement mason 3, stone setter 2, stonemason 1, structural steel worker 1.

FACTORY EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN CHARLOTTE AND GREENSBORO-HIGH POINT AREAS — SEPTEMBER, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month (thous) [4]	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month [4]	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month [4]	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month [4]	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
CHARLOTTE AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	27.9	27.8	28.0	+ 0.4	— 0.4	$ 75.95	$ 76.02	$ 74.94	41.5	42.0	42.1	$1.83	$1.81	$1.78
Food & Kindred Products	4.1	4.1	4.1	.....	.....	76.91	70.47	71.32	44.2	42.2	42.2	1.74	1.67	1.69
Bakery	2.1	2.0	2.1	+ 5.0	.....	80.41	72.00	78.55	43.0	40.0	43.4	1.87	1.80	1.81
Textile Mills Products	6.3	6.3	6.6	.....	— 4.5	65.37	65.89	68.53	40.6	41.7	43.1	1.61	1.58	1.59
Broadwoven Fabrics	2.4	2.4	2.4	.....	.....	69.94	73.96	77.88	40.9	43.0	44.0	1.71	1.72	1.77
Knitting Mills	2.2	2.2	2.6	.....	—15.4	61.78	58.56	63.18	39.6	39.3	42.4	1.56	1.49	1.49
Furniture & Fixtures	.9	.9	1.0	.....	—10.0	85.68	95.26	86.90	40.8	43.3	42.6	2.10	2.20	2.04
Paper & Allied Products	1.4	1.4	1.3	.....	+ 7.7	82.97	82.59	77.53	43.9	43.7	43.8	1.89	1.89	1.77
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	2.3	2.1	2.0	+ 9.5	+15.0	93.79	95.11	...7...	40.6	40.3	...7...	2.31	2.36	2.27
Chemicals & Allied Products	2.8	2.8	2.6	.....	+ 7.7	65.11	68.88	70.19	39.7	42.0	42.8	1.64	1.64	1.64
Metal Products	2.3	2.3	2.3	.....	.....	84.02	84.42	79.90	41.8	42.0	41.4	2.01	2.01	1.93
Machinery	3.2	3.3	3.2	— 3.0	.....	81.56	83.33	76.96	42.7	43.4	41.6	1.91	1.92	1.85
Other Manufacturing Industries[1]	4.6	4.6	4.9	.....	— 6.1	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
GREENSBORO - HIGH POINT AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	43.4	43.9	44.3	— 1.1	— 2.0	$ 71.96	$ 69.20	$ 65.07	40.2	40.0	38.5	$1.79	$1.73	$1.69
Food & Kindred Products	2.9	3.0	2.9	— 3.3	.....	75.57	71.39	70.82	45.8	44.9	45.4	1.65	1.59	1.56
Bakery Products	.8	.8	.8	.....	.....	77.43	75.68	75.10	44.5	44.0	44.7	1.74	1.72	1.68
Textile Mill Products	15.7	15.7	16.7	.....	— 6.0	59.73	61.92	55.74	37.1	38.7	35.5	1.61	1.60	1.57
Knitting Mills	6.1	6.1	6.7	.....	— 9.0	53.05	55.20	48.38	34.9	37.3	33.6	1.52	1.48	1.44
Apparel	3.8	3.9	3.9	— 2.6	— 2.6	64.60	56.82	...7...	42.5	40.3	37.9	1.52	1.41	...7...
Lumber & Wood Products (Except Furn.)	1.2	1.1	1.1	+ 9.1	+ 9.1	65.94	64.38	66.30	43.1	43.5	44.8	1.53	1.48	1.48
Furniture	6.8	6.8	6.8	.....	.....	72.67	71.05	66.70	40.6	40.6	39.7	1.79	1.75	1.68
HH Furniture	5.9	5.9	5.9	.....	.....	72.80	70.27	66.18	40.0	39.7	38.7	1.82	1.77	1.71
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	1.3	1.5	1.3	—13.3	.....	84.96	83.16	...7...	38.1	39.6	...7...	2.23	2.10	2.14
Chemicals	1.4	1.5	1.4	— 6.7	.....	86.70	83.40	85.00	42.5	41.7	42.5	2.04	2.00	2.00
Stone, Clay & Glass Products	.9	.9	.9	.....	.....	86.80	83.42	76.78	49.6	47.4	45.7	1.75	1.76	1.68
Metal Products	2.2	2.2	2.0	.....	+10.0	80.55	75.18	...7...	44.5	42.0	...7...	1.81	1.79	1.72
Machinery (Except Electrical)	.9	.9	.9	.....	.....	87.99	87.78	...7...	41.9	42.0	41.9	2.10	2.09	...7...
Other Manufacturing Industries[2]	6.3	6.4	6.4	— 1.6	— 1.6	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...

[1] Includes: Apparel; Lumber; Rubber; Leather; Stone, Clay and Glass; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Tobacco; Paper; Rubber; Leather; Electrical Machinery; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[4] Preliminary.
[5] Data Not Available.

EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN NONAGRICULTURAL INDUSTRIES IN NORTH CAROLINA — SEPTEMBER, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

TOTAL EMPLOYMENT | HOURS AND EARNINGS | AVERAGE | AVERAGE | AVERAGE

FACTORY EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN CHARLOTTE AND GREENSBORO-HIGH POINT AREAS — SEPTEMBER, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month (thous) 4	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
CHARLOTTE AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	27.9	27.8	28.0	+ 0.4	— 0.4	$ 75.95	$ 76.02	$ 74.94	41.5	42.0	42.1	$1.83	$1.81	$1.78
Food & Kindred Products	4.1	4.1	4.1	.....	.....	76.91	70.47	71.32	44.2	42.2	42.2	1.74	1.67	1.69
Bakery	2.1	2.0	2.1	+ 5.0	.....	80.41	72.00	78.55	43.0	40.0	43.4	1.87	1.80	1.81
Textile Mills Products	6.3	6.3	6.6	.....	— 4.5	65.37	65.89	68.53	40.6	41.7	43.1	1.61	1.58	1.59
Broadwoven Fabrics	2.4	2.4	2.4	.....	.....	69.94	73.96	77.88	40.9	43.0	44.0	1.71	1.72	1.77
Knitting Mills	2.2	2.2	2.6	.....	—15.4	61.78	58.56	63.18	39.6	39.3	42.4	1.56	1.49	1.49
Furniture & Fixtures	.9	.9	1.0	.....	—10.0	85.68	95.26	86.90	40.8	43.3	42.6	2.10	2.20	2.04
Paper & Allied Products	1.4	1.4	1.3	.....	+ 7.7	82.97	82.59	77.53	43.9	43.7	43.8	1.89	1.89	1.77
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	2.3	2.1	2.0	+ 9.5	+15.0	93.79	95.11	...7...	40.6	40.3	...7...	2.31	2.36	2.27
Chemicals & Allied Products	2.8	2.8	2.6	.....	+ 7.7	65.11	68.88	70.19	39.7	42.0	42.8	1.64	1.64	1.64
Metal Products	2.3	2.3	2.3	.....	.....	84.02	84.42	79.90	41.8	42.0	41.4	2.01	2.01	1.93
Machinery	3.2	3.3	3.2	— 3.0	.....	81.56	83.33	76.96	42.7	43.4	41.6	1.91	1.92	1.85
Other Manufacturing Industries[1]	4.6	4.6	4.9	.....	— 6.1	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
GREENSBORO - HIGH POINT AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	43.4	43.9	44.3	— 1.1	— 2.0	$ 71.96	$ 69.20	$ 65.07	40.2	40.0	38.5	$1.79	$1.73	$1.69
Food & Kindred Products	2.9	3.0	2.9	— 3.3	.....	75.57	71.39	70.82	45.8	44.9	45.4	1.65	1.59	1.56
Bakery Products	.8	.8	.8	.....	.....	77.43	75.68	75.10	44.5	44.0	44.7	1.74	1.72	1.68
Textile Mill Products	15.7	15.7	16.7	.....	— 6.0	59.73	61.92	55.74	37.1	38.7	35.5	1.61	1.60	1.57
Knitting Mills	6.1	6.1	6.7	.....	— 9.0	53.05	55.20	48.38	34.9	37.3	33.6	1.52	1.48	1.44
Apparel	3.8	3.9	3.9	— 2.6	— 2.6	64.60	56.82	...7...	42.5	40.3	37.9	1.52	1.41	...7...
Lumber & Wood Products (Except Furn.)	1.2	1.1	1.1	+ 9.1	+ 9.1	65.94	64.38	66.30	43.1	43.5	44.8	1.53	1.48	1.48
Furniture	6.8	6.8	6.8	.....	.....	72.67	71.05	66.70	40.6	40.6	39.7	1.79	1.75	1.68
HH Furniture	5.9	5.9	5.9	.....	.....	72.80	70.27	66.18	40.0	39.7	38.7	1.82	1.77	1.71
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	1.3	1.5	1.3	—13.3	.....	84.96	83.16	...7...	38.1	39.6	...7...	2.23	2.10	2.14
Chemicals	1.4	1.5	1.4	— 6.7	.....	86.70	83.40	85.00	42.5	41.7	42.5	2.04	2.00	2.00
Stone, Clay & Glass Products	.9	.9	.9	.....	.....	86.80	83.42	76.78	49.6	47.4	45.7	1.75	1.76	1.68
Metal Products	2.2	2.2	2.0	.....	+10.0	80.55	75.18	...7...	44.5	42.0	...7...	1.81	1.79	1.72
Machinery (Except Electrical)	.9	.9	.9	.....	.....	87.99	87.78	...7...	41.9	42.0	41.9	2.10	2.09	...7...
Other Manufacturing Industries[2]	6.3	6.4	6.4	— 1.6	— 1.6	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...

[1] Includes: Apparel; Lumber; Rubber; Leather; Stone, Clay and Glass; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Tobacco; Paper; Rubber; Leather; Electrical Machinery; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[4] Preliminary.
[5] Data Not Available.

EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN NONAGRICULTURAL INDUSTRIES IN NORTH CAROLINA — SEPTEMBER, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month[4] (thous)	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
ALL NONAGRICULTURAL EMPLOYMENT	1,302.0	1,283.7	1,286.3	+ 1.4	+ 1.2	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Manufacturing	551.2	543.8	553.0	+ 1.4	— 0.3	$ 68.71	$ 68.56	$ 66.67	40.9	41.3	40.9	$1.68	$1.66	$1.63
Durable Goods	148.6	148.4	146.8	+ 0.1	+ 1.2	73.44	71.99	69.01	42.7	42.6	42.6	1.72	1.69	1.62
Lumber & Timber Basic Products	31.6	31.4	30.7	+ 0.6	+ 2.9	64.63	61.20	59.35	42.8	42.5	42.7	1.51	1.44	1.39
Sawmills & Planing Mills	19.1	18.9	18.4	+ 1.1	+ 3.8	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Millwork, Plywood, etc.	6.3	6.2	6.4	+ 1.6	— 1.6	59.92	58.05	59.09	42.2	43.0	44.1	1.42	1.35	1.34
Furniture & Fin. Lumber Products	48.2	48.2	47.3	.....	+ 1.9	69.86	68.59	65.03	42.6	42.6	42.5	1.64	1.61	1.53
Household Furniture	43.7	43.7	43.1	.....	+ 1.4	69.54	68.26	64.87	42.4	42.4	42.4	1.64	1.61	1.53
Stone, Clay and Glass	10.9	11.1	10.7	— 1.8	+ 1.9	74.82	74.21	70.24	43.5	43.4	43.9	1.72	1.71	1.60
Concrete, Brick, etc.	4.0	4.1	3.9	— 2.4	+ 2.6	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Primary Metals	2.8	2.8	2.8	.....	.....	87.15	86.11	86.92	41.5	41.8	42.4	2.10	2.06	2.05
Fabricated Metals	9.8	9.8	9.1	.....	+ 7.7	83.69	86.20	80.94	42.7	43.1	42.6	1.96	2.00	1.90
Fab. Structural Metals	4.3	4.4	3.8	— 2.3	+13.2	85.24	94.50	85.34	42.2	45.0	43.1	2.02	2.10	1.98
Machinery (Except Electrical)	13.5	13.5	13.9	.....	— 2.9	80.26	79.82	77.43	44.1	44.1	44.5	1.82	1.81	1.74
Special Industrial Machinery	6.8	6.8	6.9	.....	— 1.4	76.79	78.40	...7...	42.9	43.8	...7...	1.79	1.79	1.74
Electrical Machinery	24.0	24.0	24.9	.....	— 3.6	83.21	83.43	80.36	41.4	41.3	41.0	2.01	2.02	1.96
Ord. and Transportation Equipment	4.0	3.9	4.0	+ 2.6	.....	101.56	92.48	96.41	43.4	41.1	42.1	2.34	2.25	2.29
Other Durable Goods[1]	3.8	3.7	3.4	+ 2.7	+11.8	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Nondurable Goods	402.6	395.4	406.2	+ 1.8	— 0.9	67.30	67.32	65.69	40.3	40.8	40.3	1.67	1.65	1.63
Food & Kindred Products	36.1	36.5	35.1	— 1.1	+ 2.8	65.91	61.72	60.48	42.8	41.7	42.0	1.54	1.48	1.44
Meat Products	8.4	8.4	8.5	.....	— 1.2	58.36	54.21	52.75	39.7	39.0	38.5	1.47	1.39	1.37
Meat Packing	2.5	2.5	2.5	.....	.....	75.24	69.08	70.79	45.6	44.0	43.7	1.65	1.57	1.62
Dairy Products	5.6	5.6	5.6	.....	.....	76.32	75.05	73.94	47.7	47.5	47.4	1.60	1.58	1.56
Grain Mill Products	4.5	4.0	3.7	+12.5	+21.6	69.45	62.34	63.52	46.3	43.9	45.7	1.50	1.42	1.39
Bakery Products	7.6	7.7	7.6	— 1.3	.....	76.48	71.23	73.27	43.7	41.9	43.1	1.75	1.70	1.70
Beverage Industries	5.1	5.2	4.8	— 1.9	+ 6.3	66.31	69.93	62.61	48.4	51.8	49.3	1.37	1.35	1.27
Tobacco	49.0	40.2	54.3	+21.9	— 9.8	70.45	76.59	72.84	39.8	41.4	43.1	1.77	1.85	1.69
Cigarettes	18.3	18.5	19.0	— 1.1	— 3.7	92.19	97.53	93.26	38.9	41.5	40.2	2.37	2.35	2.32
Stemmeries	29.0	19.9	33.6	+45.7	—13.7	57.11	57.27	60.75	40.5	41.5	45.0	1.41	1.38	1.35
Textiles	225.5	226.0	227.6	— 0.2	— 0.9	65.69	65.85	63.12	40.3	40.9	39.7	1.63	1.61	1.59
Broadwoven Fabrics	91.2	91.1	90.0	+ 0.1	+ 1.3	69.80	71.74	68.88	41.3	42.7	41.0	1.69	1.68	1.68
Broadwoven Cotton	56.4	56.3	55.9	+ 0.2	+ 0.9	66.86	70.56	64.52	39.8	42.0	39.1	1.68	1.68	1.65
Broadwoven Fiber & Silk	31.1	31.0	30.5	+ 0.3	+ 2.0	76.02	74.97	74.99	44.2	44.1	43.6	1.72	1.70	1.72
Knitting Mills	65.7	66.0	70.0	— 0.5	— 6.1	61.60	60.22	57.44	38.5	38.6	37.3	1.60	1.56	1.54
Full Fashioned Hosiery	7.0	7.2	8.4	— 2.8	—16.7	60.68	57.53	56.63	38.9	37.6	37.5	1.56	1.53	1.51
Seamless Hosiery	46.4	46.7	49.7	— 0.6	— 6.6	60.32	59.82	56.73	37.7	38.1	36.6	1.60	1.57	1.55
Dyeing & Finishing Textiles	12.3	12.3	12.4	.....	— 0.8	68.72	67.40	67.89	41.4	40.6	40.9	1.66	1.66	1.66
Yarn Mills	47.6	47.8	46.7	— 0.4	+ 1.9	61.56	61.76	59.35	40.5	40.9	40.1	1.52	1.51	1.48
Apparel	46.6	46.8	44.6	— 0.4	+ 4.5	53.72	52.11	50.81	38.1	38.6	38.2	1.41	1.35	1.33
Men's & Boys' Clothing	17.3	17.8	17.0	— 2.8	+ 1.8	50.23	48.99	47.23	36.4	37.4	36.9	1.38	1.31	1.28
Paper & Allied Products	13.7	13.7	13.9	.....	— 1.4	107.16	107.85	104.11	44.1	44.2	44.3	2.43	2.44	2.35
Pulp & Paperboard Mills	8.7	8.6	8.9	+ 1.2	— 2.2	119.07	118.70	114.92	44.1	43.8	44.2	2.70	2.71	2.60
Paperboard Containers	3.5	3.6	3.7	— 2.8	— 5.4	82.16	88.08	82.62	43.7	45.4	44.9	1.88	1.94	1.84
Printing	10.5	10.7	10.5	— 1.9	.....	89.17	87.94	...7...	38.6	38.4	38.9	2.31	2.29	...7...
Newspapers	5.4	5.5	5.4	— 1.8	.....	96.56	98.69	95.00	36.3	37.1	36.4	2.66	2.66	2.61
Chemicals	16.6	16.7	15.5	— 0.6	+ 7.1	85.28	85.48	83.43	41.6	41.9	41.3	2.05	2.04	2.02
Plastics & Synthetic Materials	10.8	10.7	9.8	+ 0.9	+10.2	92.99	94.33	89.19	41.7	42.3	41.1	2.23	2.23	2.17
Other Nondurable Goods[2]	4.6	4.8	4.7	— 4.2	— 2.1	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Nonmanufacturing	750.8	739.9	733.3	+ 1.5	+ 2.4	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Mining	2.7	2.8	3.4	— 3.6	—20.6	76.92	77.92	78.73	46.9	48.1	48.6	1.64	1.62	1.62
Non-Metallic Mining	2.7	2.8	2.9	— 3.6	— 6.9	76.92	77.92	78.23	46.9	48.1	49.2	1.64	1.62	1.59
Contract Construction	71.7	75.0	70.8	— 4.4	+ 1.3	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Transp., Comm., & Pub. Utilities	68.7	67.7	65.7	+ 1.5	+ 4.6	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Transportation (Except RR)	34.8	33.8	33.2	+ 3.0	+ 4.8	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Communications & Pub. Utilities	25.0	25.0	23.8	.....	+ 5.0	99.42	97.10	97.70	41.6	40.8	41.4	2.39	2.38	2.36
Trade[3]	231.3	229.9	226.7	+ 0.6	+ 2.0	65.57	66.17	64.24	39.5	40.1	39.9	1.66	1.65	1.61
Wholesale	59.7	59.8	58.1	— 0.2	+ 2.8	85.60	85.40	85.57	42.8	42.7	43.0	2.00	2.00	1.99
Retail[3]	171.6	170.1	168.6	+ 0.9	+ 1.8	57.30	58.50	55.73	38.2	39.0	38.7	1.50	1.50	1.44
Retail General Merchandise	37.0	35.8	36.0	+ 3.4	+ 2.8	44.42	45.49	42.62	32.9	34.2	33.3	1.35	1.33	1.28
Department Stores	16.1	15.7	15.6	+ 2.5	+ 3.2	48.03	48.40	46.37	31.6	32.7	32.2	1.52	1.48	1.44
Limited Price Variety	8.6	8.1	8.7	+ 6.2	— 1.1	30.71	32.87	29.48	28.7	31.3	28.9	1.07	1.05	1.02
Retail Food Stores	25.8	25.3	24.8	+ 2.0	+ 4.0	53.60	53.90	51.41	33.5	35.0	34.5	1.60	1.54	1.49
Finance, Insurance & Real Estate[6]	49.7	49.6	47.7	+ 0.2	+ 4.2	90.01	90.16	87.03	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Service	138.7	140.4	136.1	— 1.2	+ 1.9	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Hotels & Rooming Houses	8.4	9.3	8.0	— 9.7	+ 5.0	33.97	35.62	33.21	39.5	42.4	41.0	.86	.84	.81
Personal Services	25.6	25.6	25.3	.....	+ 1.2	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Laundries & Dry Cleaners	15.4	15.4	15.4	.....	.....	37.53	36.77	34.58	38.3	38.7	38.0	.98	.95	.91
Government	188.0	174.5	182.9	+ 7.7	+ 2.8	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Federal	38.0	38.6	37.6	— 1.6	+ 1.1
State & Local Schools	83.4	68.1	80.3	+22.5	+ 3.9
State & Local Non-Schools	66.6	67.8	65.0	— 1.8	+ 2.5

[1] Includes: Transportation Equipment, Instruments, and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Leather and Leather Products, Rubber Products, and Petroleum Products.
[3] Excludes: Earnings in Eating and Drinking Places.
[4] Preliminary.
[5] Data Not Available.
[6] Reflects Earnings in Insurance Companies Only.
[7] Not comparable.
[8] Less than 0.1% change.

TOTAL EMPLOYMENT IN MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES

(In Thousands of Employees)

Winston-Salem Area

INDUSTRY	*SEPTEMBER, 1963	SEPTEMBER, 1963	SEPTEMBER, 1962
Total Manufacturing	38.2	37.8	40.3
Food & Kindred Products	1.5	1.5	1.6
Textile Mill Products	9.6	9.5	9.9
Furniture	1.0	1.1	1.0
Metals	1.6	1.6	1.5
All Other Mfg. Inds.[1]	24.5	24.1	26.3

* Preliminary

[1] Includes: Tobacco; Apparel; Lumber; Paper; Printing; Chemicals; Stone, Clay & Glass; Transportation Equipment & Misc. Mfg. Inds.

BOLICK APPOINTED TO APPRENTICESHIP COUNCIL — Lavie L. Bolick (right) of Greensboro was sworn in by Secretary of State Thad Eure (left) on October 15 as a member of the North Carolina Apprenticeship Council. Bolick was appointed by State Labor Commissioner Frank Crane (center), Chairman of the Apprenticeship Council. He will serve as an employee representative on the Council.

Bolick is Eastern North Carolina Director of the Communications Workers of America. He succeeds J. W. Holder of Raleigh, former Secretary-Treasurer of the N. C. State AFL-CIO, who resigned from the Council and moved to Washington, D. C. some time ago.

Bolick's term on the Apprenticeship Council will last until June 30, 1966.

Other members present at the Apprenticeship Council meeting in Raleigh on October 15 were Charles D. Bates, Vice-Chairman of the Council and State Director of Trade and Industrial Education; employer representatives Dwight L. Casey of Charlotte, D. W. Randolph of Canton, and A. J. Fox of Raleigh; employee representatives George J. Bumby of Wilmington and W. L. Causey of Greensboro; and Council Secretary C. L. Beddingfield, director of the Division of Apprenticeship Training, N. C. Department of Labor.

ESTIMATED COST OF CONSTRUCTION AUTHORIZED IN THIRTY-SIX NORTH CAROLINA CITIES

City	September, 1963	September, 1962	1st 9 Mos. 1963	1st 9 Mos. 1962
Albemarle	$ 81,015	$ 71,920	$ 546,369	$ 797,341
Asheboro	84,200	70,547	1,577,159	1,814,117
Asheville	977,236	525,023	9,156,550	5,888,973
Burlington	280,830	213,463	3,330,674	4,026,128
Chapel Hill	434,780	178,550	3,593,764	2,074,395
Charlotte	4,511,590	2,445,074	39,061,430	31,859,761
Concord	78,000	132,300	1,053,434	1,261,363
Durham	585,979	2,446,298	12,993,742	9,153,139
Elizabeth City	1,795,025	39,400	3,037,906	757,900
Fayetteville	808,690	491,317	7,781,434	6,942,773
Gastonia	1,045,750	556,850	5,666,025	4,556,950
Goldsboro	352,225	303,098	2,958,258	3,348,348
Greensboro	2,151,173	1,292,964	21,391,320	24,779,270
Greenville	871,936	172,000	4,234,775	3,070,567
Henderson	155,725	34,450	1,114,996	730,127
Hickory	493,100	414,570	1,919,922	2,274,892
High Point	375,446	472,156	6,493,269	7,421,461
Jacksonville	379,300	318,400	1,220,865	2,687,556
Kinston	170,392	184,159	2,321,096	4,398,734
Lenoir	314,900	113,248	1,059,027	1,066,086
Lexington	400,550	292,702	1,251,483	2,076,443
Lumberton	80,800	79,600	1,226,950	1,038,094
Monroe	281,000	107,000	713,800	980,900
New Bern	342,712	75,808	1,251,997	976,301
Raleigh	1,774,437	3,243,557	18,232,767	20,607,878
Reidsville	191,362	70,932	843,794	1,014,884
Roanoke Rapids	178,958	402,144	1,272,045	1,746,895
Rocky Mount	161,637	279,485	3,373,714	2,330,387
Salisbury	94,625	183,000	2,745,283	2,410,673
Sanford	239,909	156,550	683,359	830,300
Shelby	100,000	51,675	1,561,540	1,243,415
Statesville	156,450	153,508	2,427,108	2,277,068
Thomasville	86,614	179,765	1,794,363	1,759,803
Wilmington	673,491	72,175	3,461,642	1,384,440
Wilson	161,200	1,709,340	2,917,325	10,653,758
Winston-Salem	1,798,286	4,381,982	14,541,538	13,628,802
Grand Total	$22,669,323	$21,915,010	$188,810,723	$183,869,922

SHAW APPOINTED TO SAFETY ADVISORY BOARD — Charles Shaw of Greensboro (right), Director of Industrial Relations for Thompson-Arthur Paving Company, receives his Certificate of Membership as a member of the N. C. Department of Labor's Safety Advisory Board from State Labor Commissioner Frank Crane.

Shaw, a former official of the Carolinas Branch, Associated General Contractors of America, will serve with the Safety Advisory Board which assists the Labor Department in planning industrial accident prevention programs for application throughout North Carolina industries. Commissioner Crane presented him his membership certificate at the Advisory Board's fall meeting in Raleigh on October 4.

HUMAN FACTOR BASIC IN SAFETY, DONNELLY TELLS ADVISORY BOARD

"People—their motives and attitudes—are the all-important ingredients in accident prevention," S. C. Donnelly, assistant North Carolina works manager for Western Electric Company, told the Safety Advisory Board of the N. C. Department of Labor in an address at the Board's fall meeting held in Raleigh on October 4.

"The secret of improving safety performance is to reach inside a man, deep down where his emotions are, and help him find his 'play it safe' switch," Donnelly told the approximately 50 Advisory Board members and Labor Department safety inspectors. "The individual must want to have no accident and want it so badly that he will, himself, take the necessary action."

Stressing the importance of management efforts to promote off-the-job safety, Donnelly said his company's employees have eleven times more disabling accidents off the job than while working.

"It obviously doesn't do very much good to build up a perfect record of safety on the job with every employee completely immune from accidents and then have them kill themselves off by the dozen in traffic accidents and in the home," he stated. "It will pay us to put as much effort into the prevention of off-the-job accidents as we do upon preventing them in our plants."

The official said that efficiency and safety go hand in hand, and that the objective of management is to ingrain into employees a "discerning set of eyes and an evaluation that automatically asks, 'Is the job being done safely?"

Donnelly outlined the thorough-going safety program of Western Electric Company's Greensboro Shops, which recently set a world's safety record for all industry by going for 11 years, or 32,000,000 man-hours, without a disabling injury.

"On April 8, 1952, this plant experienced its first and only disabling injury," he said. "It has the same operations, machines, chemicals and hazards found in most electrical manufacturing plants. The essential difference seems to be in the people, in their attitudes and motives. They have shown sustained, persistent, directed safety activity on a continuing, day-after-day basis. Their performance is substantial proof that supervisors, safety directors and employees are communicating."

In a panel discussion earlier, Superintendent W. O. Conrad of the Greensboro Shops, Safety Supervisor Jennings Helm, and former Safety Supervisor Martin Quincannon, presented a detailed history of the Western Electric program which broke all previous safety records.

Charles H. Shaw, Jr., of Greensboro, industrial relations director for Thompson-Arthur Paving Company, was inducted as a new member of the Safety Advisory Board. State Labor Commissioner Frank Crane, who presided over the meeting, presented Shaw a Certificate of Membership.

Pointing out that North Carolina industry stands to save more than $1,000,000 a year as a result of lower workmen's compensation insurance rates proposed in recent hearings, Labor Department Safety Director William C. Creel attributed the proposed reductions to "the sustained work in accident prevention which is being done by many North Carolina industries."

The safety group heard reports from chairmen of the Board's committees on safety awards, education, membership, and industry accident prevention programs.

The meeting was attended by some 50 people, including 17 members of the 21-man Board and the entire safety inspection staff of the State Department of Labor.

Members of the Safety Advisory Board are: W. G. Alligood of Mount Holly, Kenneth Austin of Charlotte, Jesse D. Brown of Enka, H. B. Gaylord of Plymouth, William S. Fowler of Drexel, George Harper of Rocky Mount, T. B. Ipock, Jr., of Gastonia, Wilford G. Jones of Winston-Salem, W. L. Loy of Laurel Hill, Sidney F. Marsh of Greensboro, G. E. Midyette of Raleigh, Joel F. Moody of Raleigh, Fred F. Murphy of Hickory, H. E. Newbury of Pisgah Forest, J. D. Patterson of Winston-Salem, J. J. Plasky of Hallsboro, Martin Quincannon of Winston-Salem, Hazel W. Ramsey of Canton, Zalph Rochelle of High Point, Charles H. Shaw, Jr. of Greensboro, and H. E. Williams of Spray.

NON-FARM EMPLOYMENT RISES TO RECORD HIGH THROUGHOUT SOUTHEAST

September was a record-shattering month for the Southeast, according to Brunswick A. Bagdon, Southern Regional Director of the U. S. Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee and Virginia all reported nonagricultural employment at all-time record high levels. In Tennessee, nonfarm employment passed the million mark. The Florida total was the highest for any September but slightly below levels set during last year's winter season.

The regional nonfarm employment lotal was set at 7,861,300 in September—82,000 more than the seasonal peak reached last December. The regional aggregate increased by 89,500 over the month and 157,100 over the year. Each of the eight states contributed to the gain.

Employment levels in the region's metropolitan areas were also expanding. Only Greenville, South Carolina, where a major defense installation closed, failed to exceed year ago levels. The largest increase, 18,000, was in Atlanta.

The reopening of schools and the expanding school population caused the major part of the 30-day increase. Total government employment, which includes all public education employees at state, county and local levels, rose by 78,600 between August and September and by 35,400 over the year. The region's trade establishments added 37,700 jobs in the last 12 months—8,100 since August marking the annual fall pick-up. The services industries, reflecting the ever-expanding demand for business and personal services, expanded almost as much as government in the past year.

HUMAN FACTOR (Cont'd)

BUILDING PERMITS TOTAL $22,669,323 IN SEPTEMBER

Building permits totaling $22,669,323 were issued in 36 North Carolina cities of more than 10,000 population during September.

The September building total was 3.4% higher than the $21,915,010 reported by the same cities in September, 1962.

The 36 cities reported a total of $188,810,723 in permits during the first nine months of 1963. This was 2.7% above the $183,869,922 reported for the same period last year.

City building totals reported for September, 1963 were: Albemarle $81,015, Asheboro $84,200, Asheville $977,236, Burlington $280,830, Chapel Hill $434,780, Charlotte $4,511,590, Concord $78,000, Durham $585,979, Elizabeth City $1,795,025, Fayetteville $808,690, Gastonia $1,045,750, Goldsboro $352,225, Greensboro $2,151,193, Greenville $871,936, Henderson $155,725, Hickory $493,100, High Point $375,446, Jacksonville $379,300, Kinston $170,392, Lenoir $314, 900, Lexington $400,550, Lumberton $80,800, Monroe $281,000, New Bern $342,712, Raleigh $1,774,437, Reidsville $191,362, Roanoke Rapids $178,958, Rocky Mount $161,637, Salisbury $94,625, Sanford $239,909, Shelby $100,000, Statesville $156,450, Thomasville $86,614, Wilmington $673,491, Wilson $161,200, Winston-Salem $1,798,286.

City permits reported for the nine months of 1963 were: Albemarle $546,369, Asheboro $1,577,159, Asheville $9,156,550, Burlington $3,330,674, Chapel Hill $3,593,764, Charlotte $39,061,430, Concord $1,053,434, Durham $12,993,742, Elizabeth City $3,037,906, Fayetteville $7,781,434, Gastonia $5,666,025, Goldsboro $2,958,258, Greensboro $21,391,320, Greenville $4,234,775, Henderson $1,114,996, Hickory $1,919,922, High Point $6,493,269, Jacksonville $1,220,865, Kinston $2,321,096, Lenoir $1,059,027, Lexington $1,251,483, Lumberton $1,226,950, Monroe $713,800, New Bern $1,251,997, Raleigh $18,232,767, Reidsville $843,794, Roanoke Rapids $1,272,045, Rocky Mount $3,373,714, Salisbury $2,745,283, Sanford $683,359, Shelby $1,561,540, Statesville $2,427,108, Thomasville $1,794,363, Wilmington $3,461,642, Wilson $2,917,325, Winston-Salem $14,541,538.

1,835 FIRMS INSPECTED IN MONTH OF SEPTEMBER

Labor Department inspectors visited 1,835 manufacturing, mercantile and service-industry establishments during September to check for compliance with the Labor Laws and health and safety regulations. The establishments employed 68,656 workers

The inspectors noted 1,126 violations, mostly with regard to health and safety conditions, and made appropriate recommendations for their correction. Compliance with similar recommendations made during previous inspections was noted in 1,097 instances.

Boiler Inspections

A total of 4,829 operating certificates were issued to N. C. boilers owners and users during August and September by the Bureau of Boiler Inspections.

The Bureau also reviewed 5,447 reports of boiler inspections made by insurance company inspectors, ordered repairs made to faulty boilers in 660 instances, and received notification of completed repairs in 538 instances. The Bureau sent out 5,033 bills for inspection fees and collected $12,840.80 in fees during the two months.

DISABLING INJURY FREQUENCY RATES IN NORTH CAROLINA INDUSTRIES

— PRELIMINARY, 1962, COMPARED WITH FINAL, 1961 —

Industry	Plants 1962	Manhours 1962	Disabling Injuries 1962	Disabling Injury Frequency Rates 1962	1961
MANUFACTURING
CHEMICAL:
Drugs, Insecticides & Paints	24	1,196,607	5	4.1	10.8
Fertilizer (Manufacturing and Mixing)	62	3,149,467	47	14.9	13.4
Miscellaneous Chemical and Allied Products	95	13,005,721	51	3.9	3.9
CLAY, CEMENT AND STONE:
Block, Pipe and Cement	132	5,227,569	128	24.4	18.2
Brick, Tile and Pottery	37	3,617,046	94	25.9	24.5
ELECTRICAL:
General	41	31,678,614	45	1.4	2.0
FURNITURE:
Wood, Upholstered	141	19,462,989	201	10.3	10.2
Wood, (Except Upholstered)	216	60,391,474	699	11.5	11.5
IRON AND STEEL:
Foundries	38	4,712,055	167	35.4	27.3
Machine Manufacturing	46	7,881,859	67	8.5	11.9
Machine Shop	248	11,545,549	151	13.0	12.1
Sheet Metal	107	5,303,106	99	18.6	20.9
Not Elsewhere Classified	147	13,278,291	285	21.4	23.3
LEATHER:
Tanning, Manufacturing Shoes, Belting, and Rolls	13	1,702,867	28	16.4	10.8
LUMBER:
Logging, Sawing and Planing	305	13,265,506	362	27.2	26.2
Millwork	138	4,959,108	67	13.5	14.1
Plywood and Veneer	68	7,633,262	184	24.1	21.1
Miscellaneous Wood Products	100	5,435,687	114	20.9	20.0
MINING:
Mines	64	1,587,932	95	59.8	71.2
Pits and Quarries	148	3,539,279	105	29.6	27.3
Processing Plants	38	5,114,065	29	5.6	11.6
PAPER:
Paper and Pulp	15	14,347,177	49	3.4	4.4
Set Up Boxes and Containers	45	4,695,581	48	10.2	8.6
PRINTING:
Job, Newspaper and Books	210	9,810,999	50	5.0	5.1
TEXTILES:
Cotton Yarn & Weaving	377	162,533,444	986	6.0	5.4
Dyeing and Finishing	95	31,074,237	223	7.1	7.0
Knit Goods	465	91,892,648	332	3.6	4.3
Silk and Synthetic	61	29,370,935	96	3.2	4.2
Wearing Apparel	236	59,534,033	295	4.9	4.2
Woolen Worsted	15	8,162,418	73	8.9	5.6
Not Elsewhere Classified	145	23,660,919	190	8.9	8.9
TOBACCO:
Cigarette, Cigar and Smoking	6	30,384,558	83	2.7	3.8
Leaf Processing	50	18,403,216	135	7.3	8.4
MISCELLANEOUS MANUFACTURING:
General	323	49,904,273	299	5.9	11.4
ALL MANUFACTURING INDUSTRY	4,251	757,462,491	5,882	7.7	8.0
NON-MANUFACTURING
FOOD:
Baking	96	10,607,234	130	12.2	13.2
Bottling Plant	124	7,694,910	141	18.3	19.2
Canning and Preserving	27	2,262,504	49	21.6	15.2
Dairy Products	82	7,442,557	99	13.3	14.0
Ice and Coal	85	1,444,494	15	10.3	9.0
Meat Packing	139	12,582,525	391	31.0	30.8
Milling, Flour and Feed	167	5,613,856	86	15.3	13.3
SERVICE:
Dry Cleaning	236	2,943,703	4	1.3	0.6
Dry Cleaning and Laundry	298	13,240,433	53	4.0	2.8
Garage	521	19,944,812	159	7.9	8.0
TRADE:
Petroleum Products	240	4,005,062	22	5.4	4.2
Wholesale and Retail	376	17,689,406	166	9.3	10.3
MISCELLANEOUS NON-MANUFACTURING:
General	214	9,452,130	124	13.1	16.0
ALL NON-MANUFACTURING INDUSTRY	2,605	114,923,626	1,439	12.5	12.2
ALL INDUSTRY MANUFACTURING & NON-MANUFACTURING	6,856	872,386,117	7,321	8.3	8.7

Technical Notes:

(1) These data were compiled according to the American Standard Method of Compiling Industrial Injury Rates, approved 1954 by the American Standards Association.

(2) The disabling injury frequency rate is the number of disabling work injuries for each million manhours of exposure. A disabling injury is one which prevents the injured man's return to work on his next regular day, shift or turn; or which results in some permanent bodily impairment.

NEWS

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

W. Willard Wirtz, Secretary

WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST

Week of November 4, 1963

IN THIS ISSUE:

African Dignitaries Among Labor Department Foreign Trainees

Secretary of Labor Shares Concern Over Military Rejectees

Elimination of Employment Discrimination Part of Active Manpower Policy

Assistant Secretary Weaver Speaks Before "Cosmos" at Oxford in England

Income of Nonwhite Elderly Relatively Small, HEW Study Indicates

Assistant Secretary Weaver Lauds Civil Rights Efforts of Negro Collegians

Quote by President John F. Kennedy

African Dignitaries Among Labor Department Foreign Trainees

Foreign visitors arriving recently for study in the Labor Department under the supervision of the Bureau of International Affairs (Assistant Secretary of Labor George L-P Weaver) include: Congo--Jean-Marie Tumawaku, Chef de Cabinet Adjoint, Labor Ministry, and Alphonse Nguvulu, Minister of Labor, to study labor and social fields; Dahomey--Theophile Bonanzin Paoletti, Secretary-General, Union Generale des Travailleurs de Dahomey, to study labor-management; Rhodesia--Abraham Eliza Abrahamson, Minister of Labour, to study labor-management relations and private and public welfare; and Sierra Leone--Henrison Nicholas Georgestone, Secretary-General, Council of Labor, to study labor-management relations.

* * * * *

(MORE)

Secretary Wirtz Shares Concern Over Military Rejectees

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz speaking to Labor Department employees, said recently, "The President has instructed us--the Department of Labor, the Department of Defense, and the Selective Service Administration--to look at the almost unbelievable fact that 50 percent of the boys who took the Selective Service examination last year for induction into the army were found unfit for military service, half of that group for physical reasons, and half of the group of rejectees--that means a quarter of the whole group--for mental reasons. 'For mental reasons' means in effect, that about 25 percent of the boys who took the pre-induction examination did not have a 7th grade educational attainment level.

"The President has asked us to look at the implications of this situation. If these boys aren't fit for military service today, they aren't fit for making a living tomorrow, and we'd better find out right now what to do about it.

"I know that you feel with me that the largest responsibility is to see that the next generation has an equality of opportunity and a degree of opportunity that not all of us in this generation have had."

* * * * *

Elimination of Employment Discrimination Part of Active Manpower Policy

Among the 13 points listed by Under Secretary of Labor Henning as necessary to an "active manpower policy," is "the elimination of prejudicial discrimination in employment, training, and education." Mr. Henning cites an active manpower policy plus economic growth as the formula likely to ward off mass unemployment.

* * * * *

(MORE)

Assistant Secretary Weaver Speaks Before "Cosmos" at Oxford in England

Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs George L-P Weaver will address the "Cosmos," at Oxford University, London, England on November 1, 1963. "Cosmos" is the debating society numbering among its former members Prime Ministers and other statesmen of Great Britain.

* * * * *

Income of Nonwhite Elderly Relatively Small, HEW Study Indicates

A Fact-Sheet Study on the economic status of the elderly prepared by the Office of Aging of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, indicates that incomes of persons aged 65 and over remain less than half those of younger persons in spite of dollar increases in recent years.

Also, there is a considerable variance between the incomes of nonwhite and white persons over 65, as well as those under 65.

For example: Nonwhite unrelated individuals over 65 had a median income in 1960 of $805 as contrasted with $1,095 for white individuals. Nonwhite individuals under 65 had a median income of $1,307, white $2,884. Some 69.4 percent of the nonwhite individuals over 65 had incomes under $1,000, as did 45.9 percent of the white. Only 1.2 percent of the nonwhite had incomes over $5,000, white 4.2 percent.

Also, nonwhite families with heads over 65 had a median income in 1960 of $1,457 as compared to $3,041 for white. Nonwhite families with heads under 65, median income $3,351, white $6,138.

Interestingly, nonwhite men were 17.5 percent of men over 65 with no income, but nonwhite women were 5.2 percent of women over 65 with no income.

(MORE)

For further information on this study "Facts on Aging, No. 7, Incomes of Older People 1960-61," contact the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, Office of Information, Room 4345.

* * * * *

Assistant Secretary Weaver Lauds Negro College Students

Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs George L-P Weaver told Negro college students in an address at South Carolina State College at Orangeburg, that their forthright action in the cause of civil rights in employment and generally, deserved praise and is part of a world-wide movement toward human rights, equal opportunity and the recognition of the dignity of the individual.

"This struggle, I am convinced, will continue, whether we find it in South Africa with its bestial system of apartheid, in Soviet Russia with its discrimination against Jews, or here in our own country where peaceful demonstrators are jailed for protesting the denial of constitutional rights.

"It has taken a long time for the fact to be realized, but the United States is still in the throes of this same revolution that was begun here a century ago with a stroke of the pen by President Lincoln. It is now only approaching realization in America. What the Negro is completing today is the self-emancipation that every great movement requires. The Asians and Africans had to learn this truth before they could win their freedom."

Commenting on the Labor Department's efforts toward eliminating racial discrimination and its effects in employment, the Assistant Secretary said:

"The Department of Labor, as all other government agencies, is committed to implementing these goals. They are being implemented through all our programs, but especially in the apprenticeship and training areas. In our training program under the Manpower Development and Training Act, more than 20 percent of those being trained or retrained are nonwhite. More than a quarter of these nonwhite trainees are taking courses leading to various white collar jobs. This is about double the proportion of nonwhite employees now holding white collar jobs. Another 27 percent are being trained for a number of skilled occupations--four times the proportion of nonwhite employees now working in these trades."

(MORE)

* * * * *

Quote by the President of the United States

"The fewer grades our boys and girls complete, the greater the probability they will not find jobs. Inadequate schooling, inadequate training, inadequate skills--these are major obstacles to employment and a fruitful life. Dropping out of school today may well destroy a person's entire future."

--John F. Kennedy
President of the United States.

# # # #

Labor

NATIONAL ASSOCIATION FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF COLORED PEOPLE

TWENTY WEST FORTIETH STREET • NEW YORK 18, N. Y. • BRyant 9-1400

November 7, 1963

Dear Sir:

Please find enclosed copy of testimony on the matter of migratory farm labor in the State of Florida presented by Herbert Hill, the Association's labor secretary, before a United States Department of Labor public hearing in Miami, Florida, on November 5, 1963.

Mr. Hill's testimony deals with the very high rate of exploitation of farm labor in the State of Florida and the responsibility of the Federal Government in this matter.

We should appreciate any comment you might wish to make.

Sincerely,

Division of Research and Information

Testimony of Herbert Hill, Labor Secretary National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, Before United States Department of Labor Public Hearing, Bay Front Park Auditorium, Miami, Florida, November 5, 1963.

Mr. Chairman:

My name is Herbert Hill and I am National Labor Secretary for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People whose national office is located in New York City.

I wish to thank the Department of Labor for this opportunity to present the views of the NAACP on the condition of migratory farm labor in the State of Florida.

For almost a half-century the working and living conditions of agricultural workers in the United States, especially of colored farm workers, has been a matter of great concern to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. For the past fifteen years, as a representative of the Association, I have made many on-the-spot investigations of farm labor conditions in California, in several Mid-western farm states and along the Atlantic Seaboard, from Homestead, Florida to the Canadian Border. I am the author of a widely quoted study entitled NO HARVEST FOR THE REAPER: The Story of the Migratory Agricultural Worker in the United States, which in large part is based upon my investigations in Florida. I have frequently presented testimony on this matter before Congressional and state legislative committees.

I have reached the conclusion, based upon years of direct observation, that migratory farm workers in the state of Florida are the victims of the most extreme exploitation to be found anywhere in the United States. As depressed as the condition of migratory agricultural labor may be elsewhere, the status of such workers in Florida is today far worse.

I have been on the loading platforms at Belle Glade at 5 o'clock in the morning to observe the "shape-up"; I have visited the pathetic hovels and shacks of farm workers in the vicinity of Palatka; I have interviewed workers and examined the crew leader's labor contracts as they left the offices of the Florida Farm Placement Bureau in Palm County; I have done extensive interviewing in Zellwood, on the roads near Lake Okeechobee, in Homestead, around the outskirts of Orlando, in Ocala and elsewhere in Florida and it is my opinion that farm labor conditions in the state constitute a national disgrace.

We are now confronted with the incredible fact that the Florida migratory farm worker, already suffering the highest rate of exploitation of any group of workers in the United States, and denied virtually all of the protections of federal labor and welfare laws, is to suffer a further deprivation. For the United States Department of Labor to suspend the requirement that Florida growers provide a minimum wage of 95 cents an hour and instead be permitted a reversion to the old Florida rate of 65 to 70 cents an hour makes the U.S. Department of Labor a party to the unconscionable exploitation of Florida farm workers.

The New York Times, in an editorial of October 22, 1963, commented that "...The 95-cent rate is itself a full 30 cents below the Federal minimum for industrial workers. It was established after a Labor Department hearing and was accepted by the growers in all Eastern states except Florida. When the department refused to lower the rate, Florida's Senators appealed to President Kennedy." The result was an announcement by the Department of Labor of the reversion to 65 to 70 cents an hour which as the New York Times comments is "a shameful figure for any Federal agency to endorse."

The many thousands of Negro farm workers and their children in the state of Florida will be the victims of this shoddy political arrangement. For the national administration to be a party to such an incredible arrangement compromises in the most fundamental sense the moral integrity of the Federal Government and the social responsibility of the Kennedy administration.

The data provided by the U.S. Department of Agriculture clearly indicates that consistently since 1949, the average hourly farm wage rate in Florida has been substantially below not only the average hourly earnings in manufacturing occupations in Florida, not only far below average hourly earnings in retail trade occupations in Florida, but also well below the average hourly farm wage rate for the rest of the United States.

In 1962, according to the U.S. Department of Agriculture, the average hourly wage rate for farm workers throughout the United States was $1.01. (This national figure includes the Florida data.)Average hourly rates in Florida were .85.

Further proof of the consistent deterioration of the status of farm labor in Florida may be seen in the fact that a decade ago the average hourly wage rate for farm workers in the United States was .82 an hour and in Florida, .71. In the intervening years the differential between national average hourly farm wage rates and Florida farm wage rates has increased from .9 to .16, a percentage increase of 66 2/3. Thus, the action of the United States Department of Labor in providing an exemption from the 95 cent rate for Florida is made all the more incredible.

Data from the United States Department of Agriculture (Vegetables - Fresh Market 1962 Annual Summary (Vg. 2-2(62)) U.S.D.A., SRS, December 18, 1962, and Farm Income 1949-62. (FIS 191 Supplement) U.S.D.A., ERS, August 1963) provides the basis for an analysis of the profits and the national market domination of the Florida growers clearly indicates their unusually high rates of profit and their very advantageous position in the national agricultural market. In the past ten years, Florida's share of the seasonal national market in winter tomatoes was 100 percent and Florida's price percentage of the average yearly national price per hundred weight was 137 percent.

In winter sweet corn, Florida's production percent of the seasonal national market was 100 percent and 159 percent of the yearly national price per hundred weight. Florida's production percent of the seasonal national market in winter snap beans has been 100 percent and Florida's price percentage based upon the average yearly national price per hundred weight was 116 percent. Equally high or higher is Florida's profits and control of the national market in green peppers, watermelon, cucumbers and strawberries. The value of Florida's 1962 crop of fresh market tomatoes during the winter season was well over 26 million dollars.

Can the United States Department of Labor defend the operation of a produce market which is based upon the extreme exploitation of farm workers? One may ask, how can the United States Department of Labor, responsible as it is for the administration of the Walsh-Healey Public Contracts Act which establishes the principle that the Government must not be a party to the unfair exploitation of American workers, approve wage rates that violate the fundamental principle of that Act? But it does so. Here in the State of Florida, the Department of Labor is a party to an arrangement that permits foreign workers to depress the wage standards of American citizens.

Futhermore, if the U.S. Department of Labor permits a reversion to the old Florida rate of 65 to 70 cents an hour then an agency of the Federal Government is directly responsible for maintaining a minimum wage pattern that is fully 40 percent below that which prevails under the Walsh-Healey Act lowest minimum rate of $1.15 or $1.25 an hour. What is more important in this regard is the fact that for most workers, in reality, the minimums are the maximums.

In addition, it must be pointed out that low wage rates give Florida an unfair competitive advantage over other agricultural producing states such as California, Michigan, Indiana, New York and New Jersey. The fat Florida margins above the national price levels are due in part to climate and the proximity of large markets; but they are due, also, in no small measure, to wage rates lower than those in effect in competing states. Thus the Federal government is actively aiding Florida profit takers at the expense of farm operators in other states.

Table I

Value of Florida Vegetable Crops
And National Market Domination

Crop	Season	Value of 1962 Crop $ Millions	Florida Price % of Average Yearly National Price Per Cwt. 1951-60	Florida Production % of Seasonal National Market 1951-60	Chief Competing States
Tomatoes, Fresh Market	Winter	$26.6	137%	100%	—
	Early Spring	16.3	118%	55%	Texas, 26%
	Late Fall	7.1	126%	90%	Texas
Celery	Winter	14.3	93%	53%	California, 44%
	Spring	10.3	96%	44%	California, 56%
Sweet Corn	Winter	3.8	159%	100%	—
	Early Spring	11.2	112%	86%	Texas
	Fall	2.0	139%	53%	California
Snap Beans	Winter	6.6	116%	100%	—
	Early Spring	4.2	145%	95%	Texas
	Late Fall	5.2	101%	97%	Texas
Green Peppers	Winter	6.6	121%	100%	—
	Spring	6.0	153%	94%	Texas
	Fall	1.6	128%	25%	Texas, 56%
Cabbage	Winter	13.7	130%	47%	Texas, 34% California, 15%
Watermelons	Late Spring	11.0	124%	86%	California
Cucumbers, Fresh Market	Winter	.8	193%	100%	—
	Early Spring	6.3	126%	94%	Texas
	Late Fall	3.5	116%	100%	—
Strawberries, Fresh Market	Winter	4.7	152%	100%	—
Escarole	Winter	4.4	107%	100%	—

Sources: Based upon data from (Vegetables - Fresh Market 1962 Annual Summary (Vg. 2-2(62)) U.S.D.A., SRS, December 18, 1962, and Farm Income 1949-62. (FIS 191 Supplement) U.S.D.A., ERS, August 1963.)

The migratory farm labor stream along the Atlantic Seaboard consists almost entirely of Negro workers from Florida, Georgia, Alabama and the Carolinas. The State of Florida is the staging area for the organization of the farm labor streams that reach into Pennsylvania, New Jersey and New York. It is reliably estimated that there are approximately 50,000 Negroes in the migratory labor stream along the Atlantic coast.

I have interviewed many workers as they proceeded from Florida into the other states along the Atlantic coast and it is very clear that these workers move into northern farming communities for economic reasons. Thousands of Negroes who reside in Florida are denied employment in Florida because of the importation of foreign workers. At the very same time that thousands of workers are forced to leave Florida to seek employment elsewhere, the Florida Farm Placement Service is importing some 14,000 foreign workers. It is absolutely false to maintain that there is an inadequate supply of domestic farm workers in Florida which justifies the importation of 14,000 foreign workers.

The national rate of unemployment for Negroes in agriculture and in non-agricultural occupations is almost triple the national average. Given this very high rate of unemployment it is immoral for the Federal Government to be a party to the importation of foreign workers who directly displace American Negroes from agricultural employment in Florida and elsewhere. Farm labor is one of the very few remaining areas where there is still a substantial need for the worker who has little industrial skill, but the importation of foreign workers robs American citizens of even these job opportunities.

Negro workers suffer a special hardship in this regard because as a result of racial discrimination and other factors they are denied employment opportunities in other sectors of the economy. It is difficult to understand how the United States Government which has a clear responsibility to protect the welfare of its citizens can be a party to an arrangement which adversely affects in the sharpest possible manner the economic and social welfare of the most deprived groups of citizens in the nation.

It is significant that during the 1953-1961 period in every season but 1956-1957 the period of the greatest employment of foreign workers preceeded the period of peak domestic employment by one to four months. This indicates that on a statewide basis a large number of agricultural jobs are committed to, and filled by, foreign workers before domestic worker employment has reached its peak. It would be reasonable to expect that a supplemental work force would maximize only after there has been full utilization of the domestic work force, rather than prior to that point. The pattern of foreign worker employment suggests that such workers are no longer regarded as merely supplemental, but are now the basic core group in the Florida agricultural labor force. The prompt action of Florida Senators of the highest level of government further suggests that the foreign labor force plus an unconscionable differential in domestic wage rates have become vital to Florida agriculture, or, perhaps, to the maintenance of the unusually high profit levels to which Florida operators have become accustomed.

In Florida, as well as in other states, the United States Department of Labor has permitted and is indeed a party to the perversion and distortion of the intent of Public Law 78. By certifying that there are labor shortages where clearly no labor shortages exist, the Federal Government has permitted a supplemental labor force to displace the basic domestic labor force and to steadily depress the economic standards of American agricultural workers.

Section 503(2) of Public Law 78 declares in reference to foreign workers, "the employment of such workers will not adversely affect the wages and working conditions of domestic agricultural workers similarly employed." In the official manuals of the Department of Labor this is stated as the basic federal policy, a solemn assurance that is reaffirmed each time the Secretary of Labor approves a certification that a domestic labor shortage exists in a given area.

It was the documented conclusion of the President's Commission on Migratory Labor in 1951, and of the expert consultants appointed by the Secretary of Labor in 1959, that adverse effects upon domestic labor had not been prevented as a result of the foreign labor importation program. We are forced to ask how many more years must go by; how many more documented studies be made; how much more proof assembled regarding the adverse effects upon American workers of the foreign farm labor program before the Federal Government acts? Is the Florida Fruit and Vegetable Association so powerful; is the United States Sugar Producers Association so mighty, that it can bend the Government of the United States of America to its will?

The State of Florida has enjoyed a remarkable growth during the past decade, surpassing that of the nation as a whole. At the present time Florida is enjoying a rapidly expanding and booming economy, both in its industrial and agriculture sectors, and yet it is necessary for tens of thousands of farm workers from Florida and other southeastern states to migrate to the northeast and midwest in order to find agricultural work that is denied them in Florida.

A specific example is to be found in the sugar cane industry. Foreign workers have now become the basic work force in the Florida sugar cane industry although for many years in the past the sugar cane crop was harvested by domestic workers. The sugar cane industry is protected by the Federal Sugar Act where a minimum wage is required. Increasing mechanization in this industry and in agriculture generally has made available many additional workers for employment in Florida but they are totally displaced by foreign workers.

The 14,000 workers from the British West Indies, brought into Florida, have displaced 14,000 American workers. The argument that domestic workers will not do the type of work done by these foreign workers no matter what the rate of wages paid is simply not true. In the many other states into which Florida workers are forced to migrate, they do all the kinds of jobs which Florida growers say they will not do.

The displacement of domestic workers is obviously a drain on the local economy. Farm workers are on the lowest scale of the economic ladder and are 100 percent consumers. All of the money earned is spent in the local community. Foreign workers send their money back to their home, and this is a drain on our economy, as the general community does not benefit from their earnings although the growers reap vast benefits as a result of the high rate of exploitation.

Considering the Federal Government's great concern with the international balance of payments problem, it is highly ironic that the United States Government actively supports an agricultural labor policy that directly contributes to our country's serious difficulty in this matter. It makes no sense for the Secretary of the Treasury and the President of the United States to periodically bemoan America's undesirable balance of payments situation and for the same Administration to contribute directly to an intensification of this problem.

The living and working conditions of the Negro farm worker in the State of Florida have already deteriorated far beyond the minimal standards of decency that are normally accepted in American society. These people who are vital to the nation's agricultural economy are the most exploited, the most abused, the most ignored in the United States today. The permanently depressed and abject condition of poverty that is the lot of the Negro farm worker in Florida dooms tens of thousands of families to a tragic hopelessness.

The United States Department of Labor must insist upon the re-establishment of the 95 cents minimum wage rate in Florida. Failure to do so will produce pressure for similar exemptions from other states. It will provide the basis for the most intensified exploitation of what is already the most oppressed group in our country. The basic interest of all American farm workers require the immediate cessation of the foreign labor import program. It is inconceivable that in 1963 the Government of the people of the United States will not heed the cry of the most abused group in the American social order.

In the Fifth Chapter, Fourth Verse of James (Revised Standard Version) it is written: "... Behold, the wage of the laborers who mowed your fields, which you kept back by fraud, cry out; and the cries of the harvesters have reached the ears of the Lord of Hosts..."

LWD ✓
SB ✓
Labor

U. S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY
WASHINGTON

November 7, 1963

Mr. Vernon E. Jordan, Jr.
Assistant to the Executive Director
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N.W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Dear Mr. Jordan:

Enclosed are four copies each of the compliance procedures, dated July 26 and October 20, as you requested in your November 1 letter.

We regret that our supply is exhausted, and we do hope these four copies will be of some service to you.

Sincerely yours,

Arthur A. Chapin

Arthur A. Chapin
Special Assistant to the Secretary of Labor

Enclosures

NEWS
U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
W. Willard Wirtz, Secretary

USDL--5995

FOR RELEASE: Sunday Editions
November 10, 1963

Excerpts from Remarks
by
Arthur A. Chapin
Special Assistant to the Secretary of Labor
before the
Greater New Orleans Urban League Motivation Conference
Xavier University
November 9, 1963

Your chosen theme: "Education--The Negro's Tool for Economic Advancement During the Critical 60's," is very timely, and of great importance to all of us.

Like all great battle, we have to fight on many fronts and the one you selected for this program is of primary importance--to get the education we need, despite all obstacles, so that we are ready. Let us send our children into the employment arena with a chance for survival.

What a shame, what a wasted opportunity it is, when the employer finally says "Yes, I won't discriminate, I'll look for Negroes for these jobs," and none is available.

For example, only one out of 100 engineers in the United States is a Negro--we have lost a golden opportunity.

What are the basic facts that demonstrate the need for more education and better education? As we in the Department of Labor see the picture, education for today's youth cannot be overly stated, particularly for Negro boys and girls. For the man who has not completed grade school will earn $100,000 less in his lifetime than the high school graduate: the high school graduate will earn $140,000 less than the college graduate. The youth who completes one of our retraining projects will earn as a result, $50,000 more in his lifetime.

The Negro with an elementary school education is likely to have an income of $3,400 while the high school graduate is likely to have an income of $4,600 and those with a college degree will probably earn $7,900. Education does pay off. It is worth struggling for, sacrificing for.

Let me make this same point in other terms. The unemployment rate for workers between 25 and 54 who have less than a grade school education is twice as high as the rate for high school graduates and four times as high as the rate for workers with some college education.

Let me give you the same figures but for young Negroes only. One out of every 3 Negro youths with only an eighth grade education is unemployed compared with one out of 6 for the high school graduate and one out of 8 for those with one or more years of college. And note that less than one out of 22 Negroes over 24 years of age with one or more years of college is unemployed.

The more education a Negro gets, the nearer his income approaches that of the white. The Negro elementary school graduate gets only 68 percent of the income of the white with the same education; this increases to 71 percent for the Negro high school graduate and to 85 percent for the Negro college graduate.

Keep in mind that these figures are based on the situation today. As automation increases, as jobs become even more complex, the relative income of the uneducated will become lower and their unemployment rate will become higher. There is no future for the unskilled, unskilled, unschooled worker. Blue collar jobs are expected to increase by only 14 percent in the 60's, and these will be mainly skilled jobs requiring an education, but white-collar jobs will increase by 30 percent.

About one-quarter of a million Negroes are today, attending colleges and universities, of whom 100,000 are in the South or the District of Columbia. Negro enrollment in higher education is higher than total enrollment in Great Britain or Italy, and nearly as high as in West Germany or France even though the Negro population in America is less than half the population of any of these nations.

But the high financial cost of certain types of professional education, such as medicine, is a serious obstacle to Negro youth--34 percent of the Negro youth compared with the 13 percent of white youth report financial handicaps as barring the way for graduate and professional school. Part of our efforts must therefore be to get special funds provided for the post-graduate education of Negro youths; they must study harder so that they can get more scholarships.

An interesting and significantly development is the interest of the white student in attending colleges which were formerly all Negro; Lincoln University in Missouri reports more than 500 white students and West Virginia State College is now evenly split between Negroes and whites.

More barriers are breaking down. For the first time in history, three outstanding medical schools with southern traditions--Johns Hopkins, Duke, and Emory, have admitted Negroes on a competitive basis. Each of them had won a National Medical Fellowship.

What has the Government done? Many things.

For the first time in American history, we have a positive program to get more qualified Negroes into the Federal Government, and to get them into better jobs.

By a positive program we mean recruiting at Negro schools, looking over personnel records to find cases of under-utilization, making clear to all levels of management that equal opportunity means equal opportunity, and providing counseling and training to employees to help them get ahead.

The percentage of Negroes in responsible positions in the U.S. Department of Labor has doubled--a 100 percent increase in less than three years. In many places in the Government, for the first time in history, there are Negroes in supervisory jobs and in management jobs.

One of the most important activities of the Department of Labor related to the theme of this meeting is in advising schools and colleges which Negroes attend on the educational requirements to increase their employability. As part of this effort, under the auspices of the Secretary of Labor, Mr. W. Willard Wirtz, we conducted conferences at four locations this winter and spring where the top officials of Negro colleges and the Federal Government met so that college officials could discuss their curriculum, counseling, and placement needs in order to increase the utilization of their students.

The same Federal leadership applies to Federal Government contractors. They are no longer allowed to say that they have no Negroes because no Negroes applied; they are no longer allowed to say that they have Negroes only in menial jobs because no trained Negroes are available. They are told that they can't expect Negroes, trained or untrained, to apply to an employer who has practices discrimination. It's the employers's job to find the Negro and and to train him. Employers spend millions in recruiting on colleges campuses and in advertising for employees; and then training these young graduates. They spend millions to test and to train the people of foreign countries in which they operate. Equal opportunity means that they will use positive efforts to find Negroes, adapt their selection methods, as they have done overseas, in evaluating them, and then train them for their first jobs and for upgrading. This is the program of the Federal Government--the leadership for this program goes right to the top.

We have another special training program that can mean a lot to the Negro--training done under the Manpower Development and Training Act. More than 20 percent of all trainees in this program are Negroes.

This program is important because it places special emphasis on those people who are now qualified only for jobs that don't exist anymore. It upgrades them, helps to make them employable and at a higher level, and it gives them an allowance while they are being trained. We have, for example, recently completed work with the Ingalls Shipbuilding Corporation in Mississippi to provide training under this Act for people in low-level jobs to qualify them for skilled jobs.

It is now the firm policy of the U.S. Department of Labor to insure that the employment services of the States operate on a nondiscriminatory basis; that they will not accept orders from employers which prescribe race or color and that they will not refer applicants on this basis.

We have recently established procedures to insure that we do not certify apprenticeship programs that discrimination; more important, our field representatives have a mandate from the Secretary of Labor to promote equal opportunity on a positive basis.

(S64-1150)

LABOR WEEK® Labor

HIRING, FIRING, PROMOTING, UNIONS—POLICING AHEAD?

The old "FEPC" idea for banning racial discrimination in jobs—now under a new name—has been revived in Congress.

Employers will find life different, and more complicated, if the measure passes.

Government agents will police employers' hiring, firing and promotion practices. Stiff penalties are provided for violators. Labor unions are covered, too.

Drastic changes lie ahead for employers if an old proposal, now suddenly renewed, is enacted by Congress.

The proposal: Government policing of hiring, firing, and promotion practices, to avoid discrimination because of race, color, religion, or nationality.

It's the old FEPC, or Fair Employment Practices Commission, idea, now changed to EEOC, for Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

If the measure becomes law—

- Employers will be forced to hire Negroes and members of other minorities on an equal basis with whites. Discrimination will be illegal.
- Firing of Negroes because of their race will be unlawful.
- It will be unlawful to fail to promote Negroes, or fail to give them raises, because of their race.
- Employers must keep detailed records to show they do not discriminate against racial or religious minorities.
- Investigators from a new Government agency will be free to inspect employers' personnel records, and to question employers and their workers when any suspicion arises.
- Prohibitions against discrimination apply, also, to labor unions and to employment agencies which refer workers to prospective jobs.

Civil suits, injunctions, fines, even jail terms are provided for violators of the proposed new policing of employers, unions, and job agencies.

The antidiscrimination proposal is a little-noticed part of the civil-rights bill approved on October 29 by the House Judiciary Committee. The idea has the backing of President Kennedy and of many in Congress of both parties.

The measure envisions a big, new Government agency to oversee the practices of employers, unions and employment agencies.

Millions for operations. The authorized appropriation of 10 million for a year of operations gives an idea of what Congress has in mind for the EEOC.

By comparison, the National Labor Relations Board did not reach a 10-million-dollar budget until five years ago. Like the NLRB, the EEOC would have regional offices and a large staff of lawyers and investigators.

Final enforcement of EEOC recom-

(continued on next page)

TRENDS IN LABOR

▶ Union fined. A Chicago labor union was fined $26,500 for refusal to load a Canadian freighter with grain. Additional fines of $500 a day were threatened until the order is obeyed. A federal judge said that Local 418 of the Grain Workers Union had "done nothing" to obey the court's order. For more than six months, union members have declined to load grain on ships of a Canadian shipping firm that was struck by the Canadian Seafarers Union.

▶ Textile wages. A wave of wage increases recently has spread through Southern textile mills. The raises usually have run about 5 per cent, or around $3.50 a week. Most of the mills involved are not unionized.

▶ Electrical settlement. Westinghouse Electric Corporation and the International Union of Electrical Workers agreed on a new contract giving an average raise of 6.5 cents an hour now and 7 cents an hour on April 19, 1965, plus "fringes." The contract was similar to one negotiated earlier by General Electric and IUE.

▶ Cost-savings payment. Kaiser Steel and the Steelworkers Union announced that their plan for sharing of cost savings cut costs by $908,000 in September. Workers' share averaged 46 cents an hour. For August, it was 24 cents.

▶ Professional unit. An employer lost an attempt to obtain an employe vote that might have broken up a combined unit of professional and nonprofessional employes. The two groups had been represented by one union for years. National Labor Relations Board held that professional employes may seek an election on a separate unit, but that, without such a request, NLRB is not required to invalidate the combined bargaining unit.

▶ Union in contempt. A U. S. court of appeals found United Mine Workers Local 5881 in civil contempt of court for failing to obey an injunction against violence. The NLRB in 1961 ruled that the union was responsible for conduct of its members in a dispute in Tennessee. NLRB now has been told by the appeals court to suggest costs to be assessed against the union.

Hunting for the best motor oil your money can buy? It's Quaker State! Refined only from 100% pure Pennsylvania Grade Crude Oil, years-ahead Quaker State keeps your car on the road, out of the repair shop, and saves you money. Always ask for Quaker State Motor Oil by name – the best engine life preserver.

QUAKER STATE
OIL REFINING CORPORATION
OIL CITY, PENNSYLVANIA

This announcement is neither an offer to sell nor a solicitation of an offer to buy any of these Debentures. The offer is made only by the Prospectus.

$150,000,000

General Motors Acceptance Corporation

Twenty-Two Year 4½% Debentures Due 1985

Dated November 1, 1963 Due November 1, 1985

Interest payable each May 1 and November 1

Price 99½% and Accrued Interest

Copies of the Prospectus may be obtained in any State from only such of the undersigned as may legally offer these Debentures in compliance with the securities laws of such State.

MORGAN STANLEY & CO.

DILLON, READ & CO. INC. THE FIRST BOSTON CORPORATION KUHN, LOEB & CO. Incorporated

BLYTH & CO., INC. DREXEL & CO. EASTMAN DILLON, UNION SECURITIES & CO.

GLORE, FORGAN & CO. GOLDMAN, SACHS & CO. HARRIMAN RIPLEY & CO. Incorporated

KIDDER, PEABODY & CO. Incorporated LAZARD FRERES & CO. LEHMAN BROTHERS

MERRILL LYNCH, PIERCE, FENNER & SMITH Incorporated SALOMON BROTHERS & HUTZLER

SMITH, BARNEY & CO. Incorporated STONE & WEBSTER SECURITIES CORPORATION

WHITE, WELD & CO. DEAN WITTER & CO.

October 31, 1963.

[continued from preceding page]

. . . Equal-opportunity plan means more paper work mendations will be placed in the federal courts if the proposal passes.

In what follows, you see how the proposed plan will work:

Most of the burden will fall on the employers, those whose business "affects" interstate commerce and who have more than 25 employes.

Employers will be required to keep the kind of records that investigators of the new Commission will want to examine. Agents of the Commission are given the right to enter a company's offices to look for discrimination.

If a company has an apprenticeship program, it must keep complete lists of applicants for training. This is to help agents determine whether applicants have been denied training because of race, color, religion, or nationality.

When an employer has a job opening, he must be careful about how he goes about filling the job.

It will be illegal, for example, for an employer to advertise for new workers in any way that indicates preference for whites—or hints at discrimination against any minority group.

If the employer decides a Negro applicant does not have the necessary qualifications, he will need records to show why he rejected the applicant.

If the Commission then gets a complaint, the employer will need evidence that the turndown resulted from lack of skill, and not from prejudice.

Some exceptions. There are exceptions to the no-discrimination rule, however. It will be legal, for example, for a Chinese restaurant to hire only Chinese workers. This exception applies to certain types of business in which jobs must be filled by workers "of a particular religion or national origin."

As a general rule, however, the employer will have to watch his hiring practices closely.

The employer can get into trouble by discharging a worker if the worker can show any evidence of discrimination because of his color.

When promotions are handed out, care will need to be taken. Some worker who thinks he should have gotten the better job might complain to the Commission. Then it will be up to the employer to show that he had another reason for his action rather than the race or creed of the worker.

The amount of wages or salary paid to a particular worker also could bring an investigation, in case a complaint is

(continued on next page)

If the fire insurance adjuster asked you to prepare a proof of loss, could you do it — in the event of fire? A Lloyd-Thomas appraisal establishes accurate business property values that provide a sound, provable basis for insurance loss claims. Send for complimentary booklet, "What the Businessman Should Know About Fire Insurance"—a valuable handbook. Write on your business letterhead — address Dept. USN.

The Lloyd-Thomas Co.
Recognized Appraisal Authorities
4411 Ravenswood Ave., Chicago 40, Ill.
Representatives Coast to Coast

★ "Essential - - Useful"

Readers often use the words "essential" and "useful" in letters to us on why they like "U.S.News & World Report."

More and more companies are finding that the same two words equally apply to their advertising programs in "U.S.News & World Report."

Advertising Department

U.S. NEWS & WORLD REPORT

45 Rockefeller Plaza
New York, N. Y. 10020

First National City Travelers Checks

OFFICIAL TRAVELERS CHECK

NEW YORK WORLD'S FAIR 1964-65

Member F. D. I. C.

Unisphere® presented by United States Steel © 1961 New York World's Fair 1964-1965 Corporation

Good idea? Put it on paper

BETTER IDEA: SEE PAGE 38

Labor Week

[continued from preceding page]

. . . Employment agencies, unions face new control filed accusing the firm of unfair treatment of a minority-group member.

Paying a Negro less than a white worker for the same type of job might result in a charge against a company.

The proposal, if enacted, will make it a violation for an employer to discriminate with respect to "compensation, terms, conditions, or privileges of employment."

Segregating Negroes in one department of a factory could lead to trouble.

When a worker goes to the Commission with a complaint, the employer is to be sent a notice of the charge filed by the worker. The Commission's staff will investigate.

If there seems to be a violation, the Commission will try to work out a voluntary settlement.

If that is impossible, the Commission may file a civil suit in federal court. This may be filed in the area where the alleged violation occurs, or in the district where the firm's home office is located. Under this provision, an alleged violation in Alabama or Mississippi, for example, might be tried in New York, Pittsburgh or Detroit.

A court trial. The federal district court will decide whether a violation has taken place. It will be up to the Commission to prove discrimination.

Where an employer is found guilty, the court can order him to revise his policies, hire an applicant or reinstate someone found to have been fired unfairly. Back wages can be assessed.

There would be changes, too, for labor-union officials and heads of employment agencies—private and public.

A union could get in trouble if it excluded someone from membership—or expelled him—because of his race, color, religion or national background. A union also could be haled into court if it put Negroes in separate locals.

Assessment for wages. If a union forced an employer to discriminate against a Negro, the union might be assessed part of the back wages ordered by a court.

Employment agencies also would be subject to penalties if they failed to send Negro applicants, for example, when job openings were reported.

Those are some of the things that can happen if the Committee's bill becomes law. It is too early to say whether the proposal will become law, but it now appears to be nearer passage than in many years.

(Another Labor Week article, p. 110)

NATION'S LARGEST FEDERAL SAVINGS ASSOCIATION

Headquarters Office: 611 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles 17

ASSETS OVER $1 BILLION

Pays you 4.8% on savings

Choose a federally-chartered savings association...California Federal...the nation's largest. Assets exceed $1 billion. Dividends are paid quarterly at our 4.8% current annual rate—a higher rate than most other savings institutions. We provide world-wide savings service in over 100 foreign countries and 50 states for 400,000 individuals, corporations and trusts. The same, sound management policies since 1925. Reserves are far higher than legal requirements. Accounts insured by provisions of Federal Savings & Loan Insurance Corp. A man and wife, with 2 individual accounts and 1 joint account, can have up to $30,000 in fully insured savings. Many corporations have selected our institution as an ideal repository for their corporate, pension or trust funds, in amounts from $100,000 up to $1,000,000 per account. Funds received or postmarked by 10th of any month earn from 1st. Special attention to mail accounts. We pay air mail both ways. To open your account, just mail check or money order with coupon below. We handle details of transferring your funds from any institution at no cost to you.

CALIFORNIA FEDERAL SAVINGS
AND LOAN ASSOCIATION • ASSETS OVER $1 BILLION

12 OFFICES IN: Anaheim, Eagle Rock, Echo Park, Granada Hills, Hollywood, Inglewood, Lakewood, Downtown Los Angeles, Miracle Mile, Palos Verdes Peninsula, Rancho Park, Reseda.

FREE! MONEY MAGAZINE
1963 California Story—all about money! Its history, oddities, counterfeits—plus success stories of multi-millionaires and other fascinating articles. Packed with facts, colorfully illustrated! Send coupon today.

California Federal Savings Association
Box 54087, Terminal Annex, Los Angeles 54, Calif.
☐ Please send free "The California Story" U-13 and CalFed MAIL SAVER®
Please open a: ☐ Joint Account ☐ Individual
☐ Trust Account Amount enclosed $_____
Name (s) _____
Address _____
City _____ Zone ____ State _____

A call to Commerce Trust gets things done in Kansas City

Norman Cowperthwaite, Vice President

Commerce Trust men like Norman Cowperthwaite know business as well as banking. That's why you can get things done fast and well in Kansas City with a call to Commerce Trust. Here are active, interested bankers who know the business climate and are anxious to help your business grow in the Heart of America. A call will prove it.

Commerce Trust Company

Kansas City's Oldest and Largest Bank

Member Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation

White-Collar Raises: How Big

An official report just issued on salaries of white-collar employes in the U. S. shows this:

- Pay raises generally ranged from about 2 to 5 per cent in the past year.
- Salary levels for 75 occupations vary from $3,000 to nearly $24,000. Average pay for top-grade positions ran above $15,000 for attorneys, engineers, chemists, personnel directors and chief accountants.
- Clerical employes won pay raises of 2.6 per cent, on the average, compared with 2.9 per cent a year ago. This follows a trend in raises for factory workers in recent years.
- The 1963 raises for some other groups were larger than those of 1962.

The new report, issued October 30 by the Labor Department, did not attempt to predict the trend in white-collar raises for next year. Unofficially, it was estimated that increases in 1964 probably will average somewhere between 3 and 3.5 per cent.

Survey of payrolls. A mass of detail on white-collar pay is contained in the report. It is based on surveys by the Bureau of Labor Statistics.

Examples of the average annual salaries for top and bottom grades of key occupations are listed in the chart on this page. The figures cover professional, administrative and clerical employes of private industry.

Attorneys employed on the staffs of corporations are included, but those in private law firms are not. The same holds for other professional workers: Only those on company staffs are covered by the averages.

Among the key jobs, attorneys received the largest percentage increase during the past year, with raises of 4.6 per cent, compared with 3.2 in 1962.

For attorneys in the lowest job group, grade 1, the average increase in 1963 was 13.7 per cent. Those in the top category, or grade 7, got pay raises averaging 5.9 per cent.

Salary averages for the seven classifications of attorneys ranged from $7,452 to $23,724.

Largest group: engineers. The number of engineers covered by the survey totaled nearly 270,000—largest group involved. Here there are eight grades of jobs, ranging in pay from $7,056 to $19,992, on the average.

More than 80,000 of the engineers were found in job-class 4, with salaries averaging $10,728.

Engineers, too, continued to make gains in the past year, averaging 4.4 per cent, against 2.6 per cent reported in the 1962 survey.

Among engineers, raises this year ranged from 2.1 per cent for the top grade to 5.6 per cent for grade 5.

Engineers and lawyers were not the only ones to score larger increases.

Accountants, for example, came up with average raises of 3.3 per cent, against 2.8 a year ago. Auditors showed 3.6 per cent, against 2.9 per cent.

Chief accountants averaged 2.8 per cent in raises this year, compared with 2.6 for 1962. Job analysts showed a gain, too, getting 2.6 per cent this year against 1.4 per cent last year.

Smaller raises than last year's went to managers of office services—down from 3.3 per cent to 2.2; personnel directors, from 3.7 per cent to 3; and chemists, from 3.9 per cent to 3.8 per cent.

In the large group of clerical workers, pay raises this year ranged widely above and below the general average of 2.6 per cent.

Smallest raises, on the average, went to tabulating-machine operators, grade 2, with a 1.7 per cent increase. General stenographers won average raises of 2.5 per cent, while typists, grade 1, got increases averaging 2.4 per cent.

Official Survey—

WHITE-COLLAR PAY IN INDUSTRY

	Average Yearly Salaries
	Lowest Grade	Top Grade
Attorneys	$ 7,452	$23,724
Engineers	$ 7,056	$19,992
Engineering technicians	$ 4,764	$ 8,256
Draftsmen	$ 5,243	$ 6,870
Chemists	$ 6,384	$19,824
Directors of personnel	$ 8,952	$15,744
Job analysts	$ 6,408	$ 9,852
Chief accountants	$10,236	$15,516
Accountants	$ 6,156	$11,232
Auditors	$ 5,544	$10,092
Managers, office services	$ 7,404	$12,960
Bookkeeping-machine operators	$ 3,500	$ 4,349
Accounting clerks	$ 4,063	$ 5,374
File clerks	$ 3,039	$ 4,286
Key-punch operators	$ 3,827	$ 4,375
Stenographers	$ 4,165	$ 4,739
Tabulating-machine operators	$ 3,948	$ 5,799
Typists	$ 3,485	$ 4,125

Source: U. S. Dept. of Labor

NEWS

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

W. Willard Wirtz, Secretary

UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF LABOR 1913 50 YEARS OF PROGRESS 1963 THE DIGNITY OF LABOR IN A FREE SOCIETY

EMPLOYMENT- GEN.

WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST

Week of November 11, 1963

IN THIS ISSUE:

Foreign Agricultural Worker Hearings in Florida Continued in Washington

Training Projects for Underprivileged Described in Labor Department Booklet

Nonwhite Girls Have Nation's Highest Unemployment Rate

Nonwhite Youngsters Leaving Rural Areas Faster Than White Youths

The Negro Farmer Not a "Vanishing American" (Related Agency)

Secretary and Under Secretary to Speak on Equal Employment Opportunity

Foreign Agricultural Worker Hearings in Florida Continued in Washington

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz has announced that the public hearing of November 5 in Miami, Fla., to consider the possible "adverse effect" of the employment of foreign agricultural workers on wages and working conditions of domestic workers, will be continued in Washington, D.C., November 19, in the Departmental Auditorium. The continuation will allow interested parties who have indicated intentions of presenting views and evidence, to appear.

* * * * *

Training Projects for Underprivileged Described in Labor Department Booklet

Demonstration manpower training programs for the big-city disadvantaged jobless--minority groups, the older worker, the emotionally handicapped, the educationally deficient, the school dropout--are described in an illustrated Labor Department booklet, "Bridge to Employment." Included are examples of youth programs in New York City and New Haven, Conn., and a program for hard-core unemployed in Norfolk, Va., all involving participation of private and voluntary agencies as well as the government. Copies of the booklet are available from the Department of Labor, Office of Manpower, Automation, and Training, Washington 25, D.C.

(MORE)

* * * * *

Nonwhite Girls Have Nation's Highest Unemployment Rate

Nonwhite girls have a much higher unemployment rate than any other group in the entire labor force, it is pointed out in the Department of Labor's Manpower Research Bulletin No. 3, "Young Workers: Their Special Training Needs." The study, which may be secured from the Office of Manpower, Automation, and Training, Labor Department, Washington 25, D.C., states:

"Nonwhite youths face greater employment problems than other young workers. In 1962, about one out of every four nonwhite teenagers in the labor force was unemployed, compared with about one out of every eight white teenagers. Since 1955, the jobless rate among nonwhite teenagers (both boys and girls) has risen faster than for white teenagers--up about 60 percent among nonwhites compared with a 30 percent rise for white teenagers.

"Nonwhite youths, both graduates of high school and dropouts, are primarily employed in low-paying service occupations and in farm labor jobs. Even when nonwhite youths have high school diplomas, their unemployment rate is about double that for white graduates."

* * * * *

Nonwhite Youngsters Leaving Rural Areas Faster Than White Youths

A much larger proportion of nonwhite youngsters are leaving rural areas than white youths. In 1950, about 1.3 million nonwhite young persons aged 10 through 19 were living in rural areas. By 1960, when this age group was 20-29 years old, there were only 642,000 in rural areas, a drop of 52 percent. The corresponding decline for white youths in rural areas was only 33 percent. Many of the 700,000 nonwhite youths who moved to urban areas were poorly equipped to meet the changing and more complex job requirements in urban centers. Their lack of training coupled with discrimination resulted in high unemployment rates for these youths. Community resources in urban centers for training these disadvantaged young persons are often inadequate and do not prepare them for the new types of jobs found in large cities.

(MORE)

The above is pointed out in the Department of Labor's Manpower Research Bulletin No. 3, "Young Workers: Their Special Training Needs."

* * * * *

The Negro Farmer Not a "Vanishing American"

The Negro farmer is apparently holding his own as part of the hard-core of southern American agriculture. Farm automation, rural unemployment, rural youth and worker migration to urban centers,and other conditions notwithstanding, he is one of the known and constant factors of our national economy.

Of the 271,599 Negro farmers in the South, for example, 127,283 are farm owners with more than 7 million acres and with land and buildings valued at $915,551,000. Negro farmers own 71,000 tractors, 76,000 trucks, 5,000 grain combines, and 3,000 corn pickers. In 1959, these famers produced $546 million worth of products.

"The modern young Negro farmer is progressive and trained, and will undoubtedly make his mark in American agriculture," reports Sherman Briscoe of the Office of Information, U.S. Department of agriculture, who makes periodic trips through the South, talking to and visiting with Negro farmers.

(MORE)

Commenting on his October trip through Alabama, Georgia, Mississippi, and South Carolina, Mr. Briscoe says: "Almost every farm had a tractor or two, grain combines were not uncommon, and some farmers either owned a mechanical cotton picker or hired one to harvest their crop. It seems to be hustle from the word go for the farmers I visited. They all want attractive homes, and many of them already have them. And they want an adequate income to assure a good education for their children. One young farmer told me he had $4,000 saved up toward his children's education, and another showed me a $7,000 bankbook earmarked for education.

"None of the farmers I visited was satisfied with one or two crops. Most of them grew a variety of crops and also raised livestock for market. And some either held off-farm jobs or were developing promising sideline enterprises."

Outstanding examples cited, include:

Pageland, S.C.--"I saw an unused school building being converted into a garment factory by a group of farmers. Eighty young women were in training for jobs in the farmers' enterprise which will specialize in children's clothing."

Georgia--"Thirty-eight-year-old Plezy Nelson of the Americus area has a $13,000 mechanical cotton picker that can harvest a bale or 1,500 pounds of seed cotton, an hour. After gathering his own crop, he had begun harvesting for neighbors at $2 a hundred, or about $240 a day."

Alabama--"Mrs. and Mrs. Ulysses Stanford of Abbeville, Alabama's merit farm family of the year, showed me $45,000 worth of modern equipment they own, including two peanut combines, to handle their 300 acres of peanuts, 100 acres of cotton, and 140 acres of corn."

(MORE)

Darlington, S.C.--"Thirty-seven-year-old Lawton Lynn, was building a small abattoir to supplement his income from cotton, tobacco, and truck crops. He expects to kill and dress 1,500 hogs for farmers in his county during the next 12 months. This would bring him about $10 a hog, or a total of $15,000 for the year."

Mississippi--"Thirty-four-year-old Edward Owens of Terry already has 100 brood cows in addition to his cotton crop, and buys and sells more than that number of cattle every year. He said he plans to level off with a herd of 200 head.

"His neighbor down the road, Samuel Smith, is shooting for a like number of cattle, while Mrs. Smith adds to the family income by driving the school bus."

Valdosta, Ga.--"Tuskegee-trained Joseph Register of Valdosta, Ga., builds homes throughout the county in addition to raising tobacco and cattle on his 165-acre farm."

Advancement of the Negro farmer toward economic stability may be credited in varying degree to factors including the Agriculture Department's Cooperative Extension Service with its on-the-farm and in-the-home educational program; the Farmer's Home Administration which has loaned Negro farmers more than $300 million in the past 26 years to buy land, build modern homes and purchase livestock and equipment; and the Soil Conservation Service which has helped them halt erosion and maintain land fertility. Added, must be such factors as the selfless devotion to duty of Negro farm demonstration agents, encouragement toward agricultural training given by such institutions as Tuskegee Institute, and the enthusiasm of some Negro farm youth for the 4-H program.

(MORE)

However, all is not perfection for the Negro farmer. There are those who feel that the successful Negro farmer is an exception to the rule and that Negro farmers are subject to any and all factors militating against farmers in general plus some peculiar ones based on racial prejudices.

Mr. Briscoe observes: "Unfortunately, all Negro farmers are not young and all do not have a head start. Many have moved too slowly and now are without the necessary land and equipment to farm efficiently and earn a satisfactory income."

In a recent study made by the Department of Agriculture's Economic Research Service ("Improving Economic Opportunities in Low Income Areas," prepared by Elmer J. Moore, Agricultural Economist, Underemployment and Low Income Investigations), it is observed in conclusion: "The real challenge is: How do we help the farmer and his family who finds himself 'boxed-in' and feels lost and helpless in rapidly changing times? How does the low income situation affect the educational attainments and aspirations of rural farm youth?"

For further information on the Negro farmer address inquiries to Sherman Briscoe, Office of Information, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D.C.

* * * * *

Secretary and Under Secretary to Speak on Equal Employment Opportunity

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz will address the Washington Urban League's Equal Opportunity Day Committee's 1963 Observance,

(MORE)

Mayflower Hotel, Washington, D.C., on Monday, November 18.

Under Secretary of Labor John F. Henning will address the Los Angeles Regional Conference on Equal Employment Opportunity, in Los Angeles, Calif., November 14.

# # # #

STATUS REPORT

November 12, 1963

Subcommittee on Migratory Labor

ENACTED INTO LAW

Public Law 87-692, Migrant Health Act. Signed into law September 25, 1962.
Appropriations to implement this law are as follows:
Fiscal year ending June 30, 1963 - $ 750,000 (Public Law 88-25, approved May 17, 1963)
Fiscal year ending June 30, 1964 - $2,000,000 (Public Law 88-136, approved October 11, 1963)

PASSED SENATE

		SENATE ACTION			STATUS IN HOUSE
		Hearings	Committee Action	Floor Action
S. 521	Education	April 10, 23 and 24	Reported from Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, with amendments, May 27, 1963	Passed Senate June 10, 1963	Pending before Committee on Education and Labor
S. 522	Day-care	April 10, 23, and 24	Reported from Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, with amendments, May 27, 1963	Passed Senate June 10, 1963	Pending before Committee on Education and Labor
S. 523	Child Labor	April 10, 23, and 24	Reported from Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, without amendment, May 27, 1963	Passed Senate June 11, 1963	Pending before Committee on Education and Labor
S. 524	Crew leader registration	April 10, 23, and 24	Reported from Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, with amendments, May 27, 1963	Passed Senate June 11, 1963	Pending before Committee on Education and Labor. A similar bill, H.R. 6242, was favorably reported by the House Education and Labor Committee on June 4, 1963, and is now pending before the Committee on Rules.
S. 525	National Advisory Council	April 10, 23, and 24	Reported from Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, with amendments, May 27, 1963	Passed Senate June 10, 1963	Pending before Committee on Education and Labor

PASSED SENATE (continued)

		SENATE ACTION			STATUS IN HOUSE
		Hearings	Committee Action	Floor Action
S. 526	Sanitation facilities	April 10, 23, and 24	Reported from Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, with amendments, May 27, 1963	Passed Senate June 10, 1963	Pending before Subcommittee on Public Health and Safety of Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce
S. 1703	Mexican farm labor program (P.L. 78) one-year extension	No hearings by Agriculture Committee Hearing by Migratory Labor Subcommittee, July 30, 1963	Reported from Committee on Agriculture, with amendment, August 6, 1963.	Passed Senate August 15, 1963, after adoption of amendment to protect U.S. farm workers.	Passed House October 31, 1963, without Senate amendment. The bill is now awaiting Senate action on the question of whether the Senate will agree to the House version or will insist on its amendment to protect U.S. workers. Previously, the House defeated a simple two-year extension, H.R. 5497, by a vote of 158 to 174, on May 29, 1963
S. 1321	National Service Corps	May 28 to June 19	Reported from Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, with amendments, July 31, 1963	Passed Senate August 14, 1963, with amendments	Pending before Committee on Education and Labor. Hearings on a companion bill, H.R. 5625, were concluded on September 12, 1963.

PENDING IN SENATE

		SENATE ACTION				Status of Companion House Bills
		Referred to	Hearings	Committee Action	Floor Action
S. 527	Voluntary Farm Employment Service	Migratory Labor Subcommittee	Concluded September 26, 1963	To be scheduled		Pending before Committee on Education and Labor
S. 528	Minimum Wage	Migratory Labor Subcommittee	To be scheduled			Pending before Committee on Education and Labor
S. 529	Collective Bargaining	Migratory Labor Subcommittee	To be scheduled			Pending before Committee on Education and Labor

PENDING IN SENATE (continued)

		SENATE ACTION
		Referred to	Hearings	Committee Action	Floor Action	Status of Companion House Bills
S. 981	Housing	Housing Subcommittee of Committee on Banking and Currency	October 15, 1963	To be scheduled
S. J. Res. 82	Residence requirements for voting	Constitutional Rights Subcommittee of Committee on Judiciary
S. 2260	Rapid tax amortization for farm labor housing	Committee on Finance

Labor

The New York Times Magazine

Do Corporations Have a Social Duty?

A corollary of the civil-rights controversy is renewed concern over the question whether corporate power should be exerted on one side of this—or any—public issue.

By ANDREW HACKER

ANSWERING charges that his company was not doing as much as it might to alleviate racial tensions in Birmingham, Ala., Roger M. Blough of United States Steel recently asserted that "for a corporation to attempt to exert any kind of economic compulsion to achieve a particular end in the social area seems to me to be quite beyond what a corporation should do." Moreover, he added, it was doubtful whether his company possessed sufficient power to influence attitudes on so controversial a subject as segregation in a Deep South community.

There has always been a running debate over whether corporations have "social responsibilities." But until now the dialogue has tended to be casual, even academic. Today, large companies are caught on the firing line amid the civil-rights controversy, and it is apparent that the easy answers of the past will have to be re-examined.

Traditionally the question has been whether a firm's sole obligation is to maximize its profits or whether it should expend some of its resources on improving the general quality of life in society. In recent years the notion that corporations should promote community welfare has become increasingly fashionable. The emphasis in business schools, management magazines and numberless conferences has been that a successful balance sheet is not enough.

"The modern large industrial corporation," a Ford vice president recently remarked, "holds power in trust for the whole community." Few are the executives who have not made at least one speech voicing similar sentiments. Yet the question remains: What social responsibilities are our corporations prepared to assume, and what are the consequences of such an interpretation of the corporate role likely to be?

THERE is, to be sure, a certain hardheadedness behind the "good citizen" concept. The donation of corporation facilities, money and personnel to community endeavors is often looked upon as a prudent investment. If companies work at building up a reservoir of public goodwill, the theory goes, there is less likely to be popular support for candidates and policies favoring government regulation of business. The image of a corporation that is selflessly dedicated to public service will, it is hoped, persuade voters and politicians that the nation's enterprise is best controlled by private hands.

Moreover, the current generation of managers seems anxious to bestow a mantle of legitimacy on both themselves and the companies over which they preside. In earlier days such legitimacy was secured simply by being an economic success, by outlasting one's competitors. With the transition from entrepreneurial to managerial control, however, burgeoning profits are not enough and hence the search for alternative means of imparting a moral justification to corporate power.

UNTIL now, most corporations have been content to define their social responsibilities in rather conventional ways. They make the expected gifts to universities, hospitals and recognized charities; executives are given time off to assist in community-chest drives, and company premises are made available for civic activities. On occasion some imagination is shown. One company undertakes to promote the fine arts, another has sponsored serious television dramas that are directed to a limited audience. But the point about all these exercises in civic and cultural virtue is that they are eminently uncontroversial. Everyone is in favor of helping liberal-arts colleges, cancer research and the Boy Scouts.

But now the nation's corporations are being confronted with some issues that cannot be handled on neutral ground. It is one thing to have the company treasurer write out a check for Cornell's centennial drive; it is quite another to line up behind Martin Luther King in Birmingham. Before asking whether a company like U. S. Steel is evading its social responsibilities, it would be well to consider whether corporations ought to be shouldering noneconomic obligations at all.

TO begin with, "corporation" is a shorthand way of referring to the handful of top executives who make company policy. When General Electric or General Motors takes a position it does not imply that either the employes or the stockholders have been consulted or would even necessarily approve. Top management is accountable chiefly to itself, for if the firm continues to be profitable there will be little or no outcry at the annual meetings. What is really being said is that corporations are far removed from being democratic institutions. Therefore, if companies are to exert an influence in the social or political arena they must be judged by aristocratic, not democratic, standards.

This was understood by Alexis de Tocqueville who, over 100 years ago, entitled one of the chapters of his "Democracy in America," "How an Aristocracy May Be Created by Manufacturers." (Continued on Page 116)

OUT OF REACH?—Homeward-bound steel workers. The attitudes they maintain beyond the plant gate, says the author, are not the corporation's business.

ANDREW HACKER is an associate professor of government at Cornell. He wrote "Political Theory: Philosophy, Ideology, Science."

For Those Who Are too Young to Remember

It's made exactly the way your grandmother pickled it—tender, tasty and loaded with crisp onion rings. There's only one difference: Vita Schmaltz Herring is ready to serve right from the jar.

VITA BRAND ®

OLD-FASHIONED PICKLED SCHMALTZ HERRING ©

ORDER BY MAIL OR PHONE EL 5-6687

WIDTHS TO FIT AAAAA TO C SIZES 6 TO 12

Rembrandt

The all-purpose-pump: genuine tapestry fabric in muted shades of Red, Blue, Gold, etc. that blend with any costume. 2¼ inch heel.

19.95
plus .50 pp

no extra charge for large sizes

mooney & gilbert INC.
17 WEST 57th STREET
N.Y.C.
FITTING THE NARROW HEEL

FREE CATALOG TM 1117 shows many other styles 5.45 to 29.93. Money back if returned unworn within 10 days.

STEEL TOWN—A street in Gary, Ind., with the stacks of a steel works looming in the background.

Do Corporations Have a Social Duty?

(Continued from Page 21)

The United States, he pointed out, did not have a hereditary ruling class, but he held out the possibility that businessmen would have the freedom of action and the presence of mind to promote the nation's welfare.

Furthermore, de Tocqueville saw that on many occasions such a business aristocracy would find itself running counter to majority opinion. For the general public does not always recognize its own best interest, and those who are able to detect society's higher good have the duty to use their power even against the democratic tide.

YET in applying de Tocqueville's prescription to the modern corporation one central fact emerges: In all cases corporate management will necessarily decide for itself which policies promote the best interests of society. For if company executives succumbed to popular pressure and majority opinion, they would cease to be aristocrats. If an aristocracy has any value it lies in its being impervious to public demands of the moment; the corollary is that those with power will know how it should best be used. In this light it may be asked how corporations have interpreted some of their responsibilities in recent years.

One company not only has taken an official stand favoring "right to work" laws but has worked openly for their adoption in various states. In 1958, $30,000 of company money was spent on a California referendum campaign against compulsory unionism. While it is true that a weakening of unions might bring economic gains for the corporation, it took the philosophical position that it was fighting for the rights of the minority who did not wish to be forced to bargain collectively. The company executives who took this position probably felt that they were promoting the moral interests of society, not just their own.

Several other corporations have devoted a good deal of energy to sponsoring programs aimed at awakening both their own employes and the general public to the danger of Communist subversion in this country. They have shown films, distributed pamphlets and conducted lectures stressing the extent of Soviet infiltration at home no less than abroad. Again, there is no doubting the sincerity of the executives who saw it as their social responsibility to dispel apathy and encourage vigilance.

Not a few corporations took it on themselves, without outside prompting, to discharge any employe who refused to cooperate with a legislative investigating committee. There were others that cancelled the contracts of television performers who had been "listed" as belonging to subversive organizations. The evidence is that those who made these decisions judged that they were performing a public service in removing from their payrolls individuals of doubtful loyalty.

THE civil-rights field itself provides an example of a corporation making social policy. For almost a decade now, since well before the current protests began, one large firm has been hiring and promoting Negroes to supervisory positions in its Memphis and Louisville plants. While these plants are not in the Deep South, there was nevertheless strong opposition from white employes, who threatened serious trouble if Negroes were upgraded.

However, management made it plain that its policy would be adhered to no matter whose sensibilities were shaken. Any wildcat strikes over Negro promotions would result in suspension and subsequent dismissals. The company had decided what was right, regardless of employe or community opinion, and proceeded to use its power to enforce those ideas.

THE obvious conclusion is that the men who manage our corporations have differing and highly personal conceptions of what constitutes social responsibility. Most seek to avoid controversial issues altogether, settling for the safe path of civic endeavor. Those who define their companies' responsibilities in broader terms are as likely as not to see no conflict between their personal preferences and the best interests of society. It is fruitless to protest that the policies of some corporations promote freedom and justice while those of others fail to safeguard basic values. If one company is to have the freedom to promote its racial ideas in Louisville and Memphis, then another must be allowed to pursue its economic theories in California and yet another its notions of civil liberties in Chicago.

What is ironic today is that the Americans who are calling on large corporations to exert their influence in Southern cities in the cause of civil rights are the very people who are uneasy about the presence of corporate power in our society.

The chief characteristic of such power, as the critics point out, is its degree of independence from public control. This being the case, there is no reason to expect that U. S. Steel or similarly located companies will take their opinions from outsiders when it comes to a highly charged question like civil rights. If corporations have power to exert in such areas they will exercise it as they see fit. The logical alterna-

(Continued on Page 118)

GIVE TITLEISTS

the premium is on service

That's right! You can count on service when you give personalized Titleists. Even during the hectic Christmas rush, Acushnet's service is prompt and reliable. And remember, you can't go wrong with Titleist, the leader in pro shop sales.

De luxe case of 1 dozen $14.85, ½ dozen $7.60. No personalizing on half dozens.

GIVE TITLEISTS, PERSONALIZED* with owner's name at no extra charge. Just print name and send it to us with check or money order.

BEST-LOOKING GIFT CASES EVER! — rich, dark green, gold-embossed, leather-like boxes with gleaming brass trim, rayon satin lining — a wonderful gift in itself.

ORDER NOW to assure Christmas delivery. Specify which Titleist — Titleist Regular or Titleist 100 or Titleist Red. Be sure to include your golf professional's name so we can credit him with the sale as Acushnet's policy is to sell through golf course pro shops only.

*Please remember, for personalizing, at least one dozen must be ordered for each name.

Dept NYTI, ACUSHNET PROCESS SALES COMPANY, NEW BEDFORD, MASS.

now study at home with the University of Wisconsin

The University of Wisconsin has added 55 liberal arts and professional courses for adults to its Correspondence Instruction Program. These courses were formerly available through the University of Chicago, which no longer maintains a home study department. Wisconsin will retain Chicago's study materials and home study instructors for these 55 courses.

If you are interested in personal correspondence instruction, we invite you to examine a description of these 55 liberal arts and professional courses, along with the rest of the Wisconsin curriculum of over 400 correspondence courses. You may select studies in the arts, sciences, humanities, or technical and professional fields for either academic credit or intellectual satisfaction. For more information write for the Correspondence Instruction Bulletin. There is no obligation.

Correspondence Instruction Program
University of Wisconsin Extension
Box T-3, Madison, Wisconsin 53706

(Continued from Page 116)

tive is to suggest that any political intervention on the part of corporations has no place in a democracy. This position, at least, has the virtue of consistency.

The tendency is for corporation executives to assume a pose of modesty when estimating the influence of their companies in local affairs. Nevertheless, it is common practice for the dominant employer in any industrial community to be consulted, often deferred to, when important decisions are being made. There is a close liaison between branch plant managers, the state capitol and city hall, the latter two checking with the former before going ahead on key policies.

MORE important are the unstated assumptions surrounding a corporation's decision to locate its plants in a particular locality. The chief determinant is, of course, economic; and this is as it should be. A company will select a location because of cheap or nonunion labor, proximity to market and related factors. At the same time, however, there is a tacit agreement on the part of management to accept the prevailing customs of the community. In the case of U. S. Steel in Birmingham this meant abiding by the principle of segregation. To be sure, the corporation was adjusting to a way of life that existed before it arrived on the scene. Nevertheless, it is clear that U. S. Steel's willingness to cooperate with the folkways of Birmingham actually served to strengthen those social patterns.

For this reason the company's officials cannot protest that they have been mere bystanders amid the racial controversy. It is not the only company that has found itself committed, at least by implication, to one of the two contending sides in the civil-rights struggle. If a corporation decides to go along with the dominant ideology of a region, that does not mean it must defend that ideology. It can and should justify its position solely on economic grounds. Moreover, if corporation executives find themselves involved in politics, on however informal a basis, they ought at least to explain their involvement by pointing out that this promotes the best interests of the company that has hired them.

AT all events, such informal arrangements are not uncommon. These are facts of industrial life, whether one is speaking of Birmingham, or Winston-Salem, N. C., or Youngstown, Ohio. Corporate management in such communities inevitably becomes part of the local power structure, and politics and economics cease being separate categories.

Yet there are limits to management's influence: Corporations can play a role in spurring urban renewal and school construction. But there are questions the public wants to decide for itself, and in these touchy areas elected politicians are forced to defer to popular opinion.

IN the Deep South, the white community has strong feelings that the races should be kept separate, and there is little room for maneuvering by a "power structure" on this issue. Even the plea that race tensions will harm the region economically can have little impact when emotions transcend interests. Therefore, U.S. Steel's protest that its power in Birmingham did not extend beyond the plant gates has some validity to it, at least on a question as inflamed as race relations.

Even on those occasions when corporations are able to bring influence to bear in local politics there remains the question of whether they ought to do so. The phrase "corporate citizen" has a certain appeal but it assumes that the voice of a corporation and that of ordinary voters may be listened to with equal deference by those who make policy. Democracy takes on a curious form when both corporations and citizens are regarded as equal participants in the political process. And once again it must be pointed out that if corporate intervention is sought and permitted on certain issues then this opens the door for further intrusions on questions where corporate executives hold less palatable views.

It may well be that corporations should drop all ideas about their supposed "social responsibilities," or at least confine their good works to community-chest drives, gifts to universities and playing fields for the Little League. Once companies begin to assume more grandiose and controversial obligations they will inevitably be judged by standards they are ill-equipped to meet.

PRESERVING civil rights and civil liberties, and promoting internal security and the general welfare, are the tasks of judges, politicians and the American people themselves. If corporations ought to be doing things they are not now doing—such as hiring Negroes on an equal basis with whites—then it is up to government to tell them so. The only responsibility of corporations is to make profits, thus contributing to a prosperous economic system.

While society is too complex for a rigid boundary to be drawn between the economic and the political spheres in everyday life, some line of demarcation ought to be acknowledged. Certainly the political rights of Americans ought not to depend on the occasional helping hand of our corporations. Such liberties are ends in themselves and not by-products of the productive process.

SAM SAVITT GUIDE TO HORSES

SAM SAVITT, Famous Equestrian Artist, has created this new guide to Horses and Ponies. 36 breeds are shown in full color. Portrayed FOR THE FIRST TIME is the Muscular Structure of the Galloping Horse, the Skeletal Structure of the Trotting Horse plus the essential Parts of the Horse... with vital informative text making this a treasure of knowledge for the horseman, as well as a handsome mounting for any wall. Printed in rich full color on heavy vellum 25" x 38". A perfect gift for horse lovers of all ages.

Price...$5.00 ppd.

Send for our new 24 page Christmas brochure aglow with the newest in riding clothes, accessories plus "horsey" gifts and Christmas cards.

MILLER'S
123 EAST 24 ST. N.Y. 10 • OR 7/0800

LOOKING for a way to stretch your stay in New York City?

Stay at Beekman Tower Hotel! It's so easy on your budget. In the exclusive residential East 40's, it's the only hotel on the East River ... offering unforgettable views of the city in every direction. And yet it's so near to everything of interest to you.

400 bright, cheerful outside rooms. "Personalized" service that reflects Midtown Manhattan at its very best. Even more economical family and weekend package rates. Special rates for groups.

Home of the famous "Top O' The Tower" Cocktail Lounge

Beekman Tower HOTEL
49th Street at First Avenue
(3 Mitchell Place, New York 17, U.S.A.)

Send for descriptive color folder and rates. (1)

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ Country _____

MEN'S CUSTOM TAILOR

Each suit is individually cut from customer's personal pattern and basted on raw canvas for try on and hand tailored to measure.

$74.50 & $84.50

Monday thru Saturday 9:00 AM to 5:30 PM

DE MANO

Factory: 8 Astor Pl. • OR 3-1200
Near 8 St. & Bdwy.

NEWS

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

W. Willard Wirtz, Secretary

WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST

Week of November 18, 1963

IN THIS ISSUE:

Secretary of Labor Wirtz Urges Building and Construction Trades to Face their Civil Rights Responsibilities

Secretary of Labor Wirtz Says Nonwhite Child Does Not Lack Ability, Only Opportunity

Special Assistant to the Secretary, Arthur Chapin, Addresses the New Orleans Urban League Motivation Conference

Secretary Wirtz Urges Building & Construction Trades to Face Their Civil Rights Responsibilities

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz, speaking to the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades Department convention held in New York City said:

"It is important and meaningful that the American labor movement, no less than the civil rights groups, and along with the Administration support vigorously and without reservation a Federal Fair Employment Practices Act.

"It is also essential that it be recognized that many of the criticisms of the building and construction trades' membership policies have been grievously unfair, in their generalization, to those unions which have either traditionally or more recently eliminated every vestige of racial discrimination.

"I respectfully urge your recognition of what I think are fair protests against the slow rate of progress in implementing the policies which have been adopted, and fair objections to some of the positions which have been taken in defense of the present situation.

(MORE)

"There are two large building trades locals here in New York City, with a total membership of about 4,500, and with no Negro members. A question exists as to whether another local with a membership of 3,300 has any Negro members. There are comparable situations in most other cities. The very different kind of record in other building trades locals does not answer the fair charge that in too many locals the announced policy of this Department and of the International Unions is not a reality in fact.

"A survey conducted earlier this year of Federal construction projects in some 50 cities showed that on most of these projects there were no Negroes employed, either as journeymen or as apprentices, in a majority of the skilled trades.

"It is no answer to this that a comparable situation exists in skilled occupations in other industries. We face, as a nation, the obligation to correct an acknowledged wrong; and a clear consensus has been reached that we are going to do it.

"The important questions are of ways and means.

"Some proposed short cuts are, as most of us view it, wrong.

"It is clear that quotas are wrong. No one in Government has proposed them.

"It is clear that the opening of trades and apprenticeship programs to all alike, without regard to their race, in no way implies or warrants reducing the skill levels of the crafts.

"There is argument about whether preferential hiring of Negroes, to counter-act the effect of previous discrimination against them, is now in order. I think it is not--if for no other reason than that such a policy will, as a practical matter, create opposition which will retard the overall process.

(MORE)

"But I am equally clear that where there are apprenticeship lists that contain no Negro names because they knew they didn't have a chance, those lists should be opened up on a fair basis. The argument that it is "just too bad" if Negroes didn't apply, is not a fair argument. And the claim that this will prevent the following of father-and-son practices that have a justification we all recognize is a false argument, for there are few if any situations in which the necessary adjustments cannot be made to serve all interests involved if there is the sincere purpose to do so.

"There has been the suggestion that the Government's program for promoting sound apprenticeship systems cannot properly be used to foster nondiscriminatory programs, and there is criticism of the insistence that Federal construction projects be carried out on an equal opportunity basis. Yet it must be recognized--not only as a matter of law but of fundamental principle--that the Government is the agent of all Americans and cannot properly favor any above any others.

"I want to return, finally, to the earlier suggestion that there is a close relationship between "fair employment" and "full employment." I think there would be in this country today almost complete acceptance in practice of the fair employment principle if there were in fact full employment.

"It may very well be that the present problem is substantially misstated when we put it in terms of racial discrimination. I have the strong impression that there are today very few Americans--some, but very few-- who object to working with someone of a different race. It is not that an American worker says today 'I don't want a Negro to get a job working with me.' What he says is 'I don't want anybody to get my job.'"

(MORE)

* * * * *

Secretary Wirtz Says Nonwhite Child Does Not Lack Ability, Only Opportunity

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz, speaking before the National Committee on Employment of Youth and calling for "emergency measures" in combatting youth unemployment, said of minority group youth:

"We are approaching the point where the key element in what we call racial discrimination is the denial of motivation to the nonwhite child. It isn't lack of ability. If there was inequality of opportunity before--and there was--this inequality is being rapidly reduced. What remains is primarily that form of discrimination, or disadvantage, which puts him at his desk in the first grade with no more motivation than what he brings from a home which was blighted by discrimination.

"Rather than a race problem it is more a poverty problem. There are about 11 million youngsters in this country today who are members of families whose annual family incomes are less than $3,000. We must some way break the cycle of their disillusionment, and get through to them the fact that they can push open doors in what they know only as walls.

"A distressingly large number of boys and girls are isolated, more dangerously than we realize, from the healthy society we know. Many of them have in a very real sense inherited their present condition--not through human genes, but through the social and economic genes of slums, broken homes, discrimination, and a poverty that snuffs out the essential spark of motivation. A boy whose father has not been able to support his family thinks of welfare payments and unemployment compensation as a way of life. He actually knows nothing of what work really is, or nothing at least of the dignity and satisfaction of it.

(MORE)

"It is not only the absence of the roots of family life that causes these young reeds to be shaken in the winds. It is often also the absence of any other effective social organizations; no union, for they have no jobs, no church, for poverty inhibits the building of churches as it does living by our moral code. A boy finds that only gangs made up of others like himself will welcome him. He may face, ironically, the alternative of a disciplined life in crime or an aimless existence of marginal employment.

"We don't know how to speak to these youth. As our experience in life has not been theirs, so neither are our language nor our customs, nor our dress, nor our goals theirs.

"The person who is best able to stop the minority-group inheritance of poverty and ignorance is the teacher. She can take the boy or girl who comes into her classroom knowing no reason to try--because life at home offers no reason--and give that handicapped child the motivation which the American majority has as its birthright. But this won't happen in classrooms in which one teacher faces 40 children, and works through a course of study based on the fallacious assumption that they are all going on to college. Today's educational system is designed for winners, and it ignores losers--perhaps because we don't like to admit there are losers in our society.

"Think what would happen in this country if we declared war on ignorance--by elevating the standards of teachers to the levels the importance of their job demands, by paying them the salaries which the required skills would warrant, by cutting the students-to-teachers ratio to the point good sense would require, by building the schoolrooms which are needed, and by giving every child in the country the educational opportunity--from first grade through college--which a few have today. Education would become our largest economic enterprise, as it ought to be. This would, in itself, create full employment. It would wipe out ignorance. It would virtually end the intolerance and bigotry of racial and religious discrimination. It would give young Americans the skills they need in an automated work force, and the broader knowledge a working majority of people must have if a government by the people is to make sense in a world where most of nature's forces are now being brought within human control."

(MORE)

* * * * *

Arthur Chapin Addresses the Greater New Orleans Urban League Conference

Excerpts from an address by Arthur A. Chapin, Special Assistant to the Secretary of Labor before a Motivation Workshop and Conference by the Greater New Orleans Urban League at Xavier University in New Orleans:

"Your chosen them: 'Education--The Negro's Tool for Economic Advancement During the Critical 60's,' is very timely, and of great importance to all of us.

"Let us send our children into the employment arena with a chance for survival.

"What a shame, what a wasted opportunity it is, when the employer finally says 'Yes, I won't discriminate, I'll look for Negroes for these jobs,' and none is available.

"For example, only one out of 100 engineers in the United States is a Negro--we have lost a golden opportunity.

(MORE)

"As we in the Department of Labor see the picture, education for today's youth cannot be overly stated, particularly for Negro boys and girls. For the man who has not completed grade school will earn $100,000 less in his lifetime than the high school graduate; the high school grade will earn $140,000 less than the college graduate. The youth who completes one of our retraining projects will earn as a result, $50,000 more in his lifetime.

"The Negro with an elementary school education is likely to have an income of $3,400 while the high school graduate is likely to have an income of $4,600 and those with a college degree will probably earn $7,900. Education does pay off. It is worth struggling for, sacrificing for.

"Let me make this same point in other terms. The unemployment rate for workers between 25 and 54 who have less than a grade school education is twice as high as the rate for high school graduates and four times as high as the rate for workers with some college education.

"Let me give you the same figures but for young Negroes only. One out of every 3 Negro youths with only an eighth grade education is unemployed compared with one out of 6 for the high school graduate and one out of 8 for those with one or more years of college. And note that less than one out of 22 Negroes over 24 years of age with one or more years of college is unemployed.

"The more education a Negro gets, the nearer his income approaches that of the white. The Negro elementary school graduate gets only 68 percent of the income of the white with the same education; this increases to 71 percent for the Negro high school graduate and to 85 percent for the Negro college graduate.

(MORE)

"Keep in mind that these fitures are based on the situation today. As automation increases, as jobs become even more complex, the relative income of the uneducated will become lower and their unemployment rate will become higher. There is no future for the unskilled, unschooled worker. Blue collar jobs are expected to increase by only 14 percent in the 60's, and these will be mainly skilled jobs requiring an education, but white collar jobs will increase by 30 percent.

"An interesting and significant development is the interest of the white student in attending colleges which were formerly all Negro; Lincoln University in Missouri reports more than 500 white students and West Virginia State College is now evenly split between Negroes and whites.

"More barriers are breaking down. For the first time in history, three outstanding medical schools with southern traditions--Johns Hopkins, Duke, and Emory, have admitted Negroes on a competitive basis. Each of them had won a National Medical Fellowshop.

"What has the Government done? Many things.

"For the first time in American history, we have a positive program to get more qualified Negroes into the Federal Government, and to get them into better jobs.

"The percentage of Negroes in responsible positions in the U.S. Department of Labor has doubled--a 100 percent increase in less than three years. In many places in the Government, for the first time in history, there are Negroes in supervisory jobs and in management jobs.

"One of the most important activities of the Department of Labor related to the theme of this meeting is in advising schools and colleges which Negroes attend on the educational requirements to increase their employability. Under the auspices of the Secretary of Labor, we conducted conferences at four locations this winter and spring where the top officials of Negro colleges and the Federal Government met so that college officials could discuss their curriculum, counseling, and placement needs in order to increase the utilization of their students.

(MORE)

"The same Federal leadership applies to Federal Government contractors. They are no longer allowed to say that they have no Negroes because no Negroes applied; they are no longer allowed to say that they have Negroes only in menial jobs because no trained Negroes are available.

"We have another special training program that can mean a lot to the Negro--training done under the Manpower Development and Training Act. More than 20 percent of all trainees in this program are Negroes. We have, for example, recently completed work with the Ingalls Shipbuilding Corporation in Mississippi to provide training under this Act for people in low-level jobs to qualify them for skilled jobs.

"It is now the firm policy of the U.S. Department of Labor to insure that the employment services of the States operate on a nondiscriminatory basis; that they will not accept orders from employers which prescribe race or color and that they will not refer applicants on this basis.

"We have recently established procedures to insure that we do not certify apprenticeship programs that discrimination; more important, our field representatives have a mandate from the Secretary of Labor to promote equal opportunity on a positive basis."

# # # #

NEWS

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

W. Willard Wirtz, Secretary

WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST

Week of November 25, 1963

IN THIS ISSUE:

President Kennedy Says Economic Security -- Jobs -- Paramount Issue

Secretary Wirtz Says Unemployment a Cause of "Negro Revolt" in North

Training Program for 100 Underqualified Washington Negro Youth Announced

Secretary Wirtz Deplores "Preferential Treatment" and "Quotas"

Next Federal Service Entrance Examinations Scheduled

President Kennedy Says Economic Security -- Jobs -- Paramount Issue

President John F. Kennedy, speaking before the 5th Constitutional Convention of the AFL-CIO in New York City emphasized the importance of education and civil rights but concluded that the most important current issue is jobs.

"I say that economic security is the number one issue today. It is not so recognized by everyone. There are those who oppose the tax cut, the youth employment bill, who oppose more money for depressed areas and job retraining, and other public needs. And they are powerful and articulate. They are campaigning on a platform of so-called individual initiative. They talk loudly of deficits and socialism, but they do not have a single constructive job-creating program of their own, and they oppose the efforts that we are making. And I do not believe that selling the TVA is a program to put people to work. There are those who support our effort for jobs but say it isn't the number one issue. Some may say that civil rights is the number one issue. This nation needs the passage of our bill, if we are to fulfill our constitutional obligations, but no one gains from a fair employment program bill if there is no employment to be had; no one gains by being admitted to a lunch counter if he has no money to spend; no one gains from attending a better school if he doesn't have a job after graduation. No one thinks much of the right to own a good home and to sleep in a good hotel or go to the theater if he has no work and no money. The civil rights legislation is important. But to make that legislation effective we need jobs in the United States."

(MORE)

* * * * * * * *

Secretary Wirtz Says Unemployment a Cause of "Negro Revolt" in North

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz told the AFL-CIO Constitutional Convention in New York that "it is clear that unemployment is an important precipitating cause of the Negro revolt, especially in the North." The protest against "discrimination", he said, "is in many places a protest most directly against the fact that Negroes, especially in the younger age groups, are bearing more and more of the brunt of unemployment. On the other side, it is the fear of unemployment that makes too many people oppose in practice what they accept in principle about equality of opportunity: not because they don't want to work with Negroes; they would be glad to; but they are afraid that equal employment rights will mean more competition for their own jobs."

* * * * * * * *

Training Program for 100 Underqualified Washington Negro Youth Announced

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz announced at the Washington Urban League's Equal Opportunity Day Observance that "100 Washington youngsters will have a chance to upgrade their skills so that they may become apprentice carpenters" under an MDTA experimental and demonstration project "initiated by the labor movement."

(MORE)

The program will train 100 underqualified youth for the purpose of upgrading them to the apprenticeship job entry level. The majority of the trainees will be out-of-school out-of-work Negro youth ranging in age from 17 to 21, who would not be able to qualify for apprenticeship without the type of training they will receive in the "TFA" program.

"The value of the project," the Secretary said, "is that it will preserve the standards of apprenticeship training, while opening doors to new opportunities for youngsters who otherwise would be facing the blind alley of the unskilled."

Trainees will be selected by the Joint Carpentry and Apprenticeship Council on the basis of aptitude for carpentry. Academic preparation will not be considered in making selections. Those selected will be given union cards and will begin work immediately. While receiving work training, they will also be given related classroom instruction in the D. C. public schools. The educational courses taken by trainees may lead to the granting of high school diplomas for some. Those who complete the TFA program are guaranteed apprenticeship status.

This program, "Training for Apprenticeship," was developed as the first of a series of pilot projects by the National Institute for Labor Education in cooperation with the Labor Department. The Institute, working through labor unions will assist in preparing untrained and inexperienced youth for skilled jobs by providing useful work experience, training opportunities and special counseling programs.

* * * * * * * *

Secretary Wirtz Deplores "Preferential Treatment" and "Quotas"

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz, addressing the Washington Urban League's Equal Opportunity Day Observance, said in part:

(MORE)

"My thinking today is particularly of equal opportunity in the field of employment. This is partly because of the nature of my own responsibilities, and partly because I think the equal right to work is perhaps closest to the surface -- if not the heart -- of a great many of today's long overdue current demands. Perhaps this is becuase equality in employment presents some of the hardest problems which lie ahead.

"I mention only a few of the key factors here.

"There will be loss, not gain, from any person's demanding or receiving a job for which he is not qualified.

"Honest and sincere men reach different conclusions about whether previous discrimination warrants preference now -- to 'even things up.' My own strongly held view is that such preference could be justified only on an assumption that this is a matter of competition between two sides. It isn't, and there is great importance in avoiding and eliminating any mistaken grouping along color lines. The victims of preference would be individual human beings, and more likely than not today, persons who are themselves opposed to discrimination.

"To think in terms of 'quotas' is again to think in terms of two groups, which is the thing to be avoided. I believe strongly in the necessity of a Federal fair employment practices act, but surely such a law must be written in terms of the absolute of equality, with no exceptions of any kind.

"To believe in equality of opportunity except as it increases competition for one's own job is selfish hypocrisy. Discrimination is no less ugly for its being inspired by self-interest, entirely unrelated to racial prejudice.

Nor can it be questioned that 'more than equality' is not only justified but is required so far as preparation for opportunity is concerned.

(MORE)

There is no unfair hurting of someone else if preference in education is accorded those who have been previously disadvantaged. Here there is only the necessary compensation for the ravages of a century of unfairness."

* * * * * * * *

Next Federal Service Entrance Exams Scheduled

Entrance examinations intended primarily for young persons looking forward to government service career in one of 60 fields are now being held. Applications for the next examination must be received by December 19 at the nearest Civil Service Regional Office. Application forms may be obtained from post offices, college placement offices, and U.S. Civil Service Commission Regional Offices. Further information is also available from the U.S. Civil Service Commission, Washington, D.C. 20415.

# # # # # # #

ALONG FREEDOM ROAD

Lets Be Human 11/63

Labor

* Mergers of Negro and white union locals in the same communities have been successfully accomplished by the Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers in Atlanta, Ga. and Jacksonville, Fla.; by the Aluminum Workers in Sheffield, Ala.; the Machinists in Norfolk, Va.; the Iron Workers and Painters in Charleston, S.C.; and the United Textile Workers in Danville, Va.

* As a result of union pressure for desegregated conventions, hotels in Little Rock, Ark.; Norfolk, Richmond and Roanoke, Va.; Sarasota, Fla.; Gatlinburg, Tenn. and Houston, Texas have opened their facilities to Negro and white union delegates.

* The Glass Bottle Blowers Association in Jacksonville, Fla., unable to find integrated facilities in the city, is building its own union hall.

* A study of 75 firms backing the President's Plans for Progress revealed that Negroes had gained 11,274 new positions instead of only the 1,784 new jobs normally anticipated. Vice President Lyndon B. Johnson said this "dramatic progress" represented 25 per cent of all new positions in the 75 firms from June to December. In the past, non-whites would have accounted for less than three per cent of the jobs.

* A four-hour strike at the Coca Cola Bottling Company in Indianapolis, Indiana won integration of the locker rooms. The 117 plant employees are members of Local 1096 of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Workers Union. About half are Negro and half white.

* The American Tobacco Company plant, organized by Local 15 of the Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Workers Union, in Charleston, S. C., has desegregated all plant facilities. A new contract wipes out all wage differentials and departmental segregation of workers in the plant based on race and provides for plant-wide integration by eliminating racially separate lines of promotion and senority.

* The Manhattan Shirt Company plant in Charleston, S. C., organized by the Amalgamated Clothing Workers, is also desegregated.

* Madison Avenue has discovered the Negro. A major breakthrough has been made in the use of Negro models in newspaper and television ads and commercials. Among the companies employing Negroes in their ads are Macy's, Colgate-Palmolive Company, Trans-World Airlines, Equitable Life Assurance Society, New York Telephone Company, Manufacturers Hanover Trust Company, Lever Bros. and various breweries.

* The Tobacco Workers International Union has merged ten separate locals into five integrated locals in Richmond, Va.; Reidsville, N. C. and Louisville, Kentucky.

LIR, LPK, LNP, CCD, MMCCD, ILG, LPKE, LBH

Research Department
Southern Regional Council, Inc.
5 Forsyth Street, N. W.
Atlanta 3, Georgia

Bulk Rate
U. S. Postage
PAID
Permit No. 154
RALEIGH, N. C.

North Carolina Labor and Industry

Monthly Bulletin of the DEPARTMENT OF LABOR, Frank Crane, Commissioner

Vol. XXX RALEIGH, NORTH CAROLINA, NOVEMBER, 1963 No. 11

PRESSURE RELIEF VALVES WILL PREVENT EXPLOSION OF HOT WATER VESSELS

By S. F. Harrison,
Chief Boiler Inspector

The average person thinks of a hot water tank as a harmless object which, once installed for convenience, may be forgotten for a lifetime.

As for hot water boilers, they are usually considered as a necessary evil if hand fired. The automatically fired type is regarded as a very convenient piece of equipment which, it is hoped, will never break down and — since the word "automatic" appears in the classification—will require no attention or maintenance.

If we could rely completely on the word "automatic" to mean just that, this optimistic hope might be justified; once installed, the so-called automatic unit would never require any further attention on our part. Unfortunately, this is not the case. The lifetime of many of these units —and of persons in their vicinity—has been considerably shortened by such thinking.

If the source of heat gets out of control, and "runs away", the hot water tank or boiler can, and all too frequently does, explode with a blast of steam which will demolish a good-sized and well built building. The consequences to any persons in the building may be disastrous.

Few people realize the tremendous potential energy stored in high temperature water when the pressure is suddenly released. Water in an open container boils at 212 degrees Fahrenheit at sea level. If, however, we make the container tight and the water is under pressure, the boiling point increases as the pressure increases until, at 100 pounds per square inch, the boiling point becomes slightly over 338 degrees Fahrenheit. Sudden release of the pressure to atmospheric pressure releases the excess heat in the water.

For example, a 125-gallon tank containing water heated to 300 degrees Fahrenheit would release about the same amount of energy as that in five pounds of nitroglycerine.

A further example to illustrate the potential hazard is that water heated to temperatures much above the boiling point at atmospheric pressure (212 degrees Fahrenheit) will expand in a tremendous blast of flash steam if the pressure is suddenly released by failure of the tank or boiler. A portion of each cubic foot of water will flash almost instantly into steam with an extremely large volume increase: about 1,700 to 1. No house, building, basement, mill room, or factory is built with walls and roof designed to withstand this pressure.

The North Carolina Boiler Law (Rules and Regulations, Sections 5 through 8) requires that every hot water heating boiler or tank shall have at least one officially rated pressure relief valve set to relieve at or below the maximum allowable working pressure of the boiler.

Each hot water supply boiler or tank must have at least one officially rated pressure relief valve or pressure-temperature relief valve of the automatic-reseating type set to relieve at or below the maximum allowable working pressure of the boiler or tank.

Every self-contained, direct-fired service water heater and unfired hot water supply tank also must be equipped with an officially rated pressure relief valve and/or pressure-temperature relief valve of the automatic-reseating type set to relieve at or below the maximum allowable working pressure of the vessel.

Whatever type of officially rated A.S.M.E. and N. B. relief valve is used, it should have sufficient capacity to relieve the maximum heat input of the unit. These rules specify that a relief valve shall not be smaller than ¾-inch, nor larger than 4 and ½-inches standard pipe size. The rules further specify that such valves shall be located on the top of the unit with the spindle vertical and with no shutoff valves between the relief valve and the unit.

(Continued on page 2)

EMPLOYMENT AND EARNINGS REACH ALL-TIME HIGH IN NORTH CAROLINA DURING OCTOBER

Both non-farm employment and average weekly earnings of factory workers climbed to an all-time high in North Carolina during October.

1,321,200 Tar Heels were at work in nonagricultural jobs during October — a gain of 900 over the previous record high set in September and 26,000 higher than in October, 1962.

Average weekly earnings in all manufacturing rose to $70.30. This was the first time earnings of Tar Heel factory workers had ever reached the $70.00 mark.

Factory employment totaling 557,500 in October, although down 1,100 from the September high, was up 6,200 above the October, 1962 level.

Nonmanufacturing jobs, totaling 763,700 in October, were up 2,000 from September and were 19,800 higher than in October, 1962.

The State's non-farm employment usually reaches its peak during September, due to large seasonal job increases in tobacco stemmeries and public school openings.

That employment reached an even higher level in October this year was due mainly to two factors:

(1) Tobacco stemmery employment usually drops at least 5,000 from September to October. However, the stemmery jobs dropped only 2,000 in the same period this year.

(2) Steady advances have been made in employment in several durable goods industries during the past year, and these advances continued during October.

Industries reporting October job increases included retail trade 2,000, public schools 1,800, and apparel manufacturing 500. Other increases of 200 each were reported by the lumber, furniture, textile and chemical industries, and by finance, insurance and real estate firms. Job gains of about 100 each were reported by fabricated metals, electrical machinery, and two groups of smaller durable and nondurable goods industries.

Partly offsetting these job gains were decreases of 2,000 in tobacco stemmeries, 1,300 in construction, 500 in cigarette manufacturing, 200 in machinery firms, and 100 each in printing, wholesale trade, service industries, and transportation, communications and public utilities.

Average hourly earnings of the State's 557,500 factory workers climbed a penny to an October average of $1.69. The all-time high average weekly earnings of $70.30 were due mostly to a 0.8-hour increase in the factory workweek to a 41.6-hour average for October. The previous high for weekly earnings was the $68.71 average reported for September this year.

NORTH CAROLINA

Labor and Industry

Issued Each Month by the
NORTH CAROLINA DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
P. O. Box 1151
Raleigh, N. C.

Sent Free Upon Request

FRANK CRANE
Commissioner of Labor
ALMON BARBOUR Editor

Vol. XXX November, 1963 No. 11

OCTOBER BUILDING UP 10 PER CENT IN 36 TAR HEEL CITIES

Building permits totaling $25,065,947 were issued in 36 North Carolina cities of more than 10,000 population during October.

The October building total was nearly 10 per cent higher than the $22,814,944 reported by the same cities in October, 1962.

Permits totaling $213,876,670 were issued by the cities during the first ten months of 1963. This represented a 3.5 per cent gain over the $206,684,866 reported during the same period last year.

City building totals for October were: Albemarle $28,770, Asheboro $68,975, Asheville $892,937, Burlington $646,620, Chapel Hill $567,675, Charlotte $7,126,193, Concord $65,985, Durham $980,982, Elizabeth City $51,700, Fayetteville $1,157,078, Gastonia $1,156,950, Goldsboro $496,310, Greensboro, $2,652,173, Greenville $310,804, Henderson $98,311, Hickory $257,963, High Point $860,343, Jacksonville $76,300, Kinston $163,337, Lenoir $654,024, Lexington $200,165, Lumberton $193,200, Monroe $526,000, New Bern $127,294, Raleigh $2,965,259, Reidsville $24,850, Roanoke Rapids $153,972, Rocky Mount $334,643, Salisbury $211,300, Sanford $61,015, Shelby $87,200, Statesville $332,771, Thomasville $139,995, Wilmington $204,055, Wilson $148,500, Winston-Salem $1,042,298.

City totals for the first ten months of this year were: Albemarle $575,139, Asheboro $1,646,134, Asheville $10,049,487, Burlington $3,977,294, Chapel Hill $4,161,439, Charlotte $46,187,623, Concord $1,119,419, Durham $13,974,724, Elizabeth City $3,089,606, Fayetteville $8,938,512, Gastonia $6,822,975, Goldsboro $3,454,568, Greensboro $24,043,493, Greenville $4,545,579, Henderson $1,213,307, Hickory $2,177,885, High Point $7,353,612, Jacksonville $1,297,165, Kinston $2,484,433, Lenoir $1,713,051, Lexington $1,451,648, Lumberton $1,420,150, Monroe $1,239,800 New Bern $1,379,291, Raleigh $21,198,026, Reidsville $868,644, Roanoke Rapids $1,426,017, Rocky Mount $3,708,357, Salisbury $2,956,583, Sanford $744,374, Shelby $1,648,740, Statesville $2,759,879, Thomasville $1,934,358, Wilmington $3,665,697, Wilson $3,065,825, Winston-Salem $15,583,836.

PRESSURE RELIEF VALVE

(Continued from page 1)

From the foregoing, it should be obvious that it is not only wise but essential to provide such installations with relief devices of adequate capacity to prevent overpressure. Relief valves and safety valves should be tested by hand, under pressure, at least every seven days.

FACTORY EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN CHARLOTTE AND GREENSBORO-HIGH POINT AREAS — OCTOBER, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS		AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month (thous) 4	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
CHARLOTTE AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	28.0	27.9	28.2	+ 0.4	— 0.7	$ 76.31	$ 75.76	$ 75.12	41.7	41.4	42.2	$1.83	$1.83	$1.78
Food & Kindred Products	4.1	4.1	4.1	...	...	75.60	76.48	70.73	43.7	43.7	42.1	1.73	1.75	1.68
Bakery	2.1	2.1	2.1	...	...	79.55	80.41	77.83	43.0	43.0	43.0	1.85	1.87	1.81
Textile Mills Products	6.2	6.3	6.6	— 1.6	— 6.1	67.30	65.21	69.32	41.8	40.5	43.6	1.61	1.61	1.59
Broadwoven Fabrics	2.4	2.4	2.4	...	...	71.45	69.83	78.85	41.3	40.6	44.8	1.73	1.72	1.76
Knitting Mills	2.2	2.2	2.6	...	...	66.30	61.78	63.47	42.5	39.6	42.6	1.56	1.56	1.49
Furniture & Fixtures	.9	.9	1.0	...	—15.4	85.70	85.68	89.38	41.4	40.8	43.6	2.07	2.10	2.05
Paper & Allied Products	1.4	1.4	1.4	...	—10.0	84.29	82.97	75.83	43.9	43.9	42.6	1.92	1.89	1.78
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	2.3	2.3	2.1	...	...	97.29	93.79	...7...	41.4	40.6	...7...	2.35	2.31	2.25
Chemicals & Allied Products	2.9	2.8	2.6	+ 3.6	+ 9.5	65.77	63.80	68.20	40.6	38.9	42.1	1.62	1.64	1.62
Metal Products	2.3	2.3	2.3	...	+11.5	81.59	83.80	80.56	41.0	41.9	41.1	1.99	2.00	1.96
Machinery	3.2	3.2	3.1	...	...	79.46	81.56	78.20	41.6	42.7	42.5	1.91	1.91	1.84
Other Manufacturing Industries[1]	4.7	4.6	5.0	+ 2.2	+ 3.2	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
— 6.0
GREENSBORO - HIGH POINT AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	43.5	43.5	44.1	— 1.4		$ 68.78	$ 71.42	$ 66.08	39.3	39.9	39.1	$1.75	$1.79	$1.69
Food & Kindred Products	2.9	3.0	2.9	— 3.3	...	72.60	75.28	70.36	44.0	45.9	45.1	1.65	1.64	1.56
Bakery Products	.8	.8	.8	...	...	78.72	76.78	76.65	45.5	44.9	45.9	1.73	1.71	1.67
Textile Mill Products	15.8	15.7	16.5	+ 0.6	— 4.2	61.45	60.59	58.30	37.7	37.4	36.9	1.63	1.62	1.58
Knitting Mills	6.1	6.1	6.6	...	— 7.6	52.90	53.05	52.27	34.8	34.9	35.8	1.52	1.52	1.46
Apparel	3.8	3.8	3.9	...	— 2.6	58.74	60.80	...7...	38.9	40.0	37.6	1.51	1.52	...7...
Lumber & Wood Products (Except Furn.)	1.2	1.2	1.1	...	+ 9.1	67.30	65.94	63.05	43.7	43.1	42.6	1.54	1.53	1.48
Furniture	6.8	6.8	6.8	...	...	71.28	72.09	69.12	40.5	40.5	40.9	1.76	1.78	1.69
HH Furniture	5.9	5.9	5.9	...	...	71.24	72.22	68.80	39.8	39.9	40.0	1.79	1.81	1.72
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	1.3	1.3	1.3	...	...	86.55	84.96	...7...	39.7	38.1	...7...	2.18	2.23	2.15
Chemicals	1.4	1.4	1.4	...	...	84.23	87.55	89.89	40.3	42.5	44.5	2.09	2.06	2.02
Stone, Clay & Glass Products	.9	.9	.9	...	...	83.04	86.80	75.37	48.0	49.6	44.6	1.73	1.75	1.69
Metal Products	2.2	2.2	2.1	...	+ 4.8	72.39	77.04	...7...	40.9	42.8	...7...	1.77	1.80	1.72
Machinery (Except Electrical)	.9	.9	.9	...	...	92.00	87.99	...7...	43.6	41.9	41.3	2.11	2.10	...7...
Other Manufacturing Industries[2]	6.3	6.3	6.3	...	...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...

[1] Includes: Apparel; Lumber; Rubber; Leather; Stone, Clay and Glass; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Tobacco; Paper; Rubber; Leather; Electrical Machinery; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[3] Preliminary.
[4] Data Not Available.

EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN NONAGRICULTURAL INDUSTRIES IN NORTH CAROLINA — OCTOBER, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS		AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month[4] (thous)	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago

FACTORY EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN CHARLOTTE AND GREENSBORO-HIGH POINT AREAS — OCTOBER, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month (thous) 4	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month 4	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
CHARLOTTE AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	28.0	27.9	28.2	+ 0.4	— 0.7	$ 76.31	$ 75.76	$ 75.12	41.7	41.4	42.2	$1.83	$1.83	$1.78
Food & Kindred Products	4.1	4.1	4.1	.....	.....	75.60	76.48	70.73	43.7	43.7	42.1	1.73	1.75	1.68
Bakery	2.1	2.1	2.1	.....	.....	79.55	80.41	77.83	43.0	43.0	43.0	1.85	1.87	1.81
Textile Mills Products	6.2	6.3	6.6	— 1.6	— 6.1	67.30	65.21	69.32	41.8	40.5	43.6	1.61	1.61	1.59
Broadwoven Fabrics	2.4	2.4	2.4	.....	.....	71.45	69.83	78.85	41.3	40.6	44.8	1.73	1.72	1.76
Knitting Mills	2.2	2.2	2.6	.....	—15.4	66.30	61.78	63.47	42.5	39.6	42.6	1.56	1.56	1.49
Furniture & Fixtures	.9	.9	1.0	.....	—10.0	85.70	85.68	89.38	41.4	40.8	43.6	2.07	2.10	2.05
Paper & Allied Products	1.4	1.4	1.4	.....	.....	84.29	82.97	75.83	43.9	43.9	42.6	1.92	1.89	1.78
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	2.3	2.3	2.1	.....	+ 9.5	97.29	93.79	...7...	41.4	40.6	...7...	2.35	2.31	2.25
Chemicals & Allied Products	2.9	2.8	2.6	+ 3.6	+11.5	65.77	63.80	68.20	40.6	38.9	42.1	1.62	1.64	1.62
Metal Products	2.3	2.3	2.3	.....	.....	81.59	83.80	80.56	41.0	41.9	41.1	1.99	2.00	1.96
Machinery	3.2	3.2	3.1	.....	+ 3.2	79.46	81.56	78.20	41.6	42.7	42.5	1.91	1.91	1.84
Other Manufacturing Industries[1]	4.7	4.6	5.0	+ 2.2	— 6.0	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
GREENSBORO - HIGH POINT AREA
TOTAL MANUFACTURING	43.5	43.5	44.1	.....	— 1.4	$ 68.78	$ 71.42	$ 66.08	39.3	39.9	39.1	$1.75	$1.79	$1.69
Food & Kindred Products	2.9	3.0	2.9	— 3.3	.....	72.60	75.28	70.36	44.0	45.9	45.1	1.65	1.64	1.56
Bakery Products	.8	.8	.8	.....	.....	78.72	76.78	76.65	45.5	44.9	45.9	1.73	1.71	1.67
Textile Mill Products	15.8	15.7	16.5	+ 0.6	— 4.2	61.45	60.59	58.30	37.7	37.4	36.9	1.63	1.62	1.58
Knitting Mills	6.1	6.1	6.6	.....	— 7.6	52.90	53.05	52.27	34.8	34.9	35.8	1.52	1.52	1.46
Apparel	3.8	3.8	3.9	.....	— 2.6	58.74	60.80	...7...	38.9	40.0	37.6	1.51	1.52	...7...
Lumber & Wood Products (Except Furn.)	1.2	1.2	1.1	.....	+ 9.1	67.30	65.94	63.05	43.7	43.1	42.6	1.54	1.53	1.48
Furniture	6.8	6.8	6.8	.....	.....	71.28	72.09	69.12	40.5	40.5	40.9	1.76	1.78	1.69
HH Furniture	5.9	5.9	5.9	.....	.....	71.24	72.22	68.80	39.8	39.9	40.0	1.79	1.81	1.72
Printing, Publishing & Allied Industries	1.3	1.3	1.3	.....	.....	86.55	84.96	...7...	39.7	38.1	...7...	2.18	2.23	2.15
Chemicals	1.4	1.4	1.4	.....	.....	84.23	87.55	89.89	40.3	42.5	44.5	2.09	2.06	2.02
Stone, Clay & Glass Products	.9	.9	.9	.....	.....	83.04	86.80	75.37	48.0	49.6	44.6	1.73	1.75	1.69
Metal Products	2.2	2.2	2.1	.....	+ 4.8	72.39	77.04	...7...	40.9	42.8	...7...	1.77	1.80	1.72
Machinery (Except Electrical)	.9	.9	.9	.....	.....	92.00	87.99	...7...	43.6	41.9	41.3	2.11	2.10	...7...
Other Manufacturing Industries[2]	6.3	6.3	6.3	.....	.....	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...

[1] Includes: Apparel; Lumber; Rubber; Leather; Stone, Clay and Glass; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Tobacco; Paper; Rubber; Leather; Electrical Machinery; Transportation Equipment; Instruments; and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[4] Preliminary.
[5] Data Not Available.

EMPLOYMENT, HOURS AND EARNINGS IN NONAGRICULTURAL INDUSTRIES IN NORTH CAROLINA — OCTOBER, 1963

(Prepared by Division of Statistics in Cooperation with Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor)

INDUSTRY	TOTAL EMPLOYMENT					HOURS AND EARNINGS
				PER CENT OF CHANGE FROM		AVERAGE WEEKLY EARNINGS			AVERAGE WEEKLY HOURS			AVERAGE HOURLY EARNINGS
	Current Month[4] (thous)	One Month Ago (thous)	One Year Ago (thous)	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago	Current Month	One Month Ago	One Year Ago
ALL NONAGRICULTURAL EMPLOYMENT	1,321.2	1,320.3	1,295.2	+ 0.1	+ 2.0	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Manufacturing	557.5	558.6	551.3	— 0.2	+ 1.1	$ 70.30	$ 68.54	$ 66.99	41.6	40.8	41.1	$1.69	$1.68	$1.63
Durable Goods	152.7	152.2	149.9	+ 0.3	+ 1.9	73.70	73.10	69.60	42.6	42.5	42.7	1.73	1.72	1.63
Lumber & Timber Basic Products	30.9	30.7	30.4	+ 0.7	+ 1.6	64.30	64.18	60.05	42.3	42.5	43.2	1.52	1.51	1.39
Sawmills & Planing Mills	18.2	18.1	17.9	+ 0.6	+ 1.7	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Millwork, Plywood, etc.	6.5	6.5	6.5	.....	.....	60.63	59.78	58.42	42.4	42.1	43.6	1.43	1.42	1.34
Furniture & Fin. Lumber Products	49.9	49.7	48.6	+ 0.4	+ 2.7	70.42	69.11	66.07	43.2	42.4	42.9	1.63	1.63	1.54
Household Furniture	45.6	45.3	44.4	+ 0.7	+ 2.7	70.85	68.79	65.91	43.2	42.2	42.8	1.64	1.63	1.54
Stone, Clay and Glass	11.0	11.0	10.9	.....	+ 0.9	74.65	74.39	70.91	43.4	43.5	43.5	1.72	1.71	1.63
Concrete, Brick, etc.	4.0	4.0	3.9	.....	+ 2.6	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Primary Metals	2.9	2.9	2.8	.....	+ 3.6	91.59	87.36	86.50	42.6	41.6	42.4	2.15	2.10	2.04
Fabricated Metals	10.2	10.1	9.8	+ 1.0	+ 4.1	85.20	83.30	80.03	42.6	42.5	41.9	2.00	1.96	1.91
Fab. Structural Metals	4.5	4.4	4.1	+ 2.3	+ 9.8	92.40	86.29	86.05	44.0	42.3	42.6	2.10	2.04	2.02
Machinery (Except Electrical)	13.6	13.8	13.7	— 1.4	— 0.7	78.26	80.26	75.68	43.0	44.1	44.0	1.82	1.82	1.72
Special Industrial Machinery	6.9	7.1	7.1	— 2.8	— 2.8	77.94	76.97	...7...	43.3	43.0	...7...	1.80	1.79	1.71
Electrical Machinery	25.0	24.9	25.3	+ 0.4	— 1.2	84.05	84.04	79.77	41.2	41.4	40.7	2.04	2.03	1.96
Ord. and Transportation Equipment	5.3	5.3	5.0	.....	+ 6.0	93.89	98.41	89.91	41.0	42.6	40.5	2.29	2.31	2.22
Other Durable Goods[1]	3.9	3.8	3.4	+ 2.6	+14.7	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Nondurable Goods	404.8	406.4	401.4	— 0.4	+ 0.8	68.80	67.13	66.02	41.2	40.2	40.5	1.67	1.67	1.63
Food & Kindred Products	37.0	37.0	36.0	.....	+ 2.8	63.65	64.41	60.62	41.6	42.1	42.1	1.53	1.53	1.44
Meat Products	8.4	8.4	8.5	.....	— 1.2	55.42	56.36	51.84	37.7	38.6	38.4	1.47	1.46	1.35
Meat Packing	2.5	2.5	2.4	.....	+ 4.2	76.40	75.24	67.39	46.3	45.6	43.2	1.65	1.65	1.56
Dairy Products	5.5	5.6	5.5	— 1.8	.....	72.84	76.32	70.84	46.1	47.7	45.7	1.58	1.60	1.55
Grain Mill Products	4.1	4.5	3.8	— 8.9	+ 7.9	69.30	69.43	62.13	46.2	46.6	44.7	1.50	1.49	1.39
Bakery Products	7.7	7.6	7.6	+ 1.3	+ 1.3	74.04	76.30	73.18	42.8	43.6	43.3	1.73	1.75	1.69
Beverage Industries	5.0	5.1	4.7	— 2.0	+ 6.4	63.51	65.69	60.33	46.7	48.3	47.5	1.36	1.36	1.27
Tobacco	44.6	47.1	47.2	— 5.3	— 5.5	70.80	71.15	68.21	40.0	40.2	40.6	1.77	1.77	1.68
Cigarettes	17.8	18.3	18.3	— 2.7	— 2.7	87.23	92.19	82.72	37.6	38.9	36.6	2.32	2.37	2.26
Stemmeries	25.2	27.2	27.2	— 7.4	— 7.4	59.36	57.41	58.46	41.8	41.3	43.3	1.42	1.39	1.35
Textiles	228.2	228.0	228.8	+ 0.1	— 0.3	68.46	65.53	65.12	42.0	40.2	40.7	1.63	1.63	1.60
Broadwoven Fabrics	91.5	91.3	90.3	+ 0.2	+ 1.3	75.24	69.80	71.23	44.0	41.3	42.4	1.71	1.69	1.68
Broadwoven Cotton	58.3	58.3	57.4	.....	+ 1.6	74.90	67.20	69.14	43.8	40.0	41.4	1.71	1.68	1.67
Broadwoven Fiber & Silk	29.3	29.1	28.9	+ 0.7	+ 1.4	76.54	76.02	75.51	44.5	44.2	43.9	1.72	1.72	1.72
Knitting Mills	67.3	67.3	70.6	.....	— 4.7	62.73	61.12	59.37	39.7	38.2	38.3	1.58	1.60	1.55
Full Fashioned Hosiery	1.9	2.0	3.8	—5.0	—50.0	58.76	58.27	...7...	35.4	35.1	...7...	1.66	1.66	...7...
Seamless Hosiery	51.9	51.8	54.0	+ 0.2	— 3.9	62.88	60.00	58.81	39.8	37.5	37.7	1.58	1.60	1.56
Dyeing & Finishing Textiles	12.7	12.7	12.6	.....	+ 0.8	69.89	69.38	69.81	41.6	41.3	41.8	1.68	1.68	1.67
Yarn Mills	46.8	46.9	46.0	— 0.2	+ 1.7	63.34	61.56	60.35	41.4	40.5	40.5	1.53	1.52	1.49
Apparel	49.3	48.8	45.1	+ 1.0	+ 9.3	53.72	53.96	50.67	38.1	38.0	38.1	1.41	1.42	1.33
Men's & Boys' Clothing	18.8	18.7	17.3	+ 0.5	+ 8.7	49.40	49.82	47.49	35.8	36.1	37.1	1.38	1.38	1.28
Women's and Children's Garments	22.3	22.0	20.5	+ 1.4	+ 8.8	56.45	56.02	...5...	39.2	38.9	...5...	1.44	1.44	...5...
Paper & Allied Products	13.7	13.7	13.8	.....	— 0.7	107.41	106.04	101.52	44.2	44.0	43.2	2.43	2.41	2.35
Pulp & Paperboard Mills	8.4	8.4	8.7	.....	— 3.4	120.50	119.07	113.78	44.3	44.1	43.1	2.72	2.70	2.64
Paperboard Containers	3.7	3.7	3.7	.....	.....	83.92	82.16	79.46	44.4	43.7	43.9	1.89	1.88	1.81
Printing	10.4	10.5	10.3	— 1.0	+ 1.0	90.09	89.47	...7...	39.0	38.9	39.2	2.31	2.30	...7...
Newspapers	5.5	5.4	5.4	+ 1.9	+ 1.9	97.55	97.26	96.83	36.4	36.7	37.1	2.68	2.65	2.61
Chemicals	16.9	16.7	15.5	+ 1.2	+ 9.0	86.31	85.70	83.80	42.1	41.6	41.9	2.05	2.06	2.00
Plastics & Synthetic Materials	11.1	11.0	9.8	+ 0.9	+13.3	94.11	92.99	90.49	42.2	41.7	41.7	2.23	2.23	2.17
Other Nondurable Goods[2]	4.7	4.6	4.7	+ 2.2	.....	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Nonmanufacturing	763.7	761.7	743.9	+ 0.3	+ 2.7	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Mining	2.6	2.6	3.3	—	—21.2	75.70	77.24	79.54	45.6	47.1	49.1	1.66	1.64	1.62
Non-Metallic Mining	2.6	2.6	2.8	.....	— 7.1	75.70	77.24	79.50	45.6	47.1	50.0	1.66	1.64	1.59
Contract Construction	72.5	73.8	71.8	— 1.8	+ 1.0	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Transp., Comm., & Pub. Utilities	68.7	68.8	66.3	— 0.1	+ 3.6	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Transportation (Except RR)	35.5	35.3	34.0	+ 0.6	+ 4.4	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Communications & Pub. Utilities	24.7	24.9	23.7	— 0.8	+ 4.2	99.22	99.05	97.06	41.0	41.1	41.3	2.42	2.41	2.35
Trade[3]	239.5	237.6	233.7	+ 0.8	+ 2.5	65.40	65.40	63.52	39.4	39.4	39.7	1.66	1.66	1.60
Wholesale	61.0	61.1	59.4	— 0.2	+ 2.7	86.68	86.25	83.46	42.7	42.7	42.8	2.03	2.02	1.95
Retail[3]	178.5	176.5	174.3	+ 1.1	+ 2.4	57.30	57.15	55.68	38.2	38.1	38.4	1.50	1.50	1.45
Retail General Merchandise	39.6	38.8	37.3	+ 2.1	+ 6.2	43.89	44.47	41.86	33.0	32.7	32.7	1.33	1.36	1.28
Department Stores	17.5	17.3	16.4	+ 1.2	+ 6.7	46.77	47.72	45.05	31.6	31.6	31.5	1.48	1.51	1.43
Limited Price Variety	9.1	9.0	8.9	+ 1.1	+ 2.2	30.39	30.60	29.27	28.4	28.6	28.7	1.07	1.07	1.02
Retail Food Stores	26.4	26.0	25.3	+ 1.5	+ 4.3	52.77	53.25	50.27	33.4	33.7	34.2	1.58	1.58	1.47
Finance, Insurance & Real Estate[6]	50.2	50.0	47.6	+ 0.4	+ 5.5	90.11	89.52	87.97	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Service	140.9	141.0	137.7	— 0.1	+ 2.3	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Hotels & Rooming Houses	8.1	8.6	8.1	— 5.8	.....	32.97	33.54	30.80	34.7	39.0	35.4	.95	.86	.87
Personal Services	25.9	25.7	25.6	+ 0.8	+ 1.2	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Laundries & Dry Cleaners	15.6	15.5	15.6	+ 0.6	.....	38.40	37.92	35.05	38.4	38.3	38.1	1.00	.99	.92
Government	189.3	187.9	183.5	+ 0.7	+ 3.2	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...	...5...
Federal	37.8	38.0	36.4	— 0.5	+ 3.8
State & Local Schools	85.1	83.3	82.3	+ 2.2	+ 3.4
State & Local Non-Schools	66.4	66.6	64.8	— 0.3	+ 2.5

[1] Includes: Transportation Equipment, Instruments, and Miscellaneous Manufacturing Industries.
[2] Includes: Leather and Leather Products, Rubber Products, and Petroleum Products.
[3] Excludes: Earnings in Eating and Drinking Places.
[4] Preliminary.
[5] Data Not Available.
[6] Reflects Earnings in Insurance Companies Only.
[7] Not comparable.
[8] Less than 0.1% change.

2,130 FIRMS INSPECTED IN MONTH OF OCTOBER

Labor Department inspectors visited 2,130 manufacturing, mercantile and service-industry establishments during October to check for compliance with the Labor Laws and the health and safety regulations. The establishments employed 91,726 workers.

The inspectors noted 1,233 violations, mostly concerning health and safety, and made appropriate recommendations for their correction. Compliance with similar recommendations made during previous inspections was noted in 1,125 instances.

The month's inspection activity also included investigation of 21 complaints, reinspection of 63 establishments to insure compliance, 676 conferences with employers and employees, and investigation of the causes of eleven serious industrial accidents.

DISABLING INJURIES DROP 3.7 PER CENT DURING 1962

The rate of disabling injuries in North Carolina manufacturing plants dropped 3.7 per cent during 1962, according to the preliminary report published in this bulletin last month.

The report, compiled by Labor Department Safety Improvement Officer William C. Creel, shows that workers in Tar Heel manufacturing plants experienced 7.7 disabling injuries per million manhours of exposure during 1962, compared with eight in the year 1961.

The report is based upon accident data gathered by Labor Department inspectors from 4,251 manufacturing plants. The plants reported a total of 5,882 disabling injuries experienced in the course of 757,462,491 manhours during the year 1962. The report is subject to correction when complete data for the year are received.

MOCK MEDIATION SESSION STAGED AT CHAPEL HILL

FMCS Director Is Speaker

"Mediation in Action"—a mock labor-management bargaining session—was the featured attraction at a meeting of the North Carolina Arbitration Panel on December 7th at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill.

William E. Simkin of Washington, D. C., Director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, delivered the principal address prior to the mock mediation. Simkin spoke on "The Role of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service." He was introduced by North Carolina Commissioner of Labor Frank Crane. Frank T. deVyver, Vice-Provost of Duke University and a member of the Arbitration Panel, presided.

The Honorable William Fred Ponder, South Carolina Commissioner of Labor, was a special guest and participant in the meeting.

Participants in the mock mediation included FMCS Region 3 Director William S. Pierce of Atlanta, Ga., and five of his staff members: D. Yates Heafner of Charlotte, N. C.; J. C. Pierce of New Orleans, La.; and James E. Kelly, Robert P. Baker and Leland Dean, all of Atlanta, Ga.

The session was attended by N. C. Arbitration Panel members; representatives of the Division of Conciliation and Arbitration, N. C. Department of Labor; UNC law students and faculty members; and other interested individuals.

The public meeting was held to demonstrate the usefulness of mediation procedures as a practical means of settling differences between labor and management.

TOTAL EMPLOYMENT IN MANUFACTURING INDUSTRIES

(In Thousands of Employees) Winston-Salem Area

INDUSTRY	*OCTOBER, 1963	SEPTEMBER, 1963	OCTOBER, 1962
Total Manufacturing	38.5	38.1	40.3
Food & Kindred Products	1.5	1.5	1.5
Textile Mill Products	9.6	9.6	10.1
Furniture	1.0	1.0	1.0
Metals	1.6	1.6	1.5
All Other Mfg. Inds.[1]	24.8	24.4	26.2

* Preliminary

[1] Includes: Tobacco; Apparel; Lumber; Paper; Printing; Chemicals; Stone, Clay & Glass; Transportation Equipment & Misc. Mfg. Inds.

ESTIMATED COST OF CONSTRUCTION AUTHORIZED IN THIRTY-SIX NORTH CAROLINA CITIES

City	October, 1963	October, 1962	1st 10 Mos. 1963	1st 10 Mos. 1962
Albemarle	$ 28,770	$ 171,409	$ 575,139	$ 968,750
Asheboro	68,975	108,275	1,646,134	1,922,392
Asheville	892,937	1,284,051	10,049,487	7,173,024
Burlington	646,620	478,164	3,977,294	4,504,292
Chapel Hill	567,675	438,100	4,161,439	2,512,495
Charlotte	7,126,193	3,166,517	46,187,623	35,026,278
Concord	65,985	100,660	1,119,419	1,362,023
Durham	980,982	1,406,743	13,974,724	10,559,882
Elizabeth City	51,700	121,340	3,089,606	879,240
Fayetteville	1,157,078	686,900	8,938,512	7,629,673
Gastonia	1,156,950	576,550	6,822,975	5,133,500
Goldsboro	496,310	336,392	3,454,568	3,684,740
Greensboro	2,652,173	2,534,342	24,043,493	27,313,612
Greenville	310,804	538,950	4,545,579	3,609,517
Henderson	98,311	65,910	1,213,307	796,037
Hickory	257,963	323,300	2,177,885	2,598,192
High Point	860,343	1,289,329	7,353,612	8,710,790
Jacksonville	76,300	203,000	1,297,165	2,890,556
Kinston	163,337	229,479	2,484,433	4,628,213
Lenoir	654,024	75,134	1,713,051	1,141,220
Lexington	200,165	66,768	1,451,648	2,143,211
Lumberton	193,200	323,500	1,420,150	1,361,594
Monroe	526,000	27,300	1,239,800	1,008,200
New Bern	127,294	68,950	1,379,291	1,045,251
Raleigh	2,965,259	2,851,861	21,198,026	23,459,739
Reidsville	24,850	78,550	868,644	1,093,434
Roanoke Rapids	153,972	158,978	1,426,017	1,905,873
Rocky Mount	334,643	266,243	3,708,357	2,596,630
Salisbury	211,300	145,725	2,956,583	2,556,398
Sanford	61,015	180,000	744,374	1,010,300
Shelby	87,200	97,312	1,648,740	1,340,727
Statesville	332,771	168,203	2,759,879	2,445,271
Thomasville	139,995	116,450	1,934,358	1,876,253
Wilmington	204,055	162,156	3,665,697	1,546,596
Wilson	148,500	612,775	3,065,825	11,266,533
Winston-Salem	1,042,298	3,355,628	15,583,836	16,984,430
Grand Total	$25,065,947	$22,814,944	$213,876,670	$206,684,866

The American Federationist November 1963

Labor

The New Challenge To Liberalism

by Gus Tyler

American liberalism faces a dual challenge: the first, and most serious, from a newly invigorated conservative coalition; the second, from a "new" leftist critique that damns labor's existence in order to save its soul. To counter both requires a liberal coalition that will effectively unite the unions, the civil rights movement and the progressive-minded intellectual community.

In conservative circles, a well-designed move is under way to reverse the fundamentally liberal trend that has characterized America since the first Hundred Days of the New Deal. The rightwing strategy comes in two phases: the first, to elect its "conservative of conscience" to the presidency; the second, to rewrite the Constitution to make liberal government in America almost impossible.

The unifying theme of the conservative coalition is state's rights: the right of conservative Republican states and of segregationist Democratic states to escape the economic and social liberalism of the modern presidency. This movement would be the conservative counter-revolution to America's "second revolution" now in the making. By forcing a referendum on race, conservatives hope to pick up "white" votes on which they had not counted in the past, in the North as well as in the South, to elect a rightwing president. The long-run aim of the conservatives is the passage of its "disunity" amendments to the Constitution—to shift the center of decisionmaking from Washington, D. C., where liberalism enjoys an active voice in the Presidency, the Supreme Court and, occasionally, the Congress, to the separate state legislatures synthetically controlled by conservative minorities.

The liberal strategy also falls into two phases: win the next presidential election and move ahead to win majorities in state and federal legislatures. To do the latter—win legislative majorities—will require more than votes. Court action—probably Supreme Court action—will be required to democratize the legislative bodies so the voice of the voting majority may be properly heard. But to win elections—whether for the presidency or the legislatures—requires a third and basic element: an effective liberal coalition. Only such a coalition can provide the nose count necessary for electoral victory.

The dominant leadership in the various groups that compose this coalition recognize the need for a political alliance. Yet there is a real danger that this coalition will be disrupted, even impaired, by a small though highly publicized coterie of liberal intellectuals who are making a career out of fostering friction and schism among the great liberal movements. They propose a split in labor as a means of invigorating the unions; they see a Negro assault on organized labor as a prime means to invigorate the civil rights movement; they see in a return to the radical formulas of the 1930s a pattern for behavior in the 1960s. This new "leftism," with its accent on the negative, is the "enemy within" the liberal coalition.

Some of this "new" critique reflects a general malaise among certain intellectuals who become angry with mass movements if the latter do not, in schoolchild fashion, follow the teacher. Some of it reflects a sense of guilt on the part of brief sojourners in the labor movement who justify their AWOL by denouncing either the old general or the old cause. Some of it is a kind of reactionary radicalism that tries to rediscover the kicks of youth by reciting old cliches in new jargonese. But most of it derives from plain ignorance—a state to which most intellectuals, especially those least informed, will rarely own up.

GUS TYLER is Assistant President and political education director of the Ladies' Garment Workers.

The depth of their ignorance can best be plumbed by measuring their views against the real state of American liberalism today, especially the labor sector.

The labor movement is the single greatest force for economic well-being in the nation. Its basic dedication to job security, higher earnings, a shorter workweek and a variety of collective though privately-financed social benefits is at the base of that pillar called the American standard of living.

Since 1947, this basic force for progress has moved to a new level: the political. That was the year that the former AFL Labor's League for Political Education was organized, primarily as a response to the passage of the Taft-Hartley Law. After 1947, the older unions of the AFL moved into national politics for "keeps." They supported a permanent organization not only to ward off restrictive labor-management laws but, in keeping with the mood of the New Deal, to advance a vast body of sweeping social legislation, at the very center of which was the repetitive cry for a full employment economy.

From 1947 to the present, labor has developed a respectable political punch, not quite as powerful as charged by its business critics who insist the unions are taking over the country politically nor quite as puny as alleged by some of the liberal intellectual critics who see the unions as political nonentities. Measured mathematically, labor can count on about 160 to 180 members of the House of Representatives to stand with it today as contrasted with the bare fourscore who were ready to back Truman's veto of Taft-Hartley in 1947.

One of the most prolific authors on the current labor movement stated at an off-the-record egghead conference recently: "The labor movement is today a more powerful factor for social justice . . . than it has ever been. . . . It is the main bulwark of the liberal-progressive program on legislation."

The "new" critique, however, holds a contrary view: this group insists labor has lost its collective bargaining function, it is declining politically and it is without prospect of future growth.

What are the facts here? In the last two decades, organized labor has displayed a staying power hitherto unproved in the history of trade unionism. Up to the 1930s, the story of the American worker was the story of rapid rise and rapid decline, a rapid growth with a business boom and a sharp drop with a business bust. Labor was as cyclical as the economy. Since the 1930s, there has been dramatic growth without any accompanying dramatic decline. (A rise from about 3 million to about 19 million, with a decline to about 18 million.)

This fundamental stability of organized labor is underscored by the fact that labor has held its numerical strength in spite of the Taft-Hartley Act, the state "right-to-work" laws, an eight-year Republican Administration, the Landrum-Griffin Act and—perhaps most important—a relative fall in the number of blue collar workers and a rapid proportional rise in the number of white collar workers.

In the three decades since 1934, the unions have converted the process of collective bargaining from primitive warfare into sophisticated struggle. Some of the most remarkable advances in both content and method have been made in the last ten years.

The contracts of the 1930s were rather simple documents: wages, hours, jobs and union security clauses. Today, unions have evolved novel and complex concepts: guaranteed annual wage; the Kaiser and Armour formulae; health, welfare, retirement, vacation, optical, dental, sabbatical plans; in-training, upgrading, anti-discrimination clauses. Whole new areas of collective bargaining have opened up—not with employers, but with Blue Shield and Blue Cross, with the Hospital Insurance Plan and hospitals, with insurance firms, with bankers and builders, with governmental and semi-governmental agencies.

The method of bargaining has changed from the elementary sporadic clashes of 30 years ago to continuous bargaining, backed by expertese, in the presence of third parties. This development, one union official notes, implicates labor in "concerns, activities and decisions which nowhere have been described adequately, certainly not in the texts and treatises dealing with collective bargaining. What actually happens is complex and varied to a degree that falsifies the conception most people hold of union negotiations."

No one is more aware of the fact that the United States in the present decade has moved into its most inventive era of collective bargaining than those liberal intellectuals who are personally involved in the process. These men serve as mediators, arbitrators, impartial chairmen, teachers of industrial relations, governmental agency heads.

Another group of liberal intellectuals is in direct service with unions in greater number than at any time in our national history—as researchers, as lawyers, as engineers, as bargaining experts, elaborating new formulas and new methods of negotiating. These creative intellectuals serve as a link between the trade unions and the liberal intellectual community, an effective tie in the progressive coalition.

The spokesmen of the "new" critique, however, devote their talent to penning obituary notices for collective bargaining. They feel that automation has given labor its coup de grace. They argue that "the system of collective bargaining, which has operated successfully since the passage of the Wagner Act 28 years ago in 1935, has proved less and less adequate for the solution of some basic problems now faced by unions and management." Projecting this trend, they argue that with more and more automation, collective bargaining will mean less and less.

This is a moth-eaten line of reasoning dated circa 1930s and was just as inaccurate then as it is now. In the depth of the great depression, a few radical sectarians insisted the union no longer had a function as a collective bargaining agency since unemployed workers cannot bargain against a non-existent employer. Hence the unions had better forget about the piddling business of dollars and cents and contracts and turn to the more meaningful business of seizing power for a social revolution. This is basically the line of reasoning of the "new" critique, with the word "automation" replacing "unemployment" and with a vague "call for action" replacing the now unfashionable "revolution."

What actually happened in the 1930s is a valuable lesson for today. The unions, in a great liberal coalition, used their votes to elect Roosevelt and enact a New Deal. As the economy revived, unions turned more vigorously than ever to collective bargaining. The gains on the industrial front were made possible by the climate of legislation and economic growth spurred by political action.

Today, history repeats itself. Automation produces a creeping and continuous unemployment. This problem of "unemployment" cannot be handled either exclusively or primarily at the bargaining table, although something can be done through contract. Unions can evolve formulas such as in Kaiser and Armour. Unions can push for the shorter workweek; they can also stimulate economic growth by expanding consumer power. But there are recognized limits to changing the course of the total economy by bargaining alone. The major contours of the economic system—distribution of manpower, tax policy, foreign trade, education of the labor force, allocation of investment, early retirement, public control—can only be consciously directed and determined by government. Hence the labor movement is ideologically pledged to unceasing political action for a full employment economy, not because such politicking is a substitute for but a precondition of effective collective bargaining.

Unfortunately, the "new" critique is as badly informed about labor's political activity as it is about labor's industrial creativity. Thus one commentator insists that "as the economic strength and power of unions grew during the first fifty years of the Twentieth Century, their commitment to political goals grew progressively weaker." This last sentence would be quite correct if the last word were changed from "weaker" to "stronger." In 1900, the American Federation of Labor eschewed any and all social legislation—minimum wage laws, maximum hour laws, social security laws—as delusory goals that would weaken the unions as bargaining agents. It was this rejection of political solutions to economic matters that Gompers defined as "pure and simple" trade unionism.

It was not until the New Deal days that the trade unions began to accept in a real sense the concept of social legislation. It was not until the 1940s that the CIO founded its Political Action Committee; not until 1947 that the AFL founded its LLPE and not until the 1950s that the labor movement united politically in its Committee on Political Education to endorse formally a candidate for President of the United States.

In short, the story of labor in the first half of the Twentieth Century is the story of labor's politicalization. Reactionaries know it and demand that labor's political mouth be gagged. But the "new" critique, written without restraint or research, manages to rewrite history backwards to describe the political decline of labor.

The final point of the "new" critique is its belief that "an increasing number of workers remain outside the system (collective bargaining) with very little possibility that they will ever come into it." Reference is repeatedly made to the white collar worker and to the workers in the non-union South.

Here, too, the "new" critique sounds old and tired. For generations, there has been talk of the group of "unorganizables." For years, "foreigners" were considered unorganizable until men like Gompers, Strasser, Maguire, Debs and the Irish, Jews and Italians proved otherwise. Women were considered unorganizable until 1909 when 20,000 young girls shocked America with one strike. Unskilled workers in basic industry were considered unorganizable until the CIO proved otherwise. Negroes and Puerto Ricans, in their time, were viewed as unorganizable. And now it is the fad to talk about the new unorganizables: the white collar workers or the southern worker or—in some more refined prophecies—the workers in small towns or in small-unit firms.

The irony is that such predictions, traditionally issuing from conservative trade unionists of little faith and less energy, now issue from a leftist intelligentsia. It is doubly ironic that these alleged students of human behavior hold such a non-behavioral point of view.

Two new classes are arising in the United States: the white-collared managers and handlers of the automated machines and the new industrial worker in the South. They are both beginning to feel their oats. And eventually, like other social groupings in America, they will organize to advance their interests.

If the AFL-CIO unions now in existence do not have or do not develop the proper techniques to reach these new classes, then the latter will find their own leaders and their own methods. The organization of workers into unions does not, in the long run, depend upon the arrival of an organizer from outside. Organization of a given social stratum into a self-protective community is instinctive to man and inevitable in a free society.

The white collar workers are already giving proof of this. According to the report of the National Labor Relations Board (fiscal year 1962), a majority of the elections held among white collar workers were won by unions, overwhelmingly by AFL-CIO affiliates.

White collar workers in government employment have been warming up to unionism continuously as the rosters of the civil service unions show. Schoolteachers have been among the most energetic. And, spurred on by the American Federation of Teachers, the conservative National Education Association has been talking wages and working conditions and advising its members to boycott school systems that do not live up to professional standards.

Among the last of the white collar groups to move will be the technicians handling automated and cybernated equipment. But what reason is there to believe that these latest aristocrats of labor will be more resistant to self-organization than doctors or political scientists or movie actors?

These technicians are under the same stresses and hopes as others. A chief draftsman was recently quoted as saying: "I don't know what to do. I have some hundred engineers and I have to treat them in the same bureaucratic way we treat blue collar workers. I have no other way of control. Well, there's a restiveness among that group." And out of that restiveness will come organization—organization as employes resisting bureaucratic controls.

These "new" aristocrats can enrich the whole labor movement. They are educated, articulate, community-minded and politically active. They will bring quality as well as quantity.

The industrial worker of the South is also an emerging new class. He is part of a society living in the Twentieth Century with an economy that is Nineteenth Century and a politics that is Eighteenth Century.

The southern worker is caught up in the industrial urban movement of the Twentieth Century. But his economic background is still predominantly rural since the southland is America's last great rural region. And the political structure within which he must move is still based on the rule of a landed aristocracy—in alliance with financial and corporate elements both in and outside the South. Hence, the southern worker finds himself in transition in a conflicted civilization itself in the throes of transition.

In this respect, the southern worker repeats the history of the midwest worker in the 1930s, also held back by a predominantly rural background and a political structure ruled by coal, iron, lumber and oil barons. But just as the workers in these industries rose to create the great industrial unions of America in the 1930s, so is it reasonable to expect that the industrial workers of the South will do likewise.

In the past, the great labor organizing advances came simultaneously with or after liberal political victories. This is true both nationally and regionally. Consequently, it may be expected that labor's great breakthrough in the South will accompany or follow the political liberalization of the South.

Viewed historically, the prospect for the labor movement in America is growth: numerically, economically and politically. That is, provided labor does not take the advice of one of its "new" leftist advisers who suggests in a widely distributed booklet that "an authentic split (in the AFL-CIO) might be the impetus for a surge of new activity." But because labor does not and will not, in and of itself, constitute a majority of the nation, unions need liberal allies to realize their hopes for a society of fuller freedom.

The civil rights movement is a natural ally for labor in a liberal coalition. To begin with, both have a common enemy: the conservative coalition in Congress. This coalition rests on its opposition to labor and the Negro, to the economic rights of the former and the civil rights of the latter. If labor and the Negro had no other reason to unite than their common oppressors that would be reason enough.

But there is a deeper reason: jobs and freedom are indivisible. A labor movement that denies freedom to all will first find itself split and weak and will ultimately be denied the freedom it denied to others. Germany under Hitler and Russia under Stalin taught the lesson. Likewise, a freedom movement that does not fight for full employment will create inner tensions and frustrations that will imperil and ultimately destroy freedom itself.

Labor's priority is for jobs; the Negro's priority is for freedom. Liberalism's priority must be for a simultaneous expansion of jobs and freedom. There is no hope for either jobs or freedom if the great struggle in America revolves around whether the job shall go to a white man or a black man, to a Jew or a gentile, to the North or the South. The only hope is a full employment economy where every man can find a job suitable to his taste and his talents—regardless of origin.

It is at this point that labor and the Negro are closest: jobs for all. This is also the most realistic way to bring new ethnic groups, whether Jewish, Italian, Irish, Negro or Puerto Rican, into closed industries where the doors have been shut against overcrowding. When jobs are more plentiful, closed doors can be opened. When jobs are lacking, nobody—whether of new or old ethnic origin—will be welcome.

Labor and the Negro have a second major point of contact: the legislative struggle for civil rights. The trade unions have been at this for decades. The unions have paid a heavy price for this dedication: the Landrum-Griffin Act might not be on the statute books if the unions had been ready to trade in civil rights for a defeat of Landrum-Griffin. And much more of the South might be unionized today if major unions had not insisted on integration of their members. The basic adherence of American labor to civil rights, combined with its mounting political effectiveness, has sent to the Congress of the United States and to the Presidency the men who, at this moment, represent the nation's first best hope for civil rights legislation.

The civil rights movement, on its part, can make dramatic contributions not only to the status of the Negro in America but to the entire liberal movement. In the South, the registration of Negro voters can mean gradual liberalization of Dixie politics. In the North, the recent demonstration of Negro awakening, as proven in the voter registration figures in New York City, can give liberalism fresh new battalions of voters. And in both, the new self-image of the Negro can move one-tenth of our population from economic and political apathy to creative citizenship.

Responsible Negro leadership recognizes the proximity and interdependence of the struggle for jobs and for freedom. "This unity of purpose is not an historical coincidence," said Dr. Martin Luther King at the 1961 AFL-CIO convention. He observed:

"Negroes are almost entirely a working people. There are pitifully few Negro millionaires and few Negro employers. Our needs are identical with labor's needs: decent wages, fair working conditions, livable housing, old age security, health and welfare measures, conditions in which families can grow, have education for their children and respect in the community. That is why Negroes support labor's demands and fight laws which curb labor. That is why the labor-hater and labor-baiter is virtually always a twin-headed creature spewing anti-Negro epithets from one mouth and anti-labor propaganda from the other mouth."

While the responsible leadership in the civil rights movement recognizes the need of a liberal coalition, there is a militant minority that counsels and practices a contrary course. They believe the labor movement should be a prime, if not the prime, target of the Negro freedom fight; they prefer not to limit this fight to those unions that do practice discrimination but to widen the assault to include the entire labor movement—and especially the more progressive trade unions. They make a theory and practice out of the advisability of concentrating the main fire on American liberalism in general, on the assumption this is the soft underbelly of white supremacy. They even advocate a new political party in America, either a Negro or Civil Rights Party—the kind of separatist party that is always the logical and ultimate resort of the self-righteous sectarian.

In the long run, these extremists help produce precisely the opposite of what they want. They use the better to kill the good. They divide the forces of progress to give rulership to the forces of reaction. They are the "dear friends" who are the true "enemy within."

In forming a liberal coalition, the intellectuals can play a pivotal role. As economists, they can shape broad programs. As students of inter-group relations, they can counsel towards the end of prejudice. As educators, they can raise up new generations of inspired and instructed young people to play their energetic part in progressive social movements. As researchers and propagandists, they can enlighten the nation politically. As viewers of the total society they can interpret labor to the civil rights movement and interpret the civil rights movement to labor. They can and should voice the needed criticisms of the many special interest groups that make up the liberal coalition, a function they are able to perform from the vantage point of the disinterested yet dedicated scholar. They can serve as constructive critic—a sorely needed friend for both labor and the civil rights movement. They can help put things in place and perspective.

The bulk of the liberal intellectual community plays precisely this role. To the "new" leftists, however, such responsible thinkers are servants of the Establishments, Uncle Toms, the kept brains of the unions, to be read out of the intellectual community while the negativists take over and proclaim themselves the voice of intelligence.

For all these forces—labor, civil rights and liberal intellectual—the time for decision is close, as close as the next national election. Conservatism is moving in for the kill. Its one best hope is a divided liberalism. For the liberal, the one best hope now—as always—lies in unity, unity in the immediate future around "jobs and freedom."

NEWS

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

W. Willard Wirtz, Secretary

Labor

WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST

Week of December 9, 1963

IN THIS ISSUE:

President Pledges Continuation of Efforts Toward Equal Opportunity

Secretary Orders Hiring of More Qualified Negroes in the Department, Especially in Regions

Nonwhite Females Show High Unemployment Rate in Latest Sampling

Assistant Secretary Weaver Represents U.S. at Mexican Housing Project Groundbreaking

Quotes on Racial Relations in Employment

President Johnson Pledges Continuation of Efforts Toward Equal Opportunity

President Lyndon Baines Johnson in his address to Congress on November 27, pledged continuation of the forward thrust of America toward goals which include "equal rights for all Americans, whatever their race or color." He called for passage of the Civil Rights Bill as a "memorial" for the late President John F. Kennedy: "No memorial oration or eulogy could more eloquently honor President Kennedy's memory than the earliest possible passage of the Civil Rights Bill for which he fought so long. We have talked long enough in this country about equal rights. We have talked for 100 years or more. It is time now to write the next chapter--and to write it in books of law."

* * * * *

Secretary Orders Hiring of More Qualified Negroes, Especially in Field Offices

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz has ordered Labor Department administrators, bureau and office directors, and regional directors to intensify efforts to identify and hire more qualified Negro personnel. He praised the Department's record in this area but said, "I know we can do better."

(MORE)

He continued, "In Executive Order 10925, the President set the attainment of full equality of employment opportunity in the Federal Government as a national goal. On the whole, within the Department we have made progress in our efforts to achieve this goal. However, there is still much to be done. Particularly, I am distressed by our failure to achieve employment of qualified Negroes in more of our regional and field offices.

"I know that there are a number of problems--the scarcity of candidates with the special skills needed for our work, the time required by the civil service examining process, and lack of turnover in many of our field offices. However, I know we can do better. I am, therefore, calling on each of you to assume a personal responsibility for the achievement of equality of opportunity and to undertake the constructive and positive efforts necessary to identify and employ equalified members of minority groups. To the extent of its resources, the Department personnel office will aid you in your efforts. However, the responsibility is yours.

"If each of us does his part, we can, I think, make the Department a place of truly equal employment opportunity and better because of it."

* * * * *

Nonwhite Females Show High Unemployment Rate in Latest Sampling

A Labor Department October 1963 sampling shows that 78.0 percent of unemployed persons are white; 22.0 percent nonwhite. Comparable figures for October 1962 indicated 80.2 percent white and 19.8 percent nonwhite. Of the current white 78.0 percent, white females are 31.1 percent and white males 42.9 percent. Of the 22.0 percent nonwhite, females are 10.6 percent, males 11.4 percent. The unemployment rate for nonwhites is 9.2 percent as compared to 4.1 percent for whites. The unemployment rate for nonwhite females is 10.6 percent as compared to 5.5 for white females.

(MORE)

* * * * *

Assistant Secretary Weaver Represents U.S. at Mexican Housing Project Groundbreaking

Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs represented the United States at the December 4 groundbreaking ceremonies in Mexico City, of the first international housing project for workers financed from AFL-CIO pension funds.

The $10 million loan by the AFL-CIO will provide 3,000 modern apartments for organized workers in the Mexican graphic arts industry. By a unanimous vote of the participating Mexican union, the project will be named the John F. Kennedy Housing Project in honor of the late President.

The AFL-CIO loan sets an historical precedent for the Alliance for Progress and the role of the U.S. labor movement in its voluntary participation in the alliance program.

The loan was provided by the affiliated unions of the AFL-CIO and is guaranteed by the U.S. Agency for International Development (AID).

The project was developed in conjunction with the American Institute for Free Labor Development headed by the AFL-CIO President George Meany.

More than 50 acres of land, valued at $3,397,000, was made available for the project by the Mexican Government. When completed in August 1964, the housing project will accommodate more than 18,000 inhabitants.

* * * * *

(MORE)

Quotes on Racial Relations in Employment

"Happily, the period during which national policy permitted Federally-subsidized racial discrimination is coming to an end. During the past decade the courts have made it abundantly clear that racial segregation or any other form of discrimination, when enforced, supported or assisted by government, violates the 14th Amendment to the Constitution. This command of the equal protection clause applies to public employment, public schools, Federally-assisted housing and every other kind of governmentally supported activity. Once we begin to focus clearly on the constitutional and moral issues involved, the legal barriers and the philosophical and political objections to establishing a policy of equal opportunity are revealed as insubstantial."

--William L. Taylor
Assistant Staff Director
Commission on Civil Rights

"The law will be only the beginning. In the final analysis, only better education, better employment opportunities, better housing and more enlightened social attitudes will enable the Negroes to attain the full citizenship they have deserved for so long. And only those things will put a stop to the bitter unrest that poses a constant threat of disorder within our society."

--Robert F. Kennedy
Attorney General

# # # # #

Labor

SB

National Labor Service

Institute of Human Relations • 165 East 56 Street, New York 22, N. Y. • Plaza 1-4000

Harry Fleischman, Director

FOR RELEASE DECEMBER 15, 1963

LABOR HELPS MAKE '63 BANNER CIVIL RIGHTS YEAR, AJC STUDY FINDS

Despite the "shameful events" which resulted in at least six deaths during the national race-relations crisis, the country in 1963 made outstanding and significant civil-rights advances in legislation and integration, according to a year-long survey released by the National Labor Service of the American Jewish Committee. A. M. Sonnabend, the Committee's president, revealed American labor's significant work for equality when he made public here today the findings of the 15th edition of The People Take The Lead -- the American Jewish Committee's annual round up which focuses on the civil rights advances in the United States.

The publication reviews civil-rights progress through legislative, administrative, judicial and voluntary actions. It is issued annually in connection with Bill of Rights Day, Dec. 15, which marks the 172nd anniversary of the Constitution's first ten amendments. The People Take The Lead cites the following major advances in civil rights during the past twelve months:

* Scores of formerly segregated white and Negro union locals were merged, and the last color bar in the constitution of an AFL-CIO international union was wiped from the books.

* The AFL-CIO organized a special "task force" in key major cities, to "wipe out discrimination wherever it exists - on the job, in the schools, in the voting booth, in housing developments, stores, theaters or recreation areas."

* The AFL-CIO urged member unions to establish apprenticeship information centers to encourage minority-group youth to enter skilled trades.

* Actors' Equity barred performances in any theater permitting racial segregation "in front or behind the footlights." Six legitimate theaters in the South ended segregation.

* Thirty-six states ratified a Constitutional amendment outlawing the poll tax as a voting requirement in Federal elections.

* One hundred and sixty-one new public-school districts in the South were desegregated; bringing the total to 1,141; leaving only one state with total segregation of public elementary and high schools.

-more-

* The Federal Government, as well as dozens of state and city administrations, pressed drives to bar discrimination in employment, and to open apprenticeship training to young people of minority groups.

* Two new states -- Indiana and Hawaii -- adopted full enforceable fair employment laws, bringing the total to 22; and two more -- Iowa and Vermont -- joined Idaho in making employment discrimination subject to criminal penalties.

* California became the 11th state to bar discrimination in private housing; and Connecticut and Massachusetts, as well as several municipalities, strengthened existing statutes toward this end.

* Maryland and South Dakota increased to 30 the states with laws against discrimination in public accommodations.

* The U. S. Supreme Court ruled repeatedly that all public facilities must be desegregated, and that sit-in demonstrations to bring about such desegregation did not constitute breaches of the peace.

While the current struggle has engaged millions of Americans of every race and creed, Mr. Sonnabend emphasized that "not all Americans have been on the right side." He added:

"The wanton murders of Medgar Evers in Mississippi and William Moore in Alabama, and the killing of four children by a hate bomb in Birmingham are an inescapable part of the record. So is the vandal-wrecked home of the Philadelphia couple who exercised their right to live where they pleased, and the bomb-closed parochial school in Louisiana which opened its classrooms to all God's children. So are the fire hoses, the police dogs, the electric cattle prods and the jail terms that countered many demonstrations for the right to vote, to attend desegregated schools, to be served in public restaurants, to be considered for non-menial jobs, and all the other essential freedoms guaranteed, in the abstract, to every citizen."

Mr. Sonnabend quoted the Rev. Martin Luther King, who told an audience of 200,000 at the March on Washington in August 1963, "When the architects of our republic wrote the magnificent words of the Constitution and the Declaration of Independence, they were signing a promissory note to which every American would fall heir."

"Nineteen sixty-three," concluded Mr. Sonnabend, "was the year in which the American people decided, in overwhelming numbers, that the promissory note had come due."

Nov. 22, 1963
LIR, LPK, LNP, CCD, MMCCD, PA, ILG, LPKE, LBH

NEWS

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

W. Willard Wirtz, Secretary

Labor

WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST

Week of December 16, 1963

IN THIS ISSUE:

Employment Situation Improves Generally in Puerto Rico

Comments by A. Philip Randolph on Race and Employment

Text of Remarks by Assistant Secretary L-P Weaver at Groundbreaking of John F. Kennedy Housing Project in Mexico City

Employment Situation Improves in Puerto Rico in September

A survey of the civilian labor force of Puerto Rico by the Department of Labor's Bureau of Labor Statistics discloses that from August to September 1963, the civilian labor force increased from 702,000 to 713,000. Total employment increased from 611,000 to 639,000.

Unemployment in September was estimated at 74,000 persons, 17,000 less than in August (91,000). The corresponding unemployment rates were 10.4 and 13.0. The average duration of unemployment in September was 6.1 weeks.

Median educational level of the unemployed persons was 6.0 years. About 24 percent reported 10 years or more of schooling completed. Only 4 percent had completed 13 years or more of schooling. Forty-seven percent reported 1 to 6 years of schooling and 8 percent no schooling. Unemployment rates for the various educational levels are no schooling, 9.1 percent; 1 to 3 years, 11.6; 4 to 6 years, 11.8; 7 to 9 years, 13.0; 10 to 11 years, 11.7; 12 years, 8.6; and 13 or more years, 3.9.

About 49 percent of the unemployed were single persons; 47 percent married and 4 percent widowed or divorced. Forty-three percent were household heads.

(MORE)

The civilian noninstitutional population 14 years old and over was estimated at 1,550,000 persons in September (1,544,000 in August).

* * * * *

Quotes from A. Philip Randolph

A. Philip Randolph, AFL-CIO Vice President and President of the Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, in a recent radio network interview commented on race relations in employment.

Relation of Civil Rights and Employment--"I would not set up a formula of priority with respect to the questions of civil rights or the question of employment....They must be dealt with at the same time because they supplement and compliment each other. It would not be well to say that job rights should be placed first on the agenda, or that civil rights should be placed first on the agenda. Both must be placed on the agenda....Even after Negroes get the attributes of citizenship they have got to fight for jobs and employment opportunities. You are not going to solve the problems of unemployment with civil rights. And consequently, Negroes have got to get this problem of civil rights over--and quickly--in order that we might deal with the problem of job rights."

Equal Opportunity and Job Competition--"There is some fear lingering in the minds and hearts of the workers that equal opportunity for employment to Negro workers may endanger the security of jobs for white workers. This, of course, is entirely erroneous; it's unsound. Nevertheless this fear exists and consequently a broad educational program must be carried on in the interest of eliminating this fear."

(MORE)

AFL-CIO and NAACP--"The NAACP has very successfully conducted campaigns, both outside the courts and within the courts, in the interest of declaring discrimination and segregation illegal. It has, in my opinion, achieved a splendid success, but I think that the NAACP would welcome the movement of the AFL-CIO into the civil rights struggle because in the final analysis of the basic problems the people of color face is the problem of jobs. And civil rights organizations are not set up to deal with the problem of jobs."

* * * * *

Text of Remarks of Assistant Secretary George L-P Weaver at Groundbreaking Ceremonies at the John F. Kennedy Housing Project in Mexico City

George L-P Weaver, Assistant Secretary of Labor for International Affairs represented the U.S at the groundbreaking ceremonies of the John F. Kennedy housing project in Mexico City, the first international housing project for workers financed from AFL-CIO pension funds.

The text of Mr. Weaver's remarks, reproduced here by request, follows:

"The Honorable Minster of Finance, Antonio Ortiz Mena, Mr. Ambassador, Senator Fidel Velasquez, distinguished guests and friends. This is indeed a proud moment for me. I have come at the request of the U.S. Goverment to participate in this precedent-setting ceremony.

"President Johnson and Secretary of Labor of the United States of America, W. Willard Wirtz and the Government of the United States extend their greetings and congratulations to the workers of Mexico who today join hands in a common effort with their brothers in the United States. President Johnson has pledged 'all the energies' of his Administration to the achievement of the objectives of the alliance for progress.

(MORE)

"We know what those objectives are. President Kennedy called on all the people of the hemisphere to join in a new alliance for progress, a vast cooperative effort unparalleled in magnitude and responsibility of purpose to satisfy the basic needs of the American peoples for homes, work and land, health and schools. And he said 'if we are going to meet a problem so staggering in its dimensions, our approach must itself be equally bold, an approach consistent with the majestic concept of Operation Pan America.'

"Just a few days before the tragic death of President Kennedy he attended the Convention of the AFL-CIO in New York City. AFL-CIO President Meany showed him a model of your housing project. When President Kennedy then addressed the Convention he quoted Abraham Lincoln: 'All that serves labor serves the Nation' and in a direct reference to the housing project of the graphic arts workers of Mexico President Kennedy said to the Convention 'I want to express my appreciation for the actions which this organization has taken under the leadership of President Meany....I saw coming in here a housing project of $10 million....in Mexico.'

"When President Kennedy voiced for the last time his hope for a hemisphere of Nations 'each confident in the strength of its own independence, devoted to the liberty of its citizens and joined with all nations of the West in an association based on national strength and a common dedication to freedom.' He also said....'goals and methods of the alliance for progress represent the only route whereby men of goodwill can obtain progress without despotism, social justice without social terror. And, it is on the alliance for progress that we base our common hope for the future.'

(MORE)

"That hope is for a hemisphere where every man has enough to eat and a chance to work; where every child can learn and every family can find decent shelter. It is for a hemisphere where every man from the American Negro to the Indian of the Altiplano can be liberated from the bonds of social injustice, free to pursue his own talents as far as they will take him, allowed to participate in the fruits of progress.

"The last two and a half years have been a time of trial and experiment. We have labored to build a structure of cooperation and common efforts for years to come. No nation in the Americas can deny that much more must be done to strengthen and speed our efforts; there have been setbacks and disappointments. That is why we intend to support strongly the leadership of the new 'Inter-American Committee for the Alliance for Progress'; and why we are working to clear away unnecessary obstacles to the swift and imaginative administration of United States contributions....and ultimately we will mold a continent where more than twenty strong nations live in peace, and people in hope, in liberty and in the realization that every tomorrow brings increase to the welfare and dignity of man."

# # # #

Look Mag. 12/17/63
Labor

THE NEGRO FACES NORTH

BLACK MEN WHITE UNIONS

A "closed shop" based on color keeps Negroes unskilled and unemployed

BY ERNEST DUNBAR
LOOK SENIOR EDITOR

AT THE CORE of the Northern civil-rights storm is the issue of jobs. To buy a home, in the ghetto or out of it, a buyer must have money. To eat a meal at a newly desegregated restaurant, all diners regardless of color must have some of the long green. To clothe and feed their children before they go to integrated or segregated schools, parents must be able to make a decent living. But survey after survey shows that growing numbers of Northern Negroes are no longer able to do so. Earlier this year, Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz declared that a 6 percent unemployment rate is "intolerable." Yet the rate for Negroes recently has been as high as 12.5 percent.

The Negro in the North is fighting —but losing—a desperate battle for a chance at gainful employment and job training, and among the most vigorous forces opposing him are the wearers of the union label.

Across the country, outside of the South, the story of union resistance to the employment, training and upgrading of Negroes is a dreary one, freighted with hypocrisy, arrogance and indifference. Though unions like the United Automobile Workers, the United Packinghouse Workers and individual locals of many other internationals are helping the Negro to get a fair shake, they are bright spots in a generally grim picture. The hard fact is that organized labor, once seen as an agent of advancement for Negro workers, has now emerged as the unyielding bastion of white supremacy in employment. Moreover, labor bias is being abetted by government—state, city and Federal—and with public funds.

One of the most blatant areas of racial discrimination is the building trades. In this industry, unions do the hiring—and they hire only their members. Since they admit few Negroes to membership, Negroes are thereby blocked from getting skilled jobs in construction.

Through a variety of devices and subterfuges, building-trades unions have kept Negroes off construction jobs and out of the apprenticeship programs that are the major avenue to union membership. In some unions, Negroes are barred outright. In others, they are assigned to separate locals or admitted in token numbers.

New York City's Local 2 of the United Association of Journeyman Plumbers and Steamfitters furnishes a picture that reflects the makeup of too many unions in the North. (Local 2's most prominent alumnus is AFL-CIO chief George Meany, a former

continued

DRAWINGS BY FRANKLIN MCMAHON

Here's why the new Yashica Minimatic C is

The Perfect Family Camera

DAD is delighted with the sparkling color slides he gets on vacation or weekend drives in the country... and because he can concentrate on just the picture he wants instead of fussing with the camera.

MOTHER just loves snapping the baby... and she takes pictures anytime at all, indoors or out, even with flash if there's not enough light. And she has an album of baby pictures every mother would adore.

SISTER is thrilled with it at school. She plans to keep a photo record of all the important events in these happiest days of her life. She knows, too, that the camera will give her years of faithful service.

BROTHER is a sports fan, and he's always in there shooting. Now he's always ready for fast-moving action, and certain he'll get championship black & white prints he'll be proud to mount and display.

LYNX — Match-needle exposure with super-fast lens, shutter. Under $90.

FLASH-O-SET II — Just point and shoot; built-in flash. Under $55.

The new YASHICA MINIMATIC C is so automatic all you do is point, focus and press the button for some of the finest color slides and prints you've ever taken. The secret is in the new-type "Programed Shutter" electric eye system which takes the guesswork out of picture-making. It sets the speed and lens opening for you in an instant, for exactly the right exposure every time. If the light's too dim, a warning needle tells you to switch to flash. Your dealer will be happy to show you how easy the Minimatic C is to operate. Under $70 CASE EXTRA

SINGLE LENS REFLEXES from $130 to 200.

TWIN-LENS REFLEXES from $36 to $80.

MOVIE 8's from $70 to $160.

HALF-FRAME 35mm's from $45 to $80.

For more information:

YASHICA®

YASHICA Inc., 50-17 Queens B'lvd., Woodside 77, N.Y. • Dept. 2

In construction, Negroes' chances are better in the South than North plumber.) Local 2 hasn't a single Negro among its 3,300 members, though there are 1,000 white plumbers from outside the city now working in New York. Local 28 of the International Sheet Metal Workers Union (AFL-CIO) has no Negroes in its 3,300 membership, nor are there any among its 75 apprentices.

In the building trades, the union's role is all-decisive. Builders who contract to erect a structure apply to the various unions for men to do the job. The union sends its members to the contractor. Since members are graduates of the union's apprenticeship program (which restricts Negroes), there aren't going to be any Negroes referred to the builder.

Under a system that favors relatives or friends of current members, the building unions have also barred many qualified white applicants from their apprenticeship programs. At the current rate of admission, too few apprentices are being taken on even to replace those journeymen who die or retire.

The construction unions refuse to enlarge their apprenticeship ranks, even though the Department of Commerce predicted that building growth will require 122 skilled men in 1965 for every 100 employed in 1955.

If union exclusion has been tough on some whites, it has been murder on Negroes. In 1950, Negroes made up 13 percent of the population of New York City, but they constituted only 1.5 percent of the city's apprentices. Ten years later, Negroes had risen to 22 percent of New York's population, but they were still only 2 percent of the apprentice force.

New York's building-trades picture is not appreciably different from that of other Northern cities.

Interestingly, although the Negro is usually confined to a segregated local in the South, he has a better chance of getting work on a construction project than do his brethren in the North. At a White House conference last summer, Vice-President Lyndon Johnson told labor leaders that the lowest number of skilled Negroes to be found on the job anywhere in the nation occurs in Brooklyn—where it is 3 percent. By contrast, in some Southern cities, Negro employment in the building trades runs as high as 40 percent.

Herbert Hill, labor secretary of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and perhaps the man most active in pressing for an end to union bias, says, "The pattern of Negro exclusion from the major AFL-CIO building-trades unions continues unabated even in cities and states where there has long been a fair-employment-practices enactment." While many of the building-trades unions have succeeded in barring Negroes from their ranks, they have often done so with the help of public agencies — and with the taxpayers' funds.

Washburne Trade School in Chicago is one example. Though supported by public funds, the school itself does not select the students who come to it to serve an apprenticeship. Apprentices enter Washburne usually through joint union-industry apprenticeship committees. There are only a handful of Negroes at Washburne. The highest percentage of Negro trade students go to Chicago's Dunbar Vocational School, a predominantly Negro institution whose programs lack union backing.

Union officials react angrily to the accusations of bias. Some have presented bizarre explanations for the absence of Negroes in their unions and apprenticeship programs. An official of a New York elevator constructors' union told an investigating commission that there were three Negroes among his 1,400 members because Negroes were afraid of heights. Another union official claimed the lack of Negroes in his organization could be traced to Negro fear of welding flashes.

Others have flatly defended the right of a union to restrict its membership to certain ethnic groups. "Look," says William Zach, public relations director of the AFL-CIO, "I couldn't get a job in some of the unions that are traditionally Irish or Italian because I'm a Jew. It has nothing to do with color."

While the building-trades unions are notorious examples of blue-collar bigotry in the North, they are by no means exceptions. Union restrictions on Negroes range over a wide spectrum of occupations. In

continued

Meany confesses labor cannot eliminate bias without government help many railroad, maritime and printing unions, for example, the picture is almost equally bleak.

On railroads, the job of baggage clerk is one from which Negroes are generally excluded. Instead, they are employed as freight handlers. But the baggage-clerk category is more desirable and leads to the job of ticket seller. Both positions are represented by the Brotherhood of Railway and Steamship Clerks, AFL-CIO. In practical terms, since Negroes cannot get baggage-clerk jobs, they cannot become ticket sellers, and union-negotiated separate seniority lists have frozen them into this unfavorable status.

The railroads are not the only industry in which Negroes are permanently boxed into low-job categories. In the West Coast Division of the Seafarers' International Union, Negro members can only obtain jobs as galley stewards or messboys, no matter what their qualifications.

Though the Negro drive has been concentrated on eliminating discrimination in large "bread and butter" unions, civil-rights groups have begun to try to open small but important technical unions that have never had Negro members. The NAACP and other organizations are now negotiating with numerous Hollywood craft unions to try to get more Negroes into the production end of the motion-picture and television industries, where they are now rare.

The plight of the Negro worker, denied the opportunity to learn or practice a skill, is now critical. "As a result of automation . . ." says the NAACP's Herbert Hill, "unskilled and semiskilled job occupations are disappearing at the rate of 35,000 a week, or nearly two million a year. What for the white worker has been a mild or temporary recession is for the Negro worker a major depression."

Since the bulk of Negro labor is unskilled, the combined effect of labor bias and automation has been devastating to the black worker. Says Hill, "More than 50 percent of all the unskilled Negro workers in the country were unemployed for substantial periods since 1958, and it is evident that the unskilled Negro, 45 years of age and over, who has lost his job will never again work at productive, gainful employment. These are discouraging figures."

Labor spokesmen have bitterly assailed Hill and Negroes who criticize union racial practices. AFL-CIO President Meany told a convention of Negro union men, "The strongest single force behind every civil-rights proposal is the AFL-CIO. In education, in housing, in public accommodations, on voting rights—all the way down the line, on every front—we spearhead the fight for equal justice for all." Though he admits discrimination is still a problem in some unions, Meany says, "When anyone tries to say that the trade unions are the chief barrier to the economic opportunities of Negroes in this country, I resent it and I reject it, for it is simply not true."

But the Negro American Labor Council, before which Meany spoke, was itself organized by Negroes within the AFL-CIO who believed that body was unable—or unwilling—to eliminate bias within its ranks. The NALC's head, A. Philip Randolph, the only Negro vice-president of the AFL-CIO, had wrangled many times with Meany over the issue and formed the NALC to force the pace against union discrimination.

Meany and other union leaders say part of labor's problem is connected with the structure of the AFL-CIO itself. The AFL-CIO is an association of international unions that, in turn, have local affiliates. Most often, it is the local that discriminates, and the AFL-CIO has no control over the local. It can either persuade the international union to try to bring the local into line, or it can vote to expel the international union —a sanction that it considers inappropriate in bias cases.

Meany has testified in favor of a Federal fair-employment-practices law with sanctions against offending employers as well as unions, "because the trade-union movement is not strong enough, in itself, to bring about the necessary changes." But trade-union discrimination continues strong even in cities like New York and Philadelphia, where such laws have been on the books for years.

Two recent incidents help explain why. To protest alleged discrimination in the building trades in New York last summer, Negroes there picketed, marched at public-building construction sites, threw themselves in front of trucks, climbed cranes and chained themselves to gates. On one day, 3,000 pickets marched.

Shaken, city and state officials conferred with Negro leaders and union officials; Mayor Robert Wagner appointed a special three-man "action panel" to look into the dispute, and Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller persuaded the militants to call off their demonstrations with the promise that the state would use its offices to persuade construction unions to take in more Negroes. Union leaders vehemently denied they were discriminating, charged "blackmail" by pressure groups. After numerous conferences, "deadlines," recrimination and work stoppages at the sites, a handful of Negroes were taken into the unions. But the situation remained much as it had been before the furor, and Negroes charged that the Mayor and the Governor had yielded to union political pressures.

In Washington, last July, the Labor Department issued strict new standards designed to eliminate racial discrimination in apprenticeship programs registered with the Federal Government. After protest by both unions and management in the construction industry, however, the Department softened its proposal to make it conform to a voluntary plan that the industry itself had advocated. Perhaps the most revealing part of the Department's revamped proposal was a recommendation that the program's standards be enforced by its Bureau of Apprenticeship and Training, an agency that many investigators believe lacks either the power or inclination to enforce nondiscrimination in apprenticeship programs. According to the NAACP's Hill, "This retreat by the Department of Labor illustrates the vast political pressure which the construction unions can bring to bear, federally or locally, to prevent a change in the status quo."

In a few cities, such as Cleveland and Detroit, where Negroes have made limited breakthroughs beyond the labor curtain, their gains have been in direct proportion to the amount of political muscle they could show. Detroit's 8,000-member Trade Union Labor Council, an affiliate of Randolph's NALC, helped elect that city's mayor, has hammered out agreements with 18 out of 19 construction unions calling for admission of Negroes, and runs its own program to train Negro youth for skilled employment.

Because of decades of labor discrimination, Negroes would still be low men on the employment pole even if all bars were dropped. Some Negro leaders have demanded that Negro applicants be given priority in getting into apprenticeship programs, into unions and into jobs.

This proposal for compensation has been vigorously opposed by union leaders, from George Meany on down, and disapproved by President Kennedy, who said, "I don't think we can undo the past."

Three days after the President declared it was unrealistic for Negroes to expect compensation for past injustices, a newspaper revealed that the Federal Government had offered California Indians $29 million for millions of acres that whites took from their forefathers during the California gold rush over 100 years ago!

The harsh truth is that with "equal treatment" and "nondiscriminatory" processing of Negro applicants for apprenticeships in unions that have barred Negroes for years, a nonwhite applicant would be too old to qualify by the time his number came up. A similar dilemma exists with actual jobs. Long-standing discrimination against Negro workers has kept them at the bottom of the union referral pile. Since many white workers are among the unemployed, Negro workers with lower seniority would only be recalled if there were full employment. Not only is this condition unlikely, but why should the Negro worker have to wait for it? Thus, some Negro leaders argue that the previous quota—zero—should be changed, for an unspecified time, to a positive quota that would help redress the years of discrimination.

While neither the Federal Government nor the unions can be expected to come up with as ready a solution as that offered the Indians, the plight of the Negro worker will require a lot more serious concern than Government or labor has yet been willing to show. It's time to stop ducking the issue. It has shown it won't go away.

"Meet Mr. Dodd, one of our editors. He knows the business from A to B."

NEWS

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR

W. Willard Wirtz, Secretary

Labor

WEEKLY NEWS DIGEST

Week of December 30, 1963

IN THIS ISSUE:

Secretary of Labor Wirtz Comments on Race and Economics in Television Interview

Quote by the Late President John F. Kennedy on Race and Labor

Secretary Wirtz Comments on Racial and Economic Discrimination

Secretary of Labor W. Willard Wirtz in a recent CBS Television appearance with other members of the Cabinet had the following answers to questions put by the announcer-interviewer:

QUESTION: "What are the big problems in your field as we go into a new administration and a new year?"

ANSWER: "I'm talking about the fact that increasingly, lack of education, poverty, unemployment, are inherited characteristics--- not inherited through the personal genes, inherited through the economic genes in this country, of slums, of inadequate education and that kind of thing. I'm talking about the fact that as more of us do better and better, there are a few of us who are doing worse and worse and in answer to your question, I think the most serious challenge we face is the challenge of the development of a group who are left out. Now, it's been the group who have been discriminated against racially. We're getting that problem licked. Discrimination may be the easiest part of that problem. Now, we've got to take care of the problem of the disadvantaged that built up over a hundred years. These people have got to be trained to take advantage of the new opportunity which they have. They have a right to be ready and a good many of them are not ready today. There's a whole group of things that lie in this human economic rights area which I think constitute the most serious challenge we face."

(MORE)

QUESTION: "What is the civil rights bill going to do for Negroes if they cannot get jobs?"

ANSWER: "Well, it won't do enough for them if they cannot get jobs. The march on Washington was a march for freedom and for jobs. Especially in the north, the discontent of the Negro is very much a consequence of this unemployment. The Negro unemployment rate is over twice what the white unemployment rate is. The Negro boy and girl under the age of twenty-two or thereabouts, has only one chance out of five--has one chance out of five of not getting a job. Twenty percent of them are unemployed today. It won't be enough in answer to your question, to get rid of discrimination unless we get rid of disadvantage too, and that's going to be as hard a job as the other was."

QUESTION: "Mr. Wirtz, for a short time now we've had a new President. What is your own horseback interpretation of his basic philosophy about labor?"

ANSWER: "It would be presumptious to answer except in the more personal terms, but I feel no hesitation at all about that from the--from the work with President Johnson in connection with the President's Committee on Equal Employment Opportunity, from working with him in other connections. There is a complete awareness of the necessity of the system working. There is an also a complete awareness of a necessity of people achieving individual human dignity. Now, with this combination, you get most of the answers that follow. In every problem that's come up, I find a complete understanding, a complete awareness, a deep principle which is built around the importance of the individual. The rest of the labor problems stem, or answers stem from that."

(MORE)

* * * *

Quote on Race and Labor by the Late President John F. Kennedy

"This year, I believe, will go down as one of the turning points in the history of American labor. Foremost among the rights of labor is the right to equality of opportunity; and these recent months, one hundred years after the Emancipation Proclamation, have seen the decisive recognition by the major part of our society that all our citizens are entitled to full membership in the national community. The gains of 1963 will never be reversed. They lay a solid foundation for the progress we must continue to make in the months and years to come. We can take satisfaction that 1963 marks a long step forward toward assuring all Americans the opportunities for life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness pledged by our forefathers in the Declaration of Independence."

John F. Kennedy
(From his Labor Day Message)

# # # #

21- Labor

Note: After five years of sending news letter to southern editors, I discontinued the practice early in the war. Labor news gets more space in recent years than in pre-war days. However, I am sending you the story in this letter because it has not been in the papers.

Pardon my editors' list being badly out of date - names on it that perhaps should be off, and many new ones acquired more recently.

L. R. M.

highlights from . . .

MANPOWER

Labor

challenge of the 1960s

U. S. Department of Labor. James P. Mitchell, Secretary

21- Labor

MR. UMHEY

RADIO STATIONS Run by Labor

By FREDERICK F. UMHEY

Executive Secretary, International Ladies' Garment Workers Union

THE application filed by the International Ladies' Garment Workers Union for permission to establish four frequency modulation (FM) radio stations marks the initial step for the entrance of this union into the radio field for the purposes of adult education and community cultural work. The I.L.G.W.U.'s petition is now before the Federal Communications Commission.

In recent years the general trend of adult cultural and educational activity, a trade union activity in which the I.L.G.W.U. has been a trail-blazer for several decades, has been undergoing a change. The old pattern of classroom work and study groups, which reached its peak in the last prewar year, has given way to other forms of mass education, with the accent largely on community interests and general civic endeavors.

The strains and stresses of the war have, in part, been responsible for this change, and the advent of more modern opportunities for cultural and educational satisfaction has added emphasis to these new trends.

Radio, and especially FM—the use of which is soon to be allocated by the Federal Communications Commission to various representative groups and elements in the country—has opened even wider channels for cultural work among the masses of the people. The Garment Workers' effort to establish four radio stations in as many leading communities aims at taking fuller advantage of these new opportunities. In seeking to obtain licenses to operate radio stations the I.L.G.W.U. bases its request on the principle that the airwaves, the channels for broadcasting operation, belong to the people. In this claim it bases itself on the law itself, the Communications Act of 1934, which seeks to prevent the growth of a vested interest in broadcasting by any single group of the community, stipulates that existing stations may have no advantage over others seeking to enter the field, and declares that the door must be kept open for new applicants better able to serve the public interest.

The title to the radio spectrum in which stations operate, therefore, is expressly reserved to the people. The radio channels belong to the people.

Still, it need not be assumed that the licenses at present being sought by labor to operate FM radio stations will be granted without difficulty or without strenuous opposition from the interests which today already are in control of nearly all the standard (AM) broadcasting stations all over the land.

Like many another government agency, the Federal Communications Commission is beset by constant pressures from ever-active, clever and well-financed lobbyists. It must be kept in mind that more than two-thirds of all stations, including substantially all the powerful stations, are affiliated with one or more of the four national networks, further concentrating control. Control of the networks themselves is exercised by a few big advertisers and advertising agencies. To cite a few facts:

▶ Twenty-six per cent of Columbia Broadcasting System's revenues in 1944 came from four advertisers and 38 per cent from four advertising agencies.

▶ Twenty-five per cent of the Blue Network business came from four advertisers and 31 per cent came from four advertising agencies.

▶ More than half of all network revenues came from two industries—drugs and toilet goods, 29.9 per cent; food and food beverages, 22.4 per cent.

▶ The largest single group of broadcast station operators are the big newspaper publishers, approximately 250 stations—of a total of about 900—being owned or affiliated with newspapers.

▶ In more than 110 cities, where there is only one newspaper publisher and only one radio station, the radio station is owned by or affiliated with the newspaper publisher.

▶ Ten of the clear-channel stations—equivalent of more than 444 local stations—are owned by members of the National Association of Manufacturers. The N.A.M.'s control of a high percentage of radio does not stop there. Forty-six corporations listed among the largest contributors to the N.A.M. bought more than $71,000,000 worth of time on the four major networks in 1944. The N.A.M. also conducts an intensive campaign to secure free time for programs to present "the businessman's point of view."

Guardians of Public Interest?

Since the grant of a license for broadcasting is predicated on the prospective station's service to the public interest, a few more facts on this subject may be not amiss.

The effect of American business, including the American radio business, serving as a self-proclaimed "guardian of the public interest," is revealed in an FCC check of a sample radio week in 1944. In that week the CBS educational program "Invitation to Learning" was carried by only thirty-nine of the 136 stations to which it was made available; the NBC "National Radio Pulpit," a non-commercial religious program in cooperation with the Federal Council of Churches, was carried by 60 stations, rejected by 79. "Labor for Victory," a program alternately presented by the A. F. of L. and the C.I.O., and at the time the only labor program carried on any of the four major networks, was rejected by 104 of 139 NBC stations.

There is an obvious relationship between the failure of stations to perform public services, as required by law, and their huge profits. It is profitable to carry an hour of recorded music interspersed with commercial spot announcements; it costs money to broadcast a "Labor for Victory" or a "University of Chicago Round Table."

Origin and Status of FM

Ten years ago Major Edwin Armstrong of Columbia University developed the new system of broadcasting known as FM. Because it made possible the opening of a new broadcasting band with room for additional stations, the development met with strong opposition from the Radio Corporation of America, its subsidiary, the NBC, and other entrenched radio interests. These interests recognized the inevitability of FM development, but were determined to deter its growth for as long a time as possible.

Despite this strong opposition, the FCC, a few years later, under the leadership of former Chairman James L. Fly, began allocating frequencies for FM broadcasting. Experimental licenses were granted. To prevent FM from being seized by existing broadcasters and by large-scale newspaper interests, a rule was made that no more than six FM stations could be licensed to any one interest. Moreover, the rule gave an advantage to those newcomer applicants who proposed to render a service distinct from any available in the community. Also, specific frequencies were reserved for non-commercial educational broadcasting.

The I.L.G.W.U. stations will be located, if permits are granted, in New York City, Philadelphia, Boston and Chattanooga. It is the union's intention to make these stations self-supporting through the sale of a part of their time, although they will not be conducted as profit-making institutions.

In anticipation of the granting of the applications, the I.L.G.W.U. has set up in these states corporate entities known as Unity Broadcasting Corporations. The latter are capitalized at $50,000 each, except in New York, where the capitalization is $100,000. To make these radio stations truly representative of local community life and reflective of local cultural and civic needs, the organizations in these cities will be given full autonomy and control in carrying out the practical work of their respective stations. The corporations, to begin with, will be officered by local people, with the cooperation of local community leaders.

While the parent organization has arranged for 51 per cent of the stock of each individual station to be placed at the disposal of local labor groups, and has supplied initial funds sufficient for the construction of the stations, the union intends to stand by these enterprises and to offer them necessary aid until they find themselves on a sound footing.

Community Service Main Idea

The program planning for these stations is predicated on the thought that each of them should become the most articulate town-meeting hall, the outstanding music hall, the most attractive cultural center in its locality.

With the parent body's moral and financial support, especially in the early stages, it is intended to give these stations an opportunity to serve their communities in the development of public health education, in community industry-labor relationships, in consumer-farmer understanding—in a popular and flexible manner for adults and juveniles alike. These varied activities —ranging from discussion of religious ideals to handling of child problems—are to be guided, in addition to the station's management, with the aid of community representatives closely concerned with these programs, be they outstanding religious leaders, local devotees of the arts, or women's club leaders.

The principal idea behind this plan, however, is to build a closer tieup between union membership in the community, all other public-minded elements in the community, and the interests and problems which stir the nation at large. Through these stations, the I.L.G.W.U. will strive to spur among its members a wider interest in their home towns, to make their communities better places to live in and to encourage among these wage-earners a deeper and more sustained appreciation of cultural and educational values and advantages and, incidentally, a deeper attachment to the labor movement of which they are a part.

Further copies of this reprint are available from:
Educational Department, ILGWU
1710 Broadway
New York 19, N.Y.

21-Labor

DEPARTMENT OF THE ARMY
WASHINGTON 25, D. C.

ARMED FORCES TALK

220

THIS TALK IS DISTRIBUTED FOR THE USE OF COMMANDERS IN INFORMING PERSONNEL.

NOTE TO DISCUSSION LEADER

This TALK is about organized labor—labor unions—in the United States. It tells why unions were organized, what they try to accomplish, and how they operate.

In presenting this TALK our purpose is to explain it as factually and impartially as possible. Only by understanding labor can we discuss intelligently its relations with management; and only through fair-minded discussion and action can the relationship develop into a smoothly working one.

Since labor has organized into practically all major industries—steel, automobiles, moving pictures, chemicals, coal, etc.—and includes approximately one-fourth of the Nation's working force, its activities should be of interest to every citizen. As was shown in the past war, labor's part in national security is a particularly vital one, and for that reason this subject should be of special interest to the serviceman.

ORGANIZED LABOR IN THE UNITED STATES

Introduction

FIFTEEN MILLION working men and women—about one-fourth of all the employed persons in the United States—have organized themselves into labor unions. When we speak of "organized labor" we mean these unions. There are more than 200 of them organized nationally, with about 60,000 branches called "locals."

How did labor unions come into being? What are their purposes and how do they try to achieve them? What have been their accomplishments—their shortcomings? Why are they important? These are some of the questions that we will try to answer.

Why Are Unions Organized?

There isn't much that an individual worker, by himself, can do when his employer does not furnish satisfactory working conditions, hands him a pay cut which he thinks is unwarranted, or puts him on a less desirable job without apparent or just cause. But there is a good deal that all the employees in a given plant can do if they act together. "In union there is strength." Employees join unions because in unions they have more strength than any of them possess as individuals.

The purpose of unions is to help workers obtain improved working conditions, higher wages, shorter hours, and just treatment from employers. Unions seek to improve the lot of workingmen in general and to achieve standards for them which are considered to be in keeping with our way of life. While labor unions are concerned primarily with conditions under which their members work, they frequently take a stand or bring their influence to

AGO 1-1531-A—771940—48

Thought you would like a copy of this quotation
Jr

Guy
This is nice!

ABRAHAM LINCOLN ON LABOR

Inasmuch as most good things are produced by Labor, it follows that all such things ought to belong to those whose labor produced them. But it has happened in all ages of the world that some have labored and others, without labor, have enjoyed a large proportion of the fruits. This is wrong and should not continue. To secure to each laborer the whole product of his labor as nearly as possible is a worthy object of any good government.

"But I Can Make You Happy, Dear!"

HITLER'S Private War

If you've ever read the Bible, remember—

◆ they had unions in those days too

National RELIGION & LABOR Foundation

618

106 Carmel St. New Haven 11, Conn.

AMERICAN PEOPLE generally have only recently become aware of the militant trade-union movement, impinged upon our national conscience for a mere dozen years or so. Yet unions are as old as history, going back to the beginning of records. For example:

"On the 10th of the month builders at work on the temple rushed out and sat down behind the chapel exclaiming 'We are hungry and there are yet 18 days before the next payday.' They would not work until the king agreed to hear their complaints. Two days later, Pharaoh went to the temple and ordered relief given to the masons, but on the 16th day they struck again. On the 19th day they broke loose and raised a mob at the governor's palace and finally got their demands."

The foregoing decipher and translation by G. Maspero, Egyptologist, covers an incident of some 3000 years ago, in 1100 BC. Tens of thousands of picture writings, heiroglyphics, tablets, relics, papyri and other documents unearthed in the past century in all the lands of the ancients, including those beyond the pale of Rome, attest to the eternal struggle of workers for justice.

Trade unions were legally sanctioned by the Pharoah Amasis in Egypt; by the Jus Coeundi of Solon in Athens; by the Emperor Numa Pompilius in Rome about 600 BC, under whose direction the right of workers to organize was enscribed on the famous Twelve Tables. It should be noted here that American workers received similar inalienable rights only in 1937 AD.

☆ ☆ ☆

THE PRE-CHRISTIAN unions of Greece were known as eranoi and thiasoi; those of Rome as collegia, sodalicia, corpora. They were brotherhoods and the sole religious societies of the poor—and they were very specifically trade unions. Their members, who paid initiation fees and dues, were numbered in millions throughout the lands mentioned in the Bible, including Judea.

There were unions of farmers, winegrowers, ox-drivers, fishermen and sailors, as well as unions in every city trade. There were craft unions and industrial unions, and the aim of all generally was a classless society and peace. They fought for the rights of the lowly people, and for democracy—and they practiced political action even as you and I.

In fact, they practised it so well in ancient Rome that there was a period—379 to 373 BC, known as the solitudo magistratuum—when the patrician class was unable to elect a senate at all, the plebians holding all elective offices.

The small but immensely powerful upper crust of Roman society, the gens families and optimate class which lived on the labor of others, could not stomach such rising democracy, and soon produced one of history's greatest fiends — Appius Claudius — during whose reign the Roman conquests were conceived to strengthen the ruling class. The unions, alas, were lulled to sleep with promises of unlimited work for the state, making armaments. Fighting wars was then considered fit only for the noble, workers being too tainted to die gloriously in battle. Would that it were still so.

☆ ☆ ☆

THE CONQUESTS opened. Cities and nations were levelled by Roman legions, and slaves by countless thousands shipped back to Rome. Whole countries ran with the blood of innocents, while lands were handed over to Roman generals and scions of the gens families. Our histories still refer to this as glory. It fills our textbooks, while virtually all records of the every-

THE NATIONAL RELIGION

The organization of labor is one of t our time. This movement has much in cepts of Biblical religion. Both demand of these,' the abolition of enforced organization of society, including the hood. The Foundation exists to pro

RELIGION & LABOR FOUNDATION

is one of the major humanitarian movements of as much in common with the principles and pre- oth demand equity, justice, the rights of the 'least enforced poverty. Both seek the humanitarian luding the economic system, in terms of Brother- sts to promote these ends.

all
and s of cy—even l in s a

the pat a all rful gens ived om-soon atest ring were ling d to vork ght-only nted that ities man houhole nnoover the efer oks, ery-

day, the lowly people have been expunged.

This slavocracy extended the power, wealth and degeneracy of the Roman upper classes, and established a philosophy of brutality unknown in earlier times, although exceeded since by modern fascism.

Any vestige of a true Roman economic system was smothered in the endless shipments of slaves, while lands which had been free in the past were taken from people who had been small farmers for generations and added to the loot of the wealthy.

In the two centuries prior to the birth of Jesus, there were many great uprisings, strikes of the unions, slaves and freedmen, against the inhuman degradations they suffered at the hands of the optimate classes who controlled the state and the military.

☆ ☆ ☆

SOME OF THESE are well worth noting, as these uprisings of the common people were the sole drive against the bestiality of the times. First of note in this period was the armed resistance of Veriathus, a shepherd of Lusitanian Spain, in 149 BC. For 20 years this worker led thousands of followers — farmers, slaves, workers, freedmen — and defeated huge consular armies of Rome sent in to pacify the rebellious possession. In the end, the Romans conquered through cupidity and deceit.

Next followed the so-called Servile Wars in Sicily, breadbasket of Rome. The branded Syrian slave, Eunus, born in Apamea, near Nazareth, raised armies in 143 BC overthrew tyrants, liberated cities and held sway over the island. His ranks swelled to over 200,000 fighters who made him their king. When he was finally defeated, his followers, brave fighters for freedom, were crucified on the cross of the ignoble.

But within ten years another Servile War was opened by the new occupants of Sicilian prisons, dungeons, underground factories and slave-farms — this time under the leadership of Athenion and Cleon, the former born also in Apamea, which later was the birthplace of Paul the Apostle. The people under Athenion were again put down, the survivors hunted like beasts, and thousands spiked to crosses along the highways to Rome.

In 130 BC there was another great uprising under Aristonicus in Pergamus, not far from Palestine. The greatest of all was yet to come, and in 74 BC, a Thracian shepherd who had been captured, enslaved, and forced to become a gladiator in the pits rose against the degenerate Roman state. This was the celebrated Spartacus. Behind him the dispossessed and hungry and miserable and oppressed rallied by scores of thousands in a monstrous strike against Rome.

☆ ☆ ☆

THE FIRST AIM of Spartacus was merely to escape from Italy. But, as campaign after campaign was fought and won, as great consular armies of the ruling classes were outgeneralled and defeated by the Spartacan forces which swelled to 300,000 soldiers, the cause became greater than mere escape.

In four years, some ten major campaigns were fought up and down the Italian peninsula, and in the end the great Spartacus was killed in an unwise assault following disruption in the ranks of his commanders. In this last great battle for freedom, 60,000 of the peoples' forces were slain, and the Appian Way became a long lane of bloody crucifixes.

We are now near the dawn of the Advent, and I have tried to give you something of the political picture of the times. Through the centuries the people had built and maintained their unions with the greatest of sacrifice, opposing Rome and the Caesars whom corrupted history brings to us in heroic mold. Prior to the birth of Jesus, the entire fight for democracy, justice, freedom, decency, for anything and everything wholesome, for the right to legally marry and raise families instead of living like beasts, was carried on through the unions in every state of proconsular Rome.

☆ ☆ ☆

FOLLOWING THE DEFEAT of Spartacus, Rome suppressed the unions in 58 BC, after centuries of legal trade-unionism. The organizations went underground, but the deathless yearning for freedom continued. Into this cauldron of struggling humanity with the corrupt of Rome astride the known lands of the world, Jesus was born and worked among men.

Now — here is the point of this fragment of true history. Jesus demanded social equality and democracy, as the unions had been demanding for hundreds of years. Where else could the aspirations of Jesus — a working class, not a Sanhedrin Jew — find listeners, save among the ranks of the oppressed? Where else could the apostles find friends and refuge after the crucifixion? "The just are persecuted," said Matthew.

Indeed, archeological research has already shown that the trade-unions were the very cradle of Christianity in its pure and undefiled sense. It has likewise been established that such great characters as Stephen, James, Paul, Peter, Luke, Zachias, John, Clement, Pudens, Titus, Phoebe, Aquila, Priscilla, Lydia, Philologus, Timotheus, Philemon, Epaphras, and others were associated with the unions in positions of leadership. And Jesus Himself was a carpenter, a craft organized back through all antiquity.

Precise history, established through excavation and research during the past century, but censored from the eyes of common people since its discovery, reveals the fact that it was the unions which endorsed, protected and formed Christianity through the first three centuries of its then nameless existence. Christianity became the continuation of their centuries-long fight.

☆ ☆ ☆

UNEARTHED DOCUMENTS in many forms, and fragments of historians' writings which escaped wilful destruction in later years, amply prove this. The unions of antiquity were careful to preserve their records, some 1500 having been unearthed in Pompeii alone.

But such precise records were entirely missing from the ruins explored by our archeologists covering the period following the infamous massacres of Diocletian in 303 AD. For in that fateful year the active, progressive sections of the population of Rome and all its possessions and subject lands were set upon, silenced or massacred in one of history's most infamous butcheries.

The ultimate nail was driven into the coffin of early progress by the Emperor Constantine at the Nicine Council in 325 AD, at which the right of people to combine and organize was done away with in finality. No excavations covering the centuries after this have revealed any union records. The uninterrupted written history of the unions stops abruptly, confirming the extent of the crimes of Diocletian.

☆ ☆ ☆

CONSTANTINE, who signed the death-warrant of the free trade-unions, also sounded the death-knell of Rome itself, and opened the door to the long, dismal middle-ages and the backward march of feudalism. Likewise, he it was who perverted the original democratic concepts of Jesus the Organizer into politicalized ecclesiastical power — who unlimbered that ecclesiastical machinery which through centuries built great churches but lost the common touch.

So much for history. The source material for all this was a monumental work entitled "The Ancient Lowly," compiled by an American, sometime employed by the U. S. Bureau of Labor in a seemingly more honest intellectual period. He lived from 1831 to 1902, and published this thoroughly documented work in two volumes, the last in 1900. His name was Osborne Ward.

I have tried to show that if there is any group which should seek to understand and support the trade-union movement of today, it is the democratic churches. Every effort has been made in recent times to divorce the unions and their millions of members from all society and hold them up as veritable creations of the evil one.

☆ ☆ ☆

NOT ALL PAST labor movements have invited church support, choosing a narrow outlook, interested in limited financial gains while overlooking the need for establishing a broad peoples' movement embracing the churches, labor, family-type farmers, professionals, housewives and all everyday people. This cannot be said of the CIO, whose aims since its inception parallel the aims of all decent thinking citizens.

Too often in the past some churches have been concerned only with serving the well-to-do, with the status quo, with their position as an ecclesiastical machine rather as an humble religion. Even today, we hear a call for a new holy war. And there are no holy wars. The paramount issue of today is continued but for more democratic peace, so that the people of our country and of other countries may live in genuine freedom, rebuild the torn earth, and prosper.

The unthinkable next war, now being blueprinted and sanctified as holy, must be prevented by the progressive people in unions, and the progressive people in the churches of all denominations.

From an address by Forrest Emerson, Public Relations Director of the CIO farm equipment workers, at the national conference of the Methodist Federation for Social Action (Evanston, Ill., 1947), which has been widely reproduced in church, labor and other periodicals and publications. This leaflet is contributed to the National Religion & Labor Foundation by the farm equipment and tractor builders of the CIO.

Labor

the PAC IS HERE TO STAY

by Sidney Hillman

When Philip Murray and the CIO Executive Board organized the Political Action Committee, in July, 1943, no time limit was set for its existence. They intended PAC to endure until its clearly defined objectives were realized.

Anyone who has troubled to acquaint himself with the CIO-PAC objectives knows that we are still quite far from their realization. That is why PAC is here to stay.

Last November, at the Seventh Annual Convention of the CIO in Chicago, a resolution was passed declaring that the committee's effectiveness in the recent national election justified its continued existence as a means by which the CIO and all progressive Americans may attain the great goals to which they are dedicated.

The original objectives of the PAC can be summed up in one sentence: To awaken the American people to their full responsibilities of citizenship that we may safeguard democracy against all evil.

The objectives are simple, but not easy to attain.

It is generally conceded that the foundation of our democracy lies in our right to vote and our responsibility to use that vote for the good of the nation. Men will die to obtain the right to vote, but unfortunately, when the right is theirs, too many tend to neglect it, and let others decide their current destiny. In presidential elections, even when the voting is very heavy, considerably more than a fourth of the eligible voters do not participate. The picture gets gloomier as one examines the percentage of eligible voters participating in gubernatorial elections, city elections, county elections, township and parish elections. Less than 30 per cent of the eligible voters usually participate in the election of mayors. Often fewer than 10 per cent participate in county or township elections.

This situation — bad enough in normal times—might prove disastrous in trying times such as these. For if this apathy continues, or is deliberately encouraged to continue, a pernicious minority might quietly usurp the power belonging to the people through the election of their candidates to all Government offices.

PAC is dedicated to the task of preventing such usurpation of power. Violently accused of attempting to "capture" the Democratic Party, and of attempting to "capture" the government for labor, PAC has also been accused of trying to foist a "foreign" conception of government on the American people. Any fair-minded person who followed PAC through its utterances and printed programs knows that our basic aim was and is merely to awaken the American people—labor, businessmen, small farmers, housewives—to the urgent need of participating in the affairs of the nation through political action.

We are convinced that if the people understand the issues, know the records of candidates, then turn out in great numbers to vote, the dangers to our democracy will melt away like a fair-weather cloud.

But the people need some organization to gather facts, compile records, and present them in a manner the people can understand. They need an educational institution for political action. They need PAC.

And that is why PAC is here to stay.

The Political Action Committee was established to educate the entire nation. It was not intended for 1944 alone. It was not created merely "to re-elect the President."

As long as the people need education in the functions of government; as long as the need exists to convince all sections of our community that they are parts of one community and, therefore, the interests of any section or group —farmers, workers, businessmen—are of importance to the rest; as long as the need exists to show that what is good for labor is good for the nation and what is good for the nation is good for labor; as long as it is necessary to teach our people to recognize the relation between economic security and a lasting peace; as long as it is necessary to organize people for political action—so long PAC will continue to function.

Future Activities Clearly Defined

Since it has been announced that PAC will continue, many people have inquired eagerly what we are going to do. It seems to me that future activities are clearly defined in our plan, "The People's Program for 1944," which has been widely circulated. Briefly, it calls for:

1. Total victory over our enemies, and all our effort to attain that victory.

2. The establishment of a foreign policy which will assure us a lasting peace.

3. A reconversion program which will assure full employment at fair wages as well as the protection of the people's interests.

4. Comprehensive planning of Public Works to help in a full-employment program and to assure nationally needed projects in flood control, soil conservation, rural electrification.

5. A program to assure the farmer a fair income.

6. The protection of the small businessman against monopolies.

7. The proper discharge of our obligation to our servicemen and women, not just with welcoming parades, but with concrete assistance to help them re-establish themselves in peacetime living.

8. The increase of our social security system as adequate protection of people in need.

9. The extension of equality of opportunity to all our people, and the eradication of racial discrimination.

To attain these objectives, we will work through educational and political action.

First of all, we assume that America is where Americans live. America is not in Washington, D. C., any more or less than it is in Oshkosh or Kalamazoo or any other place you wish to mention. Therefore, we must carry our program of education and organization wherever anyone lives in America.

Then we assume that you cannot have good government at the top and bad government at the bottom. In a democracy, good government begins with the lowest office in the smallest hamlet in the nation. Democracy can be destroyed in a 10 per cent vote in state or county elections. This conception has to be translated through all the communication channels.

The CIO-PAC action will be based on the idea that labor must join hands with progressive elements to fight for national and international security for the people.

This leads to one inevitable conclusion: PAC will have nothing to do with the creation or fostering of a third party on the national scene. During the recent campaign, we demonstrated that we are not encouraging such an idea. We supported a good many Democrats and we helped to defeat a good many Democrats. We also helped in the election of some Republicans and the unseating of others. Quite clearly, we did not judge candidates on the basis of party affiliations but on records.

Aims Remain Unchanged

We fought bitterly against any candidate with a bad labor record because we are convinced that labor-baiters in any public office are undesirable for all the people. We fought just as bitterly against isolationists, and for the same reasons. But we did not align ourselves exclusively with either party, nor did we attempt to create a third or labor party. Instead we tried to liberalize both. That we shall continue to do.

We also know that you cannot have a people's movement without participation of the people in that movement. For this reason, all our activities will be designed to allow participation by the people. The patterns of organization may be adjusted to varying circumstances, but basic aims and methods will not be changed.

The National Citizens Political Action Committee, which came into existence after the CIO Political Action Committee, will likewise continue along the lines it began and will extend its activities of co-operative action with all labor and progressive groups.

PAC Has Many Friends

PAC has many friends now. We won our friends by demonstrating our good will, our lack of secrecy, and the effectiveness of our methods. As a consequence of our work, the people in America are more politically aroused, and labor and liberal factions are closer to being united on political issues.

In the next year or two, PAC, through its many planned activities, will reach a vast new audience with its educational programs. We know that the number of our friends will increase. We have no secrets, and the people will find this out if they do not already know it. Our objectives are partisan—in favor of a functioning democracy. We will attract partisans among citizens whose faith in democracy remains unshaken. In time, people will recognize in PAC a bulwark against reaction and a protection against all anti-democratic forces.

The foregoing article has been reprinted from This Week Magazine. Copyright 1945 by the New York Tribune Incorporated. Additional copies of this article may be obtained from the national office of the Political Action Committee.

IN UNION

There is STRENGTH

BUT-

IT TAKES KNOWLEDGE Too!

GEORGIA WORKERS EDUCATION SERVICE

AND THERE ARE SO MANY PAINLESS WAYS TO LEARN WHAT YOU WANT TO KNOW.

Do You Want To Understand This Dizzy, Bizzy World of Ours?

We'll arrange FORUMS for your Union, get speakers who know what's what.

We'll help plan INSTITUTES and CONFERENCES for you so you and other active union members can talk things over.

We'll brighten up your union meetings with good, informative movies on this and that.

Maybe You Just Want To Have Fun?

That's easy. You can join a singing group, act in a union dramatics group, mess around with paints, or model in clay, or maybe make nice things out of leather, metal, wood.

You can learn to play all kinds of games and help plan good union parties for the kids and the grownups.

Or Lose Your Shyness in Union Meetings?

By learning about "Public Speaking" and "How to Run a Union Meeting."

By taking part in discussion groups which talk about How Trade Unions Developed, How Collective Bargaining Works.

And Really do a Bang-up Job for the Union in Your Plant

By taking a Shop Steward's Training Course.

And learning about the LABOR LAWS that protect you and your fellow workers.

You can now do any or all these things. The GWES is prepared to set up such groups, for study or play, wherever a group of union members wants to get together for them. All you've got to do is tell your local union officers that you and some other union members want this or that — and quick like a flash, the GWES will come in to give it to you and them.

Other Services Available to the Local

Besides setting up such groups as those above, GWES can help the local in other ways. Suppose you'd like to have some radio programs on the air to let your community know about what your Union wants. We can help you plan your program, secure speakers, write your radio scripts.

Or suppose you'd like to get a communuity or government agency to do some things about health or recreation facilities in your town. We'll send in a competent person to do the survey — help get action on it.

Or suppose you would like to have some books at the union hall for members to borrow, or pamphlets. We will have a circulating library from which your local can borrow.

If you would like to have some good movies at your local meetings, we can see that you have the projector, the movies, and some one to run them for you.

How to Reach Us

1. Tell your Union officers
2. Write or telephone

Frank McCallister, Director
Georgia Workers Education Service
353 Courtland St., N. E.
Atlanta 3, Ga.
Telephone — WAlnut 1961

What is GWES?

Georgia Workers Education Service is an association of representatives of the public, American Federation of Labor, and Congress of Industrial Organizations to provide a workers education service for Georgia to be administered without discrimination. It is financed by labor organizations, committees and foundations interested in the field of adult education. Accordingly, the Service is made available without cost to groups requesting it. The purposes are

1. To bring about more effective functioning of trade union members within their respective organizations and their respective communities.
2. To develop a more intelligent appreciation of the common interests of organized labor and the community as a whole.
3. To promote better human relations within the union movement and between the unions and the general public.

Executive Committee

The policy and program of GWES is governed by the following Executive Committee:

E. L. Abercrombie, Southern Representative, Laundry Workers International Union, AFL
William H. Crawford, District Director, United Steelworkers of America, CIO
Thomas W. Culpepper, President, Atlanta Division, Brotherhood of Sleeping Car Porters, AFL Kenneth Douty, Georgia Director, Textile Workers Union of America, CIO
Charles H. Gillman, Regional Director, CIO
George L. Googe, Southern Representative, AFL Carmen Lucia, Vice-President, United Hatters, Cap & Millinery Workers International Union, AFL

George S. Mitchell, Director of Veterans Services, Southern Regional Council

James Moore, President, Atlanta Local, United Transport Service Employees of America CIO

Ira De A. Reid, Professor of Sociology, Atlanta University

Thomas J. Starling, Southern Regional Director, International Union of Automobile, Aircraft & Agricultural Implement Workers of America, CIO

Paul L. Styles, Regional Director, National Labor Relations Board

Artie White, Atlanta Representative, International Ladies Garment Workers Union, AFL

Advisory Council

The Executive Committee is aided in its planning by an Advisory Council, consisting of the following members:

Elizabeth Bowles, Director, Industrial Department, YWCA

Harris P. Dawson, Jr., Regional Director, Bureau of Labor Statistics, U. S. Department of Labor

Grace Towns Hamilton, Executive Secretary, Atlanta Urban League

C. L. Harper, Executive Secretary, Georgia Teachers and Education Association

Joseph Jacobs, Director, Labor Service Bureau

Guion Griffis Johnson, Executive Secretary, Georgia Conference of Social Welfare

M. J. Merlin, Secretary of Local Branch, Jewish Labor Committee and Workmen's Circle

Henry J. Meyer, Chairman, Fourth Region, Wage Stabilization Board

Frederic Meyers, Regional Director, Labor Bureau of Middle West

Walter Paschall, News Editor, WSB

Harold L. Trigg, Associate Director, Southern Regional Council

THE LABOR COMMISSION of the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen (Box 577, Chapel Hill, N. C.) is preparing a series of six statements on current labor issues.
This is

NUMBER 1

Enemies of Unionism Winning the First Battle

As I write this the governor of Tennesse signs into law a bill outlawing the so-called "Closed Shop". Georgia will have done likewise before this reaches the printer. Nebraska and South Dakota started the push, Virginia and Arkansas followed, and the battles on the unions will doubtless win in most of the southern states and probably in the Republican-Republicrat combination in Congress.

It is not really a war on the Closed Shop but on the Union Shop. The Closed Shop, technically speaking, might be surrendered without great loss to the labor movement because it can easily breed evils, such as a petty labor monopoly, initiation fees so high that few can get in (such as a New York union charging ($1,000), and apprentice rules that deny freedom to enter a trade.

But the Union Shop is quite different. While the Closed Shop requires the employer to hire only such workers as the Closed Shop allows, the Union Shop leaves him freedom in hiring but requires the person hired to join the union; in other words, it makes all the beneficiaries of the union contract members of the union and denies that form of semi-scabbing practiced by those who receive all the benefits the union wins without contributing anything to it, for union contracts almost universally cover all employees, members or not.

The Religion and Labor Conference recently held in Atlanta passed the following resolution on the matter:

"The Union Shop--that is, one in which a majority of the workers require all the workers to be members of the union--is a democratic institution. Majority rule is a fundamental principle in our democracy. To prevent the Union Shop on the pretense that it is unfair to the non-union minority is, in fact, an injustice to the majority in the shop. The union members probably risked their jobs and certainly made sacrifices to get their union recognized, to obtain better wages and working conditions, and to maintain job security. For non-union workers to profiteer on these sacrifices by accepting the fruits and refusing to contribute morally and financially clearly is unjust. And yet, the state is being asked to legalize this injustice."

The legislators who thus seek to bind labor's strong arms will not win in the long run. They should read some labor history, such as the Taft-Vale decision in England and the law against general strikes recently repealed here. They need to be reminded that the injunction judge brought the Norris-LaGuardia Act and that the Smith-Connally Act proved to be a boon to John L. Lewis and the two railway brotherhoods who came so near tying up transportation. Unjust laws, laws that deny democracy, bring their own recompense in time.

By Alva W. Taylor

Mr Slade
Please talk to me about this
Mr Kelly

THE LABOR COMMISSION of the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen (Box 577, Chapel Hill, N.C.) is preparing a series of six statements on current labor issues.
This is . . . . . NUMBER 2

The Dollar Versus the Man

Judge Gary advised students to get money because money is power. While most of the rest of the world tends to turn from private enterprise to a controlled economy, we suffer a retreat and are today the most reactionary of the great nations on the dollar vs. the man theme.

The concentration of wealth reaches a new high, until 43 "Billion Dollar Clubs" hold one-fourth of all American assets. The Department of Agriculture reports that the top 10% hold liquid assets averaging $10,500 per capita, while the lowest 40% average $40. The top 20% have 45% of the money income, 82% of the savings, and the top 10% have more money income by one-third than the bottom 50%.

The Federal Reserve Board reports that one-third of American families have incomes of less than $1,000 per year and almost one-half less than $2,000; and then it is proposed that the tax cut be "straight across the board", saving the little man a few cents and the millionaire tens of thousands; then some of our states, including mine, slap a sales tax on food and clothing. Corporation profits are higher than were their fabulous wartime profits, and the purchasing power of the average industrial wage is down by nearly 20%.

The Bureau of Labor Standards made a careful breakdown of a wage income of $43 per week, which, with losses of time, would about equal the $2,000 income, according to the actual needs of a family of four in Washington. The breakdown showed a net weekly deficit of $3.63 or about $200 per year. The family lived in a house renting for $25 a month and spent less than $100 per month on food and clothing, paid no withholding tax and less than $5 per month for health and medical care, and laid up no savings. And yet one-third have less than one-half the $2,000 and we cannot get a 65¢ minimum wage through Congress.

Even with only a 40¢ minimum, the Wage and Hour Administration reports reveal that of the 30,000 establishments inspected, 17,000 were in violation of the law, some 6,000 were chiseling on the 40¢ minimum, and the 40¢ now has a purchasing power of only 25¢ in terms of the meager simplicities on which the poor have to live. Wage-paying violators were compelled to pay $13,360,000 in wages illegally withheld. Did you see that on the front pages with strike news?

We are told that any increase in wages must bring increases in prices. That may be so in some few instances, but not as an average. The CIO Economic Outlook produced figures to show that on the average labor cost is only one-fourth of the entire cost. The last raise in the price of steel totalled from three to four times the cost to the corporations for the wage raises. And now Stuart Chase's studies show that the high wage industries are the largest profit makers.

This recital could be continued to great length. That you may get fuller information, I advise that you subscribe to one or more labor bulletins, and to Economic Justice published by the ~~Regional~~ Religion and Labor Foundation.

Alva W. Taylor

THE LABOR COMMISSION of the Fellowship of Southern Churchmen (Box 577, Chapel Hill, N.C.) is preparing a series of six statements on current labor issues.
This is. . . . . NUMBER 3

Labor and the Social Ideals

The ethics of Biblical religion is based upon the infinite worth of the human being, justice between all men, brotherhood, benevolence, mercy, equal rights and opportunities for the least among us, and the good society, i.e., the Kingdom of God.

Labor battles today for a living and a saving wage, the right of organizing, which means the worker has the right to have a say about his contribution in terms of skill and producing power, for security for his family against the perils of unemployment, for time to live and enjoy life outside wage earning hours. The battle for unionization is a battle for democracy in industry, for the welfare of the millions who labor for wages, for the man before the dollar. Labor's century-long drive for a living wage and the right to bargain is the greatest effort in human history to emancipate man from poverty.

The Federal Council of Churches adopted a series of ideals in 1912, reaffirmed them and enlarged them at Cleveland in 1919. All the great denominations have adopted them, and both Jewish and Catholic authorities have adopted like ideals.

In summary, they are: equal rights for all men in all stations of life; abolition of child labor; abatement and prevention of poverty; protection of the workers from all occupational hazards to life, limb, or health, and against unemployment; the right to a job and to organize; the use of conciliation and arbitration; the fewest hours and greatest leisure possible; security against hazards such as unemployment, injury, and old age; a basic living wage; the highest wage industry can afford; the most equitable division of the profits of industry that can be devised; against class domination; for constructive democracy in industry; the sharing of shop control and management; legal minimum wages; profit sharing and progress toward cooperative ownership and management.

Jesus prophesied that if the church was built upon the solid rock of His teachings, the gates of hell could not prevail against it. Where it has been so built, or the extent to which it has been so built, the gates of hell--that is, evil and injustice--have not prevailed against it. But it has not always been so built. For the first 200 years it succeeded well against the opposition of a pagan world. Then it took too much of the world and its ways into partnership, and has all too often narrowed its ethical insistences on individualistic morals to the neglect of social ethics; in other words, it has prevailed mightily in its personal evangel but failed dismally with its social evangel. For milleniums it supported slavery and feudalism; it has confined its battle on poverty to charity, and allowed the monetary contributions to its laudable enterprises to stifle its commission to right wrongs done the poor, the wage earner, the minority groups, and to bring in the Good Society of justice and good will which Jesus and the prophets meant by the Kingdom of God--a society of brothers under a common Father.

The "social ideals" enumerated by the leaders are adequate but they have not percolated down to the rank and file in the pew.

ALVA W. TAYLOR

Labor

PERSPECTIVES

The NAACP vs. Labor

By J. C. Rich

THE PRESENT anti-labor campaign of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, accusing well-known labor leaders of discriminatory practices, provides Southern yahoos with absolution for their sins from an unexpected quarter. Whatever noble purpose the NAACP may have in mind, one immediate result of its actions has been to cloak racists of the stripe of Governor Ross Barnett and Senator James Eastland of Mississippi in a garment of social respectability. For how could lily-whites of the backwater South be wrong if prominent Northern labor leaders also discriminate against Negroes?

The NAACP charges have been made against such men as David Dubinsky, President of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union (ILGWU); David McDonald, President of the United Steelworkers; Walter Reuther, President of the United Automobile Workers; and Paul Hall, President of the Seafarers International. In at least one instance, the organization found itself so far off base that it had to beat a hasty retreat to the norms of ordinary courtesy. The NAACP stated that it had not meant to offend Reuther, and regretted that some of its labor activities had outraged him. But it has not granted the same dispensation to McDonald, and certainly not to Dubinsky.

[illegible] according to newspaper [illegible] [illegible] "leaked" [illegible]

[illegible] tion—Reuther has been put on notice that there is a Negro caucus within the United Auto Workers. Presumably, the NAACP believes it is entirely proper to maintain a special Negro grouping within a union, although it justifiably condemns racial segregation when practiced by whites in certain unions.

The course which the NAACP has set for itself is a tragic and self-defeating one. For the American labor movement has long worked toward the same goals as the NAACP. To be sure, some local unions and some union workers, like their non-union neighbors, have adopted the mores and habits of the communities in which they live. But the national organizations are more sophisticated and more responsive to the call of justice and social equality than their various branches in the South. Thus, building a racist—or anti-Semitic—case against the labor movement because of the actions of a particular union violates fact and verity so completely it is nothing less than a trespass on integrity.

And it is this violence to integrity, as well as the malice inherent in the NAACP assault on the labor movement, that has disturbed the labor and liberal-minded community. It is absurd to imply that Dubinsky is no better than Mississippi's meanest bigot, and it is equally absurd to suggest that McDonald runs a Jim Crow union.

Negro steel workers labor side [illegible] with their white brothers. [illegible] civil rights [illegible]

In the garment union, the administration of David Dubinsky has been notable for the degree of acceptance and affectionate regard accorded by whites to Negroes and Negroes to whites. The conflicts and antagonisms of which NAACP spokesmen have made a Federal case are never seen in the market or in the shops. Differences occur, but nobody in sound mental health thinks that one has to go to court about them.

Notice to the effect that the NAACP intended to drag unions to court came last August, when news stories quoted Herbert Hill, the Association's labor secretary, as saying: "We will not be satisfied until discrimination is completely eliminated and we will continue to make progress in a trade-union way undeterred by outsiders."

This statement reveals more about Herbert Hill than it does about union practices. Hill seems to believe that discrimination, or any other evil, can be "completely eliminated." But who is to judge whether in truth there is discrimination and to what degree it prevails? Who is an "outsider" and who an insider in judgments of this sort? And by what prerogative does Hill consider himself an insider in the pursuit of justice, while relegating men like George Meany, Dubinsky and McDonald to the limbo of outsiders?

In the NAACP's battle against labor Hill has distinguished himself on another score as well. While on leave-of-[illegible] from his organization to the Kennedy Labor [illegible] [illegible]

Labor

an explanation of

THE MANPOWER DEVELOPMENT AND TRAINING ACT

U.S. DEPARTMENT OF LABOR
ARTHUR J. GOLDBERG, SECRETARY
OFFICE OF MANPOWER, AUTOMATION AND TRAINING
SEYMOUR L. WOLFBEIN, DIRECTOR